The meetings have been an instrument through which the aggrieved citizens could discuss their plight and harness their efforts in their attempts to cause the Tuskegee, Ala., gerrymandering act, which was directed against Negroes voting in Tuskegee City elections, to be rescinded or repealed.

The citizens, through the TCA, and as individuals, have called upon local and state officials for relief from what they construe to be a wrongful act against a segment of Tuskegee's population.

The weekly meetings have served to dramatize the cause of the Negroes in Tuskegee, and to keep the citizenry informed of the Association's efforts to bring about some relief. They have been used also to encourage registration and intelligent, effective voting; to encourage the establishment of new and the expansion of existing businesses whose proprietors will use the resources of their establishments for the total growth and development of the community.

Headed by C. G. Gomillion — long time an advocate of the doctrine of equal rights and responsibilities for all, the first TCA mass meeting drew a crowd in excess of 5,000 people. Gomillion announced to this hand-clapping, foot stomping crowd that, "We will by goods and services from only those who will recognize us as first-class citizens and who will help rather than oppress us."

While the president expressed the opinions of the 3,000 Negroes who had been gerrymandered out of the city limits of Tuskegee because of fear that Negroes "would someday elect a Negro to public office," it was Rev. S. T. Martin, pastor, Mt. Olive Baptist church, who pleaded with the crowd to use their resources to "do something for yourself" and "sop in your own damn gravy."

Amid T. V. kleg lights, constantly clicking cameras and representatives from every major news service, the hundreds who filled the church three hours before the announced starting time, and the thousands who stood outside, gave their "amens" to the speakers.

Compelled by a real desire to spend their money "wisely," edged on each Tuesday night by the singing of the Negro Folk song, "Don't You Let Nobody Turn You Round," Negroes formed motor pools and did, and are continuing to do their shopping in nearby cities in instances where local Negro merchants cannot supply their needs.

The president made it clear, however, that the program of the TCA is a positive one. This was further punctuated by a statement by Dr. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, who stated at the second mass meeting that, "You are not seeking to put stores downtown out of business, but seeking to put democracy into business."

put democracy into business."

Despite scores of appeals by aggrieved Negroes to city, county and state officials to cause the Tuskegee gerrymandering act to be rescinded, no sttps have been announced by these officials to bring this about. In fact, as far as is known to date none of these communications have been answered; no conference has been held with public officials and representatives of the TCA; no compromise has been offered.

"There has been no two-way communication — which is a requisite if our differences are to be resolved," Gomillion said.

Tuskegee's voteless Negroes were soon to learn that the merchants on the Square of the Town of of Tukegee would receive protection from the long arms of the office of the state attorney general, from what that office called a "boycott" by Negroes against white merchants.

The Attorney and a corp of assistants encamped in the Macon county courthouse fod 3 or more weeks and carried on an investigation in an effort to determine if the Negroes here who were abstaining from trading in Tuskegee, were violating Alabama's anti-boycott statute.

As a result of this investigation and after two raids on the office of the Tuskegee Civic Association, the Attorney general prayed for and obtained a temporary injunction on Sept. 12, 1957, against the officers, members, agents and followers of the TCA — restraining them from carrying on, conducting, and-or advocating a boycott.

When queried about the injunction, Gomillion said:

"We have done business with them (local white merchants), made them who and what they are in business. Suddenly, either perchance or otherwise, they have lined up against us. We think our feelings and thoughts are moderate, fair and honest. — We are simply tending our own affairs and using our resources as we deem best."

The weekly meetings continued to be held, featuring outstanding leaders in the field of civil rights. Among the speakers during the year were such personalities as: Patrick M. Malin, executive director American Civil Liberties Union, N. Y.; Emory O. Jackson, managing editor The Birmingham World; Glenn E. Smiley, field director Fellowship of Reconciliation N. Y.; James and Wilma Stokely, co-authors of the book "Neither Black Nor White," Newport, Tenn.; W. C. Patton, President ACARV, Birmingham, Alabama; Rev. Conrad Brown of the Kenonia Farms Americus, Ga.; The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham, Alabama, and Dr. M. L. King, Montgomery, Ala.

In addition, many local ministers and laymen have participated in these civic-religious meetings which have been designated "Crusade for Citizenship."

While C. G. Gomillion serves as head of the TCA he is surrounded and supported by equally dedicated members of his cabinet.

Civic Group At Tuskegee Plans Meeting On June 24

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala —The first anniversary celebration of weekly mass meetings which have been sponsored by the Tuskegee Civic Assn. since June 25, 1957, will be held at the Greenwood Missionary Baptist Church of which the Rev. Raymond F. Harvey is the pastor, Tuesday evening, June 24 at 7:30.

The principle message will be brought by C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. Sharing the program will be the Revs. S. T. Martin, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church (and the first mass meeting speaker), K. L. Buford, pastor of the Butler Chapel AME Zion Church, and C. W. Kelly, pastor emeritus of the Greenwood Missionary Baptist Church.

The weekly mass gatherings which began a year ago at the Butler Chapel Church, the birthsite of Tuskegee Institute, grew out of requests by scores of local Negro citizens to the TCA, who sought direction and leadership from the 20-year-old organization.

The meetings have been "an instrument through which aggrieved citizens could discuss their plight and harness their efforts in their attempts to cause the Tuskegee, Ala., act, which was directed against Negroes voting in Tuskegee city elections, to be rescinded or replaced." The citizens, through the TCA, and as individuals, have called upon local and state officials for relief from what they construe to be a wrongful act against a segment of Tuskegee's population.

They have been used also to encourage registration and intelligent, effective voting; to encourage the establishment of new and the expansion of existing businesses whose proprietors will use the resources of their establishments for the total growth and development of the community.

Headed by C. G. Gomillion—long time advocate of responsibilities for all, the first TCA mass meeting drew a crowd in excess of 5,000 people.

CRUSADE FOR CITIZENSHIP- MACON COUNTY INJUNCTION

Time Runs Out On Patterson In Anti-Boycott Court Fight

TUSKEGEE, Ala., (AP) — Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who lost a court fight to keep an anti-boycott injunction in force in Tuskegee, is letting the decision stand without appeal.

The time has run out for Patterson to contest Circuit Judge Will O. Walton's June 21 order which denied a request for a permanent injunction and at the same time threw out a temporary restraining order which had been in effect.

Register in Chancery M. H. Hurt said no appeal was filed within the 30-day limit.

The attorney general, who has since become Democratic nominee for governor, sought the injunction in hope of breaking a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants.

Patterson charged Tuskegee Civic Assn. with directing the boycott and asked for a permanent court order prohibiting TCA members and followers from using force or threats to keep other Negroes from trading at white stores.

The temporary injunction which was issued last August remained in effect pending a hearing on the motion for a permanent order. Walton in his June 21 decision said the state had failed to prove its case against the TCA. Leaders of the organization had denied the charge.

The boycott started 14 months ago in protest against enactment of a legislative act which rearranged Tuskegee's boundaries and left all but a few Negro voters outside the city limits.

Of the 420 who once voted here, only 10 remained in the city. The 600 white voters were unaffected by the change.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Aug. 1 (UPI)—Negro leaders of a continuing 13-month economic boycott against white merchants here Friday could claim final victory over the state in a court suit brought by the attorney general.

Time has run out for Atty. Gen. John Patterson to contest a court order which dissolved an injunction against Tuskegee Negro leaders and the Tuskegee Civic Association and no appeal has been filed.

Mr. Patterson had 30 days to file an appeal after Circuit Judge Will O. Walton threw out the temporary restraining order against the TCA on June 21.

A check of records in the office of the register of Chancery showed the state has taken no action against the ruling in higher courts.

Judge Walton issued the temporary injunction last Aug. 15 but withheld action on Mr. Patterson's request for a permanent restraining order until a hearing was held in January. In the decree June 21, Judge Walton refused to grant a permanent injunction and at the same time threw out the temporary restraining order.

Negroes in this Central Alabama town have waged an economic boycott against white merchants in protest against passage of a legislative act which all but eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee by a gerrymandering measure.

Mr. Patterson had charged that the TCA used threats to keep Negroes from patronizing white stores. TCA leaders denied it and Judge Walton concluded in his order in June that the state had failed to prove the charges.

NEGROES IN Tuskegee have boycotted white merchants for more than a year. The restraining order directed against the TCA prohibited its members or followers from using force or threats to keep other Negroes from patronizing white stores.

Patterson charged that the Negro organization directed the boycott, but TCA leaders denied it. Walton concluded in his order in June that the attorney general had failed to prove the charges.

The mass refusal to trade with white merchants came in protest against passage of a legislative act which virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee.

By rearranging the town boundaries, the new law left outside the city limits almost all the 420 Negroes who once voted there. The 600 white voters were left undisturbed.

12 Tuskegee Negroes Fight For Change In City Limits

By DICK LOOSER

Twelve Tuskegee Negroes, represented by Montgomery attorney Fred Gray, sought Monday to have a 1957 Alabama legislative act redefining the city limits of Tuskegee declared "unconstitutional and void."

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court Monday, the group, which included C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., asked for a temporary and permanent injunction restraining public officials from enforcing Act 140 on the grounds that it "... denies rights, privileges and immunities" as outlined by the 14th and 15th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution.

The act, which was introduced into the regular session of the state Legislature, by Macon County Sen. Sam Engelhardt June 7, 1957, redefined the city limits of Tuskegee, thus disenfranchising most of the city's Negro population.

Named as defendants in the suit were Tuskegee Mayor Phil M. Lightfoot, the city council, the Macon County board of revenue, Probate Judge William Varner, Police Chief O. L. Hodnett and Sheriff Preston Hornsby.

In an attempt to have the act ruled unconstitutional, the Negro plaintiffs asked for judgment as to whether "enforcement, execution or operation of the statute... to exclude plaintiffs because of race and color and which deprives them of the the right to vote in municipal elections. . ." denies them the rights, privileges and immunities as set forth in the 14th and 15th Amendments and under title 42 of the U.S. Code.

"As redefined," says the suit, "Tuskegee resembles a sea dragon with Negro neighborhoods, including the site of Tuskegee Institute, eliminated from the city boundaries."

The suit brought immediate reaction from Sen. Engelhardt. He predicted increased sentiment for abolishing Macon County, of which Tuskegee is the county seat.

A recently approved constitutional amendment empowered the Legislature to abolish the county as a means of preventing Negroes who outnumber the whites nearly 7-1 from gaining political control.

CREATED COURSE

Chairman of a special committee created to recommend a course of action to the Legislature, Engelhardt predicted the committee will now probably make a stronger recommendation that it otherwise might have made.

The suit was filed on behalf of Negroes "residing within the Tuskegee city limits as constituted prior to the passage of the act last year."

The suit contests the legality of "redefining the city limits to exclude the plaintiffs and the class they represent from the city solely because of their race and color, and depriving them of the right to vote in municipal elections."

CERTAIN HOURS

"As a result of their exclusion," the suit continued, "... plaintiffs and the class they represent have been deprived of the services of city policemen to patrol school zones during certain hours, benefits of general street improvements and the paving of a particular street before August, 1957, as promised by the city prior to the passage of the act."

The plaintiffs also charged that for 18 months, Macon County has had no board of registrars because most all the qualified whites were already registered, whereas thousands of Negroes possessing the qualifications are not registered and cannot vote.

The group in addition charged that the act was another device in continuing attempt by the state to disenfranchise Negro citizens.

400 NEGROES

Prior to the passage of the act, there were approximately 400 Negroes voting in Tuskegee and about 600 whites. Now, according to the suit, all but "four or five," of the Negroes have been barred from participating in the municipal elections.

The suit contends that Negroes compose approximately seven-eights of the population of Macon County.

Included in the suit were exhibits of an article from Time magazine and an article from The Montgomery Advertiser in which the act was labeled as an "obvious move to maintain white control of the city government."

An aftermath of the act was an economic boycott of white merchants, and later, the creation of the Macon County committee to study the possibilities of abolishing Macon County.

FILING SUIT

Named as defendants in the suit were Lightfoot, L. D. Gregory, H. A. Vaughan Jr., W. Foy Thompson, councilmen; Chief Hodnett; E. C. Laslie, Charles Huddleston, J. T. Dyson, F. C. Thompson and Virgil Guthrie of the board of revenue; Sheriff Hornsby and Judge Varner.

Plaintiffs filing the suit with Gomillion were Celia B. Chambers, Alma R. Craig, Frank H. Bentley, Willie D. Bentley, Kenneth L. Buford, William J. White, Augustas O. Young Jr., Nellie B. Jones, Detroit Lee, Delia D. Sullivan, and Lynwood T. Dorsey, all Negro residents of Tuskegee.

The plaintiffs asked in their suit that the court:

1. Issue a decree adjuding Act 140 in violation of due process and equal protection of the 14th and 15th Amendment.

2. Issue a preliminary injunction, pending final disposition, restraining and enjoining the defendants from enforcing and executing the act and those similarly situtated and from denying right to vote and to be recognized and treated as citizens of Tuskegee.

3. Issue a permanent injunction against the act.

Racial Study Group Urged

The Macon County Abolition Commission recommended Monday that a permanent legislative committee be created to make a continuing study of Alabama's racial problems.

The suggestion was made as the commission continued to work on the preliminary draft of the report it will submit to the new Legislature.

The proposed standby committee would be directed to be particularly concerned with Macon County, but it would also have the right to study racial matters throughout the state.

It would be required to make periodic reports of its findings and would also be authorized to recommend specific legislation it felt was needed to preserve segregation.

The commission still has given no indication as to what it will recommend regarding Macon County, but indications are that it will not suggest outright abolition at this time.

Under the constitutional amendment which created the commission, it could recommend that Macon be abolished or reduced in size if such a step was necessary to prevent the Negro majority from gaining control at the ballot box.

Attending Monday's meeting was Rep.-nominate Grady Rogers, Macon County's new member of the Alabama Legislature. He said he felt that 50 per cent of the white people in Macon favor abolition now and that 70 to 80 per cent will go along ultimately.

Rogers also expressed the fear that it might be dangerous to put off abolition too long. He said there might come a time when it would be impossible to abolish the county.

VOTE FILES ACCESS DENIED U.S. AGENTS

Macon County, Ala., Refusal Echoed Elsewhere

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP)—Voter registration officials in troubled Macon County withheld their records from federal agents Tuesday in a defiant gesture which brought prompt echoes elsewhere in Alabama.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, insisting that registration documents are private rather than public records, urged county boards of registrars throughout the state to keep them out of the hands of civil rights agents.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, chairman of the board in Montgomery County, which adjoins Macon, promised to [illegible] for access to records there.

But Chairman John A. Repoll of the Mobile County board said federal investigators would be welcome to look at his records.

HINT COURT ACTION

The chairman of the Macon County board, E. P. Livingston, said he and his two colleagues acted on advice of the attorney general. Democratic nominee for governor for the term starting next January.

Livingston said two agents of the Civil Rights Commission who visited the board Monday left with a hint at court action, but there was no official indication of the next move. The two agents, identified as Burton Goodyear and O. J. Peterson, were unavailable for comment.

Patterson said he will resist any effort to get the records through court order because "under Alabama law, they are not public records" and board members are under no legal obligation or authority to produce them.

NEGROES OUTNUMBER

Macon County, where famed Tuskegee Institute is located, has been plagued by racial strife. Negroes outnumber whites residing in the county approximately [illegible] and voters have a 2-1 [illegible] has kept the board of registrars inactive much of the time. At one period, the county had no functioning board of registrars for 18 months and no prospective new voter, white or Negro, could register.

Negroes have repeatedly accused the board of discrimination, but registration officials deny the charges. Livingston insisted that the policy of the present board is to reject anyone who fails to meet the qualifications regardless of race.

Alabama law requires prospective voters to answer a questionnaire which, among other things, calls for a definition of the "duties and obligations" of citizenship.

BITING COMMENT

The board's action brought a biting comment from a Negro leader, the Rev. K. L. Buford.

"It is no more than I expected," said Buford, acting president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., an organization which has campaigned for voter registration. "I doubt that any persons would voluntarily give evidence that would be incriminating to them. I think the board's records would definitely be incriminating."

Rights Board May Demand Vote Records

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UPI)—The Civil Rights Commission will consider possible legal action to obtain Alabama voting records withheld from its agents, it was learned Wednesday.

A spokesman said the question will be taken up at the commission's regular closed-door meeting tomorrow.

Alabama's Attorney General John Patterson has advised the state's county voter registration boards to withhold their records from federal agents.

Patterson raps rights agency vote hearing

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 24—(AP)—Atty. Gen. John Patterson has blasted an upcoming Civil Rights Commission hearing on Macon County voter registration as a "reckless attempt to intimidate our public officials."

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee said yesterday the inquiry here Dec. 8 into alleged racial voting discrimination "will be playing politics to get some Republican votes in the congressional elections."

Patterson said the commission's announced plan to look into charges of the denial of Negroes' voting rights "will bring grave consequences to our entire nation and to our people." He added:

"Such reckless action is politically inspired and is further proof of the intention of the Republican administration to destroy the rights of the states and reduce our constitution to a mere scrap of paper."

As Alabama's chief legal officer, Patterson earlier this week advised Macon County officials to withhold registration files from Civil Rights Commission investigators.

RECORDS OF VOTER applications are not public records, he said, and suggested that other county registration boards also adopt the policy of privacy.

The attorney general said he will use "every power at my command to resist the commission's illegal and unwarranted encroachments."

Noting that those accused ought to know who the accusers are, he challenged the federal agency to identify the Negroes who have charged discrimination.

Meanwhile, a Montgomery Negro leader revealed that his people may ask the commission to hear their complaints also at the hearing.

Rufus Lewis, chairman of the registration committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., said his group will have evidence available on complaints already filed with the federal government.

Patterson Plans To Fight Inquiry

Voting Rights Investigation Labeled 'Politics'

TO GET VOTES FOR GOP

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 23.—Atty. Gen. John Patterson accused the Civil Rights Commission Thursday of playing politics by ordering a hearing here Dec. [illegible]

Mr. Patterson, the Democratic nominee for governor, denounced as "politically inspired" the commission's announcement that it will look into charges of the denial of Negroes' voting rights.

He said it was done to "create an atmosphere to [illegible] some Republican votes in the coming congressional elections."

Mr. Patterson, the state's chief legal officer, advised the Macon County Voter Registration Board to close its records earlier this week to Civil Rights Commission investigators.

Urged Closing Records

He also suggested that other registration boards throughout Alabama should adopt the same policy, contending that files of voter applications are not public records.

The attorney general said Thursday's announcement from the commission "is further proof of the intention of the Republican Administration to destroy the rights of the states and reduce our Constitution to a mere scrap of paper."

"Such reckless action on the part of the Republican Administration is politically inspired and will bring on grave consequences to our entire nation and to our people."

Mr. Patterson said he will "resist their illegal and unwarranted encroachments with every power at my command."

He said that under the civil rights law complaints must be filed with the commission "in writing under oath," and challenged the Federal agency to identify the Negroes who have accused registration officials of discrimination.

Who Are Accusers?

"People accused ought to know who the accusers are," he observed.

The chairman of the Macon County board, E. V. Livingston, meanwhile voiced a renewed determination to withhold the records from the commission "until Mr. Patterson tells me to do otherwise."

A Negro leader in Montgomery disclosed that his people there may ask the commission to hear complaints from them as well as those from Macon County at the December hearing.

Rufus Lewis, chairman of the registration committee of the Montgomery Improvement Association, said complaints have been filed with the Federal Government and that his group will have evidence ready to present.

Bama Hides Vote Books To G-Men

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (UPI) — Alabama Attorney General John Patterson disclosed Tuesday he has advised county boards of registrars to close their records to investigators for the Civil Rights Commission.

It is the second defiant action taken against federal studies of voter lists in the South recently. A circuit judge ordered voter records withheld from federal agents in Perrell County, Ga., unless superseded by a U.S. court.

Patterson's action came after two investigators for the commission — Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson — asked to examine the books of the Macon County Board of Registrars Monday.

Patterson, who also is Democratic nominee for governor, and who has threatened to jail any federal agents meddling in Alabama affairs, advised E. P. Livingston, chairman of the Macon registrars, that under Alabama law the records are not public.

"It is my opinion," said Patterson, "that the Board of Registrars of Macon County is under no legal duty to make its records available for inspection by officials of the Civil Rights Commission."

Patterson released a letter Tuesday to Livingston "confirming" a telephone conversation with the registrar Charman Monday in which the attorney general advised him to keep the records away from the federal agents. Patterson's letter plainly indicated his advisory ruling holds for all 67 of Alabama's counties and not just Macon.

Meantime, the chairman of the Mobile County Board of Registrars, John A. Repoll, said he had not been approached by any commission investigators and "we have nothing to hide back here. We are perfectly willing for anyone to come in and see what we are doing."

Repoll added, "And if J. Edgar Hoover wants to come down here and sit with us, he will be welcomed."

Livingston said, "These two Rights Commission investigators came in Monday and said they'd like to look at the records. We had a nice friendly chat, but I told them I had instructions from the (state) attorney general that I didn't have to show them.

"That was all there was to it. They didn't have any legal order and they went away. They didn't say anything about coming back."

Close Books To Rights Men, Patterson Tells Registrars

BY DONALD F. MARTIN

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 21 (UPI) —Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson disclosed today he has advised all county boards of registrars to [illegible] records to investigators for the Civil Rights Commission.

It is the second defiant action taken against the Civil Rights Commission in the South. Recently the Terrell County, Ga., circuit judge ordered all voting records withheld from Federal agents unless subpenaed by a U. S. court.

Patterson's action came after two investigators for the commission—Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson—asked to examine the books of the Macon County Board of Registrars Monday.

The Democratic nominee for governor, who already has threatened to jail any Federal agents meddling in Alabama affairs, advised E. P. Livingston, chairman of the Macon registrars, that under Alabama laws the records are not public.

"It is my opinion," said Patterson, "that the board of registrars of Macon County is under no real duty to make its records available for inspection by officials of the Civil Rights Commission."

Patterson released a letter today to Livingston "confirming" a telephone conversation with the registrar chairman Monday in which the attorney general advised him to keep the records away from the Federal agents. Patterson's letter plainly indicated his advisory ruling holds for all 67 of Alabama's counties and not just Macon.

Meantime, the chairman of the Mobile County Board of Registrars, John A. Repoll, said he had not been approached by any commission investigators and "we have nothing to hide back here. We are perfectly willing for anyone to come in and see what we are doing."

Repoll added, "and if J. Edgar Hoover wants to come down here and sit with us, he will be welcomed."

Livingston told United Press International, "these two rights commission investigators came in yesterday and said they'd like to look at the records. We had a nice friendly chat, but I told them I had instructions from the (state) attorney general that I didn't have to show them.

"That was all there was to it. They didn't have any legal order and they went away. They didn't say anything about coming back."

Negroes outnumber whites seven to one in Tuskegee, the county seat, and four to one in the county. The Tuskegee Civic Assn. (TCA), a Negro group, conducted a survey recently which showed 314 Negroes sought registration, or 46 per cent of the number that sought ballot rights.

Group To Study Voting In South

Memphis Commercial Appeal 4-26-58

Southern Leaders' Linked To Left-Wing Support

Memphis, Tenn. MISSISSIPPIAN IS LISTED Sat. 4-26-58

By The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Self-styled civil rights leaders from the South, with the support of a left-wing organization, will meet here Sunday to discuss "voting rights in the South."

Known as the "Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern States," the meeting will be sponsored by the Southern Conference Educational Fund Inc.

Executive director of SCEF is James A. Dombrowski of New Orleans, long a controversial figure in inter-racial activities in the South. Formerly of Nashville, he once headed the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Field Secretaries

Field secretaries of SCEF are Carl Braden and his wife, Anna Braden. Braden, a former copy reader for the Louisville Courier-Journal, was convicted in Kentucky of sedition in the sale of a home in a white residential area in Louisville to a Negro and its subsequent destruction by dynamite.

He went free after the Supreme Court invalidated state sedition laws with its disputed decision in the Steve Nelson case.

Braden once spoke in the Harlem district of New York City to protest against the Emmett Till case in Mississippi.

A press release had this to say about Sunday's meeting:

"The purpose of the conference is to present, in human terms, a comprehensive picture of the current situation on voting rights in the South. There will be reports from nine states.

"The speakers are all either leaders of organizations working to establish full voting rights, or writers with expert knowledge of voting problems in their areas."

Invited to report on Mississippi problems, the press release said, is Albert Walker, president of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League and board chairman of the Jackson, Miss., National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. His report, the release said, has been prepared jointly with Aaron Henry, vice president of the Mississippi NAACP.

No Reports

The press release indicated that no reports will be received from Arkansas or Tennessee.

Two Alabamans are on the program, Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, and Charles G. Gomillion of Tuskegee.

Williams, long a controversial figure in Southern racial affairs, first came into prominence as administrator of the National Youth Administration during the Franklin D. Roosevelt Administration.

Gomillion, in 1947, was identified to a Congressional committee as secretary of the Southern Negro Youth Conference, later cited by the attorney general as a Communist front organization.

MACON LAWMAKERS AT ABOLITION MEETING
Sen. Sam Engelhardt (left), Rep. J. J. Rodgers

Abolition Unit Seeks To Keep Macon Intact

By BOB INGRAM

A legislative committee created to study the feasibility of abolishing Macon County held its initial meeting here yesterday and immediately began to grope for some less drastic way to preserve white supremacy in the Negro-dominated county.

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, unanimously elected chairman of the group, was one of the first to promise that his home county would be abolished only as a last resort.

"We will explore every possibility of saving Macon County, or reducing it in size," Engelhardt said. "But having been given a mandate by the people on Dec. 17, if we find it necessary to abolish Macon County then it will be done."

Almost from the outset of this significant meeting of the Abolition Commission members, it was apparent the group was determined to find a solution other than abolition.

REP. JAMES HALL
Vice Chairman

Reps. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery and Charles Adams of Alexander City both observed that Macon should be abolished only if there is no other alternative.

UNANIMOUS AGREEMENT

"I think we all want to preserve the county if it is humanly possible," Dawkins said. The committee members were unanimous in their agreement.

Other than the election of Engelhardt as chairman and Rep. H. James Hall of Montgomery as vice chairman, the commission transacted little other business yesterday.

Part of the morning was spent in executive session, which Engelhardt suggested so that members could "trash out" any problems confronting them.

Later Engelhardt appointed a five-man steering committee to draw up an agenda which will be presented at the next meeting, to be held at 10 a.m. next Monday.

ROBISON CHAIRMAN

Named to the committee were Sen. Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery, chairman; Reps. Adams, Hardaway Johnson of Elmore, D. W. Ward of Lee and M. B. McLendon of Bullock. Engelhardt will serve as ex-officio chairman of this group.

This committee met later in the day to make recommendations for membership to five subcommittees — census, finance and taxation, judiciary, boundary and coordinating.

All but one member of the commission was present for the organizational session. The lone absentee was Rep. John Allen Crook of Union Springs.

Abolition Group Pledges To Uphold Way Of Life

Legislative Committee Spells Out Policy, Including Possible Macon Boundary Shifts

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 10 (AP)—Legislators studying ways to keep Negroes from gaining political control of Macon County today pledged to uphold "the way of life that is truly Alabamian."

They agreed to go along with abolition of the county if necessary to preserve white supremacy.

The 17-member committee, created by a recently-approved constitutional amendment, adopted a statement of policy spelling out its determination to protect what it called Alabama's sovereignty.

Passage of the civil rights law, organizations and individuals, "compel this committee to act to preserve and continue the tradition and way of life which is truly Alabamian," the statement said.

In Macon County, home of the famed Negro college, Tuskegee Institute, Negroes outnumber white residents nearly 7-1. Whites have a 2-1 voting majority, but they fear pressure will come under the new civil rights law that would give Negroes the advantage at the polls.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County presided as chairman of the committee. He is executive secretary of the Alabama Association of Citizens Councils, which seeks to preserve segregation and white supremacy.

The committee's policy statement said that while members would consider ways of altering the county boundaries and changing the voting districts as an alternate plan to prevent Negro domination, "abolition of the county will be acceptable."

"The committee feels that the vote of the people of Alabama in the adoption of this (Macon County) amendment," the statement said, "constitutes a mandate from the people that this committee make recommendations to the Legislature . . . to prevent Macon County from being controlled and operated by elements and individuals who are not qualified by Alabama standards."

The committee proposed to undertake "exhaustive research" together with investigations and hearings in the counties that will be affected.

"We will avail ourself of expert information and advice from those qualified," the statement said. "Consideration will be given to ways and means of altering, rearranging and reducing the area of Macon County.

"A study will be conducted for a system or systems of changing the districts and mode of determining the will of the qualified majority. Yes, even abolition of the county will be acceptable. All to the end, that the will and determination of the majority of the citizens of Alabama to preserve our Southern way of life and the rights of the State of Alabama to govern itself shall be guaranteed."

The committee adopted an agenda dividing responsibility for making various investigations among subcommittees and assigning duties of each group.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery was appointed to head a subcommittee on finance and tax; Rep. M. B. McLendon of Bullock, a subcommittee on boundaries; Rep. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa, census, and Rep. Roberts Brown of Lee, judiciary.

Another co-ordinating group was set up composed of chairmen of the subcommittees with Engelhardt as chairman.

Thomas W. McWhirter of Atlanta, regional supervisor of the Bureau of the Census, met with the full committee to discuss what information his agency would be able to give the committee.

He said if a special census were held in Macon County it would have to be authorized by Washington and financed with state or local funds.

Macon Abolition Commission Meets At Capitol Tomorrow

The Macon County Abolition Commission meets at 10 a.m. tomorrow at the Capitol to begin an unprecedented study which may lead to the abolition of a county.

The 17-member commission, created by the recent ratification of Amendment No. 18, is empowered to make a study of the feasibility of abolishing Macon County, where Negroes outnumber whites by a margin of nearly 7-1.

The commission will have at its command $50,000 in state funds to finance the study, which will include land surveys, property evaluation and a myriad of other technical problems which must be solved.

Sen. Sam Englehardt of Macon, sponsor of the bill which set up the commission, has announced that the Monday session will be purely organizational.

The group is expected to elect a chairman and also discuss a proposed agenda.

Members of the commission are the House and Senate members who represent the counties which would be affected by the abolition. Other than Engelhardt the commission members are Rep. J. J. Rodgers, Macon; Reps. Joe Dawkins, Joe Goodwyn, H. James Hall and Wilbur Nolen and Sen. Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery; Reps. Tom Johnson and Charles Adams and Sen. Broughton Lamberth of Tallapoosa; Reps. Jack Law and Hardaway Johnson of Tallapoosa; Reps. J. A. Crook and M. B. McLendon of Bullock; Reps.

Roberts Brown and D. W. Ward of Lee, and Sen. Joe Smith of Russell, who represents Lee County in the State Senate.

In race

Engelhardt enters race for No. 2 state job

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 18—State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. of Macon, executive secretary of the Citizens Councils of Alabama and one of the state's strongest segregation leaders, Saturday entered the race for lieutenant governor.

He will oppose former State Sen. Graham Wright of Talladega, a veteran legislator and equally strong segregationist, who announced several months ago he will run for lieutenant governor.

State Sen. Albert Boutwell of Jefferson, who also has been prominently mentioned for governor, and State Sen. E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa have long been talked as prospective candidates for lieutenant governor.

Both are taunch segregationists, with Sen. Boutwell being author and chief sponsor of the "freedom of choice" amendment adopted overwhelmingly by the voters in 1956 to help maintain segregation in the schools.

Macon bill sponsor

SEN. ENGELHARDT, sponsor of the constitutional amendment recently approved by a lopsided vote authorizing the Legislature to abolish Macon County, said he will qualify as a candidate in the May 6 Democratic primary election. He said he will qualify after the State Democratic Executive Committee meets here next Saturday to get campaigning officially under way.

The Macon senator pointed out that Sunday is the birthday anniversary of Robert E. Lee and said his announcement was timed to coincide with that occasion.

"I feel it is proper for me to select this day to make my official announcement and launch my fight to help preserve the Southern way of life for which Lee fought," declared Engelhardt.

Says strong man

STRESSING that the South needs men in public life with strong segregationist principles, Engelhardt added:

"The next four years will be the darkest in the South's history since Reconstruction. Forces from other parts of the nation will be attempting to ram integration down our throats.

"The best insurance we of Alabama can have to maintain our way of life is a lieutenant governor with a background of being absolutely firm on this vital question."

Sen. Engelhardt, in a recent appearance on "Alabama Press Conference," a public information program sponsored by The Birmingham News and Stations WABT and WAPI, warned that attempts to force integration in Alabama "will make Little Rock look like a garden party."

Pledges to fight

HE SAID that carving up, or outright abolition of Macon County, in which Negroes outnumber white persons nearly seven to one, would hinge largely on what action is taken by the Civil Rights Commission recently appointed by President Eisenhower.

Engelhardt predicted that this commission will visit Alabama.

The Macon senator, who is 45 and a businessman - farmer, pledged himself to fight to maintain the Southern way of life in what he termed "a dignified and lawful manner."

Chairman of the Senate agriculture committee, Engelhardt sponsored legislation to aid the farmer. And he was joint sponsor of the student placement bill to help preserve segregation by giving local boards of education unprecedented authority to assign pupils to schools.

A native of Montgomery County, Engelhardt is a graduate of Washington and Lee University. His wife is the daughter of former State Sen. J. Miller Bonner of Wilcox, also one of Alabama's staunchest segregationists.

ENGELHARDT IS ELECTED

Will Head Group Studying County's Abolishment

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 6. —(UP)— The commission established to study the feasibility of abolishing Macon County to uphold white supremacy elected as chairman Monday a White Citizens Council leader who promised the county would be wiped out "if necessary."

The commission unanimously named State Senator Sam Engelhardt of Macon County as chairman and Representative James Hall of Montgomery vice chairman.

Senator Engelhardt, author of the constitutional amendment which established the commission, appointed a five-man steering committee to draw up an agenda for the 17-member commission at its next meeting, tentatively set for Feb. 1. The committee is composed of Senator Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery and Reps. Charlie Adams of Tallapoosa, hardaway Johnson of Elmore, D. W. Wood of Lee and Bryan McClendon of Bullock County.

Trouble Seen By Engelhardt On Integration

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 5 (AP)—A Citizen's Council leader today said that if racial integration of public schools is ordered in Alabama "it will make Little Rock look like a garden party."

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County said there are "more" school districts in the South than Army divisions.

Engelhardt is executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils. He claims 60,000 members for the white supremacy organization.

TO QUESTION CANDIDATES

Engelhardt said the councils will question candidates in the 1958 Alabama gubernatorial primaries this spring about their views on segregation and the Negro vote.

TWO QUESTIONS

Two questions that will be asked, he said, are:

Will the candidate deny the Negro vote?

Will the candidate submit a list of financial contributors to his campaign?

Some 50 to 60 thousand of Alabama's estimated 825,000 registered voters are Negroes.

Engelhardt said the future of Macon County depends on what the president's Civil Rights Commission does.

Alabama voters in a Dec. 17 election empowered the Legislature to abolish the Black Belt county if necessary to prevent the heavy Negro majority from gaining political control. The outnumbered whites still have a substantial edge in the number of registered voters.

WILL BE READY

Engelhardt said he "feels sure" the Civil Rights Commission "will come here ... (and) hopes he will be ready when they come into the state."

The council executive said Tuskegee white merchants will survive a current boycott by Negro residents, who were angered when the city limits were changed in order to exclude most Negro voters. Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon County and home of famed Tuskegee Institute for Negroes.

Engelhardt said boycotts are "a two - edged sword" and "the NAACP and Tuskegee Civil Assn. will rue the day they started the boycott."

Alabama Seen As Outdoing Little Rock

Engelhardt Expects Outbreaks To Follow Any Mixing Order

BY IVAN SWIFT

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr., told a radio and television audience yesterday if school integration is ordered in Alabama he thinks "it will make Little Rock look like a garden party."

The executive secretary of the Citizens Councils of Alabama, speaking over Stations WABT and WAPI on Alabama Press Conference, told Interviewers Fred Taylor of The Birmingham News and Leroy Simms, Associated Press Alabama correspondent, there are "more school districts in the South than Army divisions."

Engelhardt, who claims about 60,000 members in his segregation organization, said the councils haven't as many members as they had 18 months ago "but the enthusiasm still is there."

He said the 60,000 membership figure is a guess because membership drives have been completed in only 12 counties by the state-wide organization.

Engelhardt didn't disclose the personal political plans under heavy questioning from Taylor about them but he did say the councils "will not back or fight any particular candidate."

The Macon senator said the questionnaire the councils plan to send every candidate will ask questioning similar to the 1954 query sheet, and he mentioned two of them approximately as:

1. WILL THE CANDIDATE deny the Negro vote?
2. WILL THE CANDIDATE submit a list of financial contributors to his campaign?

He told Simms, in answer to a question, the publication of the answers will be the councils' way of informing Alabama voters about candidates.

'MORE DISTRICTS THAN DIVISIONS'—Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr.

Engelhardt himself is not expected to be a candidate for the office he now holds because the post is shifted customarily between Macon and Bullock Counties. Both counties make up the 26th District.

Engelhardt said the present political condition is a "state of confusion" so far as who is going to qualify and run for office is concerned

He told the interviewers recommendations about the disposition of Macon County now under study after an affirmative vote Dec. 17, partly depends on the action of the Presidential Civil Rights Commission.

Engelhardt said he "feels sure they (the commission) will come here" and he said he "hopes we will be ready when they come into the state."

On other issues Engelhardt said:

He doesn't think the state can take over Tuskegee Institute, a private school, but consideration should be given to transferring schools contracted to Tuskegee, such as engineering, to state Negro schools.

Tuskegee merchants will "withstand" the boycott now going on, which followed the gerrymandering of Negro voters out of the city. Boycotts are "a two-edged sword" and "the NAACP and Tuskegee Civic Assn. will rue the day they started the boycott."

Additional school appropriations are needed, "especially in the case of Auburn."

whether he would run for governor or lieutenant governor in the upcoming Democratic primary election, as has been reported from time to time.

BUT HE DECLARED that the Citizens Councils "will not back or fight any particular candidate."

Asked if an estimated 60,000 members of this statewide organization would support him if he does seek state office, Engelhardt replied: "I would hope so."

He made these and other declarations on Sunday's WABT-WAPI "Alabama Press Conference" sponsored by The Birmingham News and the two stations.

Engelhardt, who estimated that his organization has 60,000 members, said membership spurted after President Eisenhower sent federal troops to Little Rock, with about 5000 more asking to join.

HOWEVER, THE COUNCILS now have fewer members than they had 18 months ago, he said.

"But the enthusiasm is still there," he added.

Regarding any use of federal troops to force school integration in Alabama, the Macon senator declared, "We have more school districts than they (the Army) have divisions."

Engelhardt, sponsor of the bill passed by the Legislature gerrymandering the City of Tuskegee to remove from its corporate limits most of the Negro voters, said he would not be willing to change that.

"AND I THINK Tuskegee's white citizens will be able to withstand the Negro boycott of merchants," he added.

He explained the citizens are rebuilding their economy with merchants cutting down inventories, which he said formerly were large.

"The NAACP and Tuskegee Civic Assn. (Negro organization) will rue the day they started the boycott," predicted Engelhardt. "This is a two-edged sword.

HE EXPLAINED the white people there could resort to a boycott, too.

Engelhardt, who earlier had advocated that the state take over Tuskegee Institute, said he has decided against introducing a bill in the Legislature to do this.

"But I think it would be wise to transfer some of its functions to other schools, such as sending the engineering and veterinary medicine schools to the Negro college at Huntsville," he said.

Engelhardt, who said he had voted for state appropriations to Tuskegee Institute, favors continuing these appropriations.

Engelhardt, whose Citizens Councils organization has completed membership drives in 12 counties, said questionnaires would be sent candidates for governor, Legislature and other public and party offices.

HE SAID queries would be substantially the same, although "worded a little differently," as those fired at public and party office aspirants two years ago.

Among the qustions, he said, would be:

Will candidates "solicit the Negro vote?"

"Will they "deny the Negro vote?"

Will candidates be willing to submit to the Citizens Councils group a list of financial contributors and amounts of contributions?

ENGELHARDT SAID he does not see any need for a special session. And he added that his support of the Folsom administration's $20 million road bond proposal would depend on whether "it could be tied down so the money could be used only for federal matching."

Engelhardt, who met today at Montgomery with legislators representing counties surrounding Macon to consider a course of action, said "a lot of our decision depends on action of the Civil Rights Commission."

HE SAID he is "perfectly willing" for proposals changing Macon's boundaries to annex portions of it to adjoining counties to be submitted to voters of all counties concerned, before any final legislative action is taken.

"But if it takes abolition of Macon County to preserve the status quo, then I'm ready for it," he said.

Questioning Engelhardt were Leroy Simms, chief Associated Press Correspondent in Alabama, and this reporter. Charlie Davis was moderator.

Negroes Still Boycott Stores In Tuskegee

By REX THOMAS

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP)—For 1[5] months, Negroes have boycotte[d] white Tuskegee merchants in [a] massive protest against loss of th[e] right to vote in city elections.

Negroes outnumber white resi[-] dents approximately 7-3 in Tuske[-] gee, a city of 6,800 population. I[n] Macon County as a whole, there are nearly seven Negroes to every white resident.

The unprecedented economi[c] squeeze has forced perhaps a doz[-] en small stores to close and ha[s] sent other merchants into neigh[-] boring communities in search o[f] business.

By contrast, the cluster of Ne[-] gro stores in the vicinity of fame[d] Tuskegee Institute are prospering. A supermarket operated by Ne[-] groes has drawn much of the trade away from the shops in town where Negro housewives once shopped.

END NOT IN SIGHT

Nor is the end in sight. Mayor Phil Lightfoot and President B. D. Cohn of the Tuskegee Chamber of Commerce say there has been evi[-] dence of some letup in the boy[-] cott in recent weeks. But Light[-] foot added that he couldn't see much change.

Negro spokesmen had little t[o] say. They have been reluctant t[o] talk since Atty. Gen. John Patter[-] son tried to break the boycott wit[h] a court injunction.

Patterson accused the Tuskegee Civic Assn. of promoting the boy[-] cott and asked for a permanen[t] court order prohibiting TCA mem[-] bers and followers from usin[g] force or threats to keep other Ne[-] groes from trading at whit[e] stores.

RIGHT UPHELD

Circuit Judge Will O. Walto[n] granted a temporary injunctio[n] but ultimately threw it out wit[h] the declaration that "thus far i[n] this land, every person has a right to trade with whomever he pleases, and therefore, the right to not trade with any particular person or business."

The Judge said Patterson failed to prove his charges against the TCA, whose officers denied any connection with the boycott.

The TCA secretary, William P. Mitchell, an employe of the Veterans Administration Hospital, disclaimed any knowledge of the extent of the protest against white merchants.

Mitchell acknowledged that Negroes are urged by the association to "spend their money wisely" and to use "common sense." And, he added, "anyone using common sense will spend their money with their friends."

The full economic impact of the boycott is unmeasured in terms of dollars and cents. Cohn, pointing to a lag in business throughout the nation, said there are too many factors to say how much of the decline in Tuskegee is a direct result of the loss of Negro trade.

Lightfoot said a clearer indication may come next January when merchants renew their city business licenses. Since the license schedule is based on the volume of the preceding year's sales, the mayor said that will show how much business has fallen off.

GONE OUT OF BUSINESS

Cohn said some small stores, maybe a dozen or so, have gone out of business since the boycott started and the surviving merchants are looking for new industry to bolster the community's income.

He added that some white consumers from neighboring cities have come to Tuskegee to trade. "We wish there were a lot more," he added.

The Negroes, besides patronizing merchants of their own race, are spending their money in stores in Montgomery, 40 miles to the west; and Opelika, about 28 miles east.

The boycott began in June 1957 after the Alabama Legislature, at the request of Macon County Sen. Sam Engelhardt, passed a law which virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee.

By changing the town boundaries, they left only 10 Negro voters remaining inside the city limits out of the 420 who previously voted here. The 600 white voters in Tuskegee were undisturbed by the change.

A suit has been filed in U.S. District Court at Montgomery challenging constitutionality of the law, but no hearing has been set.

TRADE BOYCOTT STILL GOES ON

Tuskegee Stores Pressed But Effect Is Debated

By changing the town boundaries, they left only 10 Negro voters remaining inside the city limits out of the 420 who previously voted here. The 600 white voters in Tuskegee were undisturbed by the change.

A suit has been filed in U.S. District Court at Montgomery challenging the constitutionality of the law, but no hearing has been set.

VOTE DENIAL MOTIVES NOT UNLAWFUL, JUDGE RULES TO TUSKEGEANS

U. S. JUDGE SAYSCOURT POWERLESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Motives involved in gerrymandering boundaries do not make the move unconstitutional, a federal judge ruled in Montgomery Wednesday in upholding the 16-month-old legislative act which virtually wipes out Negro voting in Tuskegee.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., upheld the state's act which admittedly rearranged Tuskegee's city boundaries so as to leave all predominantly Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

The judge held that nothing in the U. S. Constitution prohibits the Alabama Legislature from changing the boundaries of a city regardless of the motive. The ruling is expected to be appealed to a higher court. Attorney Fred Gray, of Montgomery, who filed the test suit on behalf of affected Tuskegee, affirmed this.

Enactment of the law in June 1957 touched off a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants which is still in force. Its passage left only 10 registered Negro voters inside the city limits in contrast with 420 who voted there before the law went into effect.

The 600 white voters in the city were left undisturbed. The law was immediately challenged on claim that it deprived the Negro residents of rights guaranteed by the Federal Constitution.

Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the legislature in enacting the law "this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States."

MERCHANTS LOSE

Tuskegee has had troubles, however, since the law went into effect. White merchants admittedly felt the loss of sales to the Negro population. Many reportedly were forced to close their doors and cease operations.

Named Tuskegee Institute is located nearby and offers both work educational and economic opportunities to Negroes the area. Negroes also have active part in the huge Veterans Administration Hospitals located in the vicinity. Negro operated stores in the institute and hospital area have reportedly doubled sales since the boycott began.

However, the Negro has no vote power as apparently guaranteed by the constitution. It was this point upon which they appealed the state ruling which excluded them from state representation.

U. S. Judge Rules Legislature Can Change Boundaries

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)— A law which left Negroes without the right to vote in city elections in troubled Tuskegee, and touched off a protest boycott of white merchants, was upheld Wednesday in Federal Court.

The legislative act which went into effect 16 months ago deprived the Negroes of a voice in their municipal government by gerrymandering them out of the city limits.

U.S. Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. ruled that "regardless of the motive" in passing the law, the legislature has unquestioned power to change the city boundaries.

APPEAL EXPECTED

While no immediate decision was made known, the Negroes are expected to appeal to higher courts. Fred Gray of Montgomery, a Negro attorney who filed the test suit on their behalf, said "I feel quite confident that an appeal will be filed."

One of the Tuskegee Negroes who contested the gerrymandering law, Lynwood T. Dorsey, commented, "we are naturally disappointed in the adverse ruling," but added: "I feel in the long run that justice will prevail."

The change in Tuskegee's boundaries left only 10 Negro voters within the city limits in contrast to the 420 who previously had voted there.

The status of the 600 white voters remained undisturbed.

The law affected only the rights of the Negro voters to take part in municipal elections. They can still vote for county, state and federal officers.

Negroes who sought a court order to knock out the 1957 act contended it violates their rights under the federal constitution. But Johnson held that nothing in the state or federal constitutions can prohibit the legislature from rearranging the city's boundaries.

OUTNUMBER WHITES

Negroes outnumber white residents of Tuskegee 4 to 1; in Macon County as a whole, the ratio is nearly 6 to 1.

And although Negroes now have only half as many voters as the whites, segregationists have expressed fear that the new federal civil rights law will force the registration of enough Negroes to give them political control of the county.

Passage of the gerrymandering law brought a mass boycott of white merchants in Tuskegee, a protest which is still in effect.

First Rights Hearing Is Scheduled

MONTGOMERY (AP) — An official of the civil rights committee was here Thursday to make arrangements for a hearing on alleged denial of Negro voting privileges Dec. 3.

A. H. Rosenfeld, Mt. Holly, N. J., director of the federal agency's office of complaints, information and surveys, said he had not yet found a definite site for the Montgomery hearing.

"The hearing will be open to th public unless testimony given might be harmful to someone," he said. Then it would be closed.

Macon County officials apparently prompted the hearing two weeks ago when they withheld voter registration records from two commission investigators.

Rosenfeld said that while the scope of the hearing had not been decided, Macon County Negroes had made sworn complaints of discrimination in thhe county's voter registration policies.

Negroes Lose Tuskegee Suit

Right To Change Boundaries Is Upheld By Federal Court In Alabama

By The United Press International

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29. — A Federal judge Wednesday upheld the power of Alabama to rearrange municipal boundaries regardless of [illegible] involved in dismissal of a suit by 12 Tuskegee Negroes.

They had sought to quash a legislative act gerrymandering their race [illegible] Macon County seat.

The Negroes asked to have a state law which excluded all but a handful of about 420 Negro voters from the Tuskegee city limits declared invalid because they said it violated the "due process" and "equal privilege" clauses of the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution.

Negro Appeal Expected

However, United States District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. held the court has no authority to declare the act invalid "after measuring any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States."

Negro attorney Fred Gray of Montgomery immediately announced, "I feel confident this will be appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals."

Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon and home of famed Tuskegee Institute, located in the black belt which runs through the center of Alabama. The County Board of Registrars is under investigation at present by the Civil Rights Commission for alleged infringement of Negro voting rights.

Boundaries Redrawn

The 1957 Legislature, using a trick utilized in 1812 by Massachusetts Gov. Elbridge Gerry, gerrymandered Tuskegee's city limits, cutting the area in half, redrawing its boundaries to form an odd 26-sided configuration and throwing out of the city all but 10 of the 420 registered Negro

Tuskegee Limits Shifting Legal, U.S. Judge Says

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI)—A federal judge ... Wednesday he has no authority to invalidate a legislative act that "Gerrymandered" Negroes out of the Tuskegee city limits and left them without local voting power.

Negroes sought to have a state law which excluded all but a handful of some 420 Negro voters from the Tuskegee city limits declared invalid. They said it violated the "due process" and "equal privilege" clauses of the 14th and 15th amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

But U.S. district Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. held the court has no authority to declare the act invalid "after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States."

In a six-page opinion, Johnson wrote, "the court has no power to change the boundaries of a municipality. The law is clear regardless of motives underlying the enactment of the law and regardless of the consequences of the act regarding the plaintiff's right to vote in municipal elections."

Negro attorney Fred Gray of Montgomery, representing the Negroes, said, "I feel confident that this will be appealed to the U.S. fifth circuit court of appeals."

Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon and home of famed Tuskegee institute. The county board of registrars is under investigation by the civil rights commission for alleged infringement of Negro voting rights. Last week two commission investigators were denied access to voting records by the board of registrars. This prompted the federal agency to schedule a hearing on the issue at Montgomery, Dec. 8.

The 1957 legislature, using a device utilized in 1812 by Massachusetts' Gov. Elbridge Gerry, "gerrymandered" Tuskegee's city limits, cutting the area in half and redrawing its boundaries to form an odd, 26-sided configuration. This threw out of the city all but 10 of the 420 registered Negro voters.

The act sailed through both houses of the legislature with only one dissenting vote. It precipitated a mass economic boycott of white merchants by Negroes in Tuskegee which is continuing. At least three white businessmen have closed shop and moved away.

Negroes outnumbered whites seven to one in Tuskegee proper and four to one in the county, but whites have held a two to one majority at the polls in the county.

Johnson said, "this court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body."

Negro No-Vote Law Upheld

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 29 (AP)—A law that left Negroes without the right to vote in City elections in troubled Tuskegee, and touched off a protest boycott of white merchants, was upheld Wednesday in Federal Court.

The legislative act, which went into effect 16 months ago, deprived the Negroes of a voice in their municipal government by gerrymandering them out of the city limits.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., ruled that "regardless of the motive" in passing the law, the Legislature has unquestioned power to change the city boundaries.

While no immediate decision was made known, the Negroes are expected to appeal.

The change in Tuskegee's boundaries left only 10 Negro voters within the city limits, in contrast to the 420 who previously had voted there. The status of the 600 white voters remained undisturbed.

Probe Made

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department has promised to take "all appropriate steps" if any federal law was violated in the arrest of three Negro ministers at Birmingham, Ala., on vagrancy charges.

The three ministers, all from Montgomery, Ala., were arrested Monday by Birmingham police, held several hours, then released and the charges dropped.

Department officials said Wednesday in answer to inquiries that a protest had been made to Atty. Gen. Rogers by Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People.

But the officials said that even before Wilkins' telegram came "a preliminary investigation into the matter had already been started" by the department's civil rights division.

Federal Court Upholds Change Of City Limits

Citing numerous decisions in similar cases by the U. S. Supreme Court, U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., at Montgomery Wednesday upheld the legislative act of 1957 which rearranged the city limits of Tuskegee. The ruling came in dismissal of a suit filed by a group of Negroes challenging the constitutionality of the act.

The complainants contended that the law deprived them of their rights under the Constitution.

Judge Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the Legislature in enacting the law, "this court has no authority to declare such ace invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the constitution of the United States."

Continuing, he said:

"This court has no control over no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body . . ."

The judge said "the law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the Legislative body of the state."

He cited several U. S. Supreme Court decisions which he said made clear in previous test cases.

Johnson ruled that the only issue was whether the Legislature has authority to change the territorial limits of a city. He said the federal courts have had similar questions presented many times in the past and have held that the Legislature does have that authority.

The law was enacted by the Legislature at the request of State Sen. Sam Engelhardt.

It was enacted as a local law affecting only Tuskegee and went into effect without the approval of Gov. James E. Folsom who refused to sign it.

Folsom made no attempt to veto the measure but let it become law without his approval.

Defendants in the case were Mayor Phil M. Lightfoot, City Council memebrs G. B. Edwards Jr., L. D. Gregory, Frank A. Oslin W. Foy Thompson and H. A Vaughan, Jr.; Police Cheif O. L. Hodnett, E. C. Laslie, Board of Revenue chairman, and Board of Revenue members C. A. Huddleston, J. T. Dyson, F. Conyers Thompson and Virgil Guthrie; Sheriff Preston Hornsby and Probate Judge William Varner.

COMMITTEE ON MACON COUNTY ABOLITION

Text Of Macon County Report

(Following is the full text of the report adopted Thursday by the Legislative Committee on Macon County for presentation to the Legislative Council, which will forward the report on to the new Legislature when it meets in January 1959. See story on Page 1.)

Your committee has held meetings in the counties of Montgomery, Russell, Lee, Elmore, Bullock, Tallapoosa and Macon. We have consulted with expert authorities on various phases of the question involved. We have invited all public officials of the various counties involved to appear before the committee at these hearings. Due notice was given of each hearing and anyone present at the hearings was given opportunity to be heard.

We first wish to thank the officials, individuals and groups of the various counties for the cooperative and helpful manner in which we were received and treated and for the suggestions made by them.

Our first meeting for public hearing was held on the 14th day of February, 1958. Only one witness appeared at this hearing. He spoke in behalf of the Tuskegee Civic Assn.

The substance of his testimony was that the Negro citizens of Macon County desired that the boundaries of Macon County be left as they are; that the Tuskegee Civic Assn. is willing to work with public officials and other citizens interested in the development of Macon County; that the office of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. is located at the same place where the NAACP office was located when it was in Tuskegee; and, he admitted on being questioned by a member of the Committee that one of the aims of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. is to integrate schools.

Further public hearings were held in the counties of Tallapoosa, Montgomery, Bullock, Elmore, Lee and Russell, in that order. The Sub-Committee on Judiciary met in open session with officials and citizens of Macon County at the County Courthouse in Tuskegee. These public hearings were held in an effort to determine the sentiment of the people of the counties involved and to give interested citizens opportunity to contribute valuable information to the committee.

Based on the testimony of the witnesses appearing before the committee at the various hearings, the committee concludes that the sentiment of the people is essentially the same in all counties involved, and the sentiment is that the committee and the Legislature should take whatever action necessary to accomplish the purposes for which this committee was established, even to the partition or abolition of Macon County. The committee feels that we should try one or more of the numerous alternatives mentioned, outlines of which are attached to this report as an exhibit, before taking the drastic step of abolition.

A number of fact-finding subcommittees were established by the committee as a whole. They have reported to the committee and copies of their reports are attached for information only.

The committee finds that the conditions in Macon County are serious, largely as a result of the activities of certain elements in Tuskegee Institute and the Veterans' Hospital in Tuskegee; that if these elements would, or could be made to cease and desist their activities which are, in the unanimous opinion of this committee, detrimental, the citizens of Macon County, both white and colored, could live in peace and harmony and make progress together to their mutual benefit as was the case from the establishment of Tuskegee Institute by Booker T. Washington in 1881 to "Black Monday" on May 17, 1954; that the attitude and actions of the Federal Civil Rights Commission will, of necessity, have a bearing on the future actions of the Legislature in this matter and that in the opinion of this committee the Legislature of Alabama will not tolerate interference in Macon or in any other county in Alabama by the Federal Civil Rights Committee. The interest of all citizens of Alabama, white or colored, will best be served by Alabama authorities and not by authorities who have no understanding of our problems, which problems are not of our own making but are problems brought about largely by outsiders who are not interested in the welfare of the people of Alabama.

The committee recommends that the "Standby Committee" recommended in the report of the Sub-Committee on Judiciary should be created. The Legislative Council is requested to cause to be drafted appropriate legislation to accomplish the following:

The creation of a permanent "Macon County committee to consist of the Representatives in the House from the counties of Montgomery, Elmore, Tallapoosa, Lee, Russell, Bullock and Macon, along with the senators from the 28th, 10th, 27th, and 26th Senatorial Districts. The senator from the 26th Senatorial District should serve as chairman of the committee.

The permanent "Macon County Committee" should meet on the call of the chairman or at such other time as a majority of the committee may decide and at the place or places designated by the chairman.

The permanent Macon County Committee should have the duties and responsibilities of continuing the study of conditions in Macon County and the contiguous counties particularly and the state as a whole generally with the view of keeping current information on the problems of segregation. It should follow very closely the activities of the recently created Federal Civil Rights Commission and make recommendations from time to time to the Legislature to meet any changing conditions or emergencies that may arise in Macon County. The permanent Macon County Committee should be directed to report to the Legislative Council at least once each year its opinion on conditions in Macon County, along with any recommended legislative action it feels needed at the time.

The chairman of the Macon County Committee shall cause to be printed sufficient copies of this report to furnish every member of the incoming Legislature with a copy of same at the organizational session in January, 1959. Copies of the various sub-committee reports are on file with the Legislative Reference Service and are made available to any member of the Legislature desiring them.

(Signed by: Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, chairman; Rep. H. James Hall of Montgomery, vice chairman, and Sens. Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery, Brouthton Lamberth of Tallapoosa and Joe Smith of Russell, and Reps. J. J. Rodgers of Macon; J. A. Crook and M. B. McClendon of Bullock; Charles Adams and Tom Johnson of Tallapoosa; D. W. Ward and Roberts Brown of Lee; Jack Law and Hardaway Johnson of Tallapoosa; Joe Dawkins, Joe Goodwyn and Wilbur Nolen of Montgomery.)

MACON COUNTY- HEARING Dec. 8, 1958
CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION
RESIGNATIONS - REGISTRARS

3 Vote Registrars Resign In Alabama Investigation

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 12 (AP)—At least three Alabama voter registrars have resigned following the Federal Civil Rights Commission hearing on Negro voting complaints here this week.

Two others under a new Federal Court order to appear before a subcommittee of the Commission next Friday said they plan to honor their subpoenas.

Dr. John A. Hannah, Commission chairman, said he and former Florida Governor Doyle E. Carlton would serve as the subcommittee for the second hearing.

Circuit Judge George Wallace of Clayton, Ala., who refused to respond to a subpoena to appear before the Civil Rights Commission, hasn't said whether he will honor the Federal Court order. He was subpoenaed Tuesday along with five registrars who refused to testify regarding voter registration in their counties.

The Governor's office disclosed today that R. E. Cook, chairman of the Board of Registrars in Wilcox County, had sent in his resignation.

Macon County Registrars E. P. Livingston and Grady Rogers, two of the five registration officials who refused to cooperate with the Civil Rights Commission, resigned on grounds they were being intimidated.

Two members of the Barbour County Board of Registrars, W. A. Stokes Sr. and J. W. Spencer, said they expect to be at the Commission session next Friday.

"I'm going to stay with this until it's over," said Stokes. "I'm not going to resign under fire. Our board doesn't have anything to cover up and they can have our records as far as I'm concerned."

Although they have resigned the two Macon County registrars said they plan to appear at the second meeting of the Commission next week.

But they said "we aren't registrars anymore and no records are in our possession."

Refusal to obey the orders could bring contempt citations and possible penalties of imprisonment or fines. This would be at the court's discretion.

A promise of "vigorous opposition" to the court orders came from Alabama's young Attorney General John Patterson, who will take office as Governor next month.

Patterson, on whose advice the registrars kept silent at the hearing, said he was considering intervention in the form of a motion to set aside the orders issued by U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr.

year-old federal agency's first hearing here Monday and Tuesday, told The Montgomery Advertiser they resigned Wednesday in a joint letter to Gov. James E. Folsom.

The Advertiser quoted Livingston and Rogers as saying, "We'll be glad to testify before the commission because we aren't registrars anymore and no records are in our possession."

Circuit Judge George C. Wallace, who refused to appear at the hearing, told newsmen he was served with the court order late Thursday.

Asked what action he planned, Wallace would only say, "I am conferring with my legal counsel . . ."

It was not known immediately how many of the registrars had been served.

District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. issued the court orders, which were asked by the commission through U.S. Attorney General William P. Rogers after the commission met silence in its inquiry on alleged discrimination against prospective Negro voters.

The court orders demand that they appear with their files before the commission or a subcommittee here next Friday.

In addition to Wallace, Livingston and Rogers, orders were issued for Registrars J. W. Spencer and W. A. Stokes of Barbour County and M. P. Evans of Bullock County.

Attorney General John Patterson, the governor nominate, directed the massive resistance at the inquiry. He advised the registrars to remain silent "but I did not advise them (Rogers and Livingston) to resign," he said.

Patterson, who contends the federal government lacks authority over state judicial officers, said he was "at a loss to understand" President Eisenhower's rebuke.

Second hearing Friday—

More Alabama registrars may resign posts

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 13—(AP)—The U. S. Civil Rights Commission plans to resume its hearing into Negro voting here next Friday, but there are indications there will be fewer voter registrars to question.

Three already have resigned and there were reports that more would leave rather than allow registration of Negro voters.

There also was indication there will not be many records for the commission's subcommittee, which will hold the second hearing here. Under Alabama law records of unsuccessful applicants do not have to be preserved by the registrars.

Commission Chairman John A. Hannah said he and former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Florida would make up the subcommittee.

THE REGISTRARS resigning were E. P. Livingston and Grady Rogers of Macon County and R. E. Cook of Wilcox. Macon County, which has a heavy Negro population, was left without a voter registration board since the third member had died about a month ago.

Livingston and Rogers were among the five registrars who refused to testify before the commission earlier this week regarding Negro voter registration and who were named Thursday in a U. S. District Court order.

Macon County Registrars E. P. Livingston and Grady Rogers, who refused to testify or even take the oath at the year-old federal commission's first hearing here Monday and Tuesday, told the Montgomery Advertiser they resigned yesterday in a joint letter to Gov. James E. Folsom.

The Advertiser quoted Livingston and Rogers as saying: "We'll be glad to testify before the commission because we aren't registrars anymore and no records are in our possession."

Circuit Judge George C. Wallace, who refused to appear at the hearing, told newsmen he was served with the court order late today.

The five registrars declined to be sworn in, to testify or produce their records.

The court orders demand that they appear with their files before the commission or a subcommittee here next Friday.

In addition to Wallace, Livingston and Rogers, orders were issued for Registrars J. W. Spencer and W. A. Stokes of Barbour County and M. P. Evans of Bullock County.

The counties involved are largely rural and have predominantly Negro populations.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, the governor nominate, directed the massive resistance at the inquiry. He advised the registrars to remain silent "but I did not advise them (Rogers and Livingston) to resign," he said. "They told me they were considering resigning becase they felt the Civil Rights Commission was intimidating them."

Patterson, who contends the federal government lacks authority over state judicial officers, said he was "at a loss to understand" President Eisenhower's rebuke of them.

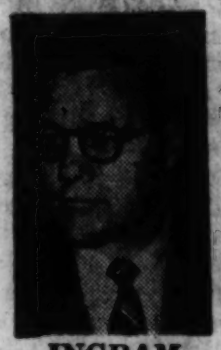
Macon Commission Belabors Obvious

By Bob Ingram

THE MACON COUNTY Abolition Commission should have done some abolishing a long time ago. Namely, it should have abolished itself.



INGRAM

Admittedly, this suggestion is belated. The commission will die a natural death Oct. 3, as specified in the legislative resolution from which it was conceived. Even those in sympathy with what the commission has aspired to do need not mourn this death—there is no great loss.

Interim committees of the Legislature, with but few exceptions, are best remembered for their ability to expend considerable sums of the taxpayer's money and give but little to the taxpayer in return. In this regard, the Macon group has earned a place near the head of the class.

About the only commendation which could be offered now in behalf of the commission is that at least it hasn't spent all the money it could have. The Legislature, never known to pinch pennies where interim committees were concerned, generously made $50,000 available for the Macon group.

To date the commission has spent but little over half that amount — to be exact, $28,864.97.

In return for this money, the commission has bequeathed to the taxpayers a report, five typewritten pages, triple spaced. The report was printed in full in The Advertiser Friday and is well worth reading if for no other reason than its cost.

Trite Conclusions

AS TO ITS contents, little can be said. Among the few conclusions reached by the commission after eight months of work were:

1. The situation in Macon County is serious.

2. The activities of the Federal Civil Rights Commission should be watched closely.

3. Most of the troubles, racially speaking, have been caused by outsiders who are not familiar with the local situation.

If points were given for originality, the Macon County Abolition Commission would have to be given a big zero.

After making these profound observations, the commission came up with its one recommendation. The members suggested that a permanent Macon County Committee be created to maintain a constant watch on developments in that county and elsewhere.

There appears to be nothing particularly wrong with this recommendation, but neither it nor all of the observations are worth $28,864.97.

When the commission first began its work in January, showing some signs of enthusiasm, it appeared the members intended to accomplish the one big job before them—agreeing upon a way to split up Macon in the event such a drastic step should prove necessary.

It was amusing at first — one lawmaker would agree to take Notasulga, another wouldn't have the Veterans' Hospital under any circumstances. The worst buy of all was Tuskegee Institute, while the city of Tuskegee was a choice lot. With the Negroes gerrymandered outside the city limits, everybody wanted Tuskegee.

That was about as far as it got, as indicated by Thursday's meeting.

"I'm for abolition right now if you will give me Notasulga," Sen. Broughton Lamberth proclaimed.

"We want Notasulga," another member objected. "You can have Tuskegee Institute."

Where They Came In

THIS EXCHANGE, mind you, was three days ago. It was the same script as before, the only difference being that it was eight months and $28,864.97 later.

The commission has no more idea today than it had in January as to how Macon should be divided or reduced in size. Yet that was it's prime reason for existence.

What this means is that if at some future date the abolition of the county is ordered by the Legislature, a new committee armed with more money will have to do what the present commission was paid to do.

One of the reasons the commission members failed to carry out their assignment may have been the recent campaigns. Of the 17 members, 14 were candidates in the May and June Democratic primaries. They batted an even .500 — seven were successful, seven unsuccessful.

But aside from the outcome, the fact was that these 14 men had things more important on their minds than worrying about Macon County. The first responsibility of politicians is to be reelected. That is the unquestioned creed of all office holders.

The members put aside Macon and its problems for months during the campaign. They had more important things on their minds. And once the meetings resumed, with 10 members now lame ducks, it was difficult to round up a quorum at the meetings.

One reason for this could have been a resolution which had been passed at the organizational meeting of the commission. That resolution specified that the members would be entitled to their compensation of $30 a day, present or not.

Joint Sessions

THE COMMISSION members will scream foul at this point, noting that the hours they spent on the various subcommittees were without compensation. This is true, but also true is that in most instances the subcommittees arranged to meet before, during or immediately after the regular commission meeting. Not always, but most of the time.

The members will also no doubt point out that the final report does not truly reflect their efforts as it does not contain the reports of the subcommittees.

The subcommittee reports were admittedly quite voluminous but none of them represented a great deal of effort. The Census Committee produced some interesting figures on the Negro-white ratio in the Macon voting precincts and school districts, information which would be vital in any abolition of Macon. But this information was obtained rather easily from the Bureau of Census.

Also obtained with little effort was the school population and the financial condition of the county. Again it should be emphasized, this is necessary information, but it's the type of information which was at the finger tips of the commission.

Net Loss

THE POINT sought to be made here, perhaps laboriously, is this: No matter what has to be done in the future in regard to Macon, abolition or preservation, the commission has contributed scarcely anything of value.

The efforts of the commission have been a waste of time for the members, a waste of money for the taxpayers.

MACON COUNTY BOUNDARY

Legislative Act Upheld By Judge In Boundary Row

A federal judge today upheld the controversial legislative act which all but eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee, Ala.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. threw out a complaint filed by a group of Tuskegee Negroes challenging the constitutionality of the 1957 law which rearranged city boundaries of Tuskegee.

The legislative act virtually halted Negro voting in Tuskegee by excluding all predonominantly Negro residential areas from the city limits.

As a result, only 10 registered Negro voters were left inside the city limits of the 420 who voted there before the act was passed. The 600 white voters in the city were left undistributed.

The Negroes who challenged the law claimed it deprived them of their rights guaranteed by the federal constitution.

NO AUTHORITY

Judge Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the Legislature in enacting the law, "this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the constitution of the United States."

Continuing, he said:

"This court has no power to exercise no supervision over and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body . . ."

The judge said that regardless of the motives of the Legislature, "the law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the Legislative body of the state."

He cited several U. S. Supreme Court decisions which he said made [illegible] ONLY territorial limits of a city. He said the federal courts have had similar questions presented many times in the past and have held that the Legislature does have that authority.

The law was enacted by the Legislature at the request of State Sen. Sam Engelhardt, one of the most ardent segregationists in the South and onetime executive secretary of the pro-segregation Alabama Association of Citizens' Councils.

It was enacted as a local law affecting only Tuskegee and went into effect without the approval of Gov. James E. Folsom who refused to sign it.

Folsom made no attempt to veto the measure but let it become law without his approval.

Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon County and the center of recurring complaints about Negro voting for many years. It was the site of the famed Negro school, Tuskegee Institute, prior to the passage of the gerrymandering law which left the institute outside the city limits.

Passage of the law which stopped Negroes from voting in city elections brought on a mass boycott of white merchants in Tuskegee which has continued for 16 months since the act went into effect.

Besides gerrymandering the city of Tuskegee, the same Legislature also submitted a constitutional amendment empowering the House and Senate to abolish Macon County entirely as a means of preventing Negroes from gain ing political control. The amendment was ratified by Alabama voters last December, but a study committee which has gone into the problems involved recommended no immediate action to gerrymander the county out of existence.

Negroes outnumber white residents nearly 6 to 1 in Macon County but white voters have a 2-1 advantage at the polls.

Engelhardt and other segregationists have expressed fear that the new civil rights law may force the registration of enough Negroes to give them an edge in voting.

Defendants in the case were: Mayor Phil M. Lightfoot; city council members, G. B. Edwards Jr., L. D. Gregory, Frank A. Oslin, W. Foy Thompson, H. A. Vaughan Jr.

Police Chief O. L. Hodnett and board of Revenue E. C. Leslie, Charles Huddleston, J. T. Pison, F. C. Thompson and Virgil Guthrie.

Sheriff Preston Hornsby and Probate Judge William Varner.

Lawyers for the city of Tuskegee were T. B. Hill Jr. and James Carter of Montgomery.

Plaintiffs were C. G. Gomillion and 11 other Negroes.

UPHOLD BAN ON TUSKEGEE NEGRO VOTING

City Realigning Legal, U. S. Court Says

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 29—A law which has deprived virtually all Negroes in the Tuskegee area of voting survived its first test in federal court Wednesday.

United States District Judge Frank M. Johnson upheld a 16 month old legislative act rearranging the city boundaries. It left all predominantly Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

Johnson said nothing in the federal Constitution prohibits the state legislature from changing the boundaries of a city regardless of the motive.

Still Boycott

Atty. Fred Gray of Montgomery, who filed the test suit on behalf of a group of Tuskegee Negroes, said the ruling probably will be appealed to higher courts.

Enactment of the law in June, 1957 touched off a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants which is still in effect. Its passage left only 10 registered Negro voters inside the city in contrast to the 420 who voted there before the law went into effect. The 600 white voters in the city were left unaffected.

The Negroes who challenged the law claimed it deprived them of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution.

Law Clear in Case

Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the legislation in enacting the law, "This court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States.

"This court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body."

The judge said that regardless of the motives of the legislature, "The law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislative body of the state."

He cited several United States Supreme court decisions which he said made that clear in previous test cases.

Macon Group OK's Report On Abolition

The Macon County Abolition Commission Thursday officially adopted the report it will submit to the next Legislature, but at the same time left the door open for last-minute amendments to be made before the Oct. 3 deadline.

In a brief meeting at the Capitol, the legislative group adopted a report almost identical to the tentative draft which had been accepted a week ago from a subcommittee.

The report made no concrete recommendations other than the creation of a permanent Macon County committee which would maintain a constant watch on the racial situation in that county and thus be in a position to take immediate action if necessary.

The report carried no recommendation for the abolition of Macon County, although it noted that in most counties involved sentiment favored abolition if such a step was necessary to preserve white supremacy at the ballot boxes.

The committee was authorized by the 1957 Legislature to make a study to determine ways and means of preventing the 7-1 Negro majority in Macon from gaining political control.

Later, an amendment was made to the Constitution by the voters giving the Legislature the authority to reduce the size of Macon or abolish it entirely to preserve white control.

Court Upholds Negro Vote Ban

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29 (AP)—[illegible] Negroes [illegible] the right to vote in city elections [illegible] touched off a protest boycott of white merchants, was upheld today in Federal court.

The legislative act which went into effect 16 months ago deprived the Negroes of a voice in their municipal government by gerrymandering them out of the city limits.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr., ruled that "regardless of the motive in passing the law, the Legislature has unquestioned power to change the city boundaries.

Delays Abolishment—

Group Approves Report On Macon

MONTGOMERY, Sept. 4 (UPI)—The Macon County Study Committee unanimously adopted a report today recommending the Negro-dominated territory be kept intact for the time being and that a permanent "watchdog" committee be created to keep a close eye on the situation.

The committee was established by the 1957 Legislature to study the feasibility of erasing the county to preserve white supremacy at the ballot box. The Macon County seat is Tuskegee, home of Tuskegee Institute and site of [illegible] boycott of white merchants.

State Sen. Sam Englehardt of Macon told United Press International "there's not a man on the committee that doesn't want to abolish the county. The big question is when to do it."

Englehardt, chairman of the committee, declined to pinpoint a date when he thought the county would have to be eliminated to preserve white supremacy.

"The county will have to be abolished eventually and the probable date is whenever the Federal Civil Rights Commission begins jailing the registrars for contempt of court."

Tuskegee's Vote Case Set for Higher Court

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—After Federal District Court Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. turned down a request to throw out a state law which eliminates Negro voters from Tuskegee, the group through their attorney, Fred D. Gray, announced that they will appeal the case to a higher Federal Court for favorable consideration.

The state law in question was passed because of white fears of the predominant number of Negro voters in that city. It leaves Tuskegee with 10 registered voters instead of 420 who voted earlier.

Tuskegee Negro Exclusion Law Upheld By Court

Legislature Has Power, Says Judge

By BOB INGRAM

U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. Wednesday upheld the constitutionality of a controversial act passed by the 1957 Legislature which removed practically all Negro voters from within the city limits of Tuskegee.

In a concise, six-page opinion, Judge Johnson emphatically stated that the fixing of municipal boundaries was not within the jurisdiction of the federal courts but rested entirely with "a duly convened and elected legislative body acting for the people in the state of Alabama."

The gerrymandering bill passed the Legislature July 12, 1957, under the sponsorship of State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, former head of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils and widely known segregationist leader.

The admitted purpose of the bill—and its immediate effect upon enactment—was the removal of some 400 Negro voters from the city limits of Tuskegee. Less than a dozen Negro voters remained in the city after the enactment of the law.

VIGOROUS PROTEST

Tuskegee Negroes vigorously protested the act—even to the extent of boycotting white Tuskegee merchants—and on Aug. 4 a suit was filed in federal court by a group of Negroes asking that the city be restrained from enforcing the law. It was on this suit which Judge Johnson ruled on Wednesday.

Fred Gray, Montgomery Negro attorney who represented the protestants, indicated Wednesday that Judge Johnson's ruling would be appealed.

"I have not had an opportunity to study the decision," Gray said, "but I feel quite confident we will appeal it."

Gray had based his case on the grounds that the motive of the act was to deprive Tuskegee Negroes their right to vote in city elections. He contended this was a violation of the 14th and 15th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

NOT FOR COURT

But Judge Johnson took issue with this point, contending that it was not for the court to determine the motive or intention of an act.

"The law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislative body of the state, regardless of the motive underlying the enactment," Judge Johnson wrote.

The Judge also quoted from a U.S. Supreme Court decision which held in part:

"If the act done by the state is legal, is not in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, it is quite out of the power of any court to inquire what was the intention of those who enacted the law."

Judge Johnson also cited a recent ruling in Birmingham by U.S. District Judge Richard T. Rives when the point was made that "in testing constitutionality we cannot undertake to search for a motive."

"Thus the court must now conclude that regardless of the motive of the Legislature of the State of Alabama and regardless of the effects of its actions, insofar as these plaintiffs' rights to vote in the municipal elections is concerned, this court has no authority to declare said act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States," Johnson ruled. "This court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body, acting for the people of the state of Alabama."

The suit filed by the Negroes had named as defendants a number of Tuskegee and Macon County officials including Mayor Phil Lightfoot; Council members G. B. Edwards Jr., L. D. Gregory, Frank A. Oslin, W. Fay Thompson and H. A. Vaughan Sr.; Board of Revenue members E. C. Leslie, Charles Huddleston, J. T. Dyson, F. C. Thompson and Virgil Guthrie; Chief of Police O. L. Hodnett, Sheriff Preston Hornsby and Probate Judge William Varner.

These officials were represented by James J. Carter and Thomas B. Hill Jr., Montgomery attorneys.

Judge Johnson's decision marked the first legal setback for Tuskegee Negroes since the passage of the gerrymandering bill in 1957—a bill which became law without the signature of Gov. James E. Folsom.

Earlier, after the boycott of white merchants had begun, Atty. Gen. John Patterson went into Circuit Court seeking an order to restrain the Negroes from their boycott.

But in this instance the Negroes were triumphant. Circuit Judge Will O. Walton rebuffed Patterson by ruling that the Negroes had a right to trade anywhere they saw fit.

Engelhardt's decision to rearrange Tuskegee's city limits came after it became increasingly apparent Negro voters might win control of the municipal government.

GAP NARROWED

Increased registration of Negroes, especially those connected with Tuskegee Institute, had closed the gap between white and Negro voters to a ratio of approximately 60-40 with the whites in majority.

However, under the old city limits, the Negro population of 5,397 compared with but 1,310 whites. It was against this background that Engelhardt decided to reduce the size of the city.

This was not the first legislative step taken by Engelhardt toward preserving white supremacy at the ballot boxes in Tuskegee.

Several years earlier, while a member of the House of Representatives, he was instrumental in the passage of a law prohibiting "single shot" balloting in city elections. This prevented Negroes in Tuskegee from voting as a bloc for one candidate while whites were splitting their strength by voting for several candidates.

Engelhardt also authored an amendment to the State Constitution ratified last December which will permit the outright abolition of Macon County if such a step is necessary to prevent Negro political control.

COMMITTEE FORMED

A legislative committee created to study the possibility of such a step recently completed its work without making such a recommendation. The committee did suggest, however, that a permanent committee be established to watch the Macon situation and be prepared to initiate abolition proceedings if necessary.

Of some significance in Judge Johnson's ruling was the fact that in citing the right of the Legislature to fix the boundaries of cities he also quoted from cases wherein the Legislature was also given the same control over county boundaries.

This left the clear implication that in the event Macon County should be abolished, and such abolition challenged in court, the outcome of the litigation would be the same as that in the Tuskegee case.

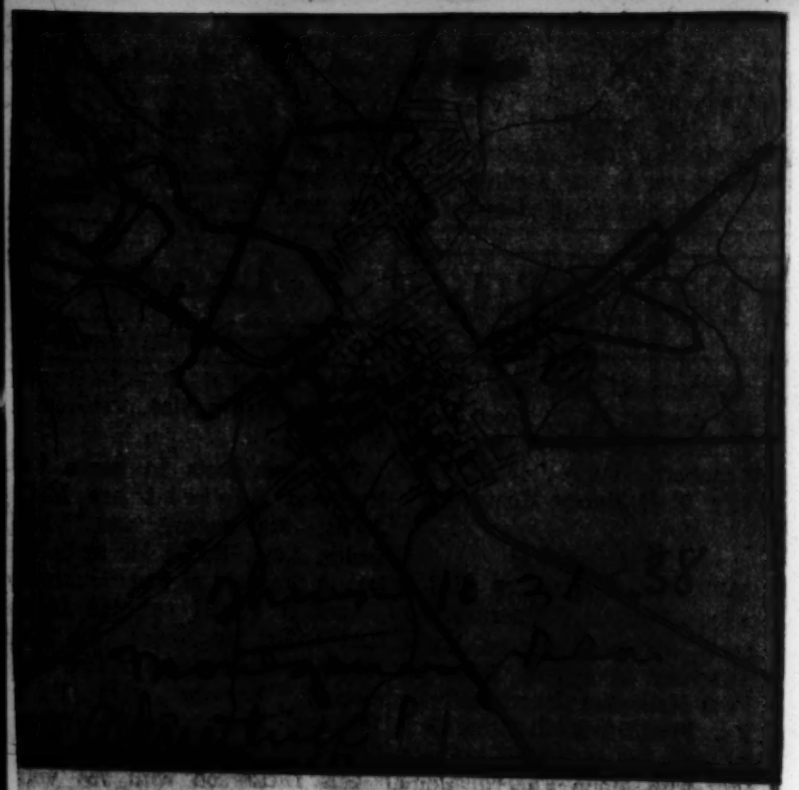
Engelhardt 'Tickled' By Judge's Decision

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon said Wednesday he was "tickled to death" that a bill he sponsored reducing the size of Tuskegee has been held valid by U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr.

Engelhard had pushed the bill through the 1957 Legislature with its expressed purpose being to remove from the city limits of Tuskegee approximately 400 Negro voters.

Judge Johnson, in declaring the local act constitutional, ruled that the right of altering the size of a municipality rested with the Legislature and not with the federal courts.

"I am mighty happy with the decision, and I know the people of Tuskegee are too," Engelhardt said. "There is not much I can say; Judge Johnson in his ruling took the words right out of my mouth."



TUSKEGEE: BEFORE AND AFTER

The limits of Tuskegee formed a perfect square until July, 1957. The dotted line in the map shows the present boundary of the city. Tuskegee Institute and the adjoining Negro residential areas were all removed from the city limits by a legislative act.

CIVIL RIGHTS HEARING, DEC. 8, 1958

Civil Rights Probe Gets Start In Atmosphere of Defiance

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—The U.S. Civil Rights Commission gained access Monday to some voting records from Macon County, Ala., for charges of discrimination against would-be Negro voters.

But then it promptly ran into defiance from another official of the same county who refused to turn over his files or to answer questions about the alleged barring of Negroes from registration lists.

Witnesses Heard.

These developments came after several Negroes from Tuskegee, including several highly educated men from Tuskegee Institute, told the new federal group that they were systematically prevented from registering solely because of their race. Tuskegee is the seat of Macon County.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson objected vigorously but quietly when some voting lists from Macon County were brought into the hearing room. Voter records in five other counties have been impounded by Alabama officials to keep them from the commission.

Grady Rogers, a voter registration official from near Tuskegee, refused to answer questions about voter registration procedure in Macon County.

Patterson, who is Alabama's former governor, argued against allowing Rogers to testify. He contended that as a member of the Board of Registrars under Alabama law, he is a judicial official whose actions and decisions cannot be questioned.

Dean Robert G. Storey of the Southern Methodist University Law School, vice chairman of the commission, ordered Rogers to take the stand and said he could refuse to answer questions as they were submitted.

The registrar did just that. He declined to discuss any phase of registration procedure on the grounds he is a judicial officer and that the questions might be discriminating.

Macon Probate Judge William Varner, 70, brought eight volumes of his voter records before the recently created commission which is holding its first public hearing in this Deep South capital. Before he could reach the witness stand to testify about the records and his duties, Patterson protested from the floor that Varner had no legal right to take the records from his county.

The commission's vice chairman, Robert G. Storey, presiding, said the commission had no intention of taking the voter volumes to Washington or anywhere else outside of Alabama.

Patterson continued to object, challenging the commission's right to question a judicial officer of the state. Storey declared there would be no constitutional violations and said he could see no ground for objections.

The attorney general returned to his seat after filing with the commission a letter which he wrote to the probate judge setting forth his position.

Officials said the judge's records were only lists of qualified voters. They added that the records did not include copies of the questionnaires and tests submitted by the board of registrars to voter applicants.

The commission heard complaining Negro witnesses first, with the registration officials following. Until then, they were given no official chance to say whether they brought the records with them or why they refused.

One of those subpoenaed as a witness, Circuit Judge George Wallace of Clayton, Ala., refused to appear. He explained that he did so because the commission has no power under the law to subpoena him.

Wallace, who ordered voting records of Barbour and Bullock counties impounded, has threatened to jail any commission agent who tries to get them.

There was little deviation in the testimony of the Macon County Negroes whose complaints to the commission, along with similar charges in other counties, prompted the hearing.

They told how they were kept waiting hour after hour before finally being interviewed and how, then, they were required to fill out questionnaires and to copy in longhand long sections of the U.S. Constitution.

Never at any time were they notified of their rejection, the witnesses said, and only on infrequent occasions were they given an explanation when they asked for one.

The complaining witnesses included faculty members of Tuskegee Institute—some with Ph.D. degrees—ministers, and nurses at the hospital at Tuskegee.

26 in Alabama Tell Of Voting Obstacles

By Richard L. Lyons
Staff Reporter

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 8—A parade of Negro doctors, ministers, teachers and nurses told the Civil Rights Commission today about their losing fight to register as voters in Tuskegee.

Twenty-six witnesses from that Negro college center told similar stories of waiting a day or more in line to take a two-hour test, of copying whole Articles of the Constitution to prove they could write, of not being told whether they had qualified and, when they asked, being forced to do it all over again because they got a date wrong.

County election officials will be asked their side of the story later. The Commission has not heard from the registrars.

J. Ernest Wilkins, former Assistant Secretary of Labor and a Negro, asked whether she knew why she was not found qualified.

"I can read, I can write, I think I possess all my mental faculties," she said. "I can only conclude it was because I am a Negro."

Mrs. Marie Williams, 35-year-old housewife, told of making five trips to the courthouse and writing Article 11 of the Constitution. She said she knows Article 11 by heart but is not registered to vote.

Took Tests Twice

Roberta A. Lightfoot, 38, registered nurse at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Tuskegee, told of taking the test twice, and of once waiting seven hours to get in.

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University, asked Mrs. Lightfoot why she wanted to vote.

"It is a right and duty of all citizens," she said. "It's what our Government is built on."

Demetrice I. Lyles, 36, holds a masters degree from Ohio State University and teaches veterinary medicine at Tuskegee. He said he wanted to vote "to help elect more democratic and Christian officials and because I think I should be able to tell my children at election time who I voted for."

Luther W. Hemmons, 75, retired procurement official at the VA hospital, said he spent a lot of time at the courthouse observing registration. He said he had seen whites go in and out of their separate registration room in two minutes. He assumed they had gone in to register but wasn't sure. Hemmons said he has been registered to vote in Tuskegee for 15 years.

Only other Tuskegee witness who was registered was William P. Mitchell, chairman of the Tuskegee Civic Association, who testified on results of a county voter survey. Mitchell was registered 12 years ago after he filed a suit in Federal Court which went to the Supreme Court. The case was dropped when a registrar "remembered" she had registered him several years before, Mitchell said.

Mitchell's figures showed that in the last eight years 510 Negroes have been registered in Macon County, which includes Tuskegee. He said that was 32 per cent of those who applied, not counting others who stood in line and didn't get into the registration room. His figures showed that Negroes outnumber whites in population 6 to 1 in Macon County, but white persons hold a 3 to 1 edge on the voter list.

Only 11 per cent of those registered are Negroes, he said.

The six counties involved have indicated they won't produce the records. If they do not, the Commission can seek a court order to force compliance. The Commission is here under its statutory assignment to investigate complaints that voting rights have been violated because of race.

Lead-off witness was William A. Hunter, 53, professor of education at Tuskegee Institute, who received a doctor of philosophy degree at Iowa State College. He told of standing in line three days in 1954 at the Macon County Courthouse waiting to apply for registration. It took him two hours to answer the questions, although that was before the days when applicants were required to write part of the Constitution. He said the election board had him address an envelope and said he would be notified if he had passed. He waited six months, heard nothing and tried again. He said he hadn't heard from the board since.

Minister Testifies

The Rev. Kenneth L. Buford, 41, Methodist minister in the city of Tuskegee, said he graduated from City College of New York and from theology school in New Jersey. He said he owned a house and had paid his taxes. He said he filled out an application last September and was turned down because to the question on length of residence he answered, "more than two years" (the legal requirement) rather than the precise date he moved to Alabama. He said he was told to come back after November 10 (six days after the election) to correct the mistake.

Fidelia Joann Adams, 21, working for her masters degree in organic chemistry at Tuskegee, said she was asked to copy Article 11 of the Constitution when she tried to register in August. It covered 3½ pages in longhand, but took her only one hour because "I write quite fast." She

Voting Records Tussle Prevails In Montgomery

MACON COUNTY STUDY COMMITTEE
ABOLISHMENT-MACON COUNTY

Macon Study Group Reconvenes Thursday

Post Herald P.17

MONTGOMERY, June 8 (UPI) —The Macon County study committee will reconvene Thursday after a two-month recess.

Before it recessed April 7, the committee had held hearings in every county surrounding Macon to determine public opinion concerning the abolishment of Macon, where Negroes outnumber whites 7-1, to maintain white supremacy.

Burmingham

A constitutional amendment, approved by voters in the December election, gave the Legislature power to abolish the county if it sees fit.

Sen Sam Engelhardt of Shorter, chairman of the group, predicted that Macon would either be abolished or all Negroes "moved out." He said that "was the only way to maintain white supremacy.

"The next thing to do is ge recommendations from the sub committees and then go to work," Engelhardt said. "We have the sentiment . . . and how the people feel on record."

Mon. 6-9-58

At the same time, he said the committee would have "several alternatives and more than one plan for solving the problem in its recommendation to the Legislature, which will be drawn up by October."

He declined to speculate on what the alternatives would be.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery, who proposed the recess, said we've got to get our thinking together. When we come back in the middle of June we can hear recommendations . . ."

Rep. Joe Goodwyn, also of Montgomery, said one prime consideration would be to "make sure we don't create problems for other counties" should the committee recommend Macon be abolished.

Macon Committee To Begin Drafting Recommendations

Advertiser

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt says the Macon County Study Committee likely will begin writing its recommendations to the legislature week after next.

He made the observation after the special legislative committee studying the racial problem in Macon County received reports and partial reports from its subcommittees.

The committee was established by the 1957 Legislature to investigate problems that would result if the county, which has a heavy Negro population, were abolished.

Sources close to the committee say the group probably won't recommend abolition of the county except as a last resort to prevent Negro political domination there.

Rep. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa County, chairman of the census subcommittee, presented the findings of his group. He said it was based on the county's population as shown in the 1950 census.

Adams said after meeting with Bureau of Census officials in Atlanta, his subcommittee decided against a special census because the population differences would be negligible.

The report showed there were 5,398 Negroes and 1,315 whites in the city of Tuskegee in 1950. There were 1,262 white and Negro voters in Beat One, which composed most of the city at that time.

A local act was passed by the legislature last year which reduced the Tuskegee city limits, excluding most of the Negro voters.

This brought about a boycott of white merchants at Tuskegee by Negroes which is still in effect.

Study Finds Macon Till Well Filled

Macon County's finances are in "very good condition" a special legislative committee was told Friday.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery presented a subcommittee report to the interim committee which is making a survey of problems which might result if the county were abolished.

Dawkins served as chairman of the finance and taxation subcommittee.

Meanwhile, the committee chairman, Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County, appointed a subcommittee to begin drafting the group's tentative report to the 1959 Legislature.

Engelhardt will serve as chairman of this subcommittee. Other members are Montgomery's Sen. Vaughan Hill Robison; Reps. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa, Joe Dawkins and H. James Hall, both of Montgomery.

Engelhardt called a meeting of the group for next Tuesday to begin writing the report. He said if it is ready the full committee will meet again next Thursday to receive the report.

The finance and taxation subcommittee said Macon County has a surplus of $41,058. Although $30,000 in bonds are outstanding against the road and bridge fund only $7,800 is needed for debt service this year. The county receives about $29,000 a year from property taxes which go in this fund.

Dawkins said the county gas tax fund received $46,100 last year from the sale of gas tax warrants but $24,732 was paid back during the year. The balance is to be paid next year.

The county board of education increased its general fund balance by $7,043 even after transferring $85,000 to the building fund, he said.

Although $185,000 in school warrants are outstanding, the retirement payments are spread over the next 16 years.

Macon Group Back On Job; Recess Ends

Montgomery

The Macon County Abolition Commission returns to work here Thursday after a prolonged campaign recess with it reported that the group may hear an appeal to abolish the county only as a last resort.

Journal 6-12-58

The commission, created by a constitutional amendment ratified last December, is authorized to recommend the abolition of Macon County if such a step is necessary to preserve white supremacy. Negroes outnumber whites in Macon by nearly seven to one. The meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. in the Capitol.

The appeal to preserve Macon if possible may come from a group of Tuskegee attorneys and public officials. This group met with a subcommittee of the commission recently and reportedly appealed for the preservation of the county if possible.

Earlier, the commission had met with public officials in the adjoining counties and received the same recommendation—that the county be abolished only as a last resort.

Under the provisions of the amendment if Macon is abolished its area would be absorbed by the adjoining counties—Montgomery, Lee, Bullock, Tallapoosa, Elmore and Russell, although the latter county was not specifically mentioned in the amendment.

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, chairman of the commission, said Wednesday that the group would probably make arrangements Thursday to begin drafting the final report which is to be submitted to the new Legislature next year.

Macon Unit Begins Draft Of Report

Amid reports of an impending special session of the Legisature, the Macon County Abolition Commission met unexpectedly here Thursday to step up the pace of its work.

P. 6-A

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, commission chairman, said he called the meeting hurriedly so that the members could be bin drafting their final report.

The commission will meet Monday at which time reports from various subcommittees will be heard.

Engelhardt said Thursday that Gov. James E. Folsom's statement that he intends to call a special session made it imperative that the commission speed up its work.

If a special session is called, Engelhardt explained, the commission members would be too busy with other matters to devote time to writing their report.

The commission was created by a constitutional amendment ratified last December. It is empowered to seek and recommend ways and means of preserving white supremacy in Macon County where Negroes outnumber whites by nearly 7 to 1.

Group Fails In Deciding Macon Action

Mont. Advertiser
Montgomery Ala.
Fri. 6-13-58

The Macon County Abolition Commission met here Thursday for the first time in months but adjourned almost immediately when its members failed to agree on what future action to take.

The commission was in session 40 minutes, which included a 30-minute recess. No official action of any sort was taken other than the scheduling of another meeting in three weeks. P. 2

The question which divided the commission members was the preparation of the final report on the proposed abolition of Macon County.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery suggested that work begin immediately on the report so that it could be submitted before the Oct. 1 deadline. Dawkins pointed out that the recommendations to be made by the commission will be considered by the 1959 Legislature, and only seven members of the 17-member commission will be in that legislature.

He added that the present commission has received all the information it needs and that if the new Legislature wished to study the matter further it could create a special committee for that purpose.

Dawkins' suggestion ran into some opposition but no formal vote was ever taken on his proposal.

No date was set for the next meeting, at which time the judiciary subcommittee will file its report.

Racial Study Group Urged

The Macon County Abolition Commission recommended Monday that a permanent legislative committee be created to make a continuing study of Alabama's racial problems.

The suggestion was made as the commission continued to work on the preliminary draft of the report it will submit to the new Legislature.

The proposed standby committee would be directed to be particularly concerned with Macon County, but it would also have the right to study racial matters throughout the state.

It would be required to make periodic reports of its findings and would also be authorized to recommend specific legislation it felt was needed to preserve segregation.

The commission still has given no indication as to what it will recommend regarding Macon County, but indications are that it will not suggest outright abolition at this time.

Under the constitutional amendment which created the commission, it could recommend that Macon be abolished or re-[illegible] if such a step was necessary to prevent the Negro majority from gaining control at the ballot box.

Attending Monday's meeting was Rep.-nominate Grady Rogers, Macon County's new member of the Alabama Legislature. He said he felt that 50 per cent of the white people in Macon favor abolition now and that 70 to 80 per cent will go along ultimately.

Rogers also expressed the fear that it might be dangerous to put off abolition too long. He said there might come a time when it would be impossible to abolish the county.

Macon Committee Slows Proceedings

BY ALFRED McCORMACK JR.
United Press International

MONTGOMERY, July 30—The Macon County Study Committee's self-imposed "speed up" slowed down today pending a report on testimony taken at public hearings.

A breakdown of testimony taken at five hearings in counties surrounding the territory where Negroes outnumber whites four to one currently is being prepared by State Sen. Vaughn Hill Robison and Rep. O. J. (Joe) Goodwyn, both of Montgomery.

The group, charged with making a study of ways to maintain white supremacy in the Black Belt county, held only a brief meeting today and adjourned until Friday "since we can't do anything right now."

Rep. Dawkins of Montgomery said the full report "isn't going to take a day or two . . . it's something that is going to take a lot of thinking and planning."

"We have to report by the first Friday in October," he added, "and I think we should wait until the last minute. Things are liable to change if we make the report sooner."

Dawkins, who has taken the position that Macon should be abolished only "as a last resort," did not say what changes might occur.

It appeared the committee members were obviously vague on what they might do. Every question asked was shrugged off.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Shorter, chairman of the committee, ordered a speed up earlier this month in wake of Gov. James E. Folsom's announced intention of calling a special session of the Legislature to recodify Alabama insurance laws. "The committee members would not be able to do their work in a special session, said Engelhardt.

Rep. Grady Rogers of Macon, a member of the study group, said he personally is "sure we are going to have to abolish the county.

"There are a lot of lawyers in Macon and Tuskegee who say they want to abolish the county as a last resort. I don't know what this 'last resort' they're always talking about means."

Macon County Finances In Sound Condition, Report Given Legislative Group

Macon County finances are in a sound condition, with a current surplus of $41,058, the legislative interim committee studying possible abolition or boundary revision of this county was told last week.

The report came from Rep. Joe Dawkins, of Montgomery, who is chairman of a subcommittee named to make a survey of Macon County finances.

The subcommittee report said that, although Macon County has $30,000 in bonds outstanding against the road and bridge fund, only $7,800 is needed for debt service this year. The county receives about $29,000 a year from property taxes which go in this fund.

Dawkins said the county gas tax fund received $46,100 last year from the sale of gax tax warrants but $24,732 was paid back during the year. The balance is to be paid next year.

The county board of education increased its general fund balance by $7,043 even after transferring $85,000 to the building fund, he said.

Although $185,000 in school warrants are outstanding, the retirement payments are spread over the next 16 years.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee appointed by Sen. Sam Engelhardt met Tuesday to begin drafting a tentative report to the January session of the Legislature. Sen. Engelhardt is serving as chairman of this subcommittee, which expected to complete the first draft of its report this week.

ALA. STATE SENATOR URGES ABOLITION OF TUSKEGEE

A suggestion to abolish the city government of Tuskegee, Ala., to prevent Negroes from gaining control of the city was made by State Sen. Broughton Lambert of Alexander City. The suggestion followed a recently filed suit challenging the constitutionality of a 1957 legislative act that rearranged Tuskegee's City limits to exclude practically all Negro voters.

Refuse To Talk

All But One Take Advice Of Patterson As Negro Hearing Opens

By KENNETH TOLER
Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 8.—Voter registration officials in four Alabama counties defied the Federal Civil Rights Commission Monday at the opening of the agency's first hearing of complaints that Negroes have been denied the right to register and vote.

They refused to testify on advice of Atty. Gen. John Patterson, the governor-elect, that the commission is without power to challenge jurisdiction of the registrars as constitutional officers of the state.

However, the attorney general was taken by surprise when a county probate judge he had advised not to produce his records, had them hauled into the commission's hearing room in the Federal Building. They were the voter lists of Macon County, in which the famed Negro Tuskegee Institute is located.

Waives Official Opinion

Probate Judge William Varner waived Mr. Patterson's official opinion holding that Judge Varner was prohibited from removing registration books from the county.

When Mr. Patterson declared he had certain objections to raise, Vice Chairman Robert G. Storey, dean of Southern Methodist University Law School at Dallas, Texas, said they would be accepted only from witnesses and not counsel.

The attorney general was seated on the front row in the committee hearing when several hushy deputies dumped the records in front of him and before the civil rights commissioners.

Dean Storey said none of the constitutional rights of the probate judge would be violated in waiving aside Mr. Patterson's assertion that the commission, an arm of the executive branch of the Federal Government, was powerless to call a state constitutional and judicial officer to testify or produce his records.

Former Gov. John S. Battle of Virginia, a commission member, made a dramatic appeal to the officials who refused to produce their records or testify to reconsider their actions. He said he had the same feelings about segregation and Southern customs as the Alabama officials.

Fears Effect In Congress

Mr. Battle said the action will be used by "a majority in Congress in January not favorable to the South" to gain enactment of punitive legislation against the South.

The full commission, headed by President John Hannah of Michigan State University, was on hand. The commissioner had announced at the outset that Dean Storey would handle most of the questioning. However, J. Ernest Wilkins of Chicago, the only Negro member and former Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs, posed almost as many questions as the vice chairman.

One of the witnesses who refused to appear was Circuit Judge George C. Wallace of Clayton, a defeated candidate for governor. He was summoned to present election records he had impounded last Oct. 29, long before the commission had demanded them. He said the agency has no authority to summon a judicial official of the state.

"I do not intend to dignify that commission by appearing before it," Judge Wallace said Monday morning. "They had no right to subpena me away from my circuit and ask me to bring records that have been legally impounded by my court."

Twenty-seven Negroes, mostly holders of college degrees and faculty members at Tuskegee, testified during the morning. They said they were denied right to register in Macon County despite repeated efforts to do so.

Racial Bias Charged

Each said in their opinion the only reason they were not permitted to register was because "I am a Negro." Several said they wanted the right to vote because that was the duty of citizenship and a right guaranteed them under the Constitution.

They pointed out long questionnaires were required of Negroes and that it took nearly two hours to complete the firms. They said long lines would form and many Negroes "left in disgust" at the slowness in functioning of the registrar's office.

The refused by white officials to testify started with one member of the Mocan Board of Registrars, Grady Rogers. He agreed at first to answer some questions, but refused to discuss registration procedure.

In rapid order, the Macon County board chairman, E. P. Livingston; two members of the Barbour County Board of Registrars, W. A. Stokes and J. W. Spencer; and M. T. Evans of the Registration Board in Bullock County refused to testify under oath. They gave the same reason.

Battle Appeals To Alabamans

Virginian Asks Co-Operation At Rights Hearing

CITES DIXIE ANCESTRY

By United Press International

MONTGOMERY, Dec. 8.—Civil Rights Commissioner John Battle, former Governor of Virginia, made an impassioned plea Monday for Alabama officials to co-operate in the investigation of alleged discrimination in Negro voting in the state.

Mr. Battle, speaking at the close of the first day of the hearing, warned that if Alabama did not co-operate it could hurt the South when Congress convenes next year.

'State Of My Ancestors'

Mr. Battle's statement:

"I've come to the state of my ancestors. My father was proud to be an Alabamian. My grandfather, Collum A. Battle, was my constant companion during boyhood days and during the War Between the States the commanding officer of a brigade of Alabama troops which was honored by a resolution of the Confederacy thanking Alabama officers and men for their services to the Confederacy.

"My grandfather was subsequently denied his seat in Congress to which the people of Alabama had elected him because he served their cause. So I come to the people of Alabama as a friend. I think I may be permitted to say returning to the house of my father.

"And none of you white officials and citizens believe more strongly than I do in the segregation of the races as the right and proper way of life in the South.

"It is, in my judgment, the only way racial integrity can be preserved and thus be beneficial to both races. The President of the United States was not in error in asking me to serve as a member of the commission. He wanted someone with strong Southern sentiments which I have and I accepted the assignment so I might be of some service to the country and the South.

Fears Officials Erred

"It is from this background, ladies and gentlemen, that I am constrained to say in all friendliness I fear the officials of Alabama and of certain counties have made an error in doing that which appears to be an attempt to cover up their actions in relation to the exercise of the ballot that some people might have.

"The majority of the next members of Congress will not be friendly to the South and punitive legislation may be passed and this hearing may be used in the advocacy of that legislation which will be adverse to us in Virginia and to you in Alabama.

"We are adjourning this hearing until tomorrow morning and I may say to you as one who is tremendously interested in the Southern cause, will you kindly reconsider the situation and see if there is not someway you in fairness to your convictions that the officials may co-operate a little bit more fully with this commission and not have it said by our own enemies that the people in Alabama were not willing to explain their conduct when requested to do so?

"This may be entirely out of order, but it was in my heart to say it and I hope you will take it with the spirit with which I said it."

Anti-Negro Gerrymander Law Survives Federal Court Test

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29 (AP)—An anti-Negro voting law which has deprived members of that race of a voice in the city government at Tuskegee survived its first test in Federal court today.

U.S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. upheld a 16-month-old legislative act which virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee by re-arranging the city boundaries. It left all predominantly Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

Johnson said nothing in the Federal Constitution prohibits the State Legislature from changing the boundaries of a city regardless of the motive.

Negro attorney Fred Gray of Montgomery said the ruling probably will be appealed to higher courts.

Enactment of the law in June, 1957, touched off a Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants which is still in force.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division disclosed that it is looking into the arrest of three Negro ministers at Birmingham, Ala., last Monday on vagrancy charges.

The three ministers, all from Montgomery, were held several hours by Birmingham police, then released and the charges dropped.

The three Montgomery ministers were arrested at the home of the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, a Birmingham Negro minister who later on the same day was given a 90-day jail sentence and $100 fine for violating Birmingham's bus-seating law.

The new ordinance is slated for a test in Federal court Thursday through an amendment to a previous petition which had sought to nullify the old bus segregation law.

Federal Judge Unholds Plan To Eliminate Negro Voting Within Tuskegee City Limits

MONTGOMERY (AP)— A Federal judge today upheld the controversial legislative act which all but eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee, Ala.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. threw out a complaint filed by a group of Tuskegee Negroes challenging the constitutionality of the 1957 law which rearranged city boundaries of Tuskegee.

The Legislative act virtually halted Negro voting in Tuskegee by excluding all but predominantly Negro residential areas from the city limits.

The Negroes who challenged the law claimed it deprived them of their rights guaranteed by the federal constitution.

Judge Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the legislature in enacting the law, "this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the constitution of the United States."

Continuing, he said.

"This court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body...."

The judge sad that regardless of the motives of the Legislature, "the law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislative body of the state."

He cited several U. S. Supreme Court decisions which he said made that clear in previous test cases.

Delays Abolishment—

Group Approves Report On Macon

MONTGOMERY, Sept. 4 (UPI)—The Macon County Study Committee unanimously adopted a report today recommending the Negro-dominated territory be kept intact for the time being and that a permanent "watchdog" committee be created to keep a close eye on the situation.

The committee was established by the 1957 Legislature to study the feasibility of erasing the county to preserve white supremacy at the ballot box. The Macon County seat is Tuskegee, home of Tuskegee Institute and site of a continuing Negro boycot of white merchants.

State Sen. Sam Englehardt of Macon told United Press International "there's not a man on the committee that doesn't want to abolish the county. The big question is when to do it."

Englehardt, chairman of the committee, declined to pinpoint a date when he thought the county would have to be eliminated to preserve white supremacy.

"The county will have to be abolished eventually and the probable date is whenever the Federal Civil Rights Commission begins jailing the registrars for contempt of court."

Court Rules Tuskegee Vote Boundaries Legal

By ALFRED McCORMICK

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (UPI) — A federal judge said Wednesday, Oct. 29, that he has no authority to invalidate a legislative act that "gerrymandered" Negroes out of the Tuskegee city limits and left them without local voting power.

Negroes sought to have a state law which excluded all but a handful of some 420 Negro voters from the Tuskegee city limits declared invalid. They said it violated the "due process" and "equal privilege" clauses of the 14th and 15th amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

But U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. held the court has no authority to declare the act invalid "after measuring any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States."

In a six-page opinion, Johnson wrote, "The court has no power to change the boundaries of a municipality. The law is clear regardless of motives underlying the enactment of the law and regardless of the consequences of the act regarding the plaintiff's right to vote in municipal elections is concerned."

Attorney Fred Gray of Montgomery, representing the Negroes, said "I feel confident that this will be appealed to the (U. S.) Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals."

Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon and home of famed Tuskegee Institute. The county board of registrars is under investigation by the Civil Rights commission for alleged infringement of Negro voting rights. Last week denied access to voting records by the Board of Registrants. This prompted the federal agency to schedule a hearing on the issue at Montgomery December 8.

The 1957 legislature, using a device utilized in 1812 by Massachusetts Governor Elbridge Gerry, "gerrymandered" Tuskegee's city limits, cutting the area in half.

Tuskegee's New Limits Are Upheld

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A law which left Negroes without the right to vote in city elections in troubled Tuskegee, and touched off a protest boycott of white merchants, was upheld Wednesday in federal court.

The legislative act which went into effect 16 months ago deprived the Negroes of a voice in their municipal government by gerrymandering them out of the city limits.

U.S. Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. ruled that "regardless of the motive" in passing the law, the legislature has unquestioned power to change the city boundaries.

While no immediate decision was made known, the Negroes are expected to appeal to higher courts.

The change in Tuskegee's boundaries left only 10 Negro voters within the city limits in contrast to the 420 who previously had voted there.

But the status of the 600 white voters remained undisturbed.

The law affected only the rights of the Negro voters to take part in municipal elections. They can still vote for county, state and federal officers.

Negroes who sought a court order to knock out the 1957 act contended it violates their rights under the federal constitution. But Judge Johnson held that nothing in the state or federal constitutions can prohibit the legislature from rearranging the city's boundaries.

"Regardless of the motive of the legislature . .) this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the constitution of the United States," Johnson wrote.

"This court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body. . . .

"The law is clear that the supremancy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislative body of the state."

VOTE DENIAL MOTIVES NOT UNLAWFUL, JUDGE RULES TO TUSKEGEANS

U. S. JUDGE SAYSCOURT POWERLESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Motives involving gerrymandering boundaries do not make the move unconstitutional a federal judge ruled in Montgomery Wednesday in upholding a 16-month-old legislative act which virtually wipes out Negro voting in Tuskegee.

U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr. upheld the state's act which admittedly rearranged Tuskegee's city boundaries so as to leave all predominately Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

The judge held that nothing in the U. S. Constitution prohibits the Alabama Legislature from changing the boundaries of a city regardless of the motive. The ruling is expected to be appealed to a higher court. Attorney Fred Gray, of Montgomery, who filed the suit on behalf of 31 Tuskegee citizens, affirmed this.

Enactment of the law in 1957 touched off a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants which is still in force. Its passage left only 10 registered Negro voters inside the city limits in contrast with 420 who voted there before the law went into effect.

The 600 white voters in the city were left undisturbed. The law was immediately challenged on claim that it deprived the Negro residents of rights guaranteed by the Federal Constitution.

Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the legislature in enacting the law "this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any standard made known by the Constitution of the United States."

MERCHANTS LOSE

Tuskegee has had troubles however, since the law went into effect. White merchants admittedly felt the loss of sales to the Negro population. Many reportedly were forced to close their doors and cease operations.

Famed Tuskegee Institute is located nearby and offers both work, educational and economic opportunities to Negroes in the area. Negroes also have active part in the huge Veterans Administration Hospitals located in the vicinity. Negro operated stores in the institute and hospital area have reportedly doubled sales since the boycott began.

However, the Negro has no vote power as apparently guaranteed by the constitution. It was this point upon which they appealed the state ruling which excluded them from state representation.

CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION
MACON COUNTY REGISTRARS

Tuskegee Association Files Report To Commission On Voter Complaints

Macon County boards of registrars "have historically endeavored to deprive Negroes of the right to vote" by means of "delaying and evasive techniques," the Voter Franchise Committee of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. charges in a report filed with the federal Civil Rights Commission at its Montgomery hearing.

Titled an "Eight-Year Summary of Registration Efforts of Negroes in Macon County," the report was entered in the records of the Civil Rights Commission hearing here Dec. 8.

It was released Monday with the TCA annual report.

The TCA, accused by state officials of directing a Negro boycott of white merchants in Tuskegee during the past spring and summer, reported its membership has reached 1,537, exceeding a goal of 1,500.

The 7-page summary on Negro efforts to register in Macon County begins:

"The Macon County boards of registrars have historically endeavored to deprive Negroes of the right to vote by employing different kinds of delaying and evasive techniques in order to slow down the process of application for registration . . ."

"Increasing demands on the part of Negroes to exercise their constitutional guarantees as American citizens have been met with acceleratted determination to deny Negroes directly or indirectly of the opportunity to vote," it asserts.

The report notes that the 1950 census showed 27,384 of the 30,-581 population of Macon were Negroes. "Of this number only 4,110 Negroes are registered voters," it states.

But of approximately 3,177 white residents, "the current . . . voter list shows that 3,016 are registered white voters," according to the report.

"Macon County has been without a publicly functioning board of registrars on numerous occasions," it declares.

The county is currently without a board of registrars following the resignation last week of its two members in an outgrowth of the Civil Rights Commission's investigation.

During the past eight years, 1,585 Negroes made application to vote; 510 were registered; but the report says, "this does not begin to tell the whole story."

"Hundreds of Negroes" have apprared before the board to fill out applications, according to the summary, but they "were not permitted to do so because of the board's policy of registering Negroes in a very small room; plus the fact that the board permits only two Negroes to make application simultaneously."

The report, submitted by William P. Mitchell, chairman of the committee, declares that "at the present rate" of registering Negroes in Macon, "it would require 203 years to register the approximately 13,000 unregistered Negroes . . . now 21 years of age and older," not taking into account that the Negro population is increasing each year.

Listed as "the basis of our complaint" are: "The board's refusal to register Negroes in larger quarters;" its failure to use the room assigned for Negro registration "to its fullest extent;" the requirement that "only two Negroes can make applications simultaneously;" use of separate rooms for white and Negro applicants; permitting a Negro to vouch for "only two applicants per year;" requirements that Negro applicants "must read and copy long Articles of the U.S. Constitution;" and "failure to take applications from Negroes on several regular registration days," and to issue certificates of registration to Negroes "immediately upon proper completion of the application form."

In his yearly report, TCA president C. G. Gomillion noted that among groups receiving financial assistance from the TCA in 1958 includes the Alabama Assn. for Registration and Voting, the Alabama Council on Human Relations, the East Alabama Assn. of Churches, the Highlander Folk School, the Southern Conference Educational Fund and the Southern Christian Leadership conference.

Lynnwood T. Dorsey, chairman of the Economic Action Committee of the TCA, reported that an economic change is under way in Tuskegee. He noted that "new shops and stores are meeting the needs of the people" after "the local political authorities indicated that we were no longer wanted in the counsel of our community" — an obvious reference to a state law which last summer gerrymandered the Tuskegee city limits to exclude all but 10 Negro voters.

NEGRO CONTROL FEARED

Senator Suggests Tuskegee Abolition To Macon Group

State Sen. Broughton Lamberth of Alexander City suggested Friday that a legislative committee created to consider the abolition of Macon County might look into the possibility of abolishing Tuskegee instead.

The suggestion came at a meeting of the Macon County Abolition Commission after the group discussed a suit recently filed which challenged the constitutionality of a 1957 legislative act that rearranged the city limits of Tuskegee in such a matter as to exclude practically all the Negro voters.

The abolition of city government at Tuskegee would eliminate the possibility of Negroes gaining control of the municiality as there would be no city offices.

It had been a fear that Negro city officials would be elected which prompted Sen. Sam Engelhardt to introduce the bill which gerrymandered most Negro voters out of the city limits.

While no action was taken on Lamberth's suggestion, Macon Rep. J. J. Rodgers said he favored such a step. He pointed out that it would be legal for the county to have an unincorporated town as a county seat.

The question of the federal suit was brought up by Montgomery Rep. Joe Gooodwyn, who listed it as one of several reasons why the commission should go slow in writing its final report. The commission is now meeting for that purpose, and under the constitutional amendment which created the group, a report must be filed by October of this year.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery also voiced the opinion that there is less urgency for doing something about Macon County now than there was a year ago.

Dawkins said he had talked with a number of Macon residents and was convinced that there was less racial tension there now.

He also expressed the belief that some way can be worked out to reduce the size of Macon County and shift most of the Negro population to other counties.

Fate Of Tuskegee Studied By Group

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 8 — (AP) — A legislative racial study committee heard a suggestion Friday that Macon County might be left intact and the county seat of Tuskegee abolished instead.

The idea was discussed briefly by the special interim committee which is considering what measures, if any, should be undertaken to keep Negroes from gaining political control of Tuskegee city offices.

Under a recently approved constitutional amendment, the Legislature has the power to gerrymander the county out of existence or reduce it in size to break up the heavy concentration of Negroes there. They outnumber white residents of the county nearly 7-1.

Senator Broughton Lamberth of Tallapoosa County told his fellow committee members that the city of Tuskegee might be abolished instead of the entire county.

Macon County Representative J. J. Rodgers observed that the county could have an unincorporated town as a county seat.

MACON COUNTY STUDY COMMITTEE
ABOLISHMENT- Macon County

Permanent race study group urged

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 4 — (AP) — The Macon County abolition committee today recommended creation of a permanent legislative standby committee to make a continuing study of racial problems in Alabama.

Its work would be directed particularly at Macon and its surrounding committees, but the jurisdiction would be broad enough to include the rest of the state.

Members of the present temporary committee who have been trying to determine whether Macon County should be abolished to keep Negroes from getting political control voted to include the permanent committee recommendation in their preliminary report.

THE REPORT is being drafted by a subcommittee and, when finally adopted, will suggest to the Legislature whether Macon County should be gerrymandered out of existence or reduced in size to shift the heavy Negro population to the neighboring counties.

A recently approved constitutional amendment empowered the Legislature to abolish the county or rearrange its boundaries as a means of preventing Negroes from getting political control of the county.

Negroes outnumber white residents nearly 7-1. Although the white population now has a 2-1 edge in voting, some spokesmen have expressed fear that the new federal civil rights law will force the registration of enough Negro voters to give them the upper hand.

The proposed new committee would be required to make periodic reports and to recommend any legislation if felt was needed.

MEANWHILE, most members of the present committee said today they are convinced that the people in their counties will accept abolition of Macon only as a last resort.

But the committeeman agreed with Sen. Sam Engelhardt, the chairman, that the people will unhesitatingly agree to the gerrymandering once they are shown that Negro domination is an imminent threat.

Study Committee Members Agree Power Will Deter Negroes From Seeking Office

BY DONALD P. MARTIN
United Press Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 16—The Macon County study committee agreed today the "legislative threat" of abolishing the county would tend to prevent Negroes from seeking public office in the Black Belt, where whites are outnumbered seven-to-one.

Several committee members also agreed the threat probably would lead to reduction of the territory to maintain white supremacy rather than immediate abolition.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery said, "we hold the ball now and are running with it. And Macon knows the Legislature can abolish the county the next time it meets, 10 years from now or even 16 years from now.

"The people also know if they elect a Negro to Capitol Hill the Legislature will abolish the county immedfately. It's this legislative threat that guides me in my thinking to reduce the county."

Dawkins said reduction also would eliminate the "multitude of problems" involved with wiping out the county.

"Tuskegee would become nothing but a ghost town," he said, "if the county is abolished. All state, county and local offices would be eliminated. There would be unemployment and surrounding counties would have to share the burden of maintaining branch offices in Tuskegee."

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Shorter, chairman of the committee, acknowledged Dawkins' statement, but added, "I hope this is just not putting off the funeral."

Dawkins snapped back, "the funeral can be held any time."

Earlier Engelhardt remarked that "some people in Macon County prefer reduction in size rather than abolition."

The executive secretary of the White Citizens Council also said he thought the "starting point" of the committee's work began with the judiciary subcommittee followed by the boundaries and census committees.

Rep. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa said the census subcommittee is convinced "we can get more information from the 1950 Federal census than we could by taking a special census.

"Because of special influences and opinions now, I doubt seriously that a special census would do us much good," Adams reported.

He said he had written the Bureau of Census in Washington for a breakdown into political subdivisions of the 1950 census and that the subcommittee would get population trends, and other facts from the State Department of Health.

Dawkins reported the finance subcommittee has written the probate judge, superintendent of schools and the Macon Board of Revenue and "we hope to get a complete financial picture within the next three weeks."

The committee adopted a tentative budget which allows $25,500 for committee members' pay ($30 a day for 17 members for 50 meetings), travel expense, $7000; staff salaries, $7500; office expense, $2000; supplies, $1000, and reserve, $7000. The Legislature appropriated $50,000 for the committee study.

Amendment No. 17 gives the state Legislature power to erase the county as a last ditch move to prevent Negroes from gaining political control in the central Alabama county.

Macon County, located in the heart of Alabama's black belt and home of famed Tuskegee Institute, is dominated by Negroes who outnumber whites more than six to one.

The official canvass of the election shows the Macon plan polled 5,019 approving votes to 48,568 against it.

The amendment carried in 59 counties, was turned down in six and split in Winston County—255-55.

The counties which voted against the amendment were Colebert, Lauderdale, Madison, Marion, Mobile and Morgan. All but Mobile are located in the Tennessee Valley area of North Alabama where there are relatively few Negroes

Carving up or outright abolition of heavily Negro populated Macon County will hinge largely on what action is taken by the Civil Rights Commission recently appointed by President Eisenhower.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. of Macon, author and chief sponsor of the recently adopted constitutional amendment authorizing abolition of that county, said citizens of Macon and six surrounding counties would be given an opportunity to vote again on what is to be done.

"... the world will even be interested in that."

ENGELHARDT, executive secretary of Citizens Councils of Alabama an done of the state's strongest segregationists, declared that attempts to force school integration in Alabama "will make Little Rock look like a garden party."

The Macon senator has a bill ready to tighten voter qualifications and to give more protection to county boards of registrars, if Gov. James E. Folsom calls a special session of the Legislature.

Engelhardt declined to say.

U. S. Sen. John Sparkman defended the action on Macon County, in a national (ABC network) television appearance Sunday, declaring that each state has the right to determine its own internal affairs.

3,730 MACON VOTERS LISTED FOR DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY MAY 6

Due to a typographical error, the estimated number of names on the list of qualified voters published in The News was given as 3,350.

The figure should have been 3,550.

The supplementary list compiled by Judge William Varner appears on Page 2 of this issue of the paper and contains 180 names.

This figure, added to the earlier list, gives Macon County approximately 3,730 voters eligible to participate in the Democratic primary on May 6.

Last Minute Voters Rallies Slated Before Demo Primary

Sounding a note of unity, appealing for a full-vote turnout, and urging vigorous campaigning in the communities, the various political action leaders in Jefferson County made plans for last-minute voters rallies in preparation for the Tuesday May 6 Democratic Primary.

Among those joining the unity and get-out-the-vote appeal were Atty. Arthur D. Shores, president of the Jefferson County Progressive Democratic Council, Atty. Orzell Billingsley, Jr., chairman of the Ninth Congressional District of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting; James Cotton, president of the Young Negro Democratic Club, Inc. and the Rev. J. W. Hayes, president of the Ensley Voters League.

The influential Smithfield Voters Council (mad up of voters in Precinct 9-1) set a meting for seven o'clock Monday night, May 5 at the First Congregational Christian Church of which the Rev. Harold D. Long is the pastor. Lawson Tellis, chairman of the group said that ride-to-the-polls service would be provided for those who need it who live in District 9-1. He said that the service could be secured by dialing ALpine 2-9774 Guire Brothers Service Station, 301 - 8th Ave. No.)

A meting of the South Elyton Civic League (service voters in Presinct 9-4 and 11) is ssheduled to meet at seven o'clock Monday night at the South Elyton Baptist Church. S. F. Robinson is chairman of the league's political action committee. The league has set up a car pool at the Sixth Avenue (South) Service Station to provide rides to the polls. Daniel Tucker is president of the league.

A Voters' Training Workshop sponsored by the Young Negro Democratic Club, Inc. is set for 10 o'clock this Saturday morning through 5 p. m. and 1:30 p. m. through 5 p. m. Sunday in Room 528 in the Masonic Temple Building. Usually the YNDC leaders do the rugged person-to-person campaigning during electioneering.

The Fairfield Voters League scheduled a meeting for seven o'clock Monday night at the Christian Industrial Hall. John Hicks, president of the league urged voters regardless to party affiliation to be present to get first hand information concerning the candidates in the May 6 primary."

A meeting of East Birmingham voters is set for seven o'clock this Monday night at the St. Luke A. M. E. Zion Church of which the Rev. E. S. Hardge is the pastor.

On Enon Ridge voters are slated to meet at seven o'clock at the Sardis Baptist Church pastored by the Rev. R. L. Alford. T. J. Gaines is chairman of the Enon Ridge Voters Council.

There will be similar community get-out-the-vote rallies all over Jefferson County, according to Mr. Shores.

VOTE LIST ISSUE

Civil Rights Body Defied By Judge

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 5 (AP)—A belligerent Alabama judge today defied the Civil Rights Commission in its efforts to make him surrender voter registration records in his custody.

Circuit Judge George Wallace of Clayton, Ala., threatened to jail any commission agents who try to get possession of the impounded files for next week's hearing on Negro voting.

Protesting angrily that a subpoena issued by the commission for the voting records of two counties challenged the authority of his court, Wallace said emphatically that he will not answer the summons.

But he declined to say what he might do later if a federal judge orders him to produce the records. The commission can ask the Justice Department to cite a balky witness for contempt in federal court.

Subpoenaed

Registration files dating back three years have been subpoenaed for Monday's hearing from each of the six Alabama counties where the commission is investigating complaints of racial discrimination.

Agents serving the papers in Barbour and Bullock counties found the records had been impounded by Wallace on petitions charging fraud in the registration of some voters and in attempts to register others.

So the commission wrote a new subpoena directed to Wallace and formally demanded the files from him.

Resistance of a less spectacular nature has come also from the other four counties — Dallas, Lowndes, Macon and Wilcox — where Negroes have filed complaints against registration officials.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who becomes Governor Jan. 19, has advised the county boards of registrars to withhold the records on the grounds they are private and confidential files which cannot be touched even by court order.

Patterson has promised to use every possible legal recourse to keep the files away from the new federal agency. Wallace announced months ago that he would arrest any FBI agent who attempted to get access to jury boxes in his court.

Still Means It

He said today "I still mean it," but to explain why he took no action against the civil rights investigators who served the subpoena on him, added: "I have never said I would arrest errand boys."

The judge said he has already given orders for the imprisonment of any commission agents who try to take the voting records out of his custody. He said he gave the instructions to Sheriff Bill Adams at Clayton, where the files are being kept.

The Civil Rights Commission's chairman, Dr. John Hannah, conferred with President Eisenhower in Washington today on the eve of the new agency's first public hearing.

But Gets Subpoena

Ala. Judge Threatens To Arrest FBI Agents

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (UPI) — Circuit Judge George C. Wallace Friday threatened to jail any federal agents attempting to seize voter registration records subpoenaed for next week's hearing of the Civil Rights Commission.

Wallace was served with a subpena late Thursday to appear at the hearings with the voting records from Barbour and Bullock Counties. Wallace had already impounded the records for his own investigation into other alleged vote irregularities.

"If any federal agents try to seize the records I have impounded," Wallace said, "I'll use my powers as judge of the third judicial circuit to put the agents in jail."

A source close to Wallace said it was 'extremely doubtful" he would appear at the hearing and "certain" he would not bring the registration records.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the circuit judge considered the commission an "executive tribunal which has no right to question any action of his court."

The commission called the hearing after registrars in another county refused to open their books to investigators. Vote registration records from six counties have been subpenaed to be brought to next week's hearing.

ALABAMA JUDGE DEFIES PROBERS

Won't Answer Summons of Civil Rights Unit

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A belligerent Alabama judge Friday defied the Civil Rights Commission to make him surrender voter registration records in his custody.

Circuit Judge George Wallace at Clayton, Ala., threatened to jail any commission agent who tries to get possession of the impounded files for next week's hearing on Negro voting.

Protesting angrily that a subpoena issued by the commission for the voting records of two counties challenged the authority of his court, Wallace said emphatically that he will not answer the summons.

CAN CITE FOR CONTEMPT

But he declined to say what he might do later if a federal judge orders him to produce the records. The commission can ask the Justice Department to cite a balky witness for contempt in federal court.

Civil rights commission officials in Washington declined immediate comment on Judge Wallace's statement.

Registration files dating back three years have been subpoenaed for Monday's hearing from each of the six Alabama counties where the commission is investigating complaints of racial discrimination.

Agents serving the papers in Barbour and Bullock counties found the records had been impounded by Wallace on petitions charging fraud in the registration of some voters and in attempts to register others.

WRITES NEW SUBPOENA

So the commission wrote a new subpoena directed to Wallace and formally demanded the files from him.

Resistance of a less spectacular nature has come also from the other four counties—Dallas, Lowndes, Macon and Wilcox—where Negroes have filed complaints against registration officials.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who becomes governor Jan. 19, has advised the county boards of registrars to withhold the records on the grounds they are private and confidential files which cannot be touched even by court order.

Patterson has promised to use every possible legal recourse to keep the files away from the new federal agency.

'I STILL MEAN IT'

Wallace announced months ago that he would arrest any FBI agent who attempted to get access to jury boxes in his court.

He said Friday "I still mean it," but to explain why he took no action against the civil rights investigators who served the subpoena on him, he added: "I never said I would arrest errand boys."

The judge said he already has given orders for the imprisonment of any commission agents who try to take the voting records out of his custody. He said he gave the instructions to Sheriff Bill Adams at Clayton, where the files are being kept.

Wallace has jurisdiction over three counties—Barbour, Bullock and Dale. No attempt has been made to get the registration files in Dale.

The Civil Rights Commission's chairman, Dr. John Hannah, conferred with President Eisenhower in Washington Friday on the eve of the new agency's first public hearing.

Hannah, president of Michigan State University, said his talk with the President dealt only generally with the hearing.

Alabama Ties Up Voting Records

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama officials and grand juries are weaving a barrier of legal red tape around voting records the federal Civil Rights Commission has subpoenaed for its first public hearing Monday.

Records or no records, the commission planned to go ahead as scheduled with its investigation of charges that Negroes in six Alabama counties have been denied the right to vote.

The commission declined Sunday night to say what action it might take if voter registration officials refuse to produce their records.

Dean Robert G. Storey, vice chairman of the commission, told reporters at a news conference that the question of what to do if witnesses refuse to produce the records will be answered when that situation arises.

He explained that officially the federal agency had recieved no word that any witness might refuse to answer the subpoena to surrender the voting records.

The commission chairman, Dr. John A. Hannah, explained that the hearing will be merely a fact-finding procedure and nothing more. He and Storey said the agency will seek to learn only whether Negroes have been denied the right to vote because of their race without, as they expressed it, trying to determine "who is right and who is wrong."

Grand juries in three counties Saturday impounded voter registration records subpoenaed by the commission. Circuit Judge George Wallace earlier had impounded the records of Barbour and Bullock counties.

These actions left the new fact-finding commission with two alternatives:

1. Seek a federal court order to produce the files.

2. Hear testimony from complaining Negro witnesses and make no further effort to obtain the records.

Gordon Tiffany, staff director of the commission, declined comment on the impounding action by the grand juries. But a commission spokesman had said earlier that the hearings would proceed with or without voter records.

The commission has subpoenaed registration files from Dallas, Lowndes, Wilcox, Macon, Barbour and Bullock counties.

After impounding the Barbour and Bullock records. Wallace said he will refuse to surrender them to the commission and will jail any commission agent who tries to get them.

Circuit Judge James A. Hare said voting records in Dallas and Wilcox counties were turned over to the county grand juries for investigations in the state courts.

Probate Judge Harrell Hammonds confirmed that he turned over Lowndes County voter records to a grand jury Saturday.

In Macon County, Circuit Solicitor (prosecutor) Tom Young and Circuit Judge Will O. Walton conferred Saturday night on the possibility of calling a grand jury into session. Walton said no action was taken because he had no formal complaint. However, Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson has specifically instructed Macon County authorities not to surrender voter records to the Civil Rights Commission.

Hare said he instructed the Dallas and Wilcox juries to investigate the same complaints made to the commission.

"If there has been a maladministration of Alabama's voting laws," he said, "It should be investigated in state courts."

A. H. Rosenfeld, director of the commission's office of complaints, said the agency would first consider voting complaints from Macon County, home of the famed Negro college, Tuskegee Institute.

He declined to say how many complaints were received from this county where Negroes outnumber whites about six to one.

Gov.-Elect Patterson claims the registration files are private and confidential papers immune ever from court order.

Negroes outnumber white residents in all six counties, but white voters dominate poll lists.

The commission can take no punitive action against registration officials accused of racial discrimination.

Voting Hearing To Start Today

Civil Rights Group Silent On Action If Resisted

MAY DEFY SUBPENAS

By The Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 7 —The Civil Rights Commission declined Sunday night to say what action it might take against voter registration officials who refuse to produce their records at Monday's hearing.

The six-member commission starts a public inquiry on Negro voting complaints in six Alabama counties at 9 a.m. Monday, the first hearing since the commission was created by Congress more than a year ago.

Of the six counties where voter registration files have been subpenaed, two have been impounded by an Alabama judge and records in three other counties have been turned over to grand juries in state courts for what were described as independent investigations.

Only in Macon County have the files escaped being turned over to local courts. But the chairman of the board of registrars there has said he will defy the subpena and Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson has promised to resist any attempt to produce the records at Monday's hearing.

Dean Robert G. Storey of the Southern Methodist University Law School, vice chairman of the commission, told reporters at a news conference Sunday night that the question of what to do if witnesses refuse to produce the records will be answered at that time.

He explained that officially the Federal agency had received no word that any witness might refuse to answer the subpena to surrender the voting records.

The commission chairman, Dr. John A. Hannah, explained to newsmen that the hearing will be merely a fact-finding procedure and nothing more. He and Dean Storey said the agency will seek to learn only whether Negroes have been denied the right to vote because of their race without, as they expressed it, trying to determine "who is right and who is wrong."

The commission has subpenaed registration files from Dallas, Lowndes, Wilcox, Macon, Barbour and Bullock counties.

Rights Probe Subpenas Are Served

'More Than' 50 Have Been Issued, Says Federal Group

BY GENE WORTSMAN
Post-Herald Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. —The Civil Rights Commission today said it had served more than 50 subpoenas in Alabama for a hearing in Montgomery next Monday.

Other subpenas will be served tomorrow.

The Commission will visit Montgomery to take testimony on alleged violation of voting rights of Negroes, primarily in Macon County.

Although the hearing begins Monday, staff members expect to begin arriving in Montgomery on Friday.

Besides the six commissioners, there will be Staff Director Gordon L. Tiffany and probably eight members of the staff.

The Commission would not identify names of persons on whom subpenas were served today.

A spokesman said, however that subpenas did go to members of registrar boards and employes of those boards against whom complaints have been made.

The Macon County Board of Registrars has been the only board identified as refusing to show records to field representatives of the Civil Rights Commission.

The Commission said it now has four field representatives in the state, serving subpenas, which will include not only individuals but records which the Commission hopes to obtain.

A spokesman for the Commission said he would not identify names of those subpenaed, because the Commission did not wish to reveal their identity until the hearing.

He said it is obvious that the subpenas are being served on people who have alleged violations and also on people against whom these violations have been charged.

In October, Atty. Gen. John Patterson advised the Macon County Board of Registrars to close its books to the Civil Rights Commission. He also advised other registrar boards in Alabama to do the same.

Under Alabama law, Patterson said, the registration records are not public records.

Patterson said of the hearing: "Such reckless action is politically inspired and is further proof of the intention of the Republican administration to destroy the rights of the state and reduce our constitution to a mere scrap of paper."

He said he will use "every power at my command to resist the commission's illegal and unwarranted encroachments."

Noting that "people accused ought to know who the accusers are" Patterson challenged the Commission to identify the Negroes who have charged discrimination.

A spokesman said the six-man commission would reside at nearby Maxwell Air Force Base during the course of its hearings into complaints that Negro citizens have been denied voting rights. One of the commission members, J. Ernest Wilkins, is a Negro.

Meanwhile in Montgomery, Negro voting records subpenaed by the Federal Civil Rights Commission arrived at the state capital, but it still was not determined whether they would be turned over to the group.

Two voter registrars from Macon County and their records were taken to the office of Atty. Gen. John Patterson, the governor-elect.

Patterson earlier had told the registrars not to turn over the records to federal investigators, whom he charged with "meddling." They attempted to look at the records on complaints of Negroes, who charged discrimination in voter registration.

The commission will meet here next Monday and Tuesday to conduct its investigation. The registrars and the records were subpenaed for the hearing.

One Member Of Investigating Team Is Negro

WASHINGTON (U PI) — Members of the government's Civil Rights Commission will not stay in local hotels when they begin an investigation in Montgomery, Ala., next week because they cannot obtain unsegregated accommodations it was learned Wednesday.

Rights probers meet suspicion in Montgomery

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Dec. 6 — The Civil Rights Commission's investigation of claims that Negroes have been denied voting rights in Alabama "is not a witch hunt and is not aimed particularly at Alabama or the South."

This was emphasized here by Burton Stevenson, one of the commission's subpoena-serving agents, as the six-member federal fact-finding body prepared to open its first hearing into Negro voting charges here at 9 a.m. Monday.

Stevenson, an attorney and administrative assistant to former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Florida, one of the commission members, added:

"This is not a commission for civil rights. It is a commission on civil rights. There's quite a distinction."

Deep suspicion

BUT EVEN SO, the commission and its agents encountered an atmosphere of deep suspicion, if not downright hostility, as members gathered here over the week-end for what may develop into stormy hearing sessions in the Federal Building courtroom.

Earlier at Bessemer, Sen. John Sparkman blasted the commission for "meddling in our state and local affairs."

Gov.-Elect John Patterson branded commission agents sent into the state as "snoopers," and advised members of Boards of Registrars in the various counties to refuse to permit the federal investigators to see voting records.

Wallace threat

CIRCUIT COURT Judge George C. Wallace of Clayton stood pat in challenging the commission's authority in directing him to surrender voting records of Barbour and Bullock counties.

Furthermore, Judge Wallace, who impounded the voting files of these two countries for Grand Jury investigation of vote fraud allegations, said he would jail any commission agents who try to get them.

Members of the commission, headed by Dr. John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, withheld comment on Judge Wallace's challenge.

But the chairman conferred with President Eisenhower concerning the impending hearings before leaving Washington for Montgomery.

J. Ernest Wilkins, Negro member of the commission, could not be quartered with the other five members at a white hotel here, so Washington authorities arranged for all commission members and attaches to stay at Maxwell Air Force Base.

Probe six counties

VOTING RECORDS of six Alabama counties — Macon, Lowndes, Dallas, Wilcox, Barbour and Bullock—have been subpoenaed before the commission.

But the test will come over whether officials of these counties can be forced to produce the voter files.

Not only voter registration files dating back for three years have been subpoenaed, but so have the public officials who have custody of these records.

Gov.-Elect Patterson, in his capacity as Alabama's attorney general, and members of his staff will be on hand to represent the registration board members and other public officials from the six counties.

Patterson, who is advising the county officials to refuse to disclose the voter records, contends the registration files are confidential records.

Federal Court threat

THERE HAVE been intimations that the commission might call on U. S. Atty. Gen. William Rogers to proceed with Federal Court action against any witnesses who balk at producing the voter records.

Under such procedure, Rogers could call on Federal District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. of Montgomery, or some other federal judge, to order the records disclosed.

If such happened, then Patterson could appeal to a higher court. This, presumably, could stall the proceedings for months, possibly longer.

But Patterson hasn't said what he will do. He apparently is awaiting developments to decide on just what recourse he would take.

The governor-elect had said earlier that "the time is at hand when the people must stand up and resist with every means at our command any further attempts to trample on our sacred rights."

PRESSING FURTHER, Shores had Patterson acknowledge that he tried to get a court order to outlaw Ku Klux Klan as he had the NAACP, but Patterson added that he had been "investigating the Klan for the past two years" and that prosecution will be instituted at any time his office "can get the necessary information."

Asked by Shores whether he planned to run for governor of his state, as has been rumored, Patterson snapped:

"If I were a candidate, I don't believe I would announce it from this chair."

When the state completed its case, Atty. Fred Gray asked that the state's entire testimony be thrown out on the grounds that the prosecution had failed completely to prove its contentions.

HE WAS OVERRULED by Judge Walton, who said that as long as there is "a scintilla of evidence" the testimony should be weighed by the court for whatever it is worth.

Reverends Martin Luther and F. L. Shuttleworth, who led boycotts in Montgomery and Birmingham, were in the courtroom, subpoenaed by the attorney general, but were not called upon to testify.

BIGGEST FLOP scored by a states witness was by one of its Negro "aces", one Booker Green, who refused flatly to testify under oath and said that he had "no recollection of the contents of an affidavit given to members of Patterson's staff last summer.

Green reluctantly admitted signing the affidavit, but said that he "never knew what I was signing."

450 SPECTATORS, most of them Negroes, from all walks of life, jammed the antedated Tuskegee courthouse to watch and often grinas brilliant Negro defense attorneys, time after time, frustrated the attempts of Atty. General John Patterson and his assistants, Jmm Webb, Joe Malone and Joe Roberts to prove a conpiracy directed by the Tuskegee Civic Association conceived a boycott of white merchants and kept it alive by the use of coersion and threats.

There were no outbursts from the rapt Negro spectators, but their admiration of youthful attorneys Fred Gray educated in Cleveland) and Arthur Shores was obvious during sessions and especially visible as crowds followed them with admiring shouts each time they left the strict confines of the courtroom.

IN A FASHION strikingly similar to what happened in the boycott trials at Montgomery, Ala. last year, the State repeatedly found itself confronted by unwilling, evasive Negro witnesses it had hoped to use to secure a permanent injunction against the Tuskegee group, and thus break the boycott.

On Wednesday the state produced two Negro witnesses in an attempt to sustain their claim that the TCA sustained its boycott by violence. The two testified that they had been threatned with beatings for trading with white merchants but Judge Will O Walton threw out their testimony after defense cross-examination proved it had no connection with the TCA.

An assistant attorney general testified that he had attended one of the TCA meetings but denied under cross-examination that he had posed as a newspaperman in order to get in. He said that at the meeting he was handed a paper that said "trade with your friends. This assistant, Tim Malone, admitted under cross-examination by Shores that he heard no one specifically urge Negroes to boycott white merchants or to use violence.

THE DESPERATE Patterson argued that the testimony of his Negro witnesses about the violence should be admitted because it was not necessary to connect the threats to the TCA, but the judge overruled him again.

Patterson angrily retorted that "the TCA held all these meetings and got the people all stirred up, and it can't disclaim responsibility now. You can't set a fire and go off and leave it."

ATTY. GRAY OF MONTGOMERY, one of the hard-hitting legal team that defended the Rev. Martin Luther King in that city, told the court that "no injunction could force Negroes to trade with anybody."

Gray contended that the TCA was operated within the restrictions of the Alabama anti-boycott laws, but added that if what Negroes did in Tuskegee violated the Alabama law, that "must be unconstitutional."

Patterson, however, did win the right to examine some of the Association's records which he contended would support his claim that the organization directed the boycott.

He was granted the right to introduce into evidence the TCA's annual report for 1956 and 1957 along with a statement of policy, the treasurer's report for last year, and whatever membership records were available.

IN A RAID earlier during the year, Patterson and his aides seized what they purpoted to be a list of active members of TCA, but TCA President Charles G. Gomillion, a faculty member at Tuskegee Institute, told the court that TCA did not keep a membership list. He said membership cards were given individuals who contributed $1 or more and thus it was unnecessary to keep records of names.

The attorney general, in desperation, called in newspaper reporters for testimony of what they had overheard while attending TCA mass meetings. He was obviously disappointed at what they said under cross-examination.

STAURT CULPEPPER of the Montgomery Advertiser, who covered several of the meetings, testified that he heard speakers refer to the Ngro's buying powr and urging them to trade with people who were sympathetic to their needs.

At one meeting, Culpepper said, Gomillion told a crowd "we will buy goods and services only from those who will recognize us as first-class citizens rather than oppress us."

HE ADDED that other speakers, including Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery and Rev. F. L. Shuttleworth of Birmangham (both of whom attended the trial while addressing mass meetings. sessions) spoke in similar veil.

A woman reporter, Trudy Cargile of the Birmingham News, testified that she had interviewed Gomillion, but that she could not recall his having said anything about his organization taking an active part in the boycott.

CRUSADE FOR CITIZENSHIP-MACON COUNTY
TUSKEGEE MERCHANT

AFTER 15 MONTHS—

Tuskegee Economic Boycott Holds

BY REX THOMAS
Associated Press Staff Writer

TUSKEGEE, Sept. 16 —For 15 months Negroes have boycotted white Tuskegee merchants in a massive protest against loss of the right to vote in city elections.

Negroes outnumber white residents approximately 7-3 in Tuskegee, a city of 6800 population. In Macon County, as a whole, there are nearly seven Negroes to every white resident.

The unprecedented economic squeeze has forced perhaps a dozan small stores to close and has sent other merchants into neighboring communities in search of business.

By contrast, the cluster of Negro stores in the vicinity of famed Tuskegee Institute are prospering. A new supermarket operated by Negroes has drawn much of the trade away from the shops in town where Negro housewives once bought [illegible] certain [illegible].

Nor is the end in sight. Mayor Phil Lightfoot and President B. D. Cohn of the Tuskegee Chamber of Commerce say there has been evidence of some letup in the boycott in recent weeks, but Lightfoot added, "I can't see much change."

Negro spokesmen had little to say. They have been reluctant to talk since Atty. Gen. John Patterson tried to break the boycott with a court injunction.

Patterson accused the Tuskegee Civic Assn. of promoting the boycott and asked for a permanent court order prohibiting TCA members and followers using force or threats to keep other Negroes from trading at white stores.

Circuit Judge Will O. Walton in state court granted a temporary injunction but ultimately threw it out with the declaration that "thus far in this land, every person has a right to trade with whomever he pleases, and therefore, the right to not trade with any particular person or business."

The judge said Patterson failed to prove his charges against the TCA, whose officers denied any connection with the boycott.

TCA Secretary William P. Mitchell, an employe of the Veterans Administration Hospital, disclaimed any knowledge of the extent of the protest against white merchants.

"I don't go into town myself and I don't know how many people are trading with the stores there."

Mitchell acknowledged that Negroes are urged by the civic association to "spend their money wisely" and to use "common sense." And, he added, "anyone using common sense will spend their money with their friends."

The full economic impact of the boycott is unmeasured in terms of dollars and cents. Cohn, pointing to a lag in business throughout the nation, said "there are too many factors" to say how much of the decline in Tuskegee is a direct result of the loss of Negro trade.

Lightfoot said a clearer indication may come next January when merchants renew their city business licenses. Since the license schedule is based on the volume of the preceding year's sales, the mayor said that will show how much business has fallen off.

Cohn said some small stores, "maybe a dozen or so," have gone out of business since the boycott started, the surviving merchants are looking feverishly for new industry to bolster the community's income.

He added that some white consumers from neighboring cities have come to Tuskegee to trade and "we wish there were a lot more."

The Negroes, besides patronizing merchants of their own race, are spending their money in stores in Montgomery, 40 miles to the west, and Opelika about 28 miles east of here.

The boycott began in June 1957, after the Alabama Legislature, at the request of Macon County Sen. Sam Engelhardt passed a law which virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee.

By changing the town boundaries, they left only 10 Negro voters remaining inside the city limits out of the 420 who previously voted here. The 600 white voters in Tuskegee were undisturbed by the change.

A suit has been filed in U. S. District Court at Montgomery challenging constitutionality of the law, but no hearing has been set.

Now in 15th month

Boycott of merchants effective at Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Sept. 17—(AP)—Trade has been drawn away from white merchants' stores here and some shops have been forced to close as a result of a 15-month-old Negro protest boycott.

And city officials say the end is not in sight.

In Tuskegee, a city of 6800 persons, Negroes outnumber white residents approximately 7-3. The city is the county seat of Macon County, where the ratio is nearly seven Negroes to every white resident.

Some merchants here are seeking trade in neighboring communities because of the unprecedented economic squeeze.

However, the group of Negro stores in the vicinity of Tuskegee Institute shows a contrasting prosperity.

THERE HAS BEEN evidence of some letup in the boycott in recent weeks, said Mayor Phil Lightfoot, but I can't see much change."

Since Atty. Gen. John Patterson sought a court injunction to break the boycott, Negro spokesmen have had little to say about the situation here.

The attorney general accused the Tuskegee Civic Assn. of promoting the boycott. He asked a permanent injunction prohibiting TCA members and followers from using force or threats to keep other Negroes from trading with white merchants.

A temporary injunction was granted in state court by Circuit Judge Will O. Walton. However, the jurist ultimately threw it out saying "Thus far in this land, every person has a right to trade with whomever he pleases, and therefore, the right to not trade with any particular person or business."

TCA officers denied any connection with the boycott.

And Judge Walton ruled Patterson failed to prove his charges against the organization.

WILLIAM P. MITCHELL, TCA secretary and an employe of the huge Veterans Administration Hospital here, said he doesn't know the extent of the protest against white merchants. Saying he doesn't go into town himself, he added, "I don't know how many people are trading with the stores there."

The Civic Association does urge Negroes to "spend their money wisely" and to use "common sense," Mitchell acknowledged. And "anyone using common sense will spend their money with their friends," he added.

President B. D. Cohn of the Tuskegee Chamber of Commerce said the full impact of the boycott cannot be measured in dollars and cents. "There are too many factors" to say how much of the decline in Tuskegee is a direct result of the loss of Negro trade, he said, pointing to the lag in business throughout the nation.

WHEN MERCHANTS renew their city business licenses next January a clearer indication may come, Lightfoot said. He explained the license schedule is based on the volume of the preceding year's sales.

Merchants still in business in Tuskegee are feverishly seeking new industry to bolster the income of the community, the Chamber of Commerce president said.

Some white residents of neighboring counties have come to Tuskegee to trade, he added.

Tuskegee Negroes, in addition to patronizing members of their own race, are also traveling 40 miles west to Montgomery and 28 miles east to Opelika to trade.

THE REFUSAL to trade with white merchants began in June, 1957, after the Legislature virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee by rearranging the city's boundaries.

The law, proposed by State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, put all but 10 of Tuskegee's 420 registered Negro voters outside the city. Some 600 white voters were undisturbed.

A suit challenging the constitutionality of the law has been filed in U. S. District Court at Montgomery. However, no hearing date has been set.

RIGHTS BOARD HALTS VOTER PROBE

lace, runner-up candidate for governor of Alabama in last spring's Democratic primaries, defied subpenaes to appear at the hearing Monday. He said he "would not dignify the Commission by appearing before it any day during the week."

Wallace, a staunch segregationist who bitterly fought creation of the Commission in testimony before a congressional hearing, has termed the Alabama probe "a rank violation of state's rights," and he has threatened to jail any "federal snoopers who attempt to seize voting records in my circuit."

Won't Produce Records

Wallace and the defiant county officials refused to turn over their county voter registration records to the Commission on the grounds that the documents already had been subpenaed by their circuit judges.

Before the commission announced its decision Negro witnesses said that none of their race registered to vote in one county because they feared economic reprisals.

"I know economic pressure has been applied to members of my race (in Wilcox county) and because of this they have not applied for voter registration," said Mrs. Amelia Platts Boyonton, 47, of Selma, Ala.

Selma is located in Dallas county, which adjoins Wilcox. Mrs. Boyonton is state chairman of the political action committee of (Negro) women's clubs and chairman of an Elks civil liberties committee. She said her responsibilities include traveling throughout the state to check on Negro voter registration.

J. Ernest Wilkins, only Negro on the commission, pointed out that there were 8,000 Negroes in Wilcox county as compared to 22,000 whites, but that registration lists showed no Negroes were qualified to vote in the central Alabama county.

Earlier, a southern member of the Commission cautioned reluctant witnesses to testify on Alabama voter registration or face possible punitive legislation by the next Congress.

By DONALD F. MARTIN

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(UPI)— The federal Civil Rights Commission won access to voter registration lists in Alabama's predominantly Negro Macon county Monday over the protests of Gov.-Elect John Patterson.

The federal commission, investigating complaints that Negroes were denied the right to register in certain Alabama counties, began hearings Monday in an atmosphere of resentment and outright defiance.

A circuit judge who has impounded registration records in two counties refuse a subpena to appear and produce the books.

But, in a surprising turn, the records of Macon county registrations were carted into the hearing room and dumped onto the floor before the Civil Rights commissioners. Patterson, who is state attorney general had ordered Macon county officials to disobey the commission's subpena of the records and when probate Judge William Varner of Macon county appeared with them, Patterson protested vigorously.

He told the commission it "has no legal authority to take possession of the records. Judge Varner has no authority to take the records from his county." Varner turned over the records, saying "no court has told me not to turn them over to you."

The commission chairman, Robert G. Storey, dean of the law school of Southern Methodist university, assured Patterson "I do not believe there will be any embarrassment about the records." He also clashed with Patterson about whether witnesses would be denied constitutional rights.

The commission ordered Macon county Registrars Grady Rogers and E. P. Livingston to be prepared to testify. Patterson said he had advised the officials to refuse on grounds their constitutional rights would be violated. Rogers then refused to be sworn.

"You will not find the commission transgressing on the constitutional rights of anyone here," Storey said. "Mr. Patterson, you are anticipating something that will not happen."

Varner testified he did not know how voters were registered in Macon, that he never saw the registration certificates or rejected applications. He said he did not know the procedure for selecting registrars nor had he visited the rooms where applicants for registration are interviewed.

In the exchange of words over calling the Macon county registrars, Storey sharply rebuffed Patterson's objections.

"We will call the witnesses and it is your right to advise them," he told Patterson. "But under the rules of procedure you do not have the right to make any statements at this time. You may advise the witness after each question is asked."

Segregationist Circuit Judge George Wallace earlier defied the commission's request to appear with the records be impounded in Barbour and Bullock counties on what he described as a "purely local matter." Until Varner brought in the Macon county books, it apeared that other Alabama officials were going to refuse to produce either the records or agree to testify.

Instead, the commission listened to complaints by more than two dozen Negroes from Macon county seat of world-famous Tuskegee institute. These witnesses, most of them with college degrees, testified they were subjected to labrythine procedures and complex questionnaires when they attempted to register to vote, and that they were not notified whether they were accepted or not. Only one of the first 25 was a registered voter.

The witnesses, many of them with Tuskegee connections, listed their occupations as nurses, physicians, professors, landowner-farmers or the like.

William P. Mitchell, executive secretary of the Tuskegee Civic association testified that only 32 per cent of all Negro applicants have been registered to vote in Macon county in the past eight years.

Macon county has a ratio of seven to one, Negro population outnumbering whites, yet only 510 Negroes are registered voters compared to 3,016 whites, Mitchell said. He described the registration application procedures for Negroes which includes writing long sections of the U. S. constitution and writing a definition of the responsibilities of good citizenship.

The applicant, he said, fills out a self-addressed envelope for the purpose of notification, but "the board never officially notifies us whether we have passed or not," he said.

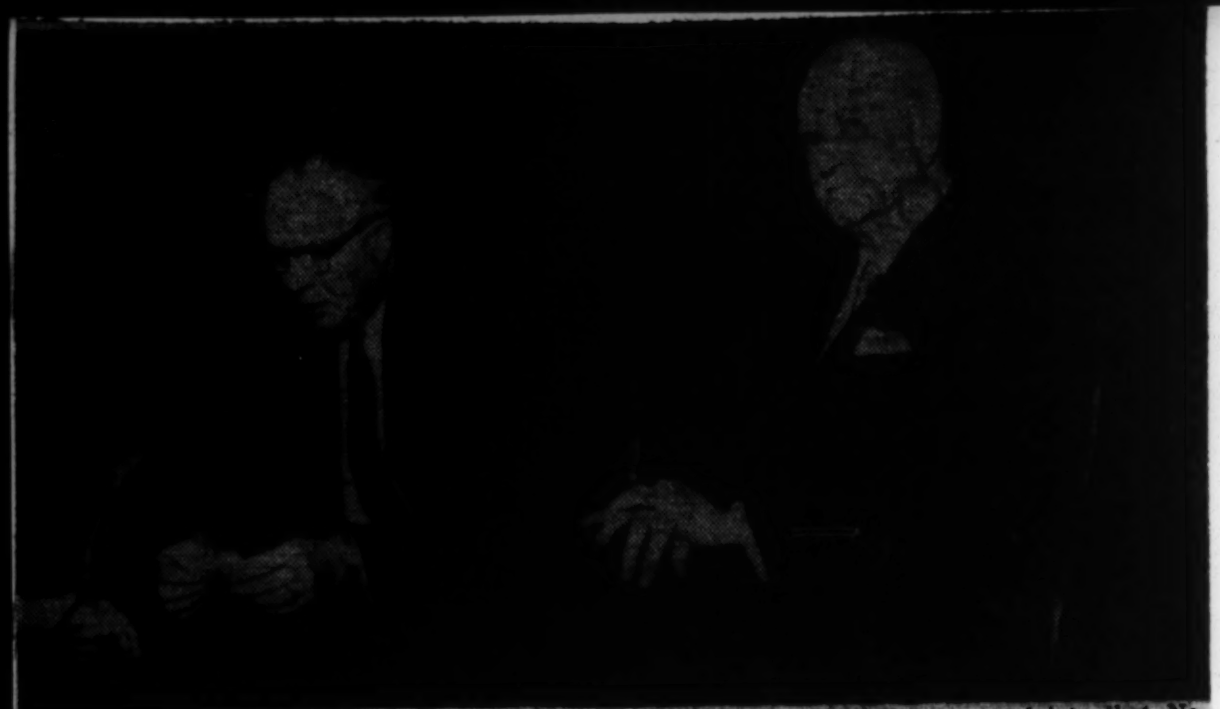
Wallace was the first of the Alabama officials to impound records, and the first to flatly defy the subpena to testify. He called the commission, which was approved by Congress, "an executive tribunal."

He contended that "the executive branch of government has no right to subpena a circuit judge.

"Here is one circuit judge who absolutely refuses to dignify that commission by appearing before it." He told newsmen he "would not be surprised" if the commission attempts to secure a federal court order to obtain the records.

Wallace impounded the records in Barbour and Bullock counties. The grand juries in three other Alabama counties, acting in special session, also ordered their registration books locked up in defiance of a commission subpena.

Officials in Macon county were under specific orders from Gov.-elect John Patterson not to produce Macon registration records. Patterson himself attended the session, standing in the rear of the crowded hearing room, conferring with a legal adviser. Patterson earlier threatened to jail any federal "meddler" in Alabama's internal affairs.



CONDUCT VOTE HEARINGS IN ALABAMA.—Dr. John A. Hannah, left, chairman of the federal Civil Rights Commission, and Dean Robert Storey, vice chairman of the commission, answer questions at a news conference in Montgomery, Ala., shortly before opening hearings Monday, Dec. 8, on complaints that Negroes are refused the right to vote in Alabama. The hearings now in progress in the "Cradle of the Confederacy" are the federal agency's first hearing on alleged vote discrimination in the South.—UPI Telephoto.

MACON COUNTY- HEARING Dec. 8, 1958
CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION

Civil Rights Commission Members As Seen In Profile After Montgomery

By E. L. HOLLAND, JR.
Associate Editor, The News

WITH THE FEDERAL government's civil rights intrusion highly aggravating to the people of Alabama, in consequence of the hearing in Montgomery and the obvious difficulties bound to grow out of the reluctance of some state officials to testify, or turn over records, all who want thoroughly to understand the situation should know as much as possible about the makeup and manner of the men who make that commission.

Chairman Hannah

THE CHAIRMAN is Dr. John Alfred Hannah, 58. He is, as he was seen on the commission bench in small Room 609, fourth floor of the Montgomery Federal and Post Office Building, a man of slightly taller than average stature, with a clear firm voice, a thatch of graying hair which is neither bountiful nor particularly sparse. With reporters he was a blunt, cooperative fellow and Alabamians may well take note of the fact that he is no simple pedagogue whose head is in the clouds. In brief, a man of sternness of capacity, who by his record has shown he can handle himself in the company of men.

He is a member of some six fraternities, a member of the board of visitors of the Air Force Academy, a director in several solid business firms, participant on the Joint United States-Canada Defense Board, one time chairman of the board of directors of the Detroit branch of the Federal Reserve Bank and with a host of other impressive affiliations, professional and businesswise, this man from Grand Rapids, Mich., is somebody to be reckoned with. Be it noted that when the foreign states' rights advocates are dealing with someone who is in essence typical of them, they had best measure their opponent, and measure him well. Thus Hannah who on the bench in Montgomery was polite but unyielding. The fact that he gave over the chairmanship of the commission to Dean Robert G. Storey of Southern Methodist University law school was solely because the commission wanted the bulk of the group's business to be handled by a lawyer.

Texas' Storey

A LAWYER TO THE CORE is Robert G. Storey, 65, who was born in Greenville, Tex. A graduate of Texas University with a law degree from T. U., he has practiced law, served in state legal capacities, been a counsel for several business firms and is himself a director of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The list of his achievements is impressive and it may be noted that he served valiantly in the armed forces in both world wars and holds the Legion of Merit and Bronze Star from our country and the Legion of Honor—no small award—from France.

On the bench, Dean Storey, who runs the S. M. U. Law School now, was courteous alike to whites and Negroes. He proved himself adept at getting all fundamental facts about every witness into the record, occasionally showed a genuine tendency toward humor of a non-aggravating sort, and was clearly highly respected by all members of the commission. The press found him not to be effusive, but quite reachable and a master of the business at hand. He was firm but rode not a whit roughshod over anyone except in the cases of witnesses, subpoenaed, who refused to take the oath. At such points of refusal, he was not a man to be rated lowly when he solmenly said "I direct and command" witnesses to take the path. This was a technique applied for the Justice Department, of course, distasteful to Alabamians, but nevertheless something that had an impact. We cannot wisely ignore this man in any way.

The Rev. Hesburgh

ALSO ON THE COMMISSION were four other men. President of Notre Dame, the Rev. Theodore Martin Hesburgh, born in New York, is the youngest member of the group. He is 41, handsome as a movie star in a rugged way, has rich black hair and speech which borders on being clipped. He has a substantial background, is a graduate of several colleges with a hatful of degrees, has served as a military chaplain, is affiliated in an academic way with the Ford Motor Company Fund, the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, is a member of the board of visitors of the U. S. Naval Academy and has been called on before by the government to serve on advisory boards. Father Hesburgh is also an impressive man and certainly, as president of the University of Notre Dame, a man who knows what he is and what he is about when dealing with human beings and human problems.

J. Ernest Wilkins

A FOURTH MEMBER of the commission is its sole Negro member, J. Ernest Wilkins, 64, and doesn't look it, born in Farmington, Mo., Wilkins is clearly a dedicated servant of the cause of Negro advancement. His questioning of the white witnesses at Montgomery was exceedingly polite but naturally, for a man with his record and background, giving no ground because of the fact that they were white. With Negroes he was, to some at the press tables, occsionally almost paternalistic but even with those of his race who were clearly up from the cornfields he dealt in a manner of total equality. In brief, he could not be rated as a Negro who thought himself better, economically or otherwise, than the least fortunate of his race. Wilkins has been an assistant secretary of state of the United States, was admitted to the bar in 1921, is cut in the Chicago pattern, has several degrees, has served on a number of government and private boards, and knows, too, what he is doing.

Battle Of Virginia

THE MAN ON the commission clearly most dedicated to the solid cause of Southern tradition as well as state sovereignty was former Gov. John Stewart Battle, 68, in the latter years of his active career, and a man who seemed to an observer to be somewhat weary but yet firm to the core and devoted to dignity among men. A pipe smoker who, as no other commission member did, occasionally yielded to a need of the weed and ducked out for a few puffs, Battle has gray eyes which flit from one person's face to another with an incisiveness to make the person being watched feel almost as if he were being looked through, summed up and assessed in mathematical fashion. Gov. Battle's questions to Negroes were courteous to a maximum, even when he clearly thought some wool was being pulled over others' eyes, and he addressed Negro men as "Mr.," Negro women as "Mrs." or "Miss." He yielded nothing but stood firmly and impressively as a true Southern gentleman, and in a manner to give that phrase a refreshed value. Gov. Battle comes from Charlottesville, Va., has a distinguished legal career behind him and is a granite rock on the commission on which Southerners generally can fix some staunch hopes. He will not "win" the commission struggle, but it can be said that the other members listen to his caution and counsel.

Carlton Of Florida

SIXTH MEMBER OF the commision is former Gov. Doyle Carlton of Florida. Carlton is a quiet man obviously—this can be said because during the full day's hearing Monday, when every other member of the commission was speaking up to ask questions, Carlton said not a word. He finally asked a few questions Tuesday morning, the first time he spoke up bringing from one press table observer the all but shocked comment: "He's in orbit!" Carlton was governor of Florida in the mid-thirties, had been a city attorney of Tampa before that and is considered by newsmen who have observed him in his home state as being something less than a heavyweight politically. It is possibly of some interest that "Who's Who in America" has not listed him at least since 1951, that being the earliest volume still in our files. Carlton's position as to the Southern view of federal encroachment seems to be somewhat clouded, consequently, since little or nothing has been heard from him or about him in some years. It would be interesting, of course, to know why and how President Eisenhower happened to name him.

THESE SIX MEN, then, are the members of the Federal Civil Rights Commission. On the whole they are men of stature and established reputation. As we have said, it is a good idea to know with whom you're dealing.

Alabama politics—

Folsom blamed for plight of vote officials

BY HUGH W. SPARROW, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 12—If Alabama's registrars are in trouble in connection with the Civil Rights Commission's efforts to lay hands on registration records they can—and very probably will—blame one person.

He's none other than the same fellow who just three years ago feted the New York Negro politician, Adam Clayton Powell, in the governor's mansion.

Gov. Folsom apparently can be blamed. By all appearances, he was entirely and exclusively responsible for killing an important bill by pocket veto. It would have afforded registration officials legal protection they now urgently need.

Measure passed overwhelmingly in Legislature

DURING CLOSING DAYS of the 1957 session, the Legislature passed overwhelmingly House Bill 937, by Reps. Dawkins, Hall and Goodwyn of Montgomery and Kendall of Conecuh.

SPARROW

The measure amended Sec. 31, Title 17 of the 1940 Code, to give registration officials full legal authority to destroy, after 30 days, records in which registration applicants were questioned and rejected. The amendment also specifically declared records of rejected applications were not public records.

It passed both houses with no opposition at all. It was sent to the governor's desk a short while before the two houses wound up the session.

Soon after the Legislature adjourned Gov. Folsom gave it the works.

Folsom scuttled bill with pocket veto

THE BILL WAS UNCEREMONIOUSLY scuttled by pocket veto. A measure approved by 106 House and 35 Senate members which could have been one of the session's most important bills and a life-saver for those facing the current difficulties. And to this day the governor has given no reason whatever for doing so.

If Folsom had signed it, all registrars would have had ample authority to dispose of critical records—records which could be twisted and distorted.

If summoned by the Civil Rights Commission, for example, registrars would have nothing of importance for the investigators to see and dig into. Furthermore, with records of those denied registration not available, commission members would find very little basis for grilling registrars as to just why this applicant or that was denied registration privileges.

Need for bill was fully explained

HOUSE BILL 937 was introduced during the latter days of the 1957 session. The need for such a measure was fully explained to members of both houses. It was introduced after it became known that registrars in one or two Alabama counties had misplaced on destroyed some of the records relating to applicant rejections.

The Legislature decided, however, the measure should apply to all counties and not to just a few. If Folsom had not killed the bill, every Alabama registrar could, and probably would, have disposed of all rejection records.

They therefore would be in a much better position in connection with the pending Civil Rights Commission crackdown than apparently they are now.

Provisions of measure given

THE MEASURE PROVIDED:

"Sec. 31. The Board of Registrars shall have power to examine, under oath of affirmation, all applicants for registration, and to take testimony touching the qualifications of such applicants.

"In order to aid the registrars to judicially determine if applicants to register have the qualifications to register to vote, each applicant shall be furnished by the board a written questionnaire, which shall be uniform in all cases with no discrimination as between applicants. The form and contents of such questionnaire shall be prescribed by the Supreme Court of Alabama and be filed by such court with the secretary of state.

"The questionnaire shall be so worded that the answers thereto will place before the registrars information necessary or proper to aid them to pass upon the qualifications of each applicant.

"The questionnaire shall be answered in writing by the applicant, in the presence of the board, without assistance. There shall be incorporated in such answer an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Alabama, and a statement in such oath by the applicant disavowing belief in affiliation at any time with any group or party which advocated the overthrow of the government of the United States or the state by unlawful means.

"The answers and oath shall be duly signed and sworn to by an applicant before a member of the board. Such questionnaire and the written answers of successful applicants shall be filed with the records of the Board of Registrars."

Point that would have given protection

IT IS AT THIS POINT that House Bill 937 would have amended Sec. 31 and provided registrars authority to dispose of records of rejected applicants and declared such records not destroyed not to be public records.

The amended part is this:

"In the event an applicant is refused registration, the questionnaire and written answers thereto shall be preserved by the Board of Registrars for a period of 30 days after such denial and may then be destroyed at the discretion of the Board of Registrars.

"The questionnaire and written answers of persons denied registration shall not become public records, as public records are defined under the laws of the State of Alabama, nor shall the Board of Registrars disclose the information contained in such questionnaire and written answers except in answer to a subpoena directed to a member of the Board of Registrars by a circuit judge of a Circuit Court of Alabama."

From there on out the bill made provision for persons disabled so as to be unable to read or to write to get help from the board.

Folsom has record of opposition

FOLSOM OPPOSED EVERY EFFORT by the Legislature to enact legislation resisting forced race mixing, school integration and other attempts to break down long-standing customs.

On one occasion Folsom labeled a pro-segregation proposal "hogwash." He also openly sneered at other pro-segregation bills during press conferences.

He pocket vetoed an earlier effort to enact a pupil placement law.

In fact, all other pro-segregation measures except House Bill 937 became law without the governor's approval.

House Bill 937, however, passed too late to allow the Legislature a chance to override an executive veto or declare the law enacted without the governor's signature.

All Folsom had to do—and he did just that—was to allow the bill to die on his desk by pocket veto.

Alabaman Returns Ike's Fire

Segregationist Raps President

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)— An Alabama White Citizens Council official suggested Thursday that President Eisenhower would do well to find "an able constitutional lawyer" to explain the 10th Amendment to him.

William E. Garner, vice chairman of the pro-segregation Montgomery Citizens Council, made his suggestion in a letter addressed to the President.

His letter was in reply to Eisenhower's criticism Wednesday of public officials who refused to cooperate with the federal Civil Rights Commission during a hearing here this week.

The President teamed the conduct of the Alabama officials "reprehensible."

Garner, a Montgomery attorney, said the President himself is guilty of the "reprehensible" kind of actions he attributed to the Alabamans.

"The 'reprehensible' kind of thing which you talk about —the widespread disregard for the law of the land—really is happening," Garner wrote, "but not in Alabama. It is in the District of Columbia.

"There the Supreme Court has arrogated to itself the shaping of national policy and the decreeing of law by its whim; the radicals in Congress are abandoning principles to cour[illegible] the vote of left-wing minorities and you slavishly are serving as errand boy for both of those branches of government rather than acting as a check on them as the Constitution commands."

Garner said the American people, if called on to list "reprehensible" actions in U. S. history, "could place at the very top much of your own conduct — such as your sending elite troops to occupy an American city and bayonet its citizens."

'Rights' Probers Face Alabama Resistance

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANP)— Civil Rights Commissioners holding hearings on violations of voting rights of Negroes in Alabama were refused hotel accommodations in Montgomery.

Hotel managers denied that the refusal was based upon their segregation policy.

The commission has one Negro member, J. Ernest Wilkins, former Assistant Secretary of Labor, and several Negro staff members.

WHEN PRESSED for a comment on why hotels refused to accommodate the commissioners, Chairman John A. Hannah, said he "preferred (not) to get into that."

Later, Hannah said that he wouldn't want to spend the first day of the hearings arguing about whether a Negro could stay in a white hotel.

Arrangements were made for the entire group to stay at nearby Maxwell Air Force Base, and Government transportation will be arranged to transport the members to and from the hearings in downtown Montgomery.

THE ALABAMA meeting marks the first hearings held by the commission which was created by the Civil Rights Act of 1957.

Although the commission itself has no enforcement powers, it does have authority under the law to subpoena both witnesses and records.

Alabama state officials have declined to produce the records in spite of the subpoena.

A spokesman for the commission said they needed the records to complete their investigation. And if officials failed to produce them, commissioners have the authority to notify the Attorney General.

The Justice Department can then ask a Federal Court to order local officials to produce them. If state officials disregard this order they can be charged with contempt of court.

Rights Board Halts Voter Probe, Asks Help to Get Alabama Lists

MONTGOMERY, Ala.— (UP) — The Federal Civil Rights Commission abruptly ended its two-day hearing into charges of denial of Negro voting rights Tuesday with a call for Justice Department action against defiant witnesses.

Chairman John A. Hannah announced he would ask the department to seek a federal court order to secure voter registration records in six Alabama counties. The records were impounded by local officials prior to the hearing.

Hannah made his terse and formal announcement, then abruptly adjourned the hearing with the comment, "There will be no more action in this case until the unforeseeable future."

Two of the 45 subpenaed witnesses remained to be called when the commission suddenly called off the hearing, first public meeting of the group since it was formed last year.

"The commission respectfully refers the complete record of this hearing to the attorney general of the U.S. for such action as he deems appropriate to the end that will assist this commission to have made available to it the information that is required to enable it to carry out the mandate of the law," Hannah said.

Under the law creating the commission in 1957, Congress gave the Justice Department authority to take necessary action againt witnesses who defy the orders of the commission. The federal agency itself does not have the power to issue contempt citations. The citations must be issued through federal court.

Six county registrars refused to testify Monday about qualifying Negro voter applicants, and they defied a commission subpena ordering them to turn their registration records over to the federal agency.

Five of the registrars refused to be sworn in as witnesses.

Circuit Judge George Wallace, outspoken segregationist and runnerup candidate for governor in the spring Democratic primaries, said he was "unimpressed" with the commission's announcement it would seek the help of the Justice Department.

Justice Department Busy

Federal Legal Guns Being Aimed At Alabama Officials

MONTGOMERY (AP)— Two justice department representatives were in Montgomery today to assist in getting a federal court order to require balky Alabama officials top roduce voting records.

Officials of the federal district court declined to say when such an order might be made or subpoenas issued.

U. S. Dist. Atty. Hartwell Davis confirmed yesterday that his office was working on such a petition to be filed with Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. He wouldn't say when he expects to file it.

Joseph M. F. Ryan, an assistant in the attorney general's office in Washington, was sent to Montgomery to assist in planned court proceedings, the name of the other justice department representative was not announced.

The U. S. Civil Rights Commission called on the Justice Department to take action to secure voter registration records which Alabama officials refused to turn over to the commission this week.

When officials in six Alabama counties, in which the commission sought to investigate voting procedures, refused to cooperate, the Civil Rights group abruptly ended its two-day hearing Tuesday.

Six members of county boards of registration, protesting what they referred to as an invasion of their rights as judicial officers, declined to discuss the work of their boards when called as witnesses.

Five of the officials refused to testify under oath.

Voting registration records, by one means or another, had all been turned over to state authorities or grand juries for independent investigations.

Sources in the U. S. District Court gave no assurance that the expected court order will be announced immediately when it is issued. This may come later after the papers have been served on the state officials involved.

Alabama's Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who advised voter registrars not to testify before the Civil Rights group, insists that the federal agency has no right to question the acts of Alabama officials.

Patterson contends that the registrars, as judicial officers, have carried out their duties "in a legal and constitutional manner" and have treated all citizens of the state "equally and impartially."

The Civil Rights Commission had no more right to question Alabama registrars, he said, than it would to call on a member of the U. S. Supreme Court to explain his action in a case decided by that court.

Officials May Face Jail If Judge Is Defied

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 13 (AP)—An Alabama judge and five other public officials may go to jail, perhaps for months, unless they abandon their refusal to produce evidence about Negro voter registration.

A federal judge noted as a courtroom disciplinarian has instructed them to surrender contested records to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission next Friday and submit to questioning about registration in their counties.

Despite their protests of judicial immunity, the officials could be put behind bars and kept there even while appealing the sentence to higher courts.

Meanwhile, the festering crisis over the disputed right of the federal government to question the acts of registration officers has left troubled Macon County once again with no functioning machinery to register new voters.

Both surviving members of the Macon Board of Registrars—the third member died last month—resigned in protest against the civil rights hearing at which they and registrars in two other counties refused to testify.

Registration Halted

The resignation of Chairman E. P. Livingston and Grady Rogers left prospective voters with no way to register in the county where Negroes outnumber white residents nearly 6 to 1.

Livingston and Rogers refused to testify under oath at the two-day hearing in Montgomery, protesting that they are judical officers whose official conduct cannot be challenged. So did Registrars W. A. Stokes and J. W. Spencer in Barbour County and M. T. Evans in Bullock.

They also appeared without their registration files, explaining they had been impounded by state authorities. The same strategy likewise kept the commission from getting records in Dallas, Lowndes and Wilcox counties, but the refusal to testify did not extend to registrars in those counties.

The voting files in Barbour and Bullock were impounded by Circuit Judge George Wallace even before the commission subpoenaed them. Wallace ignored a demand to produce them at the hearing and refused even to appear himself.

Wallace and the five silent registration officials were all included in the federal court order issued Thursday by U.S. Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. in Montgomery.

Patterson to Resist

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Alabama's governor-elect who directed the resistance at the hearing, has promised to resist the court order. He contends the commission has no right to subpoena the voter registration records or question the official acts of the board members.

He said he will ask Johnson for a hearing next week to give him the chance to raise the legal issues before the Friday afternoon deadline. If he could do that, then appeal to higher courts if turned down by the judge here, the question could be settled before reaching the point of a contempt citation.

But Johnson may not agree to that. He may wait until Friday and then cite the defiant officials if they fail to produce the requested evidence.

If the federal judge pursues that course, he will give the defendants a chance then to show why they shouldn't be punished for defiance of his order. They might convince him that they have a legal right to refuse to testify or to produce their records.

If they should fail, Johnson could send them to jail and keep them there until they agree to comply with the commission's demands, no matter how long it might be. He could even refuse to release them on bond pending an appeal to higher courts.

CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION. DEC.8, 1958
TEXT OF PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S STATEMENT ON ALABAMA

Text of Eisenhower's statement on Alabama

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—President Eisenhower's remarks concerning civil rights and the defiance of Alabama vote registration officials at his press conference yesterday:

Q. (Frank Van Der [illegible], Nashville Banner) Sir, [illegible] Democratic Advisory Council here last weekend, and proposed a program of a billion-dollar, a good deal of spending legislation which you have [illegible] and also asked for new legislation from Congress to reopen the schools that are closed in Virginia and Arkansas.

Do you favor new legislation to bring about the enforcement of integration or any of these proposals?

THE PRESIDENT: Well now, in the first part of your question, I have made note that I have seen a lot of recommendations. I would like to see all of the proposals for new taxes that are necessary to get the money to do it, and I think that a lot of us would be startled, to say nothing about stronger sentiments, when we really had to think of digging up that kind of taxes.

Q. (Mr. Van Der Linden) Sir—

THE PRESIDENT: Now, with respect to any new laws which you are talking about in the whole field of civil rights, I simply will say this: this is something that is studied all the time. Just exactly what will come out of these things, I don't know, but there is one thing that I believe should be done, and that is continuing the Civil Rights Commission which, because of a late start has not had the two years that Congress intended it to have, and I should like to have it continued because its work is becoming now more factual and real than it was possible before.

Q. (Mr. Van Der Linden) Sir, that would be a two-year extension?

Q. (Robert C. Pierpoint, CBS News) Mr. President, sir, how do you feel about the refusal of public officials in Alabama to cooperate with the investigation of the Civil Rights Commission?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, I don't feel very well about it.

This is what I feel: This commission was, in its formulation, was supported by people from different sections, and certainly I took every possible pains I could to get one that would represent every shade of opinion and even to give it a geographical base that I thought would appeal to the common sense and the general opinion of the country.

For example, Governor Battle, and Mr. Story, who was president of the American Bar Association, and Mr. Carlton, were all from the South, and so we had that kind of a commission, and is merely one reason for their slowness in getting started, was the difficulty I had in getting exactly the kind of people that I wanted within the time it took.

Now, that kind of a commission goes down and, under the authority of the Congress, which has given them the power of subpoena, is defied, and they have had to ask the Justice Department to come in, to place this case before a federal court. I think this is a rather sad sort of thing, because all the way around we are running into this refusal of complying with the basic laws of the land, laws that have been upheld by our courts as legal and proper.

Now, I am not trying to get into the basic question. I am talking about the procedures and the habits that make this kind of thing so reprehensible because it means, as I see it, showing the American public that, and any member of it, at his or their pleasure they can defy the laws of the land when popular opinion in the particular section or locality may support these people.

Now, I am talking about unquestionably some of my good friends.

Most of you people know I lived a great bit of my time in the South and, of course, this applies, and I have no doubt it would apply, in certain sections of the North, but the fact is what I am pleading for, and what I would like to get help in pleading for throughout the country is respect for law.

And I would say one other thing about this commission: this is to look into the facts, to find the facts, about interference with the rights of free men to vote.

Now this, you remember, was part of the so-called civil rights bill of 1956, was it—1956, and during the course of that time I had a number of my respected Southern friends to talk the matter over with me.

Now, some of them, of course, were particularly happy to see a civil rights bill projected, but every single one of them that I can recall said:

"The right to vote does belong to any citizen that can qualify for the voting privilege, and all of us should stand for that."

Now, I think they would rather have seen this not as a law, apparently, but they said just exactly that, and I believe that responsible people in every section, if they will look at this, will see the need for complying with the law if we are not going to have a deterioration in the quality of governmental activity and, indeed, possibly the quality of our own thinking with respect to our government, and that is what we need.

Ike Criticizes Alabama Officials In Vote Cases

Refusal To Produce Records Called 'Sad'

News-Courier

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower has termed it a sad reprehensible thing for Alabama officials to defy the federal government over voting registration records of Negroes.

Charleston, S. C.

"What I am pleading for, and what I would like to get help in pleading for throughout the country, is respect for law," Eisenhower told a news conference Wednesday.

Mar. 15-11-58

This was his first session with reporters in five weeks, since the day after the Nov. 4 election.

Eisenhower disclaimed that he has taken a sudden conservative turn in that period. He said he doesn't think there has been one single change in his basic political philosophy since he spelled it out in 1949, although he said he has had to accept some legislative compromises during what he called "the buffeting of politics" in Washington.

The session with newsmen ranged over the country and overseas.

Along the way, Eisenhower said in a sort of roundabout way that he isn't mad at former President Harry S. Truman. He chided the Democrats over spending and taxes.

He discounted the idea that Russia has flown a nuclear-powered airplane but declined to challenge reports that the Soviets have developed an 8,700-mile missile and a nuclear bomb with the punch of at least five million tons of TNT.

He also repeated an administration stand that the United States and her allies must stand firm against the latest Soviet menace in Berlin. They have "not only the right but the duty of preserving their peaceful and free existence" of West Berlin and its people, the President said.

Eisenhower opened the news conference on that note. He closed it with word that he has no new policy on reunification of Germany to propose at next week's meeting in Paris of representatives of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

VOTING ISSUE

The refusal of Alabama authorities to comply with a subpoena of the Federal Civil Rights Commission and hand over voting registration records of Negroes came up in question form. The commission, which is investigating charges of denial of voting rights to Negroes, has asked the Justice Department to take the issue to court.

Asked how he feels about this situation, the chief executive replied: "Well, I don't feel very well about it. ... I think this is a rather sad sort of thing, because all the way around we are running into this refusal of complying with the basic laws of the land, laws that have been upheld by our courts as legal and proper."

This apparently was a reference to the closing of schools in Arkansas and Virginia in preference to complying with court orders for racial integration under a Supreme Court decision.

BASIC QUESTION

"Now, I am not trying to get to the basic question," Eisenhower went on. "I am talking about the procedures and the habits that make this kind of thing so reprehensible, because it means, as I see it, showing the American public that, and any member of it, at his or their pleasure they can defy the laws of the land when popular opinion in the particular section or locality may support these people."

Eisenhower told his news conference that the commission "because of a slow start has not had the two years that Congress intended it to have, and I should like to have it continued because its work, I think, is now becoming more factual and real than was possible before."

The President also came out Wednesday for continuing the life of the Civil Rights Commission beyond its scheduled expiration date of August 1959.

Sen.-elect Kenneth Keating (R-NY) said in a statement Wednesday night that he plans to offer legislation to continue the commission. He said what happened in Alabama was "only the latest example of the attempt by segregationists to obstruct its work."

Eisenhower laughed but still seemed a bit irritated when an inevitable question arose about his relationship with Harry Truman. Truman said Monday he gave Eisenhower hell in the 1952 political campaign because Eisenhower didn't knock Sen. William E. Jenner (R-Ind) off the platform for calling Gen. George C. Marshall, Eisenhower's wartime chief, a traitor.

In follow up of 'rights' probe—

Officials await orders; Council answers Ike

BY FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 11—Federal Court orders directing balking Alabama voter registration officials to testify and produce voting files were expected to be issued here today or tomorrow.

But neither U. S. Dist. Atty. Hartwell Davis, who would file petitions for such orders, nor Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., who would issue them, would comment on when such action might be taken.

Some believed the petitions would be filed, at the direction of U. S. Atty. Gen. William Rogers, the court orders issued and the witnesses served with subpoenaes before any further official announcements are made.

GOV.-ELECT John Patterson, Alabama's attorney general, declined to comment on President Eisenhower's statement yesterday rebuking the registration officials who refused to testify or bring records before the federal Civil Rights Commission here earlier this week.

The president termed it "sad and reprehensible" for officials of Macon, Barbour, Bullock, Dallas, Lowndes and Wilcox Counties to defy the federal government over voter registration records.

Patterson, who advised the registration officials not to bring their files before the commission, reemphasized his belief that the commission lacked power to question members of the Boards of Registrars or to force them to give up their records.

"The commission would have no more right to do what they tried to do down here than they would have to subpoena a member of the Supreme Court of the United States and ask him why he decided a case in a certain way," declared Patterson.

The governor-elect reiterated his contention that registration officials and the courts have been carrying on their duties in a legal and constitutional manner, and they have been treating all citizens of the state equally and impartially."

THE SIX-MEMBER commission Tuesday recessed its hearing here into complaints that Negroes have been denied voting rights in the six Alabama counties and called on U. S. Atty. Gen. Rogers to take "appropriate" action against the balking witnesses.

A few hours later in Washington, the Justice Department said it would ask court orders compelling the registration officials to give the commission the requested voting files.

A spokesman for Rogers said the proceedings would be handled through U. S. Dist. Atty Davis at Montgomery.

DAVIS' BRIEF COMMENT was that "We have the matter under consideration."

The Justice Department also disclosed that it had Joseph Ryan Jr., first assistant in the department's civil rights division, at Montgomery working with the district attorney's office.

ANY COURT ORDERS issued by Judge Johnson would direct the balking witnesses to testify and produce their records before the commission when it reconvenes.

Acting Chairman Robert G. Storey, dean of Southern Methodist University law school and commission vice chairman, said at the time the body recessed that it would not hold another meeting in the "forseeable future."

Circuit Judge George Wallace of Clayton was one of the subpoenaed witnesses who refused to appear before the commission or produce voting records of Barbour and Bullock Counties, which he had impounded for Grand Jury investigations. Furthermore, Wallace threatened to jail any commission agents who tried to get the records.

New York next on probers' list

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 11—(AP)—A probe of housing problems in New York City by the Civil Rights Commission will be started in February, Robert G. Storey, commission member, said yesterday.

Storey, dean of the Southern Methodist University law school, would not say whether the investigation concerned racial discrimination. He said the complaints received concerned the administration of housing facilities in New York.

He pleaded ignorance on the nature of the complaints. "We intend to find out," he said.

Storey also was closemouthed on recent commission hearings into voting procedures in Alabama where it was alleged Negroes had been deprived of voting rights.

He termed the action of Alabama officials in refusing to testify as "regrettable and lamentable." He said he had no idea what action, if any, the Justice Department might take.

'Ike' Flails Alabama Officials For Withholding Vote Records From Civil Rights Commission

'It's Sad Thing'

President Scoffs At Reports Of Red A-Plane But Not Atom, Missile Power

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
Associated Press Staff

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 — President Eisenhower Wednesday termed it a sad, reprehensible thing for Alabama officials to defy the Federal Government over voting registration records of Negroes.

"What I am pleading for, and what I would like to get help in pleading for throughout the country, is respect for law," Eisenhower told a news conference.

Eisenhower discounted the idea that Russia has flown a nuclear-powered airplane but declined to challenge reports that the Soviets have developed an 8,700-mile missile and a nuclear bomb with the punch of at least five million tons of TNT.

The refusal of Alabama authorities to comply with a subpena of the Federal Civil Rights Commission and hand over voting registration records of Negroes came up in question form. The commission, which is investigating charges of denial of voting rights to Negroes, has asked the Justice Department to take the issue to court.

Refusal To Obey Laws

Asked how he feels about this situation, the Chief Executive replied:

"Well, I don't feel very well about it . . . I think this is a rather sad sort of thing, because all the way around we are running into this refusal of complying with the basic laws of the land, laws that have been upheld by our courts as legal and proper."

This apparently was a reference to the closing of schools in Arkansas and Virginia in preference to complying with court orders for racial integration under a Supreme Court decision.

"Now, I am not trying to get to the basic question," Eisenhower went on. "I am talking about the procedures and the habits that make this kind of thing so reprhensible, because it means, as I see it, showing the American' public that, and any member of it, at his or their displeasure they can defy the laws of the land when popular opinion in the particular section or locality may support these people."

'Ike' Sarcastic

As for a new program for the country outlined last week end by the Democratic Party's Advisory Council, Eisenhower remarked with a tinge of sarcasm that he would like to see "the programs for new taxes that are going to get the money to do it." He said a lot of people would be startled "when we really had to think of digging up that kind of taxes."

The President didn't say specifically whether he agrees with the Advisory Council that stronger civil rights legislation is needed.

Nor did he answer directly a question whether he expects an increase in United States economic aid to needy countries. But he did repeat that as he sees it, and he is sure millions of people agree, such aid "is also in the best interests of the United States."

The President acknowledged that "it is politically disagreeable and unpopular to ask for this mutual security money." But he said spending money for mutual assistance is better than spending "too much on sterile mechanisms" of defense.

SPEAKS TO NEWSMEN

This is a partial transcript of President Eisenhower's news conference Wednesday, relating to civil rights:

Q. (Frank Van Der Linden, Nashville Banner) Sir, the Democratic Advisory Council met here last week end, and presented a program of a blueprint for a good deal of spending legislation which you have opposed, and also asked for new legislation from Congress to reopen the schools that are closed in Virginia and Arkansas.

Do you favor new legislation to bring about the enforcement of integratoin or any of these other proposals?

The President: Well now, in the first part of your question I do note this: I have seen a lot of recommendations. Ike Raps Balks on Vote Data

Defiance over Negro Records Labeled Reprehensible

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP)—President Eisenhower termed it a sad, reprehensible thing today for Alabama officials to defy the federal government over voting registration records of Negroes.

"What I am pleading for, and what I would like to get help in pleading for throughout the country, is respect for law," Eisenhower told a news conference.

This was his first session with reporters in five weeks, since the day after the Nov. 4 election.

Eisenhower disclaimed that he has taken a sudden conservative turn in that period. He said he doesn't think there has been one single change in his basic political philosophy since he spelled it out in 1949, although he said he has had to accept some legislative compromises during what he called "the buffeting of politics" in Washington.

The session with newsmen ranged over the country and overseas.

Truman Issue

Along the way, Eisenhower said in a sort of roundabout way that he isn't mad at former President Harry S. Truman. He chided the Democrats over spending and taxes.

He discounted the idea that Russia has flown a nuclear-powered airplane, but declined to challenge reports that the Soviets have developed an 8,700-mile missile and a compact nuclear bomb with the punch of at least five million tons of TNT.

And he repeated an administration stand that the United States and her allies must stand firm against the latest Soviet threat to Berlin. They have "not only the right but the duty of preserving the peaceful and free existence" of West Berlin and its people, the President said.

Eisenhower opened the news conference on that note. He closed it with word that he has no new policy on reunification of Germany to propose at next week's meeting in Paris of representatives of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The refusal of Alabama authorities to comply with a subpoena of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission and hand over voting registration records of Negroes came up in question form. The commission, which is investigating charges of denial of voting rights to Negroes, has asked the Justice Department to take the issue to court.

Gives Opinion

Asked how he feels about this situation, the chief executive replied:

"Well, I don't feel very well about it.... I think this is a rather sad sort of thing, because all the way around we are running into this refusal of complying with the basic laws of the land, laws that have been upheld by our courts as legal and proper."

This apparently was a reference to the closing of schools in Arkansas and Virginia in preference to complying with court orders for racial integration under a Supreme Court decision.

"Now, I am not trying to get to the basic question," Eisenhower went on. "I am talking about the procedures and the habits that make this kind of thing so reprehensible, because it means, as I see it, showing the American public that, and any member of it, at his or their pleasure they can defy the laws of the land when popular opinion in the particular section or locality may support these people."

Eisenhower laughed, but still seemed a bit irritated when an inevitable question arose about his relationship with Truman. Truman said Monday he gave Eisenhower hell in the 1952 political campaign because Eisenhower didn't knock Sen. William E. Jenner (R-Ind) off the platform for calling Gen. George C. Marshall Eisenhower's wartime chief, a traitor.

Ever since then, Truman added, Eisenhower has been mad at him and "I don't give a damn."

To an inquiry as to whether that was good history, Eisenhower replied a bit tartly:

"You people have had a pretty good chance to cross-examine me for the last six years, and I think that most of you have found that I have had a little bit too much sense to waste my time getting mad at anybody."

Furthermore, he said, he has made known his admiration and respect for Marshall ever since he has known him. He classed Marshall, who was wartime chief of staff of the Army and later secretary of defense and state, as a great man.

"And to say that I have ever stood still while any man, in my presence, was reviling Gen. Marshall is not true," Eisenhower said.

Though Eisenhower and Jenner appeared on the same platform and Eisenhower called for Jenner's re-election in 1952, it was some time before that that Jenner described Marshall as a "front man for traitors."

As for a new program for the country outlined last weekend by the Democratic party's advisory council — Truman is one of the members — Eisenhower remarked with a tinge of sarcasm that he would like to see "the programs for new taxes that are going to get the money to do it." He said, a lot of people would be startled "when we really had to think of digging up that kind of taxes."

The President didn't say specifically whether he agrees with the advisory council that stronger civil rights legislation is needed.

Nor did he answer directly a question whether he expects an increase in U.S. economic aid to needy countries.

TO BE USED AS A WAREHOUSE FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF LIGHT

Tuskegee City Buys Building, Boycott Casualty

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (ANP) — The city council votes this week to plank down $48,000 for a large brick and concrete building owned by the Tuskegee Wholesale Grocery company and in that transaction lies a tale.

The building housed the only wholesale food store in the city. It was forced out of business when Negroes, protesting the revamping of the city boundaries to exclude members of the race from within city limits, began an all-out boycott of white merchants and sundries business places.

Several weeks ago, the city took an option on the building, and with the city council approval of the purchase, will use the edifice as a warehouse for the department of light.

An interesting sidelight is that while Negroes were successful in forcing this white merchant to the wall, some of the money they pay in taxes went for the purchase of the building.

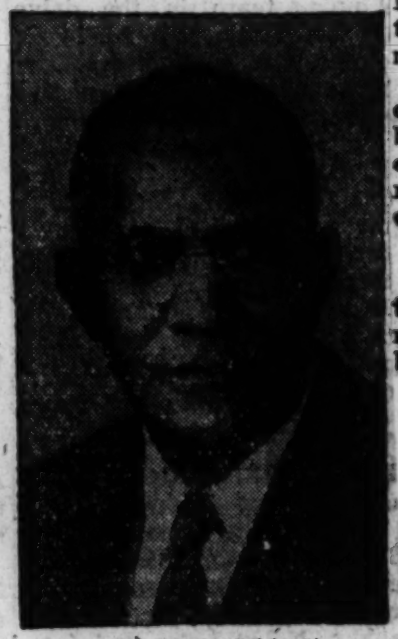
TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — The first anniversary celebration of weekly mass meetings which have been sponsored by the Tuskegee Civic Association since June 26, 1957, will be held at the Greenwood Missionary Baptist Church, Tuesday evening, June 24, at 7:30 o'clock.

The principal message will be brought by C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Association. Sharing the program will be Rev. S. T. Martin, pastor of the Butler Chapel AME Zion Church, and C. W. Kelly, pastor emeritus of the Greenwood Missionary Baptist Church.

P. 20.



C. G. GOMILLION

THE WEEKLY mass gatherings which began one year ago at the Butler Chapel Church, the birthsite of Tuskegee Institute, grew out of requests by scores of local Negro citizens of the TCA, who sought direction and leadership from the 20 year old organization.

The meetings have been an instrument through which the aggrieved citizens could discuss their plight and harness their efforts in their attempts to cause the Tuskegee gerrymandering act, which was directed against Negroes voting in Tuskegee City elections, to be rescinded or repealed. The citizens, through the TCA, and as individuals, have called upon local and state officials for relief from what they construe to be a wrongful act against a segment of Tuskegee's population.

Pat. 6-14-58 Norfolk

THE WEEKLY MEETINGS have served to dramatize the cause of the Negroes in Tuskegee, and to keep the citizenry informed of the association's efforts to bring about some relief. They have been used also to encourage registration and intelligent, effective voting; to encourage the establishment of new and the expansion of existing businesses whose proprietors will use the resources of their establishments for the total growth and development of the community.

Headed by Mr. Gomillion, long time an advocate of the doctrine of equal rights and responsibilities for all, the first TCA mass meeting drew a crowd in excess of 5,000 people. Mr. Gomillion announced to this ecstatic, hand-clapping, foot stomping crowd that "We will buy goods and services from only those who will recognize us as first-class citizens and who will help rather than oppress us."

WHILE THE PRESIDENT expressed the opinions of the 3,000 Negroes who had been gerrymandered out of the city limits of Tuskegee because of fear that Negroes "would some-day elect a Negro to public office," it was Rev. Mr. Martin, who pleaded with the crowd to use their resources to "do something for yourself" and "sop in your own damn gravy."

Amid TV kleig lights, constantly clicking cameras and representatives from every major news service, the hundreds who filled the church three hours before the announced starting time, and the thousands who stood outside, gave their "amens" to the speakers. Thus was set in motion 52 weeks of Tuesday night meetings.

COMPELLED BY A REAL desire to spend their money "wisely," edged on each Tuesday night by the singing of the Negro Folk song, "Don't You Let Nobody Turn You Round," Negroes formed motor pools and did, and are continuing to do their shopping in nearby cities in instances where local Negro merchants cannot supply their needs.

The president made it clear, however, that the program of the TCA is a posifive one. This was further punctuated by a statement by Dr. M. L. King, president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, who stated at the second mass meeting that "You are not seeking to put stores downtown out of business, but seeking to put democracy into business."

DESPITE SCORES OF APPEALS by aggrieved Negroes to city, county and state officials to cause the Tuskegee gerrymandering act to be rescinded, no steps have been announced by these officials to bring this about. In fact as far as is known to date, none of these communications have been answered; no conference has been held with public officials and representatives of the TCA; no compromise has been offered. "There has been no two-way communication—which is a requisite if our differences are to be resolved," Gomillion said.

Tuskegee's voteless Negroes were soon to learn that the merchants on the square of the town of Tuskegee would receive protection from the long arms of the office of the State Attorney General, from what that office called a "boycott" by Negroes against white merchants. The attorney and a corps of assistants encamped in the Macon County Courthouse for three or more weeks and carried on an investigation in an effort to determine if the Negroes here who were abstaining from trading in Tuskegee, were violating Alabama's anti-boycott statute.

AS A RESULT OF THIS investigation and after two raids on the office of the Tuskegee Civic Association, the attorney general obtained a temporary injunction on September 12; 1957, against the officers, members, agents and followers of the TCA—restraining them from carrying on, conducting, and/or advocating a boycott.

When queried about the injunction, Mr. Gomillion said, "We have done business with them (local white merchants), made them who and what they are in business. Suddenly, either perchance or otherwise, they have lined up against us. We think our feelings and thoughts are moderate, fair and honest. We are simply tending our own affairs and using our resources as we deem best."

THE WEEKLY MEETINGS CONTINUE to be held, featuring outstanding leaders in the field of civil rights. Among the speakers during the year were: Patrick M. Malin, executive director, American Civil Liberties Union; Emory O. Jackson, managing editor, The Birmingham World; Glenn E. Smiley, field director, Fellowship of Reconciliation, New York; James and Wilma Stokely, co-authors of the book, "Neither Black Nor White," Newport, Tenn.; W. C. Patton, president, ACARV, Birmingham; the Rev. Conrad Brown of the Kenonia Farms, Americus, Ga.; the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham; and Dr. M. L. King, Montgomery.

In addition, many local ministers and laymen have participated in these civic-religious meetings which have been designated "Crusade For Citizenship."

Engelhardt Fights

Anti-Macon Co. drive seen doomed

By JOHN H. McCRAY

PHENIX CITY, Ala. — State Sen. Sam Engelhardt appears to be losing his bid to cut up colored dominated Macon County, of which Tuskegee is the seat. The state approved the move in a referendum several weeks ago.

Under an Engelhardt bill, Macon which is 87 per cent colored would be distributed among the following surrounding counties: Tallapoosa, Lee, Bullock, Barbour, Montgomery and Russell counties.

Engelhardt, who represents Macon and Bullock Counties, heads a special legislative committee which has been conducting public hearings in the affected counties.

The committee reports back on its findings later in the year.

THE LAST of the rounds of hearings (Macon is not included) was held in Phenix City's Russell County courthouse, Thursday.

In the absence of Engelhardt, James Hall of Montgomery, vice chairman of the committee, presided.

Otis W. Taff, chairman of the Russell County Commissioners, told the committee that people with whom he'd talked "were definitely opposed" to annexing part of Macon County.

Taff said that annexation would increase Russell County's road building and maintenance program, already laboring under extremely adverse conditions.

IT WAS brought out also that taking over a part of Macon County would increase the already superior number of colored over white Russell County residents.

The county has (1950 census) 21,000 colored and 19,360 white residents, the former representing 53 per cent of the total.

Ira Seymour, clerk of the Commissioners Court, told the committee he had voted against the abolition measure, "and I feel like if Russell County citizens had had any idea of what it (abolition) did they would have voted against it."

He went on to say, "I don't believe you can solve any problem (Macon County) by covering it up. Every county adjoining Macon is out of balance (having more colored than white residents) ... and I don't think it's (abolition) the solution."

STATE REP. Homer Cornett, who lives in Phenix City, told the committee that at the time Russell County voted for abolition it had no idea that it would be asked to take over a part of the wiped out district.

H. B. Banner, superintendent of Russell County schools, told the committee:

"If any part of Macon County were annexed, practically all we would get would be colored people."

He said that facilities at the Hurtsboro colored school were already over-taxed and the county couldn't afford the money necessary to enlarge and expand it, or other colored schools.

BUT THERE was one speaker who backed annexation. He was E. W. Calhoun of Fort Sill, chairman of the Russell County White Citizens Council.

He called for immediate abolition of Macon County, saying he felt Russell County should be willing to go part of the way in wiping out their neighboring district.

Three colored men present said they were "observing." They refused to identify themselves and declined an invitation of Sen. Joe Smith of the committee to speak on the abolition subject.

THE STUDY committee wasn't slated to go into recess until Mid-July, behind a "wait watch and hope" move. Thus far, it has run into the same kind of local reaction as was demonstrated in Phenix City.

There was a strong belief here, and reportedly in the five other counties where hearings have been held, that next October the study committee will recommend that Macon County be left intact.

In addition, the committee would recommend some other method to throttle the approximately 27,000 colored and 4,500 white residents in Macon, if the legislature so desired.

Englehardt Speaks Here On Tuskegee

The proposed abolition of Macon County "directly affects every person at this table," Macon County Senator Sam Engelhardt told Talladega Kiwanians at a luncheon meeting at the Purcell Friday.

Engelhardt, segregation leader who introduced bills to gerrymander Tuskegee and to abolish Macon County if the Negro majority threatens to take political control, is a candidate for lieutenant governor of Alabama.

The farmer-merchant was introduced by John Coleman, Talladega attorney, who said that the people of Alabama found out what Engelhardt had meant in his statements about the consequences of the Supreme Court's reversing itself on school segregation when "Miss Autherine Lucy enrolled at the University of Alabama."

Because of a population of about 27,500 Negroes and 4200 whites, Macon has a "desperate" problem, Engelhardt said.

He described the NAACP and the TCA (Tuskegee Civic Association) as "actually one and the same thing," saying the groups are responsible for "continuous agitation."

Boycotts; pressure for the hiring of Negro deputies, case workers, police, and the "constant threat of litigation" have been the result of agitation by the Negro organizations, Engelhardt said.

"It's awfully hard to destroy your own county that you've had ties in more than 100 years but the people are ready to do it before they will let the Negro take political control," he said.

Engelhardt Sees Suits Over Macon

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Shorter predicted here Monday that he "fully expects" the constitutionality of the Macon abolition amendment to be challenged in federal courts by Tuskegee Negroes.

He made his prediction at a meeting of the Macon Abolition Commission at the Capitol.

Engelhardt said the first suit filed would probably by aimed at a bill he passed last summer which gerrymandered most Negro voters out of Tuskegee. He backed up this contention with a newspaper clipping from the Pittsburgh Courier, a Negro paper, in which Tuskegee Negro leader C. G. Gomillion was quoted as saying that "court action would be filed within the next three or four weeks."

"And you can expect them to attack the legality of the abolition amendment in the near future," Engelhardt added.

Politics also became involved in the meeting Monday, with most of the commission members being candidates for public office in May. Several members favored calling off the meeting until after the election, while others wanted the commission to continue at work.

While no decision was reached on this point, the commission did vote to hold a regional meeting in Phenix City at 10:30 a.m. (EST), April 4.

Although Russell County adjoins Macon, it was not included in the amendment which passed the voters last December. As a result it is not represented on the commission.

However, commission members have indicated they felt Russell should share in the distribution of Macon in the event abolition is recommended.

To My Friends:

We are fortunate to have two good men in the run-off for governor; one, JOHN PATTERSON has a proven record against the NAACP. You know he will not get the NAACP vote. So lets all of us who believe in our way of life get behind JOHN PATTERSON and make him our next governor.

"I intend to carry my campaign for lieutenant governor into every section of Alabama," said Sen. Engelhardt, who was chief sponsor of the constitutional amendment approved by Alabama voters Dec. 17 empowering the Legislature to abolish outright or carve up his home county of Macon. This would be done to prevent Negroes, who outnumber white persons nearly seven to one, from gaining political control of tre county.

"I feel we have accomplished a great deal in the Citizens Council movement," Engelhardt added. "The Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils has never been connected with violence of any kind, yet we have brought about a decided slackening of pressure from the North.

This is indicated by the increased publicity Northern newspapers are giving their own race problems and their own violence.

"There's no doubt that this has come about because of our continued presentation to the world of the moral and legal right to our own way of life. We shall continue to do this in the future, and I shall work very closely with Citizens Councils leaders throughout the South to see that our segregated way of life is maintained."

Sam Englehardt Qualifies For Post On State Demo Body

MONTGOMERY —(AP)— Among the candidates qualifying for positions on the State Democratic executive committee yesterday afternoon was a man in the race for lieutenant governor.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County officially became a candidate for one of the eight Democratic committee seats from the Third Congressional District. He is eligible to seek both offices and come in both if elected, since one is a public office and the other a party matter.

When he began his campaign for lieutenant governor, Engelhardt resigned as executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils.

Candidates must qualify by midnight Saturday to run in the May 6 Democratic primary.

While voters are nominating Democratic candidates for public office in the primary and the runoff June 3, a new committee will also be elected.

Sen. Sam Wants To Be Lieut.-Governor

Special to Journal and Guide

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — The Alabama association of Citizens Councils is looking around for a new executive secretary.

The reason: the former secretary has resigned to become a candidate for lieutenant-governor of the state. He's State Senator Sam Englehardt who, in addition to heading the Councils for the past few years, engineered the gerrymandering of Tuskegee so that only 10 qualified colored voters remain within the city limits.

It was also Englehardt who set about the task of "abolishing" Macon county in which Tuskegee institute is located.

Alabama Seen Outdoing Little Rock

Engelhardt Expects Outbreaks To Follow Any Mixing Order

BY IVAN SWIFT

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr., told a radio and television audience yesterday if school integration is ordered in Alabama he thinks "it will make Little Rock look like a garden party."

The executive secretary of the Citizens Councils of Alabama, speaking over Stations WABT and WAPI on Alabama Press Conference, told interviewers Fred Taylor of The Birmingham News and Leroy Simms, Associated Press Alabama correspondent, there are "more school districts in the South than Army divisions."

Engelhardt, who claims about 60,000 members in his segregation organization, said the councils haven't as many members as they had 18 months ago "but the enthusiasm still is there."

He said the 60,000 membership figure is a guess because membership drives have been completed in only 12 counties by the state-wide organization.

Engelhardt didn't disclose the personal political plans under heavy questioning from Taylor about them but he did say the councils "will not back or fight any particular candidate."

The Macon senator said the questionnaire the councils plan to send every candidate will ask questioning similar to the 1954 query sheet, and he mentioned two of them approximately as:

1. WILL THE CANDIDATE deny the Negro vote?

2. WILL THE CANDIDATE submit a list of financial contributors to his campaign?

He told Simms, in answer to a question, the publication of the answers will be the councils' way of informing Alabama voters about candidates.

Engelhardt himself is not expected to be a candidate for the office he now holds because the post is shifted customarily between Macon and Bullock Counties. Both counties make up the 26th District.

Engelhardt said the present political condition is a "state of confusion" so far as who is going to qualify and run for office is concerned

He told the interviewers recommendations about the disposition of Macon County, now under study after an affirmative vote Dec. 17, partly depends on the action of the Presidential Civil Rights Commission.

Engelhardt said he "feels sure they (the commission) will come here" and he said he "hopes we will be ready when they come into the state."

On other issues Engelhardt said:

He doesn't think the state can take over Tuskegee Institute, a private school, but consideration should be given to transferring schools contracted to Tuskegee, such as engineering, to state Negro schools.

Tuskegee merchants will "withstand" the boycott now going on, which followed the gerrymandering of Negro voters out of the city. Boycotts are "a two-edged sword" and "the NAACP and Tuskegee Civic Assn. will rue the day they started the boycott."

Additional school appropriations are needed, "especially in the case of Auburn."

SEGREGATION LEADER IN ALABAMA AROUSED

Predicts Stronger Reaction Than Little Rock's

NAACP HIT FOR BOYCOTT

By The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 5.—A Citizens Council leader Sunday said that if racial integration of public schools is ordered in Alabama "it will make Little Rock look like a garden party."

State Senator Sam Engelhardt of Macon County said on a television program that there are "more school districts in the South than Army divisions."

Senator Engelhardt is executive secretary of the Alabama Association of Citizens Councils. He claims 60,000 members for the white supremacy organization.

Councils Will Question

He said the councils will question candidates in the 1958 Alabama Democratic primaries this spring about their views on segregation and the Negro vote.

Two questions that will be asked, he said, are:

Will the candidate deny the Negro vote?

Will the candidate submit a list of financial contributors to his campaign?

Some 50 to 60 thousand of Alabama's estimated 825,000 registered voters are Negroes.

Senator Engelhardt said the future of Macon County depends on what the President's Civil Rights Commission does.

Abolition Authority Given

Alabama voters in a Dec. 17 election empowered the Legislature to abolish the county if necessary to prevent the heavy Negro majority from gaining political control. The outnumbered whites still have a substantial edge in the number of registered voters.

Senator Engelhardt said he "feels sure" the Civil Rights Commission "will come here" and hopes that "we will be ready when they come into the state."

The council executive said Tuskegee white merchants will survive a current boycott by Negro residents, who were angered when the city limits were changed in order to exclude most Negro voters. Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon County and home of famed Tuskegee Institute for Negroes.

Senator Engelhardt said boycotts are "a two-edged sword" and "the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Tuskegee Civic Association will rue the day they started the boycott."

He was questioned by newsmen on the television program, "Alabama Press Conference."

Engelhardt May Run For Lt. Governor

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 3 (AP)—State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County hinted broadly today that he may be a candidate for lieutenant governor in the May primary.

Engelhardt is not eligible to succeed himself in the state Senate.

The pro-segregation leader indicated he would make a definite decision on the race in the near future.

Sen. Engelhardt In Race For Lieutenant Governship

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt, Jr., of Shorter, this week announced he will be a candidate for lieutenant governor of Alabama in the Democratic primaries this Spring.

In a statement issued announcing his forthcoming candidacy, Sen. Engelhardt said he will qualify after the State Democratic Executive Committee meets in Montgomery Saturday.

A strong segregationist in the Legislature, where he served a term in the House before moving up to the Senate, Sen. Engelhardt was sponsor of the constitutional amendment which empowers the Legislature to abolish or re-arrange the boundaries of Macon County.

Approval of the amendment by an overwhelming majority last month is construed by many political observers as making Sen. Engelhardt the leading prospective candidate for lieutenant governor. Graham Wright, of Talladega, a former state senator is the only other person who has officially announced he will be a candidate for lieutenant governor but several others are expected to be announced shortly.

Answers to these and dozens of other questions will be sought from State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. of Macon, executive secretary of the Citizens Councils of Alabama, when he appears as special guest on "Alabama Press Conference" at 12:30 p.m., Sunday, over WABT (Channel 13).

These public information programs are sponsored by The Birmingham News and Stations WABT and WAPI.

Questioning Sen. Engelhardt will be Fred Taylor, Birmingham News political writer and reguar panelist, and Leroy Simms, chief Associated Press correspondent in Alabama. Charlie Davis, WABT-WAPI news editor, will be moderator.

This program will be rebroadcast at 1:30 p.m., Sunday, over WAPI.

Sparkman Defends Move For Abolishing Macon

Post Herald Birm Ala P.2
Mon. 1-6-58

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5—(AP)—Sen. John Sparkman (D., Ala.) today defended Alabama's recent action toward abolishing Macon County where Negroes outnumber whites more than seven to one.

Sparkman said each state has the right to determine its own internal affairs. He added that Alabama has been redistricted "perhaps two dozen times" since it became a state.

Appearing on a television program the Alabama Democrat said he thought the action by his state's electorate had "no connection" with Southeast Asia's interest in race problems.

Asked how he felt this action by his state would be by the rest of the world, Sparkman said "I don't know that the world will even be interested in that."

Last month Alabama voters approved a constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to abolish Macon County. Advocates of the measure said it was necessary to prevent Negro control of the county government in view of Federal civil rights legislation to use national authority to guarantee voting rights.

Author of the amendment was State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr., executive secretary of the Alabama Association of Citizens Councils, a pro-segregation group.

Sparkman also called for an immediate East-West disarmament conference on the foreign minister level similar to last year's inconclusive London talks.

Sparkman disclosed that he and Sen. Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) had proposed to President Eisenhower a plan for a demilitarized zone from the Oder to the Rhine Rivers in Central Europe which would include Soviet withdrawal from her European satellites.

Sparkman predicted that the now-secret Gaither report on the U. S. military situation would be be made public.

He said his opponent in the 1952 vice presidential election, Vice President Nixon, has "grown with the job." However said Sparkman, "anyone would."

MACON COUNTY ABOLITION COMMISSION

Macon Abolition Unit To Study More Data Before Next Move

Advertiser Montgomery, Ala.
Fri. 1-17-58

By BOB INGRAM

The Macon County Abolition Commission agreed here yesterday to secure additional data before deciding whether to abolish the county or merely reduce its size.

This decision was reached after the 17-member commission had discussed at length the possibility of reducing Macon rather than abolishing it entirely.

Chief supporter of the reducing plan was Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery, who insisted such a step would "greatly minimize the problems" of the committee.

"If you abolish the county Tuskegee will become a ghost town," Dawkins warned. "And I don't want to see that happen unless we have to do it."

By preserving the county, he continued, the courthouse would remain as well as all the public officials and their employes.

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, sponsor of the amendment which created the committee and now its chairman, did not oppose Dawkins' plan but he warned the members against "just putting off the funeral."

But Dawkins countered with the observation that the passage of the abolition amendment was in fact a "threat over the heads" of the Macon County Negroes, who outnumber whites seven to one.

"The day a Negro is elected to an office in Macon, then at the next session of Legislature the county can be abolished," Dawkins said.

As a result, Dawkins continued, the threat of abolition would deter Negroes from trying to "take over the county" by an aggressive voter registration campaign.

Following yesterday's regular meeting the various subcommittees met briefly to decide the courses of action they will follow.

Rep. Charles Adams of Alexander City, chairman of the Census Subcommittee, reported that his group had decided not to recommend that a special census of Macon County be made in conjunction with the study.

He said the decision was reached because the subcommittee feared special influences now existing might make it difficult to make an accurate count."

Earlier, Sen. Engelhardt had warned that the Negro people of Macon County would probably not cooperate in such a census.

Instead of making a new census, Adams recommended that the committee use the 1950 federal census for its work.

The Judiciary Subcommittee, headed by Rep. Roberts Brown of Opelika, agreed to meet in Tuskegee Feb. 10, to discuss the abolition plan with Macon County officials and lawyers.

Macon Committee Cancels Meeting Set Next Monday

News-Piy
Tuskegee Ala.

Conflict with a scheduled subcommittee meeting has caused postponement of a meeting in Tuskegee of the Macon County Commission named by the Legislature to study possible abolition or partitioning of this county. The meeting had been scheduled for next Monday.

Thur. 2-6-58

The judiciary sub-committee, under the chairmanship of Rep. Roberts Brown, of Auburn, has scheduled a meeting here for Monday with members of the Macon County Bar Association to discuss legal angles of various proposals.

The Macon Bar Association some time ago went on record as opposing abolition of the county "at this time."

Chairman Sam Englehardt, chairman of the Commission, said no date had been set for meeting of the full commission here.

Its next meeting, he said, will be held with Elmore County citizens at Reeltown on Feb. 20.

In a meeting of the Commission at Montgomery Wednesday at which the postponement of the meeting here was announced the group heard brief reports from sub-committee chairmen.

MONTGOMERY, Feb. 5 (U.P.)—The Macon County Study Committee cancelled a pubic hearing on the feasibility of abolishing the Negro-dominated area next Monday because of a schedule conflict.

The committee members decided to postpone the Macon County hearing because the group's judiciary subcommittee plans a meeting at Tuskegee the same day.

Similar hearings are scheduled in the five counties surrounding Macon—Tallapoosa County, eFb. 20, Reeltown; Montgomery County, Montgomery, Feb. 27; Bullock County, March 6, Union Springs; Elmore County, March 12, Wetumka; and Lee County, March 20, Opelika.

Macon Group To Hear Negro

The Macon County Abolition Committee agreed yesterday to hear from a Tuskegee Negro leader at a committee meeting here Friday.

But the committee notified Charles G. Gomillion that it "reserves the right to limit the time allotted to any individual." Gomillion is president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization. He also is a faculty member at Tuskegee Institute.

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County, the committee chairman, also said he interprets the invitation to apply to Gomillion alone and not to a group of witnesses representing his organization.

Montgomery Ala.

Gomillion asked the committee to hear a statement in which he would "present the opinion and desires of many Macon County citizens."

Tues. 2-11-58

Engelhardt and the other committee members were scheduled to start a series of public hearings at Tuskegee today, but it was called off. Other hearings will be held later in the counties which would absorb Macon's population if the county is abolished.

The committee was created under a recent adopted constitutional amendment empowering the Legislature to abolish the county as a means of preventing Negroes from gaining political control. They outnumber white residents there nearly 7-1.

Gomillion Says Ultimate TCA Objective Includes Integration Of Public Schools

By BOB INGRAM

The president of the all-Negro Tuskegee Civic Assn. admitted here yesterday that one of the "ultimate objectives" of his organization was the integration of public schools, yet no effort was being made in that direction at the present time.

C. G. Gomillion made the statement in testifying before the Macon County Gomillion commission, a legislative committee which is investigating the feasibility of abolishing Macon to prevent Negroes from gaining political control.

Gomillion, spokesman for the Negro group in Tuskegee and a member of the faculty at Tuskegee Institute, read a prepared statement to the commission and then for 30 minutes answered a barrage of questions—some of them loaded—from commission members.

Through it all Gomillion conducted himself well, adroitly evading several key questions.

In his prepared statement, Gomillion said the TCA was opposed to the abolition of Macon County or any rearranging of its present boundaries.

"There is no good reason why white and Negro citizens in Macon County cannot develop a community which would be a model of democratic living," Gomillion said. It later developed during the interrogation that Gomillion's definition of "democratic living" included the mixing of the races in public schools.

Gomillion also insisted there was no evidence that Negroes have tried to take over the government of Macon County.

"The record will show that there is no evidence to substantiate such charges," Gomillion said. "Today, there is not a single Negro holding an elective governmental office in Macon County, and there are more than 100 such offices in the county. Only once in 30 years has a Negro run for public office. Does that suggest that Negroes are trying to take over the government?"

The questions fired at Gomillion hit on a variety of subjects, ranging from the TCA's role in the boycott of white merchants to the teachings of Booker T. Washington.

Some of the questions, and his answers, included:

Q. Why are you opposed to abolition?

A. "We feel very strongly that we in Macon County and elsewhere in the state ought to be concerned about building and developing rather than reducing or destroying."

Q. Aren't you afraid that the TCA - sponsored boycott might jeopardize the $350,000 appropriation made by the state to the Institute?

A. I do not concede that the boycott, as you call it, is sponsored by the TCA. It has just been a case of citizens acting as citizens in an individual movement. As to the state appropriation, I don't know anything about that.

Q. Do you feel the TCA boycott has in any way helped the situation in Tuskegee?

A. "I think you are wrong about that. The TCA didn't instigate what you call the boycott. The record won't show that the TCA promoted it. I am sure there is nothing I could say to lead you to believe that I didn't have anything personally to do with what you call the boycott. It was an individual action, but it has helped Negro businesses. They are developing a lot more rapidly than they would have otherwise."

Q. Does the TCA think the boycott has helped the relations between the races?

A. "The TCA has never agreed it was a boycott, it was just a transfer of trade, an individual decision. The decision was made after the Negro people had been thrown out of the city. Their feelings were hurt, and I am sure the whites were hurt too. You might say there have been hurt feelings on both sides."

Q. Since you are boycotting the merchants, do you also intend to boycott the ballot boxes in Tuskegee on election day?

A. "No, I don't think there is much connection there. I am of the opinion the Negro voters will not boycott the ballot boxes."

Q. Are your members instructed to vote in a bloc?

A. "No, they are not instructed to vote in a bloc. We examine the candidates and office holders as best as we can, and then the individual decides on who they think might be the best candidates."

Q. What are the aims of the TCA?

A. "Civic education, voting and the improvement of relations between the races."

Q. Is not integration one of your goals?

A. "At the present time we recognize the Supreme Court decision as the law of the land, but no such effort is being carried on by us at the present time."

Q. You did not mention race-mixing in schools as one of TCA's objectives. Is it not one of them?

A. "Our goal is to strive for a democratic living."

Q. And democratic living includes race-mixing in schools?

A. "Yes, that is one of the ultimate objectives."

NEGRO LEADER DENIES PLOT FOR SUPREMACY

Pleads For Preservation Of Macon County

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 14. —(AP)—While conceding that integrated schools are the "ultimate objective," a Tuskegee Negro leader denied Friday that his group is seeking political supremacy in Macon County.

President Charles G. Gomillion of the Tuskegee Civil Association made the observation while testifying before a legislative committee studying the possibility of abolishing Macon County.

In a prepared statement, the TCA spokesman denied claims by some white leaders that Negroes are "trying to take over the government" or damage the well-being of white merchants at Tuskegee, the county seat.

Negroes outnumber whites in Macon County nearly 7-1, but the white residents hold a 2-1 voting advantage.

State Senator Sam Engelhardt of Macon, the committee chairman, spearheaded the move to abolish Macon County or reduce its size in order to prevent Negroes from gaining political control.

He said he feared Negroes would use the new Federal Civil Rights Law to register enough of their race to control elections in the county.

In response to a question from the committee, Gomillion said neither he as president nor the TCA has requested the Civil Rights Commission to investigate Negro voting complaints in Macon County.

The Negro leader also said there is no "bloc voting" by members of his race in local elections, but that meetings are held to discuss candidates and decide on those best qualified to hold office.

Gomillion appealed to the committee to recommend that the present boundaries of Macon County "be left as they are."

"There is no good reason why white and Negro citizens in Macon cannot develop a community which would be a model of democratic living," he said. "The citizens can learn to recognize and respect the rights of one another.

Under a constitutional amendment ratified by the voters in December, the Legislature was given the authority to abolish Macon County outright or revise its boundaries if the lawmakers feel it would be wise.

Oppose Plan To Abolish Negro County In Georgia

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The abolition of Macon county, in order to maintain white supremacy, has little chance of occurring if four of the five surrounding counties follow through on their present thinking.

Their thinking is that if Macon is split up among the five counties, the present Negro-white ratio in each of the counties would be drastically changed.

The counties resisting the proposed division are Tallapoosa, Bullock, Elemore, Lee and Montgomery. In Macon county, Negroes outnumber whites 7-1.

Elemore county figures it would get 90 percent of the qualified Negro voters in Macon county in the proposed division. It already has a Negro population of 11,451 against 20,198 whites, but with the division, it would receive 4,000 Negroes and only 250 whites.

DOMINATE SCHOOL SYSTEM

Tallapoosa and Bullock counties both see a danger in their school systems being dominated by Negroes.

In Bullock, where Negroes outnumber whites 4-1, there are currently 3,200 Negro pupils and only 800 whites in the county-city school system. Bullock has 31 Negro schools to only three white schools.

In Tallapoosa, while the current white student population of 2,700 exceeds the Negro by 500, county officials repirt that Negro pupils are increasing "at an alarming rate." Four years ago, the Negro student population numbered 1,400.

In Montgomery county, both city and county officials are opposed to abolition, unless nothing else can be done to maintain white supremacy.

The pressure for the splitting up Macon county, however, is coming from the Montgomery White Citizens council chapter, which is urging abolition "whenever and wherever Alabama officials are forced to register unqualified colored voters to such an extent that they threaten to out-vote whites.

The council proposes to stretch a county from Dothan to Guntersville, or Mobile to Muscle Shoals; or combine a county "now in the Black Belt," territories, one in the northern part and one in the central southern part of the state.

Macon Quiz Set For Phenix City

A public hearing on the proposed abolition of Macon County is scheduled Thursday at Phenix City beginning at 10:30 a.m.

It is the first in a series of hearings arranged by a committee of legislators which was created to study the problems that would be caused by doing away with Macon County.

A constitutional amendment was ratified by the voters last December giving the Legislature authority to abolish the county or change its boundaries to preserve white political supremacy.

Negroes outnumber whites in the county by nearly 7-1 although whites maintain a 2-1 advantage at the polls.

Other Counties Don't Want Tuskegee Folk

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The abolition of Macon county, in order to maintain white supremacy, has little chance of occurring if four of the five surrounding counties follow through on their present thinking.

Their thinking is that if Macon is split up among the five counties, the present Negro-white ratio in each of these counties would be drastically changed.

The counties resisting the proposed division are Tallapoosa, Bullock, Elemore, Lee and Montgomery. In Macon county, Negroes outnumber whites 7-1.

FEAR SCHOOL DOMINATION

Tallapoosa and Bullock counties both see a danger in their school systems being dominated by Negroes.

In Bullock, where Negroes outnumber whites 4-1, there are currently 3,200 Negro pupils and only 800 whites in the county-city school system. Bullock has 31 Negro schools to only three white schools.

In Tallapoosa, while the current white student population of 2,700 exceeds the Negro by 500, county officials report that Negro pupils are increasing "at an alarming rate." Four years ago, the Negro student population numbered 1,400.

WANT "SOMETHING ELSE"

In Montgomery county, both city and county officials are opposed to abolition, unless nothing else can be done to maintain white supremacy. The pressure for the splitting up Macon county, however, is coming from the Montgomery White Citizens council chapter, which is urging abolition "whenever and wherever Alabama officials are forced to register unqualified colored voters to such an extent that they threaten to out-vote whites.

The council proposes to stretch a county from Dothan to Guntersville, or Mobile to Muscle Shoals; or combine a county "now in the Black Belt," and a county on Sandy Mountain, "into one new county with two separate territories, one in the northern part and one in the central southern part of the state."

Oppose Plan To Abolish Negro County In Georgia

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (ANP) — The abolition of Macon county, in order to maintain white supremacy, has little chance of occurring if four of the five surrounding counties follow through on their present thinking.

Their thinking is that if Macon is split up among the five counties, the present Negro-white ratio in each of the counties would be drastically changed.

The counties resisting the proposed division are Tallapoosa, Bullock, Elemore, Lee and Montgomery. In Macon county, Negroes outnumber whites 7-1.

Elemore county figures it would get 90 percent of the qualified Negro voters in Macon county in the proposed division. It already has a Negro population of 11,451 against 20,198 whites, but with the division, it would receive 4,000 Negroes and only 250 whites.

MACON GROUP RECESS

Engelhardt Is Confident Of Success

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 7. (UP)— The Macon County Study Committee recessed Monday until June 12 and white supremacist Sam Engelhardt predicted Macon would be abolished or all Negroes "be moved out."

Chairman Engelhardt of Shorter and 10 members of the study group met for less than an hour Monday morning and voted unanimously to recess until the middle of June.

"We're proceeding right on schedule," Senator Engelhardt said. "We've held hearings in the counties (surrounding Macon) and we have the sentiment . . . and how people feel on record. The next thing to do is get recommendations from the subcommittees and then go to work."

Negroes outnumber whites seven-to-one in Macon County located in the heart of the state's agriculturally-rich Black Belt.

Macon Abolition Group To Meet

PHENIX CITY, April 2 (U.P.)— The Macon committee meets here Friday to test sentiment of Russell Countians towards abolishing the county.

The Central Alabama territory is famed for its rich farmland and Tuskegee Institute.

The abolition committee decided to hold a public hearing here last week although a bill proposing to erase the county in last Summer's Legislature did not include Russell County as one which would absorb Macon. The bill passed the Senate, but was defeated in the House.

Public hearings have been held in Bullock, Elmore, Montgomery, Tallapoosa and Lee Counties.

Macon Group Plans Varied

The Judiciary subcommittee of the Macon County Abolition Committee announced Monday it would present several alternate plans to abolition during a meeting of the full commission here in June.

During a short meeting in the Capitol Monday morning, attorney members of the subcommittee said they received several alternate plans during a recent meeting with city and county officials at Tuskegee.

The meeting in Tuskegee, held March 27, produced among others, a proposal for establishment of a unit system of voting patterned after Georgia's voting laws.

The Macon committee will make its final recommendation to the 1959 Legislature.

A constitutional amendment approved by Alabama voters last Dec. 17 authorized the Legislature to abolish Macon County if it feels that action is warranted.

Negroes in Macon outnumber white residents 7-1, although white voters hold an 2-1 edge at the polls.

Counties Oppose Alabama Merger

Montgomery, Ala. (ANP) — The abolition of Macon County, in order to maintain white supremacy, has little chance of occurring if four of the five surrounding counties follow through on their present thinking.

abolished or all Negroes "be moved out."

Chairman Engelhardt, of Shorter, and 10 members of the study group met for less than an hour this morning and voted unanimously to recess until the middle of June so the members could do some "politicking" and "deep thinking."

Negroes outnumber whites seven-to-one in Macon County. Public hearings have been held in every county surrounding Macon.

Engelhardt said he believed abolishing the county or "moving all the Negroes out of there" was the only way to maintain white supremacy. At the same time, he said the committee would have "several alternatives and more than one plan for solving the problem" in its recommendations to the Legislature, which will be drawn up by October. "If we can't do it by then, we ought to be shot," Engelhardt said.

The committee took no action but generally agreed that a meeting on the question in Tuskegee, the county seat of Macon, would not be advisable. Several agreed "it would do more harm than good" and "probably 2000 or 3000 Negroes would show up and we'd have to have the Highway Patrol."

In recent hearings only Montgomery County appeared anxious to have Macon County erased and that sentiment was expressed solely by the Montgomery Chapter of the Alabama Association of White Citizens Councils.

Public hearings at Reeltown in Tallapoosa County, Union Springs in Bullock County, Wetumpka in Elmore County and Opelika in Lee County pointed up the fact that the surrounding counties are afraid of what might happen to their white-Negro ratio should Macon be wiped out.

Russell Men Oppose Macon Annex

Fri-4-4-58

By DON McKEE
Advertiser State Editor

PHENIX CITY — Citizens of Russell County, where Negroes already outnumber whites, are opposed to absorbing any territory under a proposed abolition of adjoining Macon County to prevent Negro political control, a legislative study committee was told here Thursday.

Otis W. Taff, chairman of the Russell County Commissioners' Court, told the committee that the persons to whom he had talked "were definitely opposed" to annexing part of Macon where the population is 87 per cent Negro.

Commissioner M. M. Dudley declared that "it would be detrimental to us to maintain roads" in the area proposed for annexation. "We're already hurt bad enough," he said.

Indications are that the study committee will vote in a Monday meeting in Montgomery to recess until the middle of June, with a "wait-and-see" policy to be followed. Thursday's meeting was the last of a series in six counties involved in the proposed abolition. Meetings have been held previously in Montgomery, Elmore, Talapoosa, Bullock and Lee.

It was further indicated after the meeting that the committee may recommend in its October report that Macon be left intact, with action toward shrinking or abolishing the county to be taken only when an immediate emergency arises and as a last resort.

According to latest estimates, Negroes outnumber white persons in Russell by 53 to 47 per cent. A 1950 census showed 19,360 white to 21,000 Negroes.

Ed Seymour, clerk of the commissioners' court, told the committee that he voted against an amendment giving the Legislature authority to abolish Macon County, "and I feel like if Russell County citizens had had any idea of what it did, they would have voted against it."

Seymour attacked the abolition proposal. He said, "I don't believe you can solve any problem by covering it up. Every county adjoining Macon is out of balance (in racial population proportion) and I don't think it's the solution."

4-1-58

Russell is "strained to the breaking point" on road building and maintenance, the clerk said.

"If you can't support yourself, I don't think you're in a position to help anybody else," he said.

State Rep. Homer Cornett of Phenix City told the group that at the time the amendment was voted on, "Russell County didn't think of taking any of Macon."

H. B. Hamner, superintendent of education, said "If any part of Macon were annexed (by Russell), practically all we would get would be colored people."

He said the Negro school at Hurtsboro would have to shoulder the added burden of the annexed students and the school is "already overtaxed."

Only one man at the meeting spoke out in favor of Russell annexing part of Macon. He was E. W. Calhoun of Fort Mitchell, located in eastern Russell County near the Georgia line.

Calhoun, chairman of the Russell County Citizens Council, called for immediate abolition of Macon and said he thought his county "would be willing to go part of the way" in helping to do so.

"If the Legislature and the people of Alabama have seen the need for it, I think we ought to go ahead and do it (abolish Macon)," Calhoun said. "If it needs to be done at all, it needs to be done now."

Present in the county courtroom here were three Negro men. None accepted an invitation from Sen. Joe Smith to speak on the abolition proposal.

Committee Vice Chairman James Hall of Montgomery presided in the absence of Chairman Sam Englhardt, senator from Macon and Bullock, who proposed the county's abolition.

Justice Department Cracks Down On Ala. Vote Denials In Tuskegee

Rogers files suit in U.S. Court

Baltimore, Md.
Dat. 2-14-59

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—Attorney General William P. Rogers Friday announced the filing of a suit under the 1957 Civil Rights Act to enjoin the Macon County, Ala., Board of Registrars from practicing racial discrimination against colored applicants for registration to vote.

The complaint, filed in the Federal District Court at Montgomery, Ala., asks the court to declare illegal the practice of segregation of the registration office in the county and enjoin the maintenance of segregated facilities as well as other practices alleged to be discrimination and adopted to prevent colored persons from registering.

Named as defendants in the complaint are the Board of Registrars of Macon County and Grady Rogers and E. P. Livingston, registrars.

THE COMPLAINT notes that in 1958, white citizens of voting age in Macon County, numbered about 3100 and the colored citizens of voting age numbered about 14,000.

As of last Dec. 1, the complaint states, white citizens registered to vote in Macon County numbered about 3016, or about 97 per cent of the white population of voting age, and the colored citizens registered to vote numbered about 1110, or about 8 per cent of the colored population of voting age.

The disparity between the percentages of white and colored citizens of voting age registered to vote in Macon County, the complaint states, has been brought about and is being perpetuated by "racially discriminatory acts" of the defendants.

ACCORDING TO THE complaint, such acts and practices include:

Afro-American
Dat. 2-14-59

1. The maintenance of separate, discriminatory registration facilities for colored citizens.

2. The failure and refusal to convene and fuction as a board of registrars in order to avoid receiving applications to register to vote from colored citizens.

3. The maintenance of irregular and unreasonable hours and use of other evasive schemes to avoid receiving and processing applications to register from colored citizens.

4. The application of different and more stringent registration standards to colored applicants than to whites.

5. The failure to register qualified colored applicants.

THE COMPLAINT alleges that the Board of Registrars has followed the practice, usage and custom of maintaining in the Macon County Courthouse a segregated registration office for colored applicants, and has required all colored applicants to use the segregated office.

The complaint states that this practice, custom and usage has been followed by the registration board for a long period of time and by Rogers and Livingston ever since they became members of the board.

The defendants, it is also charged, have followed arbitrary and discriminatory practices between colored and white applicants, in the operation of registration facilities, including but not limited to the following:

1. Unreasonably delaying the admittance of colored persons but not whites to the registration office.

2. Holding irregular and unreasonable hours for receiving applications of colored persons.

3. Refusing to receive applications of colored persons at normal business hours.

4. Failing to convene the board at the times announced.

5. Closing the registration office provided for colored applicants while registering white applicants elsewhere.

6. Failing to reveal the hours at which applicants of colored persons would be received.

7. Unreasonably prolonging the registration process in the case of colored persons who finally were admitted to the registration office.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY General W. Wilson White, who heads the Civil Rights Division in the Justice Department, said:

"This is the first case ever brought which challenges the segregation of registration facilities.

"It is the position of the Government that the Constitution and laws of the United States admit of no discrimination on account of race or color in any part of the election procedure.

"In our complaint we ask that such segregation, as well as the discrimination in the registration process which is alleged, be declared illegal and be permanently enjoined."

The complaint charges that the defendants have refused, because of race or color, to register many of the qualified colored citizens of Macon County, including:

DANIEL WEBSTER WYNN, a Ph.D. from Boston University; Fidelia Jo Anne Adams, who has a B.S. degree from Tuskegee Institute and is working for an M.S. degree in organic chemistry at that institution; Mrs. K. Eaton Scott, who has a B.S. degree from North Carolina College.

Leida Ruth Williams Davisson, who has a B.S. degree from Alabama State College and is now working for a Master's degree at Tuskegee Institute; Betty Alice Henderson, who has a B.S. degree from Miner (now District of Columbia) Teachers College; John W. Jackson Jr., who has a B.S. in architecture from Tuskegee Institute; Charles Edward Miller, who has a B.S. degree in Bsuiness Administration from West Virginia State College.

Doris Ezell Nearror, who has a B.S. degree in nursing education from Tuskegee Institute; Bettye J. Mindingall Wall, a high school graduate and a graduate nurse; Bettie B. Quinn, a high school graduate and a graduate nurse; Marie Williams, a high school graduate who has three and a half years toward a degree at Tuskegee Institute.

GEORGE C. BUSBY SR., a high school graduate who has attended Washington University College of Business Administration; Roberta A. Lightfoot, a high school graduate and a graduate nurse; Lena Hayden Johnson, a high school graduate; Estelle Johnson, a high school graduate; Artenisia Jones Junior, who has a B.S. degree from Tennessee State College and a graduate degree in Library Science from Atlanta University.

Llewellyn Wilbert Davis, who has an M.S. degree from Columbia University; Jordan Davis, who has an A.B. degree and a Bachelor of Divinity degree from Virginia Union University; Eugenia Cook Billes, who has an A.B. degree in education from Southern University, and Juanita H. Howard, a high school graduate.

MISS JUNIOR, Llewellyn W. Davis, Miss Billes and Miss Howard are persons who have not been mentioned in the Civil Rights Commission hearings in Montgomery in December, nor did they testify.

The allegation concerning their being refused registration is the result of independent complaints plus an FBI investigation, it was learned.

The complaint is signed by Assistant Attorney General White and Hartwell Davis, the United States Attorney at Montgomery.

Macon Committee Begins Study With Engelhardt As Chairman

Special to The News

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — With all members agreed that Macon County will be abolished only as a last resort, the legislative committee created to study the "Macon County problems" held its first meeting Monday of this week and unanimously elected Sam Eigelhardt as chairman. Sen. Englehardt was sponsor of the constitutionel amendment, approved by Alabama voters on Dec. 17, that makes possible abolition of the county.

The first meeting was devoted altogether to organization and the committee will begin its first exploratory work at its next meeting, to be held next Monday.

Already on record as favoring abolition only as a last resort, Sen. Engelhardt was one of the first to pledge thorough investigation of all possibilities of saving the county.

"We will explore every possibility of saving Macon County, or reducing it in size," Engelhardt said. "But having been given a mandate by the people on Dec. 17, if we find it necessary to abolish Macon County then it will be done."

Reps. Joe Dawkins, of Montgomery, and Charles Adams, of Alexander City, both observed that Macon should be abolished only if there is no alternative.

"I think we all want to preserve the county if it is humanly possible," Dawkins said. The committee members were unanimous in their agreement.

Other than the election of Engelhardt as chairman and Rep. H. James Hall of Montgomery as vice chairman, the commission transacted little other business Monday.

Part of the morning was spent in executive session, which Engelhardt suggested so that members could "thrash out" any problems confronting them.

Later Engelhardt appointed a five-man steering committee to draw up an agenda which will be presented at the meeting next Monday.

Named to the committee were Sen. Vaughan Hill Robison, of Montgomery, chairman; Reps. Adams, Hardaway Johnson, of Elmore, D. W. Ward, of Lee, and M. B. McLendon, of Bullock. Engelhardt will serve as ex-officio chairman of this group.

Vote Officials Deny Negro Race Bias

U. S. Agency May Be Asked To Probe Alabama Situation

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 8 (AP)—Disclosure that Negroes may ask the Civil Rights Commission to investigate conditions here brought a denial of discrimination today from voter registration officials.

A Negro leader, Rufus Lewis, said that while no final decision has been made, "we certainly have it in mind" to ask the new federal agency to look into complaints that Negroes have difficulty getting registered.

Lewis, chairman of the eRgistration for Voting Committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., has accused the Montgomery County Board of Registrars of using "many tactics to slow up" Negro registration.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, board chairman, denied it emphatically. She said white and Negro applicants are treated alike.

Lewis said Negroes have to wait at least 10 days, sometimes a month to learn whether they have been accepted as voters. He said the board could just as easily notify them the same day they apply.

Mrs. Willis countered with the statement that all applicants white and Negro, are notified by mail and that it takes from 10 days to three weeks, depending on how many there are.

The Negro leader also complained that registration officials take as few Negro applicants at a time as possible to slow the procedure.

But the board chairman said, "Lots of times we have white people waiting in line, too."

The Improvement Association is the organization formed here two years ago to support the long mass Negro boycott of segregated city buses. Since city and state bus segregation laws have been knocked down, the MIA has devoted its efforts to other matters, including voting

Counting on persuasion—

Councils won't defy civil rights probe

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 11 —(AP)—A White Citizens spokesman says the leaders of his organization are counting on "persuasion rather than defiance" to resist any civil rights investigations in Alabama.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt disclosed today that council officers have agreed to "lay it on the line" if subpoenaed by the newly created Federal Civil Rights Commission.

Engelhardt, executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils, said the segregationist leaders have decided in council conferences to "try to show the commission that breaking down the voting patterns by letting unqualified voters take over will only cause trouble."

The commission was established under the Civil Rights Law enacted by Congress last year with power to investigate all phases of civil rights even though the law itself is limited to enforcing voting rights.

No hearings yet

NO SCHEDULE of hearings has been announced, but the commission almost certainly will be asked to look into Negro voting complaints in the South and probably in Alabama.

A Montgomery Negro leader, Rufus Lewis, said earlier this week that while no decision has been made, "we certainly have it in mind" to ask the commission to investigate charges of discrimination against prospective Negro voters here.

Macon County, for many years a center of racial tension because of the preponderance of Negroes there, is another area where the federal investigators may decide to take a look.

Macon is Engelhardt's home and one of the two counties he represents in the Senate.

Negro voting has long been a touchy issue in Macon County and in Tuskegee, the county seat and location of the famed Negro college, Tuskegee Institute. Although Negroes outnumber white residents in the county nearly 7 to 1 white voters have a 2 to 1 edge at the polls.

Recently, Engelhardt succeeded in virtually eliminating Negro voting in Tuskegee by rearranging the two boundaries to exclude all predominantly Negro residential areas from the city limits.

Abolishes county

LATER, a constitutional amendment sponsored by Engelhardt was ratified by Alabama voters to empower the Legislature to abolish Macon County if necessary to keep Negroes from gaining political control.

Other counties have a Negro voting problem, too, but Macon and Montgomery have received most attention in recent months. The Montgomery Improvement Assn., a Negro organization, estimates that only about 50,000 of the more than 800,000 registered voters in Alabama are Negroes.

Committees picked—

Macon study group to back supremacy

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 11 —(AP)—Four subcommittees were set up Friday by the legislative committee considering the abolition of Macon County.

Appointed chairmen of the subcommittees were: Finance and tax, Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery; boundaries, Rep. M. B. McLendon, Bullock; census, Rep. Charles Adams, Tallapoosa, and judiciary, Rep. Roberts Brown, Lee.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt, chairman of the abolition committee, was also named chairman of a coordinate group composed of the chairmen of the subcommittees.

ALSO IN FRIDAY'S meeting, the 17-man committee voted to uphold "the way of life that is truly Alabamian."

The committee was created by Amendment No. 18, approved in the Dec. 17 referendum election.

Engelhardt, executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils, has expressed fear that the new civil rights law would enable Negroes to gain the upper hand at the polls in the county where white residents are outnumbered nearly 7-1. Currently, the whites have a 2-1 voting edge.

If necessary to maintain white supremacy, the committee agreed to go along with abolition of the county. This, the statement of policy said, was in accordance with "the will and determination of the majority of the citizens of Alabama to preserve our Southern way of life and the right of the state of Alabama to govern itself. . . ."

HOWEVER, abolition would come only as a last resort, the group said.

"We will avail ourselves of expert information and advice from those qualified," the statement said. "Consideration will be given to ways and means of altering, rearranging and reducing the area of Macon County."

The regional supervisor of the Bureau of the Census, Thomas W. McWhirter of Atlanta, discussed with the committee what information his agency would be able to provide.

If a special census were held in Macon County, he said, it would have to be financed with state or local funds and would have to by authorized by Washington.

High Cost of Segregation

We offer, free of charge, the following suggestion as a subject for a doctoral thesis: The High Cost of Segregation in the South. Certain elements of this financial calculation are obvious: a double school system; separate toilets, restaurants and bars in transport terminals (an official of Southeastern Greyhound Lines notes that it costs 50 per cent more to build terminals with segregated facilities); separate entrances to movie houses; separate washrooms, cafeterias, drinking fountains in factories, etc., etc. But there are other costs no less great because they are less obvious. The Wall Street Journal tells of the purchase by Scripto, Inc., pen manufacturers, of forty acres in an Atlanta, Georgia, industrial zone for plant expansion. Then whites in a nearby residential area objected to the project because large numbers of Negro employees would have to pass through their streets to and from work. Result: litigation costs, time lost, a re-zoning of the district to prevent the plant expansion, and a resale of the forty acres by Scripto at a $14,000 cash loss. Or take the case of a development board which finally persuaded a clothing manufacturer to settle in a small Georgia town. The project meant 200 jobs and an annual payroll of a half-million dollars. Then the town discovered the manufacturer intended to hire Negroes exclusively. Result: the town is still pure white, and the factory is elsewhere.

How many manufacturers are staying out of the South because of race tensions? W. Cooper Green, vice president of Alabama Power Company, told the Wall Street Journal: "We've been working with seventy-five prospects. If any of them are holding back on the integration-segregation issue, I don't think they'd tell us. If the news ever leaked out, it would be very bad publicity for them in the South, where they have customers."

We are reminded that the voters of Alabama, by popular referendum, recently voted in favor of gerrymandering out of existence Macon County, home of Tuskegee Institute. The idea is to destroy the concentrated political strength of Macon County's Negroes, who outnumber the whites (see City Planning, Dixie Style by Dora Byron, The Nation, October 12). How much did the state referendum cost? How much is it going to cost the white businessmen of Tuskegee and surrounding areas, whose shops are now being boycotted in protest by Negroes? As a Tuskegee Negro put it, "If they don't want our vote, why should they have our money?"

Politicking Drops To Low Ebb In Uncertain County Of Macon

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 4 (Special)—Political activity is at a low ebb in Macon County as voters face an uncertain future in the hands of a legislative committee which could decide to abolish the county to avoid Negro control.

The single state House of Representative seat is the only post which has stirred more than one candidate to qualify since the county Democratic Executive Committee meeting Monday.

In the race for the House are David C. Jenkins, Tuskegee justice of the peace; James M. Rea, Notasulga, University of Alabama law student, and J. G. Rodgers, of near Tuskegee, a member of the county board of registrars.

Incumbent J. J. Rodgers of Tuskegee has not qualified for re-election.

Sheriff Preston Hornsby has qualified for election to a fourth term. No opposing candidate has qualified, but other contenders are expected to get in this race.

Seeking re-election to the Board of Revenue are C. A. Huddleston of District 1 and C. Thompson of District 3, the only two seats up for election under the staggered term system. No one has qualified to oppose the incumbents.

Board of education chairman A. B. Hope, Notasulga, has qualified for another term.

No one has officially entered the race for probate judge, although incumbent William Varner is expected to run again.

Qualifying for the Democratic Executive Committee were W. C. Lumpkin, John M. Davis, Wyatt Godfrey, B. B. Spratlin Jr., Madison Davis, H. E. Noble Jr., Robert Carr, Claude Segrest, and Mrs. Louis Carr.

Macon County Unit Meets Here Today

The Macon County Abolition Commission meets here at 10:30 a.m. today in its final meeting before starting a series of hearings in surrounding counties.

The commission, made up of 17 legislators, is seeking ways of preventing the Negro majority in Macon County from gaining political control. A constitutional amendment approved in December would permit the abolition of the county, if such a step is necessary.

Next Monday the commission will hold a hearing at the court house in Tuskegee, and in the following weeks similar hearings will be held in the surrounding counties.

Macon Group Cancels Meet At Tuskegee

A public hearing of the Macon Abolition Commission in Tuskegee next Monday was cancelled yesterday due to a conflict in subcommittee schedules.

No new date was set for the hearing.

The commission, in session here yesterday, decided to cancel the Tuskegee hearing because the group's judiciary subcommittee has a meeting scheduled there the same day.

The Tuskegee hearing was to have been the first in a series of similar meetings in the five counties which adjoin Macon. These counties would inherit parts of Macon in the event it was abolished.

The session yesterday was devoted entirely to brief reports from subcommittee chairmen.

Montgomery Rep. H. James Hall, directing the Boundary Subcommittee, presented data to the group showing the boundary lines of school districts, voting precincts and road districts. This material was requested by the commission in the event an effort is made to re-arrange eixsting boundaries.

Rep. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa, head of the Census Subcommittee, also made a report on the progress of his group. On Adams' suggestion, the Commission voted to send copies of the minutes of each meeting to the officials of the counties which might be affected by the proposed abolition.

Macon Group To Hear Negro

The Macon County Abolition Committee agreed yesterday to hear from a Tuskegee Negro leader at a committee meeting here Friday.

But the committee notified Charles G. Gomillion that it "reserves the right to limit the time allotted to any individual." Gomillion is president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization. He also is a faculty member at Tuskegee Institute.

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County, the committee chairman, also said he interprets the invitation to apply to Gomillion alone and not to a group of witnesses representing his organization.

Gomillion asked the committee to hear a statement in which he would "present the opinion and desires of many Macon County citizens."

Engelhardt and the other committee members were scheduled to start a series of public hearings at Tuskegee today, but it was called off. Other hearings will be held later in the counties which would absorb Macon's population if the county is abolished.

The committee was created under a recent adopted constitutional amendment empowering the Legislature to abolish the county as a means of preventing Negroes from gaining political control. They outnumber white residents there nearly 7-1.

TUSKEGEE BOYCOTT UNDER ADVISEMENT

Two-Day Injunction Hearing Is Concluded

JUDGE IS IN 'NO RUSH'

By The Associated Press

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 22.— State and defense attorneys concluded a two-day hearing on Atty. Gen. John Patterson's request for a permanent injunction against a Negro organization accused of directing a boycott against white merchants in Tuskegee.

Circuit Judge Will O. Walton took the matter under advisement. He announced he will be in "no particular rush" to hand down a ruling because of the importance and serious nature of the issues.

Mr. Patterson abruptly became a witness at his own hearing and was questioned about his motive in prosecuting Negroes for boycotting white merchants.

Patterson Asked Purpose

The attorney general was called as a witness by defense attorneys after he rested his own case in an effort to get a permanent injunction against a Negro organization he has accused of leading the boycott.

He is asking the injunction to prohibit members and followers of the Tuskegee Civic Association from conducting a boycott and using threats, coercion or intimidation to support it.

Negro attorney Arthur Shores put Mr. Patterson on the stand to ask him about his purpose in bringing the injunction suit against the Negro organization. Shores mentioned also that the attorney general previously had won a court order enjoining the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from doing business in Alabama.

The Negro lawyer tried to ask Mr. Patterson if he ever instituted court action on behalf of Negroes who had complained they were unable to register as voters.

Hasn't Fought KKK

The attorney general replied that "I carry out the duties of my office to the best of my ability without regard to race, creed or color." He said there was no cause for the attorney general to intervene on behalf of prospective voters because the law gives them the right of appeal through the courts.

Mr. Patterson acknowledged in response to another question that he hasn't tried to get a court order to outlaw the Ku Klux Klan as he did the NAACP. He said for the past two years he has been investigating Klan activities and prosecutions will be instituted at any time his office can get the necessary evidence.

TCA President Charles G. Golmillion was recalled as a defense witness. He said the civic association never at any time advocated or supported "what might be interpreted as a boycott."

Negroes in and near Tuskegee have refused to patronize white merchants since the Alabama Legislature passed a law last summer virtually eliminating Negro voting in Tuskegee. This was accomplished by changing the city limits to put most Negroes out of the city.

Mr. Patterson argued the state had presented sufficient evidence to show that an unlawful boycott has been in force and that the TCA took an active part in supporting it.

'Bama Fails To Outlaw 'Skegee Plan

Pittsburgh Courier Press Service

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Super-ambitious Alabama Attorney General John Patterson started out with the intention of firing "big guns" at the Tuskegee Civic Association in seeking a permanent injunction against the TCA, but Patterson wound up, instead, firing cap pistols and even they, almost backfired on him.

Handpicked Birmingham Negro law act, Arthur D. Shores, ably backed by Attorney Gray of Montgomery, not only pulled the sting from Patterson's barbs, but even maneuvered the Alabama Attorney General on to the witness stand where Mr. Shores grilled him mercilessly.

IN THE END after three days of hearings, Circuit Judge Will O. Walton took Mr. Patterson's permanent injunction plea "under advisement" and indicated that it will be several months before any final decision comes down.

PROBATE JUDGE, SHERIFF ENTRENCHED

Incumbents Likely To Retain Key Posts In Macon

This is ninth in a series of special political articles at the county level. Next will be Bullock County.

By STUART X. STEPHENSON
Advertiser Staff Writer

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 14—Key political offices in Macon County appear to be occupied by incumbents not likely to be beaten.

Specifically, Judge of Probate William Varner and Sheriff Preston Hornsby are not expected to be dislodged.

Still there is tumult abroad and it is not confined to the basketball arenas and football fields.

The rumor mill has Judge Bill Hare in line to oppose the veteran Judge Varner, but a lucrative law practice is being enjoyed by Hare and he may not drop this for the time necessary to make a race for the county's biggest political prize.

The Senate seat will go to Bullock County this time and the state's No. 1 segregation missile —Sam Engelhardt—has one of several political choices. Speculation here is that he will make the race for lieutenant governor instead of opposing the veteran J. J. Rodgers for the House seat. Rodgers will have opposition, in any respect. Auto dealer Joe Edwards is considered the best prospect to unseat Rodgers, if Engelhardt goes after the state berth.

James Noel Baker, Opelika attorney, who has been employed in the attorney general's office, will be a candidate for the third judgeship in the fifth judicial circuit composed of Lee, Chambers, Macon, Randolph and Tallapoosa counties. City Judge William Dickson, backed by the Opelika Bar Assn., has already announced for the third judgeship race.

Chairman E. C. Laslie, J. G. Dixon and Virgil Guthrie will continue on the board of revenue but Charles Huddleston and F. C. Thompson will have to run. To date there appeared to be no opposition for either.

Other vetean county employes will not have to campaign in the next election. Tax Collector J. H. Reynolds and H. E. Hendon, tax assessor, have a combined total of more than half a century of service with Macon County tax problems and both appear well entrenched.

County Solicitor Ed Reynolds and Circuit Clerk H. N. Watson are not expecting opposition in the forthcoming primary. Watson has been confined to the hospital in LaFayette since June, but is expected to be out and active before the heat is turned on the next political race.

Solicitor Tom Young has indicated he will again seek the fifth judicial circuit solicitorshp and no challenge has been made so far aganst him for this position.

Judges of the circuit are Albert Hooton, Dadeville and Will Walton, LaFayette. From candidates Dickinson and Baker will come the third member of this judiciary.

Macon County has about 3,500 qualified voters out of a population of an estimated 30,000.

MACON SUPPORTERS TO JOIN IN TWO WALLACE RALLIES

Macon County supporters of George Wallace in his race for governor this week were planning another out-of-town excursion Saturday to hear their candidate when he makes his second platform speech of the campaign. The address is scheduled for 3 p. m. Saturday at Troy, with Minnie Pearl, of Grand Ole Opry fame again on the program.

The Saturday trip will not be in the form of a "Votercade", such as made the trip to Ozark since not enough advance notice was given.

Wallace supporters here are planning another "Votercade" for Friday night, March 7, when Judge Wallace makes his television debut in the campaign at the Municipal Auditorium in Montgomery. This program will start at 7 p. m. and the TV section will be on the air from 7:30 to 8 p. m.

Politicking Drops To Low Ebb In Uncertain County Of Macon

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 19 (Special)—Political activity is at a low ebb in Macon County as voters face an uncertain future in the hands of a legislative committee which could decide to abolish the county to avoid Negro control.

The single state House of Representative seat is the only post which has stirred more than one candidate to qualify since the county Democratic Executive Committee meeting Monday.

In the race for the House are David C. Jenkins, Tuskegee justice of the peace; James M. Rea, Notasulga, University of Alabama law student, and J. G. Rodgers, of near Tuskegee, a member of the county board of registrars.

Incumbent J. J. Rodgers of Tuskegee has not qualified for re-election.

Sheriff Preston Hornsby has qualified for election to a fourth term. No opposing candidate has qualified, but other contenders are expected to get in this race.

Seeking re-election to the Board of Revenue are C. A. Huddleston of District 1 and C. Thompson of District 3, the only two seats up for election under the staggered term system. No one has qualified to oppose the incumbents.

Board of education chairman A. B. Hope, Notasulga, has qualified for another term.

No one has officially entered the race for probate judge, although incumbent William Varner is expected to run again.

Qualifying for the Democratic Executive Committee were W. C. Lumpkin, John M. Davis, Wyatt Godfrey, B. B. Spratlin Jr., Madison Davis, H. E. Noble Jr., Robert Carr, Claude Segrest, and Mrs. Louis Carr.

Heavily Negro-Populated Counties Led Macon County Division Voting

BY CLARKE STALLWORTH

The Alabama counties with the most Negro population cast the largest percentage of votes for Amendment No. 18 in the recent election.

The amendment was passed by a vote of 75,019 to 48,568. It authorizes a committee to be named by legislators from the counties surrounding Macon.

The committee has been formed, and State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon—the man who sponsored the amendment—was elected chairman of the committee.

The committee can recommend to the Alabama Legislature that Macon be abolished or divided among the surrounding counties.

Six counties in Alabama—all in the northern part of the state and with little Negro population, percentagewise — voted against the amendment.

The counties voting against it were Colbert with 755 votes for it and 1298 against it—69 per cent against it; Morgan, with 343 for it and 592 against—or 63 per cent against; Mobile, with 3270 for it and 5314 against—or 62 per cent against; Marion, with 473 for and 631 against—or 57 per cent against; Madison, with 672 for and 821 against—or 55 per cent against, and Lauderdale, with 492 for and 534 against—or 52 per cent against the amendment.

Black belt counties with heavy Negro populations voted strongly in favor of the amendment.

Among those with high vote percentages for the amendment were Lowndes, with 88 per cent of the vote for it; Wilcox, with 87 per cent for it; Dallas, with 86 per cent for it; Choctaw, with 85 per cent for it; Henry, with 84 per cent for it; Monroe, with 83 per cent for it; Barbour, with 82 per cent for it; Bullock, 81 per cent; Pike, 80 per cent, and Pickens, 80 per cent.

In Alabama's "big city" areas, the vote varied.

In Mobile County, the amendment was defeated, with 62 per cent of the voters casting their ballot against it.

In Jefferson County (Birmingham), the amendment carried by only a few votes, with almost a 50-50 percentage. The vote was 15,532 for it and 15,-[illegible] against it.

In Tuscaloosa County, the vote was 1586 for it and 1180 against it—57 per cent for the amendment.

In Montgomery County, the vote was 3349 for it and 2475 against it—57 per cent for the amendment.

In Etowah County (Gadsden), the vote was 3239 for it and 1550 against it—with 68 per cent of the voters approving it.

And in Calhoun (Anniston), the vote was 1608 for it and 732 against—with 69 per cent of the voters approving it.

Negroes Seek To Lift Ban At Tuskegee

Shuttlesworth, King In Group Called By Patterson

BY CLARKE STALLWORTH
Post-Herald Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 20—Seventy-one witnesses, including top Negro leaders from Birmingham and Montgomery, have been subpenaed by Atty Gen. Patterson to appear at a boycott hearing in Tuskegee tomorrow.

In the hearing, Negro attorneys are asking Circuit Judge Will O. Walton to remove a temporary injunction which was slapped on the Tuskegee Civic Assn. for an alleged boycott of white stores in Tuskegee.

Patterson said here today he had subpenaed:

The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, who was beaten by a group of white men when he tried to take his daughter into Phillips High School; A. G. Gaston, Birmingham businessman and undertaker.

The Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro minister who led the Montgomery bus boycott and who is president of Montgomery Improvement Assn.; the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, King's right hand man and vice president of the MIA; the Rev. Mose Pleasure, executive secretary of the MIA.

Dr. T. V. Tildon, mahager of the huge Veterans Administration Hospital at Tuskegee; Dr. L. H. Foster, president of Tuskegee Institute and author of a recent race relations report; C. G. Gomillion, president of Tuskegee Civic Assn.

Also subpenaed was Gertrude Cargyle of The Birmingham News.

The alleged boycott of white stores in Tuskegee began last year, after Sen. Sam Engelhardt sparked legislation which rearranged the city limits of Tuskegee, putting 410 of the 420 Negro voters outside the city limits.

Last Summer, Judge Walton issued a temporary injunction prohibiting members and followers of Tuskegee Civic Assn. from using force, threats, or intimidation to keep other Negroes from patronizing Tuskegee merchants.

In addition to the subpenas announced today, Patterson said he would seek a court order from Judge Walton for the TCA to produce membership rolls and other documents.

Patterson said he also will ask for other records, including annual reports of the TCA for 1956 and 1957; letters exchanged between the TCA and Highlander Folk School in Tennessee; all documents between the TCA and the Negro Macon County Chamber of Commerce.

Patterson didn't say why he called the Birmingham and Montgomery Negro leaders to the hearing, or why he called the heads of Tuskegee Institute and the VA Hospital in Tuskegee.

barking on a further witchhunt. The whole thing is politically inspired."

Patterson is reported to be a candidate for governor in the coming May Democratic primary.

King, however, spoke at a TCA rally once. And from Foster and Tildon, state's attorneys are expected to seek information to support their contention that employes of the two institutions have been active in the Tuskegee boycott.

At the time Judge Walton issued the temporary injunction last year, Patterson said:

"The Negro boycott of white merchants is a violation of the Alabama Constitution and a public nuisance, for it is trying to destroy the economy of an entire city.

"I hope the TCA will stop threatening Negroes. We shall have undercover agents in the area, and if the association fails to obey the injunction it will be in great difficulty."

Violation of Alabama's anti-boycott law carries a fine up to $1000 and six months imprisonment or both.

TCA President Gomillion, dean of students at Tuskegee Institute, steadfastly denied the organizing a boycott. He said it is a "campaign for first-class citizenship."

Will Answer Call

In Birmingham, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth said he had received a subpena to appear in Tuskegee and that he would answer the summons "because I abide by the law."

"I'll be there," said Shuttlesworth. "But it may be that the attorney general is em-

Macon Committee Will Meet Today

The Macon County Abolition Commission will meet here at 10 a.m. today to consider recommendations to be submitted by its steering committee.

Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Shorter, chairman of the commission, indicated the first order of business would be the naming of five subcommittees which will study various phases of the Macon situation.

The commission, created by a constitutional amendment ratified last month, held its first meeting here Monday with most members expressing the view that the abolition of the county would be recommended to the Legislature only as a last resort.

CENSUS STUDIED

Macon Commission Vows To Retain 'Way Of Life'

By BOB INGRAM

The Macon County Abolition Commission yesterday unanimously adopted a statement of policy in which it pledged to uphold "the way of life that is truly Alabamian."

And the commission further agreed to abolish the county rather than let it be "controlled and operated by elements and individuals who are not qualified by Alabama standards."

The statement of policy was adopted at the second meeting of the commission which was created by the passage of Amendment No. 18 on the Dec. 17 special election ballot.

The amendment authorized the abolition of the county by legislative act if such a step was necessary to prevent Negroes from gaining control of Macon's county and city governments.

Later in the meeting the commission discussed a proposed census of Macon County with Thomas W. McWhirter of Atlanta, regional supervisor of the Bureau of Census.

McWhirter said a special census could be made of Macon if authorized by Washington and financed by state or local funds. He estimated such a census would cost $6,000.

The official added that such a count would only give the name, age, sex and race of the inhabitants, adding that he doubted federal officials would approve of the question also including a question relating to voter registration.

The commission earlier agreed steps could be taken toward abolition.

In other business yesterday the group adopted an agenda providing for the appointment of five subcommittees which will specialize in various phases of the study. Subcommittees named were census, boundaries, finance and taxation, judiciary and coordinating.

The commission also voted to meet each Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in the Capitol.

Macon Debate

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — The Macon County Abolition Commission, last week, agreed yesterday to secure additional data before deciding whether to abolish the county or merely reduce its size.

Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery opposed the abolition of the county declaring that "Tuskegee will become a ghost town. I don't want to see that happen."

The abolition of county followed the boycotting of the business in Tuskegee.

Dawkins suggests that "the day a Negro is elected to office in Macon, then at the next session of legislature the county can be abolished."

Judge requests briefs—

Tuskegee case court ruling not due for several weeks

BY TRUDY CARGILE
News staff writer

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 23—It is apparent that a court ruling in the case of state's attorneys against activities of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. will not be forthcoming for several weeks.

A total of 60 days has been allotted opposing attorneys in the case in which to prepare briefs. Circuit Judge Will O. Walton requested the briefs following the end of the two-day hearing in which the state sought to make permanent a temporary injunction against TCA. The Negro organization, the state contended, is supporting a boycott against white merchants of Tuskegee through threats and intimidation.

Walton said he will give serious study to the testimony with no particular hurry to conclude the matter, because of the importance of the case.

THE SUIT AGAINST TCA is new to the courts of Alabama, the only related cases heretofore involving labor disputes for which existing statutes were enacted, Walton pointed out.

Walton overruled a motion by Negro attorneys late yesterday to dismiss the state's complaint and dissolve the temporary injunction against TCA.

Filing the motion in his opening arguments after the state rested its case, Fred Gray said the complaint failed to make a prima facia case, that evidence was legally insufficient and failed to show TCA was carrying on a boycott.

He also argued that evidence failed to show that threats and intimidation had been used by members of TCA or that boycott laws of Alabama had been violated.

The motion was not denied until arguments from both sides were complete.

AT THAT POINT, the Negro attorneys reopened testimony by calling several witnesses to the stand, including Atty. Gen. John Patterson who had led the way for the state in the hearing.

In his questioning, Shores asked Patterson if he always sought to protect the rights of all persons in the state of Alabama.

Patterson replied that he carried out the duties of his office to the best of his abilities regardless of race and color.

Questioned further as to whether he had done anything to protect the right of persons to vote in Alabama, the attorney general explained that the Constitution places upon his office mainly the duty of protecting the public from criminal violations.

SHORES ASKED Patterson what action has been brought against the Ku Klux Klan in Alabama to which the witness replied that circuit courts deal directly with incidents involving KKK.

James Webb, assistant to the attorney general, posed a single question in cross-examining Patterson.

"Has the Tuskegee Civic Assn. furnished any information that would show the Ku Klux Klan should be enjoined from operating?", Webb asked.

"Tuskegee Civic Assn. hasn't furnished anything." Patterson replied.

AMONG THE WITNESES called by the Negro attorneys were C. G. Gomillion, president of TCA, and W. P. Mitchell, secretary of the organization.

Testimony from all witnesses was generally the same in that they admitted having attended mass meetings of the association during the Summer and with one exception, were members of TCA.

Booker Green, who was to have been a witness for the state which was attempting to show that some Negroes have been victimized through threats of violence, was brought to the witness stand after officials failed to locate him yesterday.

GREEN REFUSED to be sworn under oath but said it was not against his religious beliefs. He expressed reluctance to answer any questions, saying he had been told "by a lawyer out of town" not to answer anything. He refused to say otherwise why he would not be sworn in as a witness.

Patterson won the right to offer into evidence two depositions taken from witnesses who were unable to attend the hearing. Both were allowed over objections from the Negro attorneys.

The first deposition, taken from Rev. George W. Henderson, a rural Negro minister, gave testimony concerning threats made against the aged Henderson by one John Wright. Henderson said he got a permit to carry a gun after Wright threatened him.

The second deposition was taken from a co-owner of a Tuskegee grocery store. Patterson said testimony from J. A. Thompson related to business losses over the last year.

PATTERSON FAILED to produce two more witnesses from whom he had signed statements. He asked that an attachment be issued to bring Will McNair before the court.

No attachment was asked in the case of Tilda Nicholson who also failed to heed a subpoena to appear at the hearing. Patterson said he understood the Nicholson woman had left the state.

The state's final witness was R. C. Comer who was accused by Queen Ester Harris of threating her with harm if she traded with white merchants.

Negro attorneys repeatedly objected to testimony relating incidents of threats or intimidation declaring that the persons referred to are unknown or not members of TCA against whom the complaint is brought.

IN HIS CLOSING argument for the state, Patterson said the theories upon which the hearing was based were that the TCA constitutes a public nuisance through conduct that keeps persons from going about their business, that the state has a right to step in and take action for the general welfare of the public and that the Constitution and civil rights of Tuskegee are being infringed upon by action of the TCA.

Fred Gray, making final argument for the TCA, said before the complainant can make out a complaint, several facts must be proved to make a prima facia case.

First, the complainant must prove that the respondent and others have entered into a conspiracy, agreement or understanding to hinder persons from carrying on business, he said. The complainant must also prove the respondent has used force, through threat or intimidation, he added.

Although Tallapoosa County's population is only about 27 per cent Negro, the enrollment in county schools outside Alexander City is almost evenly divided with some 2,700 white students and 2,200 Negroes.

Two residents of Macon County, Woodrow Ruff and O. D. Rutherford, said the county should be abolished without trying to find another solution and added that in their opinion most white people in Macon feel the same way.

E. P. Livingston of Notasulga, chairman of the Macon County Board of Registrars and a brother of Chief Justice J. Ed Livingston of the state Supreme Court, hinted that he would resign if pressure to register Negroes gets too strong.

He said the other two board members probably would resign too.

Macon County has been without a functioning Board of Registrars several times in past years, once for more than a year.

When asked what the board's reaction would be if Negroes staged an intensified voter registration campaign and the new Civil Rights Commission took a hand in it, Livingston replied:

"From what I have been reading in the papers, it looks like they'd be looking for another man on the board." He said further that the other two board members probably would resign also.

Supt. Woodrow Weldon of Tallapoosa County's school system, said "we are more than willing to share your problems.

"We sympathize with you and stand ready to help anyway we can," he added. "But for goodness sake don't give us the kids without the buildings."

Weldon said Tallapoosa County couldn't take on an additional heavy pupil load without the school buildings or other facilities to take care of them.

Tallapoosa County's Probate Judge C. J. Coley, said "We recognize that you have a considerable problem and you will find officials of the county very cooperative."

A. B. Hope of Notasulga, a member of the Macon County Board of Education, appealed to the Senate-House committee to find a solution of his county's racial problem without abolishing it.

"If that can't be done," he added, "the county should be erased from the map rather than risk Negro political domination."

Although the high school has been closed because of sub-freezing weather this week, officials attempted to heat the auditorium for today's committee hearing. A frozen pipe prevented steam from flowing into the radiators.

Tuskegee Negro Group Told To Show Records

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 21 (AP)—State's attorneys won the right today to bring some records of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. into court in an effort to link the Negro organization with a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants.

Circuit Judge Will O. Walton granted the state's request at the outset of a hearing on a motion for a permanent injunction aimed at halting the boycott which has been in force since last summer.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson told the court he needed the records to back up the state's contention that the TCA has supported the boycott and in fact has kept it alive with threats and intimidation.

Patterson told the court at one point he would produce testimony later to show that some TCA members "actually used threats to keep other Negroes from trading with white merchants."

The attorney general acknowledged that he had photostatic copies of some of the records he sought but still insisted on the original documents because, as he explained, the copies can be used only if the state tries unsuccessfully to get the originals.

Walton ordered the Negro organization to produce annual reports for 1956 and 1957, the treasurer's report for last year, a TCA statement of policy, and whatever membership records might be available.

TCA President Charles G. Gomillion said no membership records are kept because members are issued cards when they pay a small fee each year and it is unnecessary to keep records of who belongs to the organization.

However, Patterson told the court he found some membership records when he visited the TCA offices last July. The judge ordered those produced.

The court also ordered the TCA to produce any existing correspondence with a Gadsden attorney identified as Arthur Burns. Patterson said he hoped to show that Burns was employed at one time by the Negro organization and that he encouraged Negroes to boycott.

Walton denied a request to produce correspondence between the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., after Gomillion said no such records existed as far as he knew.

Patterson said the Highlander School was brought into the picture because, he said, students there were taught how to conduct economic boycotts and to circumvent segregation laws, and that some TCA members attended the biracial school.

Gomillion was called as a witness by the state to support its claim to the TCA records. During discussion of the Highlander Folk School, he testified he was one who attended but that none of the workshops with which he was familiar taught anything about economic boycotts.

Tuskegee Civic Group Refused Motion In Court

TUSKEGEE, Ala., — (INS) — A Tuskegee Civic Association, accused of leading the city's economic racial boycott, was refused a motion in federal court Wednesday asking a temporary injunction be dropped.

Circuit judge Will Walton told the group's attorneys, "where there is the slightest bit of evidence the case should go to the jury."

The TCA has been enjoined from "coercing" any member of the Negro race into boycotting white merchants, or participating in the boycott itself.

Atty. Fred Gray argued that the state failed to produce sufficient legal evidence or sustain its charges that the organization used threats, coercion or violence.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson said the TCA was responsible for "people being accosted in the streets, and white merchants losing business."

He said, "the business of white merchants dropped from 43 to 70 per cent," three days after the boycott was launched on June 25, 1957, in protest to limiting Tuskegee Negro voting rights.

Alabama Group Ordered To Produce Lists

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (INS) — The Tuskegee Civic Association, which led a Negro protest boycott against white merchants, was ordered by Federal court to produce its membership lists.

Tuskegee Circuit Judge Will O. Walton, at the same time, denied the request of Atty. John Patterson that the group produce certain handbills they ad allegedly passed out.

Last week was the first day of hearings in which a temporary injunction against the TCA, which refrains them from boycotting or "coercing" oter Negroes to boycott white merchants is being argued.

The Negroes have demanded that the temporary injunction be lifted, while the state has asked that it be made permanent.

Patterson failed to show that the TCA was linked with the controversial Highlander Flok School at Monteagle, Tenn., and that the organization was taught at the school "how to circumvent racial segregation and conduct an economic boycott."

Two Negro witnesses, who the attorney general said would testify that they were coerced by the Association, were denied testimony on the grounds that they might have been asked to boycott by other Negroes and not the TCA.

Miss. Editor To Speak To Group At Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — Ala. — (SNS) — P. D. East, publisher-editor of "The Petal (Miss.) Paper," is scheduled to be guest speaker when the Tuskegee Civic Association observes Race Relations Sunday at a program set for 3:30 p. m. Sunday at the Greenwood Baptist Church pastored by the Rev. R. [illegible].

C. G. Gomillion, TCA president said the meeting will be on an opn-to-all basis.

Mr. East is a keen observer of race relations in the south, and writes on racial matters as he sees them. "Because Mr. East uses his newspaper as a medium through which he espouses the democratic ideals and fair play to all, he has become quite a controversial figure", Gomillion said.

While there are 20 solicitors each out to bring in the largest number of memberships, Mrs. Sullins is urging non-members to take advantage of the weekly mass meetings to join up also.

'Skegee Vote Case To Federal Court

By TREZZVANT W. ANDERSON
(Courier Roving Reporter)

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — After months and months of shadow-boxing, "the mess at Tuskegee' is finally going where it has belonged from the very start: into the U. S. District Court at Montgomery, Ala., where Alabama's obvious violation of the 15th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution will be brought to a showdown.

This is in spite of apathy by the Federal Government to this flagrant flouting of the voting rights of some of America's most highly trained Negroes.

Prof. Charles G. Gomillion, head of the Department of Social Sciences of Tuskegee Institute, and president of the Tuskegee Civic Association, told the Courier's roving reporter that "court action will be filed within the next three or four weeks."

WHAT SPECIFIC court action will be filed, Prof. Gomillion did not say. But he did tell the Courier that Fred Gray Jr. of Montgomery, attorney for the TCA, had held conferences in Dallas, Tex., with certain other nationally known legal [illegible].

There they reached an understanding as to what court action should be and could be taken to fight the action of the Alabama General [illegible] last year when it gerrymandered Tuskegee city limits to exclude Negroes from the voting boundaries.

Prof. Gomillion also told the Courier that counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union is taking an active interest in helping to correct the injustices wrought upon the Negroes of Tuskegee by the sovereign state of Alabama through its highest legislative body.

The 15th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution forbids the states to make any laws abridging the rights of citizens to vote on account of race, creed or color.

Gov.-nominate John Patterson has put a high priority label on voter registration in an apparent determination to preserve white supremacy at the polls.

The Democratic nominee also disclosed in an interview that he means to give serious attention to the appointment of jury commissions in the 67 counties "to make sure that the gangsters don't get control again."

"I think the experience we've had shows," he commented, "that the boards of registrars and the jury commissioners are the most important political offices in the county."

Patterson discussed plans for tightening Alabama's voter registration laws, but declined to go into detail. Prospective new voters are required now to undergo a written questionnaire which includes an explanation of the duties and obligations of citizenship.

The attorney general said "It is extremely important at this time to have people on the job (on county registration boards) who will see that new voters meet the qualifications and comply with the laws."

As one of three state officials who will appoint the registration officials, the incoming governor said he will undertake to "get the best possible men and woman we can find." The local boards have the power to say who can and cannot vote.

Patterson promised, too, that he will demand the removal of any registrar "who is not performing his job."

Any two members of the appointing board which is made up of the governor, state auditor and agriculture commissioner can fire a registration official with or without cause.

The new Federal Civil Rights commission has ordered agents into Alabama and other Southern states to investigate complaints from Negroes who say they have been discriminated against. Patterson has denounced that action as an unwarranted invasion of states rights.

The attorney general whose home town of Phenix City once was dominated by racketeers, also mentioned that background as another reason for stricter control of voter registration procedure as well as the selection of juries in court.

"The gangsters got control of the registration machinery as well as the jury commission in Phenix City," he explained. "They could register anyone they wanted to, even with fictitious names, and thus were able almost to assure the outcome of any election."

The same procedure dictated the selection of juries, Patterson continued, and "nobody got indicted or prosecuted."

Alabama Rebuffs U. S. on Vote List

By The Associated Press

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 21 — Registration officials in Macon County have withheld their records from Federal agents, it was revealed today.

The state's Attorney General, John Patterson, has declared that registration documents are not public records and has advised county boards of registrars throughout the state not to show them to Federal agents.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, chairman of the board in Montgomery County, which adjoins Macon County, promised to resist any demand for access to records there.

But John A. Repoll, chairman of the Mobile County board, said Federal investigators would be welcome to look at his records.

The chairman of the Macon County board, E. P. Livingston, said he and his two colleagues had acted on advice of the Attorney General, who is a Democratic candidate for Governor for the term starting next January.

Democratic nomination is tantamount to election in Alabama.

Court Action Is Hinted

Mr. Livingston said two agents of the Civil Rights Commission who visited the board yesterday left with a hint at court action, but there was no official indication of the next move. The agents, identified as Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson, were unavailable for comment.

Mr. Patterson said he would resist any court action on the ground that because "under Alabama law, they are not public records" and board members are "under no legal obligation or duty" to produce them.

In Macon County, where the Tuskegee Institute is located, Negroes outnumber whites by 6 to 1, but white voters have a 2-to-1 advantage at the polls.

Presure for Negro registration has kept the board of registrars inactive much of the time. At one period, the County had no functioning board of registrars for eighteen months and no prospective new voter, white or Negro, could register.

Discrimination Is Denied

Negroes have repeatedly accused the board of discrimination, but registration officials deny the charges. Mr. Livingston insisted that the policy of the present board is to reject anyone who fails to meet the qualifications regardless of race.

Alabama law requires prospective voters to answer a questionnaire that, among other things, calls for a definition of the "duties and obligations" of citizenship.

The board's action brought a biting comment today from a Negro leader, the Rev. K. L. Bufford, acting president of the Tusagee Civic Association.

"It is no more than I expected," he said, "I doubt that any persons would voluntarily give evidence that would be incriminating to them. I think the board's records would definitely be incriminating."

A recent byfrse association survey showed 314 negroes had sought registration in the twelve-month period ended Aug. 31, but only 145 were permitted to file applications. Of those, ninety-nine were registered.

Rights Probers Hint Legal Move On Macon Board

U.S. Agents Denied Look At County Vote Records

By DICK HINES

The federal Civil Rights Commission can be expected to consider possible legal action to obtain Macon County voting records when it meets in Washington Thursday, a commission spokesman said Tuesday.

A. H. Rosenfeld, who dispatched two "fact-finding" agents to Macon County in a futile attempt to see the records Monday, said the commission "will have to consider some sort of action but I don't have the slightest idea what the action will be."

Rosenfeld said Macon is the first county in Alabama to which he has dispatched agents. But he refused to say whether or not his office has received complaints about voting registration from counties other than Macon.

Rosenfeld, director of the Office of Complaints, Information and Surveys, Civil Rights Commission, was contacted at his home in Alexandria, Va., by telephone.

On the advice of Atty. Gen. John Patterson, the Macon Board of Registrars refused to show the voting records to agents Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson.

OTHERS ADVISED

Patterson also advised other Alabama boards to close their registration books to agents of the Civil Rights Commission.

Macon Registration Chairman E. P. Livingston, brother of Alabama's Chief Justice J. Ed Livingston, said Patterson advised the board to "show them nothing and that is what we showed them."

Rosenfeld said he had not received a report from the two agents on their visit with the Macon board. But he said he has received reports of the denial of the records from newspaper wire services.

Rosenfeld said he made a preliminary trip to Macon County three weeks ago. Livingston indicated the records would be available when the board held its regular meeting the third Monday in October, he said.

"Livingston and I sat on his front porch and talked in a very agreeable fashion," the official stated. He said he later wrote Livingston and told him the agents would meet with the board as a result of "complaints we had received."

Livingston strongly denied Tuesday that he had promised Rosenfeld he would allow the agents to see the records.

He said that when Rosenfeld visited him, "I told him he could not give him any commitment unless other members of the board were present."

Last Saturday, he said, he received a letter from Rosenreld saying two agents would come to Macon County Monday to see the reports I had "promised" to show them.

When Goodyear and Peterson arrived and said they had been told they could see the records Livingston said he told them:

"You have been misinformed."

He said the agents did not seem to be surprised by the refusal. He quoted one as saying "I tried to bet Rosenfeld that the records would not be available but he said they would be."

ASKS OPINION

Patterson, Democratic nominee for governor, said Livingston asked him his opinion on whether official records of the Board of Registrars of Macon County were "public records" under Alabama law and whether or not the board was required by law to open the records for public inspection.

Patterson said under the state constitution, the voting records of Macon or any other county in Alabama are not "public records" and that individual boards are under no legal obligation to show them.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, chairman of the board in Montgomery County, said she would resist any demands for access to records.

But Chairman John A. Repoll of the Mobile County board said federal investigators would be welcomed to look at his records.

Livingston said there had been "a lot of Negroes" registered in Macon County in the last year.

APPLICATION BLANK

"Every would-be voter fills in a prescribed application blank and answers questions about our Alabama Constitution, as approved by our laws," he said. "Those who fill out their applications accurately and who are able to answer the questions asked them are registered as voters. Those who do not, are not. It's as simple as that."

Livingston said the federal agents produced no court order to see the registration records but said one of them hinted they might try that approach.

"I'm not going to show anybody anything unless the board agrees and Mr. Patterson says it's all right," he said.

"The state is involved and I'm going to do what the attorney general tells us to do," the board chairman continued. "These are state records."

A Tuskegee Negro leader, the Rev. K. L. Buford, said the board's action was "no more than I expected." Buford is acting president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization which has promoted a voter registration campaign.

INCRIMINATING DATA

"I doubt that any person would voluntarily give evidence that would be incriminating to them," the Negro minister said. "I think the board's records would be definitely incriminating."

According to a recent TCA survey, 314 Negroes sought registration in Macon County in the 12-month period ending Aug. 31 but only 143 were permitted to file applications. Of those, 99 were registered.

Rosenfeld said in the telephone conversation that his agents have no police functions. He said they are "just field representatives on a fact-finding mission."

He stated that the Civil Rights Commission does have the power to hold hearings if it desires but that it is "completely separate from the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department."

He termed the visit of Goodyear and Peterson to Macon County a "preliminaty survey" and stated that his report to the Commission will simply say the agents were "refused access."

Alabama Vote Quiz Is Slated

Federal Rights Board Will Hear Charges of Ballot Denials

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (AP)—Denied access to registration records in Alabama, the federal Civil Rights Commission today ordered a hearing on alleged denials of voting rights in that state.

The hearing, opening in Montgomery Dec. 8, will be the first held by the commission since it was created by Congress in 1957.

Chairman John A. Hannah told a news conference the hearing will be confined to allegations of denials of the right to vote in Alabama. He had been asked whether it also would be concerned with the refusal of the Macon County voter registration board to show its records to commission agents.

Open Hearings?

Vice Chairman Robert G. Storey said it had not been decided whether the Montgomery hearing will be open to the public, but added that as far as he can see now it probably will be. The commission's decision to hold the hearing was unanimous.

The commission also announced after a closed session that it has authorized further investigations of alleged denials of voting rights in Mississippi and Florida. The first investigations in those states were authorized in September. There have been additional complaints since then.

A preliminary survey of an allegation of denial of voting rights based on national origin was also authorized in a Northern state which Hannah declined to name.

A fact-finding hearing on the subject of housing is scheduled to start in New York Feb. 2. Hannah and other commission officials emphasized this is not based on any complaints but is deemed advisable to obtain information which would not be available otherwise.

Statement Issued

Concerning the Alabama situation, the commission said in a statement:

"While the commission has hoped that it might be able to collect the facts necessary for a complete report on voting complaints received from the state of Alabama through the cooperation and understanding of local and state officials, its field representatives on Monday were denied access to registration records by Macon County officials acting on the advice of the attorney general of Alabama.

"Congress imposed upon the commission a duty to investigate every valid allegation that certain citizens are being denied the right to vote and have that vote counted by reason of their color, race, religion or national origin.

"In fulfillment of that duty, the commission has accordingly approved a hearing to be held at Montgomery, Ala., beginning on Monday, Dec. 8, 1958."

Subpoena Question

As to whether the Macon records would be subpoenaed, Storey would only say, that it would seem to be necessary to have the full and complete record dealing with the controversy.

"That question would depend on the preparation for the hearing and the circumstances we find up to the time of the hearing," said Storey, who is dean of Southern Methodist University's law school.

The commission has had more than 20 complaints concerning denials of voting rights in Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and the unidentified Northern state, Hannah said. He added that the reports on the preliminary investigations, already conducted in Florida and Mississippi, have been inconclusive.

(In Montgomery, Ala., State Atty. Gen. John Patterson accused the commission of playing politics. He charged the commission's action is intended to create "an atmosphere to get some Republican votes in the congressional elections."

Alabama Inquiry Is Slated Dec. 8 By Rights Group

First Hearing By New U.S. Commission Will Be Held In Montgomery

ON VOTING PRIVILEGES

Investigation Sparked By Patterson's Closing Of Records — Another Study Is Set In New York

By MORRIS CUNNINGHAM
Of The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — The Federal Civil Rights Commission voted unanimously Thursday to open hearings in Montgomery, Ala., on Dec. 8, on complaints that Negroes have been denied voting privileges in Alabama.

The six-man commission, which includes three Southerners, simultaneously announced it will open hearings in New York City Feb. 2, 1959, on discrimination in housing.

The Alabama hearing, the commission's first, apparently was sparked by Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson's ruling Monday denying commission agents access to Macon County, Ala., registration and voting records.

However, commission members said no decision was reached as to whether the commission will use its subpena powers to obtain the records.

May Need Records

Robert G. Storey, dean of the Southern Methodist University Law School and vice-chairman of the commission, said, "It will depend upon the circumstances that develop at the hearing."

Created by the 1957 Civil Rights Act, the commission is authorized to seek Federal Court orders to enforce its subpenas. Refusal to comply with a court order is subject to contempt of court proceedings.

The Alabama attorney general advised county registrars not to reveal voting registration records on grounds that Alabama law does not classify them as public records.

Three-Day Limit

John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University and chairman of the commission, said the Montgomery hearings will last "one or two, possibly three days at the most."

The commission didn't decide whether the hearings will be open to the public. Mr. Storey said, without contradiction, "I assume they will be."

The commission said its inquiries into voting discrimination against Negroes in Mississippi and Florida are continuing, and that additional sworn complaints have been received.

It also announced a complaint has been received from an unnamed Northern state charging that the privilege of voting was denied because of nationality.

State Not Revealed

Mr. Hannah said the name of the state wasn't being revealed "because of the inconclusive nature of the complaint."

The New York City housing hearings will be "fact-finding" and in no way indicate the commission believes persons are being denied housing in New York because of their race, color, religion or nationality, Mr. Hannah said. He said New York was selected only because "you have to start somewhere."

The commission announced it has picked members of state advisory committees in 12 more states, including Tennessee and Kentucky. Names will be announced after security checks have been completed. An Arkansas committee already has been announced. No action has been taken for Mississippi.

Gerrymander survives attack—

U. S. judge upholds Negro vote exclusion in Tuskegee

Cites similar court rulings

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29 —(AP)— An anti-Negro voting law which has deprived Negroes of a voice in the city's government at Tuskegee survived its first test in federal court today.

U. S. Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. upheld a 16-month-old legislative act which virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee by rearranging the city boundaries.

It left all predominantly Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

Johnson said nothing in the U. S. Constitution prohibits the Legislature from changing the boundaries of a city, regardless of the motive.

NEGRO ATTY. FRED GRAY of Montgomery, who filed the suit on behalf of the group of Negroes, said the ruling will be appealed to higher courts.

Enactment of the law in June, 1957, touched off a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants which is still in force.

Its passage left only 10 registered Negro voters inside the city in contrast to the 420 who voted there before the law went into effect.

The 600 white voters were left undisturbed.

THE NEGROES who challenged the law claimed it deprived them of their rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

Judge Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the Legislature in enacting the law, "this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States."

Continuing, he said:

"This court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body . . ."

THE JUDGE SAID that regardless of the motives of the Legislature, "the law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislative body of the state."

He cited several U. S. Supreme Court decisions which he said made that clear in previous test cases.

Johnson ruled that the only issue was whether the Legislature has authority to change the territorial limits of a city. He said the federal courts have had similar questions presented many times in the past and have held that the Legislature does have that authority.

THE LAW WAS enacted at the request of State Sen. Sam Engelhardt, an ardent segregationists, an onetime executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils.

It was enacted as a local law affecting only Tuskegee and went into effect without the approval of Gov. James E. Folsom who refused to sign it. Folsom made no attempt to veto the measure but let it become law without his approval.

Tuskegee is the county seat of Macon County and the center of recurring complaints about Negro voting for many years. It is the site of the famed Negro school, Tuskegee Institute, prior to the passage of the gerrymandering law which left the institute outside the city limits.

PASSAGE OF THE LAW brought on a mass boycott of white merchants in Tuskegee which has continued for 16 months.

The same Legislature also submitted a constitutional amendment empowering the House and Senate to abolish Macon County entirely as a means of preventing Negroes from gaining political control.

The amendment was ratified by Alabama voters last December, but a study committee which has gone into the problems involved recommended no immediate action.

Negroes outnumber whites nearly six to one in Macon, but white voters have a 2-1 advantage at the polls. In the former Tuskegee boundaries, Negroes outnumbered whites about four to one.

'Do same' Patterson tells other boards—

Macon closes books to U. S. rights agents

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 21—(AP)—The Macon County Voter Registration Board has closed its books to the Federal Civil Rights Commission, and Atty. Gen. John Patterson advised boards throughout Alabama today to do the same.

Chairman E. P. Livingston said the Macon board, which has been accused by Negroes of discriminating against them, refused to allow two agents of the Civil Rights Commission to see its records yesterday.

Livingston said the board would keep its records closed until the attorney general advised otherwise.

PATTERSON

Patterson, in Montgomery, said that under Alabama law, the records are not public and that the board is "under no legal obligation or duty" to produce them.

The attorney general, who is the Democratic nominee for governor for the term starting next January, said the same rule applies to all registration boards in the state.

And while he said he wouldn't try to dictate to the board members, he said, "my advice to them" would be to refuse to let federal agents see them.

Patterson said the state will resist any effort to get a court order to force the Macon board to make its record available.

"I'm not going to show anybody anything unless the board agrees and Mr. Patterson says it's all right," said Livingston, who is a brother of Chief Justice Livingston of the Alabama Supreme Court.

"The state is involved and I'm going to do what the attorney general tells us to do," the board chairman continued. "These are state records."

A Tuskegee Negro leader, the Rev. K. L. Buford, said the board's action was "no more than I expected." Buford is acting president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization which has promoted a voter registration campaign.

"I doubt that any persons would voluntarily give evidence that would be incriminating to them," the Negro minister added. "I think the board's records would definitely be incriminating."

The TCA recently made public a survey which showed 314 Negroes sought registration in the year ended last Aug. 31, but only 145 were permitted to make application.

Of those, the survey showed 99 Negro voters registered.

NEGROES IN MACON County who outnumber white residents some 6 to 1 have long complained of discrimination in voting. Despite their heavy population majority, they have only half as many registered voters as the white residents.

At times in the past the county has gone as long as 18 months with no functioning registration board because of the recurring demands from the Negroes.

Board members have denied the discriminating charges, explaining that Negroes who were turned down had failed to meet the qualifications. Alabama law requires prospective voters to answer a questionnaire which asks, among other things, for a definition of the "duties and obligations of citizenship."

Livingston said "a lot of Negroes" have been registered in the past year, but gave no figures.

"Every would-be voter fills in a prescribed application blank and answers questions about our Alabama Constitution," he said. "Those who fill out their applications accurately and are able to answer the questions asked them are registered as voters. Those who do not, are not. It is as simple as that."

Livingston identified the agents who visited the board yesterday as Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson.

He said several Negroes sought registration while the agents were there.

But although it was one of the days set aside by law to receive applications, the board chairman said word had been sent out in advance that no applications would be taken yesterday because board members wanted to devote the time to acting on those previously received.

He said the board was in session to receive applications under the law which fixes the first and third Mondays of each month as meeting dates.

The board chairman said Peterson remarked as they left the office, "If you see Thurgood Marshall around, tell him hello for me." Marshall is an attorney for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People which has been active in voter registration efforts in the South.

Livingston said he took the remark "as a threat" and that Civil Rights Commission probably will seek court action to get the Macon County records.

Negro voting in Tuskegee itself has been all but eliminated by a legislative act which rearranged the town boundaries and left all predominantly Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

Of the 420 Negroes who had voted in city elections, only 10 remained in the city limits under the new law. A group of Negroes has filed a suit in Federal Court challenging the legislative act, but no ruling has been handed down by U. S. District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., of Montgomery.

In protest against the anti-voting law, Negroes have boycotted white merchants in Tuskegee for 16 months.

Also because of the demands for Negro registration, Alabama voters last year approved a constitutional amendment empowering the legislature to abolish Macon County as a means of preventing Negro political domination.

However, a special legislative committee which has studied the problems recommended no gerrymandering action at this time.

At Mobile, Chairman John A. Repoll of the Mobile County Board of Registrars, said the board there has not been approached by agents of the Civil Rights Commission. "As far as I know, none has been around," Repoll added.

"We have nothing to hold back here and we are perfectly willing for anyone to come in and see what we are doing. They (Civil Rights agents) can sit right down with us and watch us any time they want to.

"And if J. Edgar Hoover wants to come down here and sit with us, he will be welcome."

Macon, Vote Law Reports To Be Studied

Legislative Council

Will Consider Proppsals Friday

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 6 (AP)—Three interim committee reports and a proposal for changes in the state's voting laws will be studied by the Alabama Legislative Council Friday.

Reports from the insurance Macon and health committees will be under study although final reports for insurance and health will not be submitted for possibly several weeks.

The council also will consider proposals to lengthen time for taking an appeal from justice of the peace court, and for changing requirements for a candidate's financial statements during election periods.

One proposal asks that the length of time for appeal from JP court be changed from five to 15 days.

Rep. Joe Goodwyn of Montgomery County is asking that candidates for public office be required to file financial reports after election only. Candidates now are required to file statements, both before and after each election.

The Macon Abolition Committee filed its final report Friday recommending formation of a permanent committee in Alabama "to keep an eye on the race situation."

Charles M. Cooper, director of the Legislative Reference Service, said in each case the council "probably will act as a transmission unit; accepting recommendations of the committees and merely passing them on to the next Legislature in the form of proposed legislation."

Proposed voting law changes to be studied by the council, include plans for requiring statewide use of voting machines. Or, as an alternative, amendments which would allow county and city governments to turn to use of machines without the necessity of a referendum.

The council will convene at 11 a.m. Friday. It is composed of 12 members, six from the House, four from the Senate, and the lieutenant governor and speaker of the House as ex-officio members.

Macon Voting Official Dies

NOTASULGA (AP)—A Macon County voting official, one of those who withheld registration files from Civil Rights Commission agents last month, died of a heart attack Saturday.

Jesse W. Zachry, 65-year-old merchant, landowner and member of the Macon County board of registrars since March, 1957, died after trying to put out a forest fire on his property near here.

Zachry was driving into town to get help when the attack came. Robert Wagner, a Negro farmer who was accompanying him, brought the car to a stop.

Since the Macon board refused to show its voter files, the Civil Rights Agency has set a hearing for Dec. 8 in Montgomery. The Macon board has been accused of discriminating against Negroes.

12 Tuskegee Negroes Fight For Change In City Limits

By DICK LOOSER

Twelve Tuskegee Negroes, represented by Montgomery attorney Fred Gray, sought Monday to have a 1957 Alabama Legislative act which redefined the city limits of Tuskegee declared unconstitutional and void.

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court Monday, the group, which included C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., asked for a temporary and permanent injunction restraining public officials from enforcing Act 140 on the grounds that it "... denies rights, privileges and immunities secured by the 14th and 15th Amendments of the U.S. Constitution."

The act, which was introduced in the regular 1957 session of the state Legislature, by Macon County Sen. Sam Engelhardt June 1957 redefined the city limits of Tuskegee, thus disenfranchising most of the city's Negro population.

Named as defendants in the suit were Tuskegee Mayor Phil M. Lightfoot, the city council, the Macon County board of revenue, Probate Judge William Varner, Police Chief O. L. Hodnett and Sheriff Preston Hornsby.

In an attempt to have the act ruled unconstitutional, the Negro plaintiffs asked for judgment as to whether "enforcement, execution or operation of the statute... to exclude plaintiffs because of race and color and which deprives them of the right to vote in municipal elections. . . denies them the rights, privileges and immunities as set forth in the 14th and 15th Amendments and under title 42 of the U.S. Code.

"As redefined," says the suit, "Tuskegee resembles a sea dragon with Negro neighborhoods, including the site of Tuskegee Institute, eliminated from the city boundaries."

The suit brought immediate reaction from Sen. Engelhardt. He predicted increased sentiment for abolishing Macon County, of which Tuskegee is the county seat.

A recently approved constitutional amendment empowered the Legislature to abolish the county as a means of preventing Negroes who outnumber the whites nearly 7-1 from gaining political control.

CREATED COURSE

Chairman of a special committee created to recommend a course of action to the Legislature, Engelhardt predicted the committee will now probably make a stronger recommendation that it otherwise might have made.

The suit was filed on behalf of Negroes "residing within the Tuskegee city limits as constituted prior to the passage of the act last year."

The suit contests the legality of "redefining the city limits to exclude the plaintiffs and the class they represent from the city solely because of their race and color and depriving them of the right to vote in municipal elections."

CERTAIN HOURS

"As a result of their exclusion," the suit continued, "... plaintiffs and the class they represent have been deprived of the services of city policemen to patrol school zones during certain hours, benefits of general street improvements and the paving of a particular street before August, 1957, as promised by the city prior to the passage of the act."

The plaintiffs also charged that for 18 months, Macon County has had no board of registrars because most all the qualified whites were already registered whereas thousands of Negroes possessing the qualifications are not registered and cannot vote.

The group in addition charged that the act was another device in continuing attempts by the state to disenfranchise Negro citizens.

400 NEGROES

Prior to the passage of the act, there were approximately 400 Negroes voting in Tuskegee and about 600 whites. Now, according to the suit, all but "four or five," of the Negroes have been barred from participating in the municipal elections.

The suit contends that Negroes compose approximately seven eighths of the population of Macon County.

Included in the suit were exhibits of an article from Time magazine and an article from The Montgomery Advertiser in which the act was labeled as an "obvious move to maintain white control of the city government."

An aftermath of the act was an economic boycott of white merchants, and later, the creation of the Macon County committee to study the possibilities of abolishing Macon County.

FILING SUIT

Named as defendants in the suit were Lightfoot, L. D. Gregory, H. A. Vaughan Jr., W. Foy Thompson, councilmen; Chief Hodnett; E. C. Leslie, Charles Huddleston, J. T. Dyson, F. C. Thompson and Virgil Guthrie of the board of revenue; Sheriff Hornsby and Judge Varner.

Plaintiffs filing the suit with Gomillion were Celia B. Chambers, Alma R. Craig, Frank H. Bentley, Willie D. Bentley, Kenneth L. Buford, William J. White, Augustas O. Young Jr., Nellie B. Jones, Detroit Lee, Delia D. Sullivan, and Lynwood T. Dorsey, all Negro residents of Tuskegee.

The plaintiffs asked in their suit that the court:

1. Issue a decree adjuding Act 140 in violation of due process and equal protection of the 14th and 15th Amendment.

2. Issue a preliminary injunction, pending final disposition, restraining and enjoining the defendants from enforcing and executing the act and those similarly situtated and from denying right to vote and to be recognized and treated as citizens of Tuskegee.

3. Issue a permanent injunction against the act.

Contest gerrymandering—

Tuskegee Negroes file suit challenging law

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 4 —(AP)—A group of Tuskegee Negroes filed a suit in U. S. District Court here today challenging constitutionality of a state law which has virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee.

The petition asked for an injunction to prohibit city officials from enforcing the law which was passed by the Alabama Legislature last year.

NO IMMEDIATE action was taken on the request for a temporary restraining order followed by a permanent injunction.

The law which the suit contends violates the 14th and 15th Amendments to the U. S. Constitution rearranged Tuskegee's boundaries and left only some 10 Negroes inside the city limits.

Before the act was passed, Tuskegee had an estimated 420 Negro voters. The 600 white voters were undisturbed by the change.

Tuskegee Negroes have boycotted white merchants in the city for more than a year in protest against the law. They asked City Council to take the excluded territory back in by annexation, but the council refused.

One of the Negroes who filed the suit is C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., an organization devoted to bettering the Negro's conditions.

THE TCA IS the organization against which Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson got a temporary injunction last year in an attempt to stop the boycott of white merchants.

Patterson accused the organization's leaders and followers of using force and threats to prevent other Negroes from trading at white stores. The injunction prohibited them from doing it.

U. S. Court Suit Attacks Tuskegee City Limits Law

An act of the 1957 Alabama Legislature redefining the city limits of Tuskegee was attacked as "unconstitutional and void" in a suit filed Monday in U. S. District Court in Montgomery. The suit was filed by 12 Negroes who contended they were denied certain civic services as a result of the change in the city limits.

The plaintiffs also asked for a temporary and permanent injunction restraining city and county officials from enforcing the act.

The suit was filed in the names of C. G. Gomillion, Cecelia B. Chambers, Alma R. Craig, Frank H. Bentley, Kenneth L. Buford, Willie D. Bentley, William J. White, Augustus O. Young, Jr., Nellie B. Jones, Detroit Lee, Delia D. Sullivan, and Lynwood D. Dorsey.

Defiance Hurt Itself in Alabama

By Richard L. Lyons
Staff Reporter

THE CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION'S trip to Alabama last week adds up in a number of things, most of them beneficial to the Nation.

"Defiance" is the word most used to describe the two-day hearing in Montgomery on Negro voting rights. Defiance was there in big and seemingly unyielding doses. It was a reminder that if the Justice Department thinks it has school trouble in Little Rock, it should wait until it hits Macon County.

Refusal of local officials to produce records or testimony which could back up or refute charges that Negroes were prevented from registering solely because they were Negroes has provoked the sharpest Federal-state clash yet. Conceivably, it could wind up with local voting officials being slapped into jail by a Federal judge.

But in spite of, or perhaps partly because of, state defiance, the hearings produced positive results beyond the testimony of 34 Negroes about the runaround they got from white registrars.

Out in the Open

THE HEARINGS turned a national spotlight on a national problem, and the problem was put in sharper focus by the performance on both sides. It could hasten action by the courts or Congress to protect voting rights.

It was no surprise to anyone in the world to hear stories of discrimination against Negro voting. The Commission went to go to Alabama to find out. Closer to home, there have been cases used such as turning down a man because he didn't know the number of bubbles in a cake of soap or asking a white woman registrar hold office hours at home. A Negro wouldn't dare appear.

These are not unusual practices in local areas where Negroes outnumber white people. The fear is that they will vote as a block and run the county, and this has not proved the case in even Virginia's Charles City County where a majority of the voters are Negro.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People could have asked for a better performance than the Alabama hearing to create a shocking picture. On one side were Negro doctors of philosophy from the Negro cultural island at Tuskegee. On the other were white county officials who wouldn't talk. They may have been defending a states' rights principle. But as in Fifth Amendment cases, many will equate silence with guilt. If not surprising, it was still shocking to most reasonable people.

Tactical Error

SEVERAL LEADING Montgomery citizens, stanch segregationists and opponents of Federal "meddling," said privately that the defiance, led by Gov.-elect John Patterson, was a mistake.

"Sure, there are some Negroes at Tuskegee who have been turned down for no legal reason," said one. "But there are a lot that made mistakes on their applications, and if they showed them the records it would prove it."

The Alabama hearing was the Commission's first test. It passed on several counts. Simply going to Montgomery was an achievement. By pressing for court action to get the facts, the Commission showed a vigor some skeptics didn't expect. Most important, the Northern and Southern members showed that at least in this basic area of civil rights they can work together.

Believers in the Ballot

WHEN PRESIDENT EISENHOWER appointed three Northerners and three Southerners to the Commission, the first reaction of many was that they would cancel each other out and do nothing. Certainly, they aren't going to change Southern customs overnight. They probably would end up in a tie vote on school desegregation.

But the ballot is something different. John S. Battle of Virginia, the leading Southern spokesman on the Commission, believes that a Negro should go to a segregated school but, once educated, should be permitted to vote.

If the Commission could produce a comprehensive report on the full dimensions of the voting problem, it would command respect and be a solid accomplishment. Most other rights flow from the ballot. It would be difficult for a professional Southerner to belittle or ignore a report or recommendation signed by Battle; Doyle Carlton, former Governor of Florida, and Robert G. Storey, dean of Southern Methodist University's law school, whose roots are in Alabama. A report signed by flaming liberals would carry little weight where it was needed.

The Commission is solely a fact-finding body. Its statutory assignment is to assess the status of civil rights, North and South, and specifically to investigate voting complaints. In Alabama, it took an essential step toward finding the facts by asking for a court order to look at voter registration records.

The Alabama records may now seem like anticlimax. The Commission may not get them. Voting officials may take them to jail. Still, a record has been made and not denied. If the Commission had not met defiance by pressing the issue, it could not very well have forced other reluctant areas to give them the facts. And it's unlikely that other Southern states where there were substantial complaints would have handed over the evidence voluntarily.

Smooth Operation

STRANGELY ENOUGH it's just possible that the Alabama trip may have blunted slightly—it certainly didn't pull—the fangs of the devil image the South conjures up whenever "Federal" and "civil rights" are mentioned.

Civil rights has meant troops at Little Rock, mixed schools, speeches in the North. Last week in Montgomery it added up to a polite group, half of whom spoke with a Southern accent. Tactically, the Commission did two smart things to smooth the situation:

First, Storey was made presiding officer and did most of the talking. This was logical because he was vice chairman and a lawyer, and Chairman John A. Hannah was not. By happy coincidence, Storey's father was born in Alabama and both his grandfathers were Confederate soldiers.

The consensus was that Storey did an outstanding job, polite and mild but firm when he had to be. When Patterson tried to make a speech in violation of the rules, Storey gaveled him back into his seat in a hurry. A Southern spectator said the startled Governor-elect looked like "a little boy who dropped his bubble gum in the chicken house and didn't know what to do."

Second, the Commission hired as its public relations man David Koonce, a Washington newspaperman from North Carolina who also speaks the language. Koonce was the advance man who went down four days before the Commission, made contact with the press and others and told them what it was all about. Whatever the reason, local press coverage of the hearings was generally fair. Comment was restrained while the Commission was there and there was not one heckler on the courthouse steps.

Civil Rights Showdown Brewing in Alabama

Evening Star

Washington D. C.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 22 (AP).—The Civil Rights Commission's failure to gain access to county voter records may touch off a legal struggle which could forecast effectiveness of the Federal agency in the South.

Implications are strong that a State's right to governmental privacy as well as racial discrimination will be prime factors in any Federal action over Macon County's closely guarded registration files.

Such a legal fight, some observers believe, might make or break the new Civil Rights Commission.

White supremacy will not be surrendered easily in Macon County, where racial strife long has been commonplace, these observers say. Attorney General John Patterson, the Democratic nominee for Governor, has solidly blessed efforts to maintain white reign.

County Files Refused

Negroes outnumber white residents about 6 to 1 in the county, home of famed Tuskegee Institute. At the polls, however, white voters rule by a 2 to 1 margin and sew up all county and city government posts.

Defiance to any possible change in this pattern came to the fore Monday when county voter registration officials refused to turn over their records to two of the commission's agents from Washington.

Indications that a showdown may be brewing came last night in a telephone interview between the Montgomery Advertiser and A. H. Rosenfeld, director of the commission's office of complaints, information and surveys.

"The commission will have to consider some sort of action when it meets in Washington Thursday," Mr. Rosenfeld said.

Mr. Rosenfeld, reached at Alexandria, Va., said he had not heard from Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson, the agents who he said "intended to check the voter records as a result of complaints we had received."

During a preliminary trip to Macon County three weeks ago, he said, County Registration Chairman E. P. Livingston promised him the files would be available to agents. Mr. Livingston denied this.

Agents Misinformed

When the agents arrived in Tuskegee and said they had been informed they could see the files, Mr. Livingston said he told them "you have been misinformed."

Mr. Livingston said he and his two colleagues acted on advice of Mr. Patterson.

Mr. Patterson said he will resist any effort to get the records through court order because, under Alabama law, they are not public records and board members are under no legal obligation or duty to produce them.

Negroes have accused the board of discrimination frequently, but registration officials insist that qualifications other than race determine who may register.

One of these qualifications under Alabama law is for prospective voters to define the duties and obligations of citizenship.

Civil Rights Commission To Hear Ala. Vote Case

Washington Post

By BETTY PRYOR

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Civil Rights commission agreed unanimously last week to hold a hearing in Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 8 to look into charges that Negroes are being denied the right to vote in the state.

Vice Chairman Robert G. Storey said conditions at the time will determine whether the commission will subpena voting records of Macon County, Ala., which were denied its staff representatives Monday. Storey said he thought the records would be needed for a full hearing.

The Commission also announced it will hold a hearing Feb. 2 in New York City on discrimination in public housing and urban renewal projects. Chairman John A. Hannah said the choice of New York as the site did not indicate any feeling the city has been negligent.

CIVIL RIGHTS

"We have no feeling that the housing situation is worse in New York than elsewhere," he said.

"We desire to accumulate as much information as we can get regarding public housing and civil rights."

The Alabama hearing will be conducted by the entire commission and probably will last about three days. Storey said he assumed the proceedings would be open to the public, although no decision was reached at the regular commission meeting.

The Commission reported additional complaints of voting right denials in Alabama and Mississippi since its previous meeting on Sept. 10. It ordered preliminary surveys of these new complaints. As customary, it did not identify the source of the complaints.

DENIES RIGHT

The Commission said its Montgomery hearing was called in line with its duty "to investigate every valid allegation that certain citizens are being denied the right to vote and to have that vote counted by reason of their color, race, religion or national origin."

It said it had hoped to get all the facts necessay "through the cooperation and understanding of local an dstate officials." But it noted its agents had been denied access to voting records "by Macon county officials acting on the advice of the Atty. Gen. of Alabama." Macon county is predominantly Negro.

Alabama Attorney General John Patterson has advised the state's 67 county voter registration boards to withhold their records from federal agents.

Storey said the Commission's decision to hold the Montgomery hearing was not based on refusal to furnish the records. He said the Commission merely thought it proper to hold the inquiry "from the information we received."

The Commision also said it was making a preliminary investigation of a complaint of denial of voting rights in a northern state. Hannah said the complaint charged denial on the ground of national origin, rather than race. He declined to identify the state because of the "inconclusive nature" of the charge.

Civil Rights Commission To Hear Ala. Vote Complaints

WASHINGTON, D.C. (ANP)- The Civil Rights Commission unanimously agreed at its Thursday meeting to hold hearings on December 8, on the alleged violations of voting rights of Negroes in Alabama. It also agreed to hold hearings in New York in February to determine whether discrimination is being practiced in public housing. But it completely side-stepped any suggestions that it look into controversial school segregation problems, and also decided that investigations of bombings is outside the jurisdiction of the Commission.

The Commission also announced the appointment of 15 more State Advisory Committees bringing the total up to 39 states.

The decision to hold hearings in Alabama was made after the Commission's field representatives were denied access to registration records by Macon County officials acting on the advice of the Attorney General of Alabama.

MUST FULFILL DUTY

The Commission declared that it has a duty, imposed upon it by an act of Congress, to investigate every valid allegation that certain citizens are being denied the right to vote and have that vote counted by reason of their color, race, religion, or national origin.

The Commission has investigators now working in Mississippi and Florida, and has ordered them to continue their investigations. It has received progress reports from these areas but they are incomplete.

Chairman John A. Hannah said the Commission has received additional complaints on voting violations, but declined to name the states or to give the number of complaints. Some of the complaints came from a Northern state, he said, but they were based upon national origin rather than race.

Dr. Hannah announced that the Commission will hold hearings in New York in February to determine whether discrimination was being practiced in the field of public housing.

There have been no complaints from that state, he said, but it is necessary for the Commission to gather information in the field of housing 'for the record.'

Claims body without power to call jurists

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 8—A new gesture of defiance for the U. S. Civil Rights Commission came today from Circuit Judge George C. Wallace as the commission opened its hearings here into allegations of racial discrimination in registering voters in six Alabama counties.

Wallace, who threatened to jail any Civil Rights Commission agent who tried to get voting files from his court, said in a prepared statement that he will not answer a subpoena by the commission.

First witnesses before the Commission this morning was William P. Mitchell, 46, Veterans Administration Hospital employe and president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn:

MITCHELL CHARGED that the Macon County Board of Registrars have made it extremely difficult for Negro applicants to vote.

Mitchell said that he had experienced difficulty in registering, but added that he had been a qualified voter "since about 1946 or 1947."

Wallace, in a prepared statement, said that the federal agency, an executive commission, has no legal authority to subpoena the judge of a state court to answer for his judicial actions.

"MY COURT NEEDS no license by the executive branch of the government to carry out its functions," Wallace said. "I am abiding by the law in refusing to comply with an illegal request to appear before an executive commission to answer for my judicial actions."

THE COMMISSION hearing into claims that Negroes have been denied voting rights in Alabama moved slowly and tediously as Acting Chairman Robert G. Storey questioned Mitchell at great length.

He elicited the step-by-step procedure a voter applicant is put through in Macon County to register.

Mitchell said he made three attempts to register and even filed court proceedings in U. S. District Court at Montgomery, before he finally received his certification.

Mitchell was the first of 29 Negro witnesses sworn in at the opening of the hearing in the Federal Building courtroom.

The commission completed questioning complaining witnesses—all Negroes—from Macon County shortly before 1 p.m. and recessed until 2:30 p.m.

A total of 27 Negroes, most of whom are faculty, students, or have some connection with Tuskegee Institute, paraded to the witness stand before television cameras.

ONLY ONE other besides Mitchell said he was a qualified voter. He was Luther W. Hemmons, 75, retired civil service employe, who said he was a member of the franchise committee of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. This group has been seeking to register more Negro voters.

Last witness before the noon recess was George C. Busby, 61, a retired government employe at Tuskegee Institute, who said he had made repeated attempts to register but had always been turned down by the Macon County Board of Registrars for various reasons.

Most of the questioning was done by Acting Chairman Storey and Wilkins, only Negro member of the commission.

Wilkins invariably went strongly to the aid of witnesses asking them leading questions and showing a remarkable understanding of what they apparently were going to say.

FORMER GOV. BATTLE of Virginia asked some of the witnesses why they had waited until this year to seek to become registered voters, even though they had lived several years in Macon County. The witnesses gave varying answers.

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University, asked an occasional question, as did Dr. John A. Hannah, the commission chairman.

Former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton of Florida, the other commission member, listened intently to the testimony, but didn't ask any questions during the morning session.

FIFTEEN WHITE witnesses names were called.

One other white witness, Mrs Ruth Horne, member of the Dallas County Board of Registrars, was excused from testifying because of illness.

MITCHELL DETAILED to the commission, under questioning by Storey and J. Ernest Wilkins Negro member, voluminous details of hardships he said were imposed on Negro voter applicants in Macon.

He added that Negro applicants were required to apply in a small room separate from white applicants, with only two Negroes permitted to enter the room at one time. He said this inevitably resulted in long lines of Negro applicants waiting outside.

Mitchell said that of some 27,000 Negroes living in Macon County, more than 14,000 were of voting age but that only 111(were qualified as voters.

UNDER QUESTIONING by Wilkins, Mitchell said there were 3177 white residents in Macon, according to the 1950 census, and that there are 3016 whites on the voter list.

When Wilkins sought to draw from the witness the number of white persons under voting age in Macon, Mitchell said he didn't have this information.

Wilkins also sought to determine whether the 3177 figure represented all the white population of the county, or just the number of white persons of voting age, but the witness said he didn't know.

Former Gov. John S. Battle of Virginia, commission member, also questioned the witness as to precinct registration of voters.

MITCHELL SAID the board held meetings, usually at stores, in each of the 10 county precincts, but that he never knew of any Negro applicant seeking to register at any of those meetings.

Mitchell said Negroes were required to fill out an application form and also required to copy sections of the U. S. Constitution, among other things, in seeking to qualify.

He said this was a long, drawn-out procedure, and that the largest number of Negro applicants to complete these requirements in one day was 16.

The small courtroom was jammed, mostly with Negro witnesses and spectators, as the hearing progressed.

Gov.-Elec John Patterson, Alabama's present attorney general; Guntersville Atty. Ralph Smith Jr., his newly chosen legal adviser, and other members of his staff were present.

DOZENS OF reporters were land, along with batteries o cameramen.

Television cameras ground steadily as the hearing proceeded.

More than 50 witnesses have been subpoenaed by the commission in its investigation into voter registration of Negroes in six Alabama counties.

Circuit judges, however, have impounded voting records in five.

The question of whether federal court contempt action might be taken against any Alabama official who refused to produce voting records remained unanswered as the hearing began.

Vice-chairman Storey said developments would determine what action would be taken along that line.

...ust begun to fight' to keep ...ilibuster, Sen. Hill asserts

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 8—Sen. Lister Hill, lambasting civil rights legislation agitators, believes he and other Southern senators, with the help they will get from upper chamber members from other areas, have a good chance of defeating renewed attempts to knock out the filibuster rule.

Hill, who has fought hard and filibustered long against such measures, told this reporter:

"I feel that we've got a good fighting chance to prevent them from changing the Senate filibuster rule."

Hill, who plans to leave his Montgomery home soon after the Christmas holidays to join his colleagues, Sen. John Sparkman, and other Southern leaders in Washington for another strategy session in behalf of Alabama and the South, declared:

"We have just begun to fight."

The senior senator added that one of the last things he did before leaving was to meet with Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia and all our other Southern senators to discuss this very problem."

Sen. Hill pointed out that the Senate filibuster rule permits unlimited debate on measures coming before the upper chamber "has prevailed for 169 years."

He conceded that if the Senate rule is eliminated, or greatly weakened, to curb the power of the filibuster, it would surely set off a wave of equality legislation.

One of the discouraging things was the recent announcement by Republican Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, a former Taft leader and potent candidate for GOP Senate floor leader to succeed (and defeated) Sen. William Knowland of California, that he had changed sides and would vote for revision of the Senate rules.

Although unhapy over this, Sen. Hill is confident that other senators will come to the aid of the Southern group.

FOR PURPOSES of strategy, he does not want to call their names at this time.

Sen. Sparkman, in a recent speech before the Bessemer Bar Assn., declared that "You have my firm assurance that I, along with all of our group of Southern senators, will fight with every power at our command to preserve the filibuster rule."

He added that this rule "in the past has been our greatest weapon against all so-called civil rights laws."

It has been pointed out that the recent admittance of Alaska as the 49th state, with two North-minded senators to increase the upper chamber membership from 96 to 98, was a setback to the South's fight against integration.

The present requirement in the Senate makes it necessary to muster a constitutional two-thirds—that is, 64 of the 96 senators—to shut off debate.

Those who want to slap on cloture want to change the Senate rules to require only a majority of the Senate membership. If the present filibuster rule remained in effect when Alaska senators begin voting, then a 66 majority would be necessary to shut off debate.

Eastern, Northern racial questions–

Boutwell brands rights hearing propaganda

BY FRED H. TAYLOR, News staff writer

The Civil Rights Commission's hearing of claims of Negroes have been denied voting rights in Alabama was branded by Lt. Gov.-Elect Albert Boutwell as a propaganda sounding board for racial agitators in a four-ring publicity and propaganda circus for civil rights agitators in the East and North," added Boutwell, three times a state senator from Jefferson County.

Boutwell said he "still has to confer with six or seven state senators" before he is ready to announce selection of other committee chairmen and those who will serve with them on key upper chamber groups.

He did not say so, but there have been reports that he plans to name State Sen.-Elect Bob Kendall Jr. of Conecuh chairman of the Senate insurance committee, and State Sen.-Elect Larry Dumas of Jefferson chairman of the upper chamber judiciary committee.

KENDALL, AN insurance man of Evergreen, is a veteran member of both House and Senate. And Dumas, Birmingham attorney, served two terms in the lower chamber of the Legislature before winning overwhelming election to the Senate.

"A great many educators have recommended that Sen. Shelton be appointed chairman of the Senate education committee," added Boutwell.

Asked if he was making the Senate committee appointments upon the suggestion of Gov.-Elect Patterson, the lieutenant governor said he had considered the incoming governor's wishes in selecting the chairman and vice chairman of the Senate rules and finance and taxation committees.

"These two committees always have had—and always will have—much to do with the success of the state administration," he added.

But Boutwell emphasized that "I have not agreed and will not agree to appoint anybody to any Senate committee who I don't think is completely competent."

He said that Patterson was "pleased" with his selection of State Sen.-Elect Dave Archer of Madison as rules committee chairman and State Sen. Walter Givhan of Dallas as vice chairman.

And he added that the incoming governor also approved the appointment of State Sen. Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery as chairman of the Senate finance committee, with State Sen. E. O. Eddins of Marengo as vice chairman.

AS TO FOLLOWING Patterson's suggestions on committee assignments, Boutwell commented that "I would say I haven't followed his (Patterson's) advice as much as he has followed mine."

He said he had appointed Sen.-Elect Archer chairman of the rules committee "to help get Patterson's administration on the road, because I think he was due this consideration."

Boutwell, in discussing the Civil Rights Commission, said he thought the Montgomery hearing "is just the beginning in a long-range program of agitation."

He said he doesn't know of any county in which Negroes have been denied voting rights, adding that "a great many Negroes have been added to the voting lists in Alabama." He said that voter qualification requirements in this state "are very mild."

AS TO HIS PROPOSAL for a solid Dixie front in the South's fight for segregation and states' rights, Boutwell said plans are to "set up a permanent legislative committee and join with other states not only in the fight for segregation but on the broader matter of states' rights."

"We must take the initiative and prepare for a long-range fight," he continued. "They (Northern radicals) are making the fight on us and they have unlimited funds."

He said that Patterson or Gov.-Elect Ernest Vandiver of Georgia would have to give out any further information concerning a recent strategy huddle of Alabama and Georgia states' rights leaders in Birmingham.

Boutwell added that "I have conferred with representatives of Gov. Faubus of Arkansas before and since Little Rock."

BOUTWELL, who helped rewrite and steer through Alabama's school placement law, which was recently upheld "on its face" by the U. S. Supreme Court, said the high tribunal's ruling "indicates that it followed the principles of law in keeping with its 1954 decision." He insisted that the Alabama statute is within the framework of the U. S. Constitution.

He pointed out that the proposal was originally introduced in the upper chamber by former State Sen. Sam Englehardt Jr., but was rewritten and passed under the sponsorship of all 35 senators.

Regarding proposals for a school bond issue, Boutwell pointed out that Alabama voters have turned down the last several school bond proposals because of the integration threat.

Reminded of deficits in the school and other divisions of state government, Boutwell was asked how the next administration would be able to "pull the state out of this financial hole."

His reply was "We will have honesty, integrity and good business management."

BOUTWELL sidestepped a query as to whether he planned to run for governor in 1962, saying "I didn't decide to run for lieutenant governor until the last minute."

But he emphasized he is not interested in running for the U. S. Senate.

"I just wouldn't like to go to Washington," he said. "I have a hard task ahead of me as lieutenant governor and I'm going to try to do a good job in that office."

He pointed out that he is still chairman of a legislative committee on segregation and wants to give this assignment all the time he possibly can.

Meadon Clash Seen Over Civil Rights

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A clash between the Civil Rights Commission and the state of Alabama may erupt next month at an open hearing on Negro voting.

The commission says it will subpoena witnesses and records for a Dec. 8 hearing in Montgomery, Ala.

But Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Alabama's governor-elect, has said the state's vote registrars may not have to turn over records to federal representatives. Patterson has said he will resist any move by the commission to get the records.

The hearing will be the first held by the new commission, which announced plans for it and other activities after a closed meeting here Wednesday.

A national conference, focusing on school integration problems in the border states and the South, was scheduled for Nashville, Tenn., in February.

The commission said it also is investigating complaints that some Puerto Ricans have been denied the right to vote in New York City. They reportedly can read and write Spanish, but not English. Literacy in the English language is required of voters under New York's laws.

For some time the commission has been checking charges that registrars in Alabama's Macon County have kept Negroes from voting. Last Oct. 20, the commission demanded records from the county's Voter Registration Board. The board, following Patterson's advice, refused.

It is this refusal that promoted the commission may take them Montgomery hearing. More than Macon County, however, may be considered. Complaints have been received from other counties, and the commissino may take them up together.

There is no certainty that the hearing will feature a battle over the records. Robert G. Storey, vice chairman of the commission who also is dean of the law school at Southern Methodist University, put the situation this way:

The commission, which has received more than 20 complaints, will subpoena at least 20 witnesses including vote registrars. They will be asked to bring pertinent records. The commission will decide whether to try forcing reluctant witnesses to turn over records when and if that problem arises.

the commission plans to collect all available information about the problems of schools that have changed from segregated to integrated institutions. John A. Hannah, chairman of the commission, said no other government agency has done this job.

Echo Of Little Rock Seen In Bloc Voting In County

A resounding echo of the use of federal troops in the Little Rock, Ark., school dispute was recorded Tuesday in the voting in Macon County. Tabulation of the votes revealed that hopes of a two-party system in this county and over the state were smothered by a wave of resentment over invasion of state affairs by President Eisenhower to enforce the 1954 school ruling of the Supreme Court.

Whether influenced by a resentment over Atty Gen. John Patterson's strong stand for segregation or by President Eisenhower's use of federal troops at Little Rock, or by a combination of the two, Macon County Negroes cast their votes almost unanimously for the Republican candidates for state office. Aside from the two boxes where Negro voters predominate, the Republican candidates received only a scattering of votes.

This was in sharp contrast to two years ago when Macon County, for the first time in history, gave a majority to the Republicans. In that election when President Eisenhower was running for re-election, he received 1,067 votes, as compared with 1, 024 votes for Adali Stevenson, the Democratic nominee.

In that election the support for the Republican nominee was spread pretty generally over the county, with no evidence of bloc voting. But that was a year before the federal troops were sent into Little Rock.

The same trend was generally noted over the state and throughout the South. Four years ago the Republican nominee for governor, Tom Abernathy, Talladega newspapers publisher, received some 88,000 votes, the largest ever recorded for a GOP candidate.

In contrast, the Republican candidate for governor, William L. Longshore, Jr., of Birmingham received only slightly more than 25,000 votes.

CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION WILL HOLD PUBLIC HEARINGS IN MONTGOMERY IN MOVE TO COMPLETE DISCLOSURE OF ALABAMA VOTING RECORDS

County Officials Refuse To Give Documents To Investigators

CHARGE NEGRO VOTE DISCRIMINATION

Washington, Oct. 23—The Civil Rights Commission will hold public hearings in Montgomery, Ala., beginning Dec. 8 in a move to compel disclosure of Alabama voting records.

Officials of Macon County, Ala., refused this week to give registration documents to commission investigators. They acted on the advice of John Paterson, Alabama Attorney General and Democratic candidate for Governor.

The six-member rights commission voted unanimously today to go to Alabama and investigate charges of discrimination against Negro voters. The hearings will be the first held since the commission was created a year ago by the Civil Rights Act of 1957.

The commission has subpoena powers under the act. While no explicit statement was made on the subject today, all indications were that the Macon County voting records would be subpoenaed.

Dr. John A. Hannah, commission chairman, said the position of Alabama officials was not the only reason for the hearing. He said the basic ground for going to the area was the existence of substantial complaints about voting discrimination for reasons of race.

Commission investigators have been studying such charges for some time in Alabama, Mississippi and Florida. Dr. Hannah indicated that they had met with no resistance in the two other states such as that in Alabama, but he would not rule out the possibility of hearing in those states, too.

The commission also disclosed today that it had authorized one further voting investigation—this one in a Northern state. The state was not identified.

In this case, Dr. Hannah said, the commission has received a sworn complaint about denials of the right to vote on the ground of the would-be voter's national origin. The group has power to study such discrimination as well as racial.

The commission also announced that it would hold public hearings in New York City starting Feb. 2 on discrimination in housing.

Dr. Hannah explained at a news conference that the commission had no criticism of New York's handling of racial problems in housing.

He said the inquiry would be purely a fact-finding one.

"The hearing does not indicate any feeling," he said, "that New York is negligent in this respect. It may well be that the hearing will document that the record in New York is particularly good."

The commission has its staff working on fact-finding studies in voting, housing and education.

Dr. Hannah said the New York session would be held because the housing study was at the point where it would be useful to have a hearing on problems created by urban redevelopment and other government programs.

Reporters asked Dr. Hannah why the commission had not scheduled hearings on the education side of its studies — in Little Rock, for example, or in the Virginia areas where schools have been closed to avoid racial integration.

Dr. Hannah said no need had been felt for school hearings so far. He repeated that the commission "is a fact-finding organization," and said it was not clear what good the group could do in the school situation.

Observers saw significance today in the fact that all the members of the commission, including the three from the South, had voted to proceed with an Alabama hearing. The Southern members might naturally have been reluctant to move into so direct a clash between Federal and state power.

The Southern members are Robert G. Storey, vice chairman, of Texas; John S. Battle of Virginia, and Doyle E. Carlton of Florida.

The two other commissioners are the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh of the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., and Ernest Wilkins, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Vote Registering Called In 'Danger'

Patterson Warns Of Break-Down Because Of Federal Intervention

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 3 (AP)—Atty. Gen. John Patterson says voter registration machinery in Alabama is in danger of breaking down because of Federal intervention.

The threat of prosecution and personal damage suits under the new Civil Rights Act will make it difficult to get registration officials to serve, the Attorney General warned today.

As the incoming governor, Patterson will be one of three state officials who appoint County Boards of Registrars for the next four years.

Registrars serve on a part-time basis with pay only for the time they are in session, the Attorney General explained, adding:

"If they are faced with the threat of Federal officers peeping over their shoulders every time they do something, people will be reluctant to serve."

He said he is fearful they will "think a long time" before accepting office in the shadow of threatened criminal prosecution and suits for damages.

Registration machinery in Macon County, where Negroes outnumber white residents nearly 6-1, has failed to function for as long as 18 months at a time. Patterson said it could easily happen in other counties.

The Attorney General said the reluctance to serve has been intensified by the announcement that the Civil Rights Commission will hold a hearing in Montgomery Dec. 8.

That announcement came after registrars in Macon County refused, on Patterson's advice, to let Commission investigators see their records.

The Democratic nominee for governor, construing registration files as private records, has said other boards throughout the state also should withhold them from Federal agents.

...board members to bring certain records to the Montgomery hearing—a final decision to do this is yet to be made.

The commission will meet again in Washington on Nov. 12 to resolve this and other controversial items. One of these is how much of the Montgomery hearings, if any, are to be in closed session.

It can hold closed hearings to get testimony from witnesses whose personal safety might be threatened by a public appearance—or if it desired to preview testimony to see if whether its presentation in public would needlessly degrade or deframe any other person.

It might well turn out that part of the Montgomery hearing would be closed, part opened.

UNDER THE 1957 ACT creating the commission, it has the right to issue subpoenas. If the subpoenas are not obeyed, the commission can call on the attorney general to go into the federal court of that jurisdiction and start contempt proceedings.

If and when the commission's powers are challenged—as seems to be shaping up in Alabama—the agency goes into a race against time.

It cannot afford any lengthy delays for the commission's life expires on Sept. 8, 1959. It must make its final fact-finding report to the president and to the Congress by that time. This means, of course, that by mid-1959 a strong move will be started by pro-civil rights forces to get Congress to extend the life of the commission.

Events in Alabama in the next few weeks will exert great influence on the future of the Commission.

Civil Rights Unit Official Here To Arrange Hearing

The executive secretary of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights arrived in Montgomery Friday in connection with arrangements with the Dec. 8 hearing on alleged violation of voting rights of Negroes.

Mrs. Carol R. Arth, an attractive brunette and mother of two teen-age girls, said her visit was for the purpose of "becoming acquainted with the city and physical arrangements for the hearing.

She was accompanied here by A. H. Rosenfeld, director of the Division of Complaints, Information and Surveys of the commission.

Mrs. Arth said she plans to return to Washington Saturday. Rosenfeld said he expects to leave here about Sunday.

Mrs. Arth is a native of Idaho but has spent mose of her life in California. She became connected with the State Department in 1953.

She said she was the first employe of the Commission, which was established by Congress in September 1957. She said she went to the commission "on loan from the State Department" in January and was officially assigned to the commission in March.

Dec. 8 Set For Probe Into Macon Complaints

The Federal Civil Rights Commission announced Thursday in Washington that it would hold a hearing—its first—in Montgomery on Dec. 8 to investigate alleged denial of voting rights in Alabama.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson promptly accused the commission of playing politics on the vote issue.

The hearing will be the first held by the commission since it was created by Congress in 1957.

Chairman John A. Hannah told a news conference the hearing would be confined to allegations of denial of the right to vote in Alabama. He had been asked whether it also would be concerned with the refusal of the Macon County voter registration board to show its records to commission agents.

Vice Chairman Robert G. Storey said it had not been decided whether the Montgomery hearing would be open to the public, but added that so far as he could see now it probably would be. The commission's decision to hold the hearing was unanimous.

MORE INVESTIGATIONS

The commission also announced after a closed session that it had authorized further investigations of alleged denial of voting rights in Mississippi and Florida. The first investigations in those states were authorized in September. There have been additional complaints since then.

A preliminary survey of an allegation of denial of voting rights based on national origin was also authorized in a Northern state which Hannah declined to name.

A fact-finding hearing on the subject of housing was scheduled to start in New York Feb. 2. Hannah and other commission officials emphasized this was not based on any complaints but was deemed advisable to obtain information which would not be available otherwise.

Concerning the Alabama situation, the commission said in a statement:

DENIED ACCESS

"While the commission had hoped that it might be able to collect the facts necessary for a complete report on voting complaints received from the state of Alabama through the cooperation and understanding of local and state officials, its field representatives on Monday were denied access to registration records by Macon County officials acting on the advice of the attorney general of Alabama.

"Congress imposed upon the commission a duty to investigate every valid allegation that certain citizens are being denied the right to vote and have that vote counted by reason of their color, race, religion, or national origin.

"In fulfillment of that duty, the commission has accordingly approved a hearing to be held at Montgomery, Ala., beginning on Monday, Dec. 8, 1958."

As to whether the Macon records would be subpoenaed, Storey would only say that it would seem to be necessary to have the full and complete record dealing with the controversy.

20 COMPLAINTS

"That question would depend on the preparation for the hearing and the circumstances we find up to the time of the hearing," said Storey, who is dean of Southern Methodist University's law school. The commission has had more than 20 complaints concerning denial of voting rights in Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, and the one unidentified Northern state, Hannah said. He added that the reports on the preliminary investigations already conducted in Florida and Mississippi have been inconclusive.

Patterson, the Democratic nominee for governor, denounced the commission's ...

He said it was done to "create an atmosphere to get some Republican votes in the coming congressional elections."

Patterson is the state's chief legal officer who advised the Macon County voter registration board to close its records earlier this week to Civil Rights Commission investigators.

SAME POLICY

He also suggested that other registration boards throughout the state should adopt the same policy, contending that files of voter applications aren't public records.

The attorney general said Thursday's announcement from the commission "is further proof of the intention of the Republican administration to destroy the rights of the state and reduce our Constitution to a mere scrap of paper."

"It is a further attempt to harass and intimidate our public officials," he continued. "Such reckless action on the part of the Republican administration is politically inspired and will bring on grave consequences to our entire nation and to our people."

Patterson said he will "resist their illegal and unwarranted encroachments with every power at my command."

He said that under the Civil Rights law, complaints must be filed with the commission "in writing under oath," and challenged the federal agency to identify the Negroes who have accused registration officials of discrimination.

"People accused ought to know who the accusers are," he said.

NEW DETERMINATION

The chairman of the Macon County board, E. P. Livingston, meanwhile voiced a renewed determination to withhold the records from the commission "until Mr. Patterson tells me to do otherwise."

A Negro leader in Montgomery disclosed at the same time that his people here may ask the commission to hear complaints from them as well as those from Macon County at the December hearing.

Refus Lewis, chairman of the registration committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., said complaints have been filed with the federal government and that his group will have evidence ready to present.

Integration rulings handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court during a Republican national administration are cited as a key factor behind the reported Negro inclination to the Republicans.

11-1-58

OBSERVERS point to one thing in particular and say it should be given serious consideration in sizing up the race.

It's this:

In all probability the Negro vote will be relatively light—in fact, just as light, proportionately, as the white vote next Tuesday.

There has been nothing particularly sharp to stir up a big vote turnout.

The GOP slate, particularly its candidate for governor, has put up a good fight all along. Many of the promises made and the criticisms of the way things have been going on Capitol Hill are tops.

But the odds, even not taking into consideration President Eisenhower's calling out troops at Little Rock, have always been strong against the Republicans.

THERE ARE about 50,000 Negro voters in Alabama.

In the recent Democratic primaries, however, the vote cast by Negroes was not as high, proportionately, as that cast by white voters.

But even if the Negro voters turned out in full strength Tuesday and cast their vote against the Democratic ticket it would make very little difference so far as concerns the outcome.

It would, however, give the Republicans something to boast about, namely, that the GOP vote this year in Alabama exceeded the total cast in the last comparable general election, the 1954 general election.

Ala. County Defiant on Vote Rolls

Herald Tribune

Denies Access To U. S. Agents

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 21 (AP)—Voter registration officials in troubled Macon County withheld their records from Federal agents today in a defiant gesture which brought prompt echoes elsewhere in Alabama.

Attorney General John Patterson, insisting that registration documents are private rather than public records, urged county boards of registrars throughout the state to keep them out of the hands of Civil Rights Commission agents.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, chairman of the board in Montgomery County, which adjoins Macon, promised to resist any demand for access to records there.

Mobile Would Co-operate

But John A. Repoll, chairman of the Mobile County board, said Federal investigators would be welcome to look at his records.

The chairman of the Macon County board, E. B. Livingston, said he and his two colleagues acted on advice of the Attorney General, Democratic nominee for Governor.

Mr. Livingston said two agents of the Civil Rights Commission who visited the board yesterday left with a hint of court action, but there was no official indication of the next move. The agents, identified as Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson, were unavailable for comment.

"Not Public Record"

Mr. Patterson said he will resist any effort to get the records through court order because "under Alabama law, they are not public records," and board members are "under no legal obligation or duty" to produce them.

Macon County, where Tuskegee Institute is situated, has long been plagued by racial strife. Negroes outnumber white residents in the county 6 to 1 but white voters have a 2-to-1 advantage at the polls.

Pressure for Negro registration has kept the board of registrars inactive much of the time. At one period, the county had no functioning board of Registrars for eighteen months, and no prospective new voter, white or Negro, could register.

Negroes have repeatedly accused the board of discrimination, but registration officials deny the charge. Mr. Livingston insisted that the policy of the present board is to reject any one who fails to meet the qualifications regardless of race.

Rights Unit Eyes Alabama Action

P-25

Associated Press.

An Alabama county's refusal to let federal officials inspect voter registration files in Tuskegee brought a warning that the United States Civil Rights Commission "will have to consider some sort of action" when it meets in Washington tomorrow.

The warning was attributed to A. H. Rosenfeld, the federal commission's director of the office for complaints, who added:

"I don't have the slightest idea what the action will be."

Negroes have charged Macon County registration officers with discrimination. Two commission agents who sought early this week to check on the report were denied access to the files.

Meanwhile, in Birmingham, Ala., the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth and 13 other Negroes face trial on misdemeanor charges tomorrow in connection with a bus integration demonstration. Mr. Shuttlesworth, a Negro anti-segregation leader, was still in jail. The others were released on $300 bail each.

ANTI-NEGRO LAW WINS COURT TEST

U.S. District Judge Upholds Tuskegee Voting Curb—Appeal Is Expected

P-12C

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29 (AP)—An anti-Negro voting law simmered its first test in Federal Court today. The law has deprived Negroes of a voice in the city government at Tuskegee.

United States District Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. upheld a 16-month-old legislative act that virtually eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee by rearranging the city boundaries. It left all predominantly Negro residential areas outside the city limits.

Judge Johnson said nothing in the Federal Constitution prohibit the Legislature from changing the boundaries of a city regardless of the motive.

Negroes Boycott Stores

Fred Gray of Montgomery, who filed the test suit on behalf of a group of Tuskegee Negroes, said the ruling probably would be appealed to higher courts.

Enactment of the law in June, 1957 touched off a mass Negro boycott of white Tuskegee merchants that is still in force.

Its passage left only ten registered Negro voters inside the city in contrast to the 420 who voted there earlier.

The 600 white voters in the city were left undisturbed.

Negroes outnumber white residents of Tuskegee 4 to 1; in Macon County as a whole, the ratio is nearly 6 to 1.

And although Negroes now have only half as many voters as the whites, segregationists have expressed fear that the new Federal Civil Rights Law would force the registration of enough Negroes to give them political control of the county.

Judge Explains Ruling

The Negroes who challenged the law contended it deprived them of their rights guaranteed by the Federal Constitution.

Judge Johnson said that regardless of the motive of the Legislature in enacting the law, "this court has no authority to declare such act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution of the United States." He continued:

"This court has no control over, no supervision over, and no power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body.

"The law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislatve body of the state."

He cited several United States Supreme Court decisions that he said had made that clear in previous test cases.

South warned of breakdown of registration

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 3 —Continued federal pressure may cause a breakdown in voter registration machinery in Alabama and other Southern communities, Atty. Gen. John Patterson warned today.

He said it may become extremely difficult if not impossible to get anyone to serve on the boards of registrars in some Alabama counties where Negroes outnumber white residents. As the incoming governor, Patterson will be one of three state officials who appoint registration officials for the next four years.

He pointed out in a statement that registrars serve on a part-time basis "virtually without compensation," and added:

"If they are faced with the threat of federal officers peeping over their shoulders every time they do something, people will be very reluctant to serve.

"Under the new civil rights law, they might be subject to criminal prosecution as well as suits for personal damages. They will think a long time before they would want to serve."

that Macon County, for example, has gone as long as 18 months without a functioning board of registrars because of demands for Negro registration there.

The present Macon County board recently refused to let investigators from the Civil Rights Commission see their records. That was followed by the announcement that the commission will hold a hearing here Dec. 8 to hear testimony on alleged discrimination against Negroes in Alabama.

Patterson advised the board to withhold its files from the federal agents and said boards in other counties should do the same.

He said he will resist any effort to gain access to the registration records at the hearing here next month.

The Lesson Of Macon County

The Federal Civil Rights Administration should take a hard look at Macon County when it begins its hearings Dec. 8 in Montgomery.

It is electing to look into voting there, It should look further—and we trust the two Southern members of the commission will—and study the realistic political situation involved.

It would be helpful for the commission to consider the very real concern of the Macon countians.

But even more specifically, it ought to study the possibilities which lie ahead if the federal group tries, through the courts, to get injunctions against members of boards of registrars.

The fact is that when things get rough, the state may find that board after board of registrars will be bereft of members. Attorney General Patterson, our governor-elect, has warned that this might happen if the federal agency threatens personal damage suits or other punitive action.

The Macon County experience is indicative of the reality, which is that states control the machinery of elections. Unles and until Congress wishes to change this, and we much doubt it ever will, the procedure of registration and handling of elections will and must remain with the states. There simply is no way to alter this system without redrawing the whole of the American electing procedure.

If the federal government tries to apply pressure, members of boards will simply resign. How can the federal government beat that situation?

READY TO TEST It will be Gov.-Elect John Patterson, Alabama's attorney general, and members of his staff.

Patterson has blasted commission "snoopers" sent into his state, and stormy sessions are in prospect.

Furthermore, Gov.-Elect Patterson has advised members of boards of registrars in the 67 counties to refuse to permit commission probers to see their records.

Registration officials in neighboring Macon County, where Negroes outnumber white residents nearly seven to one, defied the "snoopers" and refused to show them inspection records.

PATTERSON, who has emphasized repeatedly in speeches that the Macon Board of Registrars' records would not be opened to "these snoopers," declared:

"We must stand up and make our attempts sacred registrars have asked certain questions of registration applicants in an effort to establish the truth, which might be embarrassing to the applicants. But they would not be embarrassing to the board."

THE COMMISSION earlier this month had stated that the subpoenas would be signed by Dr. Hannah and that there probably would be public announcement in Washington at the time of issuance.

ords at the Montgomery hearing.

UNDER ALABAMA'S voter qualification law, applicants for registration must be able to read and write, be of "good character" and be able to answer a questionnaire to the satisfaction of county boards of registrars. And registrars have broad discretion in passing on applicants.

While the hearing, which will begin at 10 a.m. one week from Monday, apparently was prompted by Macon registrars' defiance of the commission, it may be broadened to include an investigation of alleged discriminations against Negro voter applicants in other Alabama counties.

Negroes in Montgomery County also have protested to the commission against what they charge is a pattern of discrimination.

Tuskegee appeal set

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A Federal court decision which upheld the Alabama Legislature in redistricting the city limits of Tuskegee and taking away the voting rights of hundreds of colored residents, will be appealed to the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court.

Fred D. Gray, attorney for a group of colored Tuskegee citizens, announced he would appeal shortly Federal Judge Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr.'s ruling that Alabama lawmakers had the right to shift the city limits regardless of the motive.

Without the signature of the governor, the state legislature in June, 1957 changed the city limits of Tuskegee placing an overwhelming number of colored residents outside the city boundary.

THE ACTION stripped them of their voting rights in Tuskegee and Macon County where colored persons outnumber whites by a ratio of 7 to 1.

In his decision against the suit brought by colored persons here, Judge Johnson ruled that nothing in the Constitution forbids the Legislature from shifting city limits.

Tuskegee residents complained that the reshuffle of boundaries deprived them of their constitutional rights. Colored persons could take political control of Tuskegee if enough were registered to vote.

Since the anti-colored voting law was enacted last June, colored citizens have launched a trade boycott here that has shut the doors of 15 or more white merchants.

THE BOYCOTT, now 16 months old, "is holding its own," Mr. Gray told the AFRO Friday morning.

Colored persons applied the economic freeze on white merchants in retaliation to being disfranchised from their voting rights.

The change in city limits left only 10 registered colored voters in the city whereas before there were 420. The 600 white voters were not affected.

"THIS COURT has no authority to declare such an act invalid after measuring it by any yardstick made known by the Constitution, of the U.S.," Judge Johnson ruled, adding:

"This court has no control, supervision or power to change any boundaries of municipal corporations fixed by a duly convened and elected legislative body.

"The law is clear that the supremacy and absolute control as to the territorial boundaries of municipalities is vested in the legislative body of the state."

IN WASHINGTON, a spokesman for the Civil Rights Commission hinted that the newly-created agency had no jurisdiction in political matters such as the Tuskegee case.

The spokesman added, however, that it had set Dec. 8 as a date to begin hearings into charges that qualified Macon County voters have been denied their voting rights.

Hearings, scheduled to be held in Montgomery, will deal with accusations that the board of registrars of Macon County have illegally refused to register qualified colored citizens.

In other moves concerning Alabama, the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division plans to probe the arrest last Monday of three Birmingham colored ministers on charges of vagrancy.

THE REVS. S. S. Seay, H. H. Hubbard and A. W. Wilson were snatched from the home of the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth in Birmingham, tossed into jail and held several hours before the charges were dropped and they were released.

Alabama Board Bars Vote Data To U. S. Agents

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Oct. 21 (AP).—Voter registration officials in troubled Macon County withheld their records from Federal agents today in a defiant gesture which brought prompt echoes elsewhere in Alabama.

Attorney General John Patterson, insisting that registration documents are private rather than public records, urged county boards of registratros throughout the State to keep them out of the hands of Civil Rights agents.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, chairman of the board in Montgomery county, which adjoins Macon, promised to resist any demand for access to records there.

But Chairman John L. Herrod of the Mobile county board said Federal investigators would be welcome to look at his records.

COURT ACTION HINTED

The chairman of the Macon county board, E. P. Livingston, said he and his two colleagues acted on advice of the Attorney General, Democratic nominee for Governor for the term starting next January.

Livingston said two agents of the Civil Rights Commission who visited the board yesterday left with a hint at court action, but there was no official indication of the next move. The agents, identified as Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson, were unavailable for comment.

Macon county, where Tuskegee Institute is located, has long been plagued by racial strife. Negroes outnumber white residents in the county approximately six to one, but white voters have a two-to-one advantage at the polls.

ACTION EXPECTED

A Tuskegee Negro leader, the Rev. K. L. Buford, said the board's action was "no more than I expected." Buford is acting president of the Tuskegee Civic Association, a Negro organization which has promoted a voter registration campaign.

Negroes in Macon county have long complained of discrimination in voting

At times in the past the county has gone as long as 18 months with no functioning registration board because of recurring demands from the Negroes.

Board members have denied the discrimination charges, explaining that Negroes who were turned down had failed to meet the qualifications. Alabama law requires prospective voters to answer a questionnaire which asks, among other things, for a definition of the "duties and obligations" of citizenship.

...o new counties hinted—

...Court of Appeals room in the Postoffice and Federal Building. Storey again estimated the hearings would last "two or possibly three days."

Staff Director Gordon Tiffany said there has been no change that he knows of in the attitude of Macon County officials, whose refusal to give commission agents access to their registration records led to the decision late last month to set the hearings in Montgomery.

IN ANSWER to a question by this reporter, Tiffany said that no agent or representative has talked directly with Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson. "We have talked with, and corresponded with representatives of Patterson's office."

It was Attorney General (and Governor-Elect) Patterson who advised the Macon County officials not to let commission agents see the voting records.

Patterson said the records are not, by state law, public records, and that some of the information on questionnaires filled out by persons seeking voting rights is of a highly personal nature. For example, it includes such questions as whether the applicant has ever suffered a mental illness.

PATTERSON SAID commission agents declined to state specifically whose voting rights were allegedly being denied, or how this was done. He said the whole thing looked like "a fishing expedition, politically inspired."

Chairman John Hannah stressed once again that the commission is purely a fact-finding body, charged by law with investigation valid, sworn, written complaints that voting is being denied by reason of race, religion or national origin.

The commission has until Sept. 9, 1959 to report, though it may be called for preliminary reports or recommendations before that time, he added.

Storey said he assumed the Montgomery hearings would be open. Under law, the commission must go into executive session if it determines that any testimony to be heard will tend to defame or degrade any one. If such closed sessions are held, there are stiff penalties for public disclosure of any testimony taken in the closed meeting.

THE COMMISSION is authorized by Congress to issue its own subponeas. If they are not obeyed, the commission can ask the attorney general of the U. S. to go into federal court and institute contempt proceedings. This would have to be done in the court of Federal Judge Fred Johnson at Montgomery.

While the commission has made no formal decision on this matter, it is plain it will go into federal court, if necessary, to get access to the voting records it wans to inspect.

CHAIRMAN HANNAH said the commission's advisory committee in Alabama has been "approved." This means by the commission. Only after the five to nine members of the committee have agreed to serve is the group's membership announced.

Beyond question, the commission has been having great difficulty getting persons in Alabama, Mississippi and other Deep South states to serve as advisors. In Mississippi, too, the committee has been "approved" by the commission, but acceptances have not come through from those asked to serve.

A commission announcement yesterday identified New York as the "Northern state" in which it has previously said it was checking on complaints of denial of voting rights due to national origin.

The complaints came, it was said, from Puerto Ricans who can speak and read Spanish, but not English—as required by the New York state constitution.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT said, too, a "national conference" with local public school officials of nearby states will be held in Nashville, Tenn., the last week in February.

The aim will be to get "all available information about the problems involved in transition from segregated to non-segregated public schools.

Undoubtedly officials from Alabama will be invited. Acceptances will be on a voluntary basis, however, and no persons will be subpoenaed.

Hannah said "this is a conference, not an inquiry."

Patterson Cites Danger Of Civil Rights Laws

Montgomery Advertiser

Atty. Gen. John Patterson says voter registration machinery in Alabama is in danger of breaking down because of federal intervention.

Montgomery Ala.

The threat of prosecution and personal damage suits under the new Civil Rights Act will make it difficult to get registration officials to serve, the attorney general warned Monday.

As the probable incoming governor, Patterson will be one of three state officials who appoint county boards of registrars for the next four years.

Registrars serve on a parttime basis with pay only for the time they are in session, the attorney general explained, adding:

"If they are faced with the threat of federal officers peeping over their shoulders every time they do something, people will be reluctant to serve."

He said he is fearful they will "think a long time" before accepting office in the shadow of threatened criminal prosecution and suits for damages.

Registration machinery in Macon County, where Negroes outnumber white residents nearly 6-1, has failed to function for as long as 18 months at a time. Patterson said it could easily happen in other counties.

The attorney general said the reluctance to serve has been intensified by the announcement that the Civil Rights Commission will hold a hearing in Montgomery Dec. 8.

That announcement came after registrars in Macon County refused, on Patterson's advice, to let commission investigators see their records.

The Democratic nominee for governor, construing registration files as private records, has said other boards throughout the state also should withhold them from federal agents.

Alabama politics—

Andrews lays plans to tighten registration law

BY HUGH W. SPARROW, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 21—At least one legislator is convinced something should be done about tightening up on Alabama's voter registration laws.

Bullock Sen.-elect Lawrence K. Andrews says he is going to sponsor legislation to strengthen and make more elastic the questionnaire tests employed by county registrars in determining a registration applicant's citizenship qualifications.

He said at present applicants are asked a series of questions, the answers to which supposedly determine for the registrars whether the prospective voter is entitled to the right of suffrage.

SPARROW

Those questions, proposed by the Alabama Supreme Court several years ago, are all right, Andrews said, but there is one very definite objection to them.

They have been in effect so long, he said, that those seeking mass registration of would-be voters have long since memorized the questions and answers.

Thus armed with the question and answers, they instruct the voter applicants so that they are often able to give the proper replies to each question.

Proposed bill would allow new questions

"THE BILL I HAVE in mind," said Andrews, "is one which would permit substitution of new questions from time to time so as to give registrars a better understanding as to whether the applicant really knows the duties and obligations of citizenship."

Andrews also said he intends to introduce a bill making it a felony punishable by imprisonment and permanent loss of voting rights for a person to buy a vote.

"Vote-buying is one of the worst abuses connected with our system of free government," Andrews said. "The law now makes both the vote buyer and seller equally guilty. Under that sort of law it is well nigh impossible to prove that a vote has been bought.

ANDREWS

"It is generally understood that the vote buyer, rather than the seller, is the greater menace to good government. By making the buyer alone guilty it is much more likely that proof of such a transaction can be obtained."

In other words, he said, the seller can involve the buyer.

Andrews admitted a bill making similar provisions was introduced during the 1955 legislative session.

The bill, he said, passed the Senate, but reportedly was blocked in the House judiciary committee by its chairman, Phenix City's Rep. Jabe Brassell.

Important date, place scheduled

A GOOD DATE an dplace to remember: Dec. 6, Sheraton Plaza Hotel, Washington.

At that time, according to Alabama's Democratic national committeeman, Charles W. McKay Jr. of Sylacauga, the Democratic National Committee will hold what could be a very important session.

Supposedly the National Committee is meeting for one purpose, selection of the 1960 Democratic National Convention city.

"Most anything, however, could come up," said McKay.

Asked if the national chairman, Frank M. Butler of Indiana might resign at that time, McKay said he hesitated to discuss the possibility.

"But," he added, "it could happen."

Butler's resignation said possible

BUTLER, HE SAID, indicated after the recent general election that because of his unyielding stand for a tough civil rights plank in the party's 1960 platform, he might step aside later on.

McKay said he had not discussed such an action and under the circumstances he would be reluctant to do so at this time.

In other words, McKay implied that if Butler is let alone he might step down, whereas he would likely be inclined to stay on until his tenure expires in 1960 if pressured to quit.

One thing that may come up, McKay said, may be an attempted showdown by Louisiana Democrats to force the ouster of Louisiana's national committeeman, Camille Gravel.

The Louisiana State Democratic Executive Committee and other Democratic forces, McKay said, are determined to unseat Gravel on account of his outspoken advocacy of race mixing.

National Committee Chairman Butler, however, has indicated he would fight to keep Gravel on as Louisiana committeeman until the 1960 National Convention. At that time national committeeman tenures expire.

McKay says South is gaining friends

ALABAMA'S NATIONAL committeeman predicted the South "will not leave the Democratic Party in 1960 because the South is the Democratic Party and always has been."

On the other hand, he added, there are strong indications the South is gaining friends on the party's national committee among those representing other parts of the country.

He mentioned among the South's friends on the national committee Pittsburgh's mayor and governor-elect of Pennsylvania, David Lawrence; Tammany boss, Carmin DeSapio, and Utah national committeeman, George Rock.

Besides, McKay added, National Chairman Butler has stepped on a lot of toes besides the toes of Southerners.

For still another reason why the South can look to the national committee for fair treatment, he said, the South has 4 votes on the 106 member national committee.

McKay said that the national committeewoman, Mrs. Lennard Thomas, Judge Roy Mayhall, state chairman, and several others from Alabama probably will attend the Dec. 6 meeting.

Gov. Folsom may not realize it, butaccording to word brought to Montgomery this week from legislators, the one thing about which the folks back home appear to be most concerned is the heavy spending from the governor's mansion and emergency funds.

One legislator said that hardly a day passes without receiving urgent requests "to do something about those two funds."

in his court is more important than the civil rights hearing.

His possible refusal to surrender the impounded records could prompt the commission to seek a federal district court order to produce them. Such action might lead to a clash of authority between and state and federal courts.

The commission also may have to resort to court orders to gain access to the registration files in the other four counties if the officials refuse to obey the subpoenas.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson has not announced a recent plan of resistance to the subpoenas in the six counties. He has said several times, however, he will oppose in every legal way possible any effort to get the files.

Dr. John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, heads the six - member federal commission scheduled to arrive here today.

The commissioners will be housed at Maxwell Air Force Base. One of them, Asst. Secretary of Labor J. Ernest Wilkins, is a Negro and city segregation laws prevent him from staying at a white hotel with the others.

ALABAMA

Civil Rights Voting Hearing Opens Today

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — The Federal Civil Rights Commission opened its Alabama voter registration probe today in an atmosphere of angry local defiance.

It appeared the hearings, prompted by charges that registrars discriminated against Negroes, would provide the first full test of the commission's powers. Most local authorities expressed determination to withhold their records.

Grand juries in Dallas, Wilcox and Lowndes counties held emergency weekend sessions and ordered that all records in their jurisdictions be impounded.

Of the counties to be investigated, only Macon County had failed to take action specificaly designed to block the federal agency. Macon has a predominantly Negro population and is the site of famous Tuskegee Institute for Negroes.

RECORDS WITHHELD

However, officials in Macon and all other counties were under orders from Gov. - elect John Patterson not to surrender their registration records. The county registrars announced they would comply.

Patterson, now state attorney general, issued a statement Oct. 21 urging registrars to withhold their books on grounds that they are not public documents.

Circuit Judge George C. Wallace, a segregationist, not only orderel that records in two counties impounded but threatened to jail federal agents who might try to seize the books.

Circuit Judge L. S. Hare, who ordered special grand jury sessions during the weekend in Dallas and Wilcox, said he took the action because he did not feel it was the federal government's function to investigate a state's voting laws.

"If there has been a maladministration of Alabama's voting laws it should be investigated in state courts," Hare said.

MOST COMPLAINTS

The commission ordered the hearings after Macon County authorities refused to allow two commission agents to inspect voting records. Agents said it was decided to open the probe with witnesses from Macon because "more sworn complaints were filed from that county than any other in Alabama."

The Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro group originally formed to boycott white merchants, said its investigation showed that in the year ended Aug. 31, only 98 of 319 Negroes who attempted to register in Amacon were accepted as voters. Only 145 were allowed to make application, the group said.

The Negro group's boycott was triggered by an Alabama law drawing in the Tuskegee City limits and thereby removing all but a handful of Negroes from the city voting books. A federal court has refused to disturb the legislation.

Rights Hearing Opens Tomorrow

Resistance May Keep Records From Probers

STATE JUDGE DEFIANT

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Staff

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 6. —The Civil Rights Commission undertakes its first investigation of Negro voting complaints here Monday in a tense atmosphere of Southern hostility.

Segregationist resistance may keep the commission from getting registration files in six South Alabama counties where Negroes have filed charges of racial discrimination.

But spokesmen for the new fact-finding agency say the hearing scheduled to open at 9 a.m. Monday will proceed with or without the voting records.

Jail Threatened

The most outspoken defiance has come from a state judge who has threatened to jail any commission agents who try to get the records in Barbour and Bullock Counties.

Circuit Judge George Wallace, who had impounded the records for a grand jury investigation on complaints of fraud in the registration of some voters, said he will refuse to surrender them to the commission.

Registration files dating back for three years in Barbour, Bullock, Dallas, Owndes, Macon and Wilcox Counties have been subpenaed along with the public officials who have custody of them, and unidentified Negroes who filed the complaints.

Appeal Suggested

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who takes office as governor Jan. 19, has advised voter registration boards to keep the records to themselves in the absence of a Federal Court order to produce them.

Even that may not be enough. Mr. Patterson, who contends the registration files are private and confidential records, could appeal to higher courts if United States Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. ordered the files surrendered to the commission.

Such an appeal might keep the records out of the commission's hands for weeks, perhaps months.

The civil rights hearing will be primarily a fact-finding procedure. The commission, headed by Dr. John Hannah, president of Michigan State University, has no power to prefer charges.

Majorities Vary

But it can use the testimony as the basis for recommending stronger Federal civil rights laws or for any action it thinks the executive department can take within the framework of existing laws.

The first public hearing will produce testimony about voting conditions in six fundamentally rural counties where Negroes outnumber white residents.

But even though population ratio ranges almost as high as 5-1 in some communities, white voters have a decided numerical advantage on election day.

Vote Denial Hearings

The state's right defense against alleged racial disfranchisement in Alabama seems to be improper and inadequate. Voting rights are federally guaranteed rights. As for the Negro group, they are rights enshrined by the 15th Amendment of the United States Constitution.

Withholding of records requested by the federal government's Commission on Civil Rights in connection with December 8th hearing in Montgomery, Alabama only casts the shadow of suspicion. If the registration officials have nothing to hide, then why defy an agency created by Congress, suggested by the President of the United States, and based on the implementation of the highest law of the land? We don't get and can't see it.

Almost anyone familiar with the voting process in Alabama knows that something is wrong with it. The fact that there are no Negro voters in Lowndes and Wilcox counties; alleged wholesale refusal to register Negro applicants in Dallas County, and the resignation of registration boards in Macon and Bullock counties to prevent Negro registration all tend to point up this unfair and unlawful denial of voting to eligible Negro citizens.

We want the Commission on Civil Rights to get to the bottom of vote denials in Lowndes and Wilcox counties, in particular. Whether there are complaints are not there are the obvious and sordid facts of the total denial of Negro voting in these two counties which have more Negro than white citizens. This newspaper is using this method to present a complaint for those too scared, possibly, to do so for themselves.

The Commission on Civil Rights has the power and the duty to obtain the information it needs, wherever it is, to perform its duty. It has the authority and the means to investigate the conditions in Lowndes and Wilcox counties. It should not let anybody get away with hiding its records. It should not let registration officials do the Commission on Civil Rights like some boards of registrars seem to do Negro applicants seeking to become voters.

If the Commission on Civil Rights fails in Alabama it might as well fold up. If it passes up the opportunity to look into the situation of Lowndes and Wilcox counties it is unworthy of its origin. If it lets the registration officials cover up it deserves disowning by the Congress which created it. This Commission has an opportunity to perform a distinct and historic service. It must not be tricked, flattered into ineffectiveness, or bulldozed by those who would like to go on keeping the ballot away from the poor, the disadvantaged, and the exploited in the same way they seek to keep the records from the government's agency.

To this, we add: our group has the duty to place honest accurate and factual complaints on racial vote denials before the Commission on Civil Rights. Let not history say that our leaders in Alabama failed to do their duty where help was at hand. Let it not be said that our leaders let those down in Lowndes and Wilcox counties. Let it not be said that our leaders slept at the switch. The hour of complaining about racial vote denials in Alabama is at hand. What our leaders do will determine our political status for many years to come.

Montgomery Rights Hearing Opens Monday

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (SNS) — The government Civil Rights Commission is scheduled to open a hearing Monday to investigate charges by Alabama Negro citizens that they have been denied voting rights.

The Negro voting records subpoenade by the Federal Civil Rights Commission have reportedly arrived at the state captal, but it is still unknown whether they will be turned over to the group.

Two voter registrars from Macon County and their records were taken to the office of Atty. Gen. John Patterson, the governor-elect.

Patterson earlier had told the registrars not to turn over the records to federal investigators, whom he charged with "meddling." They attempted to look at the records on complaints of Negroes, who charged discrimination in voter registration.

The hearing is scheduled to last two days, and the registrars and the records were subpenaed for the hearing.

Meanwhile, members of the commisson will reside at nearby Maxwell Air Force Base during the course of its hearings because they cannot obtain unsegregated hotel accomodations in Montgomery with the Negro member of the commission along. The Negro member is J. Ernest Wilkins, former Undersecretary of Labor.

SENATOR JOHN SPARKMAN

MACON COUNTY

CIVIL RIGHTS HEARING. Dec. 8,1958

Sen. Sparkman Says probers are 'meddlers'

BY FRED TAYLOR

News staff writer

Sen. John Sparkman blasted the Civil Rights Commission for "meddling in our local affairs," as members of this federal body were expected to begin arriving at Montgomery Saturday to hear claims that Negroes have been denied voting rights in Macon county.

In a rousing speech to the annual dinner meeting of the Bessemer Bar Assn. Friday night, Sen. Sparkman declared: "THE STATE OF ALABAMA and the South can expect the Eisenhower Civil Rights Commission to continue its announced policy of meddling in our state and local affairs by virtue of its authority under the Eisenhower-Civil Rights Act.

"We can expect certain members of Congress from both major political parties to continue to press for additional punitive civil rights legislation to suppress the rights of the people of the South in order to get the minority bloc votes of the North, East and West. Finally, we can expect the continued hostility of the present Eisenhower administration, which has shown no hesitancy in occupying the South behind bared federal bayonets."

HOWEVER, ALABAMA'S junior senator voiced a note of optimism in pointing out that the cause is winning friends and supporters to its cause in other sections of the nation.

"Voices of reason and constitutional government against the continued usurpation of legislative powers and states' rights are not confined to the South alone," he added.

"Throughout the length and breadth of this great land, protests are being heard. And more and more of our people are beginning to realize that when the rights and customs of some of our people are wantonly disregarded, the rights and traditions of all are sorely jeopardized."

Sparkman told the Bessemer Bar members that "as lawyers and leaders in your community, you have much to contribute during this crisis. Your voices must be those of reason and yet of determination to halt further encroachments on our constitutional rights."

SEN. SPARKMAN, who helped write the Southern Manifesto, said the U. S. Supreme Court had no judicial precedent when it rendered its 1954 decision ordering integration of the schools.

"I can find no grant of power in the Constitution that would authorize the sending of troops to Little Rock," declared Sparkman. "It is widely believed and with much justification, that the sending of troops to Little Rock was a political decision aimed at capturing the Negro vote."

As to the federal move to integrate the schools, Sparkman said "schools have always been the province of state and local governments. It is better for both races, and indeed for the nation, that they remain so."

THE SENATOR deplored the fact that while "we find ourselves inextricably involved in a deepening economic, political and military struggle with Russian Communism," the civil rights political fight has been forced upon us. And he added:

"It will ever be a sad chapter in American history that we must be so diverted in order to protect and defend the basic rights sought to be held forever sacred by the founding fathers who built our nation on the premise that we could have a government of laws and not of men."

Sparkman said one of the bright spots in the struggle was "the recent decision of the Supreme Court refusing to hold Alabama's school placement law unconstitutional on its face."

"This decision is most gratifying to all of us, and the authors of this law are to be congratulated for their superb job," added Sparkman.

MEANTIME, Circuit Judge George Wallace stood pat on his stand challenging the Civil Rights Commission in directing him to surrender voting records of Barbour and Bullock Counties.

Wallace, who impounded the voting files for Grand Jury investigation of vote fraud allegations, said he would jail any commission agents who try to get them.

"They are not going to get these voting records," declared Wallace, runnerup for governor in the Spring elections. "And if any agents of the Civil Rights Commission comes down here to get them, they will be locked up."

Members of the commission, headed by Dr. John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, withheld comment on Judge Wallace's challenge.

CHAIRMAN HANNAH conferred with President Eisenhower Friday, as he prepared to leave for Montgomery for the opening of the hearings at 9 a.m. Monday in the Federal Building. The Associated Press reported Hannah's talk with the president dealt only generally with the hearing.

Judge Wallace, who was served with a duces tecum subpoena directing him to produce the Bullock and Barbour voting records, said:

Alabama Judge Defies Rights-Unit Subpoena

Threatens To Jail Agents Seeking Files For Use In U. S. Hearing on Negro Voting

By The Associated Press

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 5.—A belligerent Alabama judge today defied the Civil Rights Commission to make him surrender voter registration records in his custody.

Circuit Judge George Wallace at Clayton, Ala., threatened to jail any commission agent who tries to get possession of the impounded files for next week's hearing on Negro voting.

Protesting angrily that a subpena issued by the commission for the voting records of two counties challenged the authority of his court, Wallace said emphatically that he will not answer the summons.

But he declined to say what he might do later if a federal judge orders him to produce the records. The commission can ask the Justice Department to cite a balky witness for contempt in federal court.

Seeks New Subpoena

Registration files dating back three years have been subpenaed for Monday's hearing from each of the six Alabama counties where the commission is investigating complaints of racial discrimination.

Agents serving the papers in Barbour and Bullock counties found the records had been impounded by Wallace. He said he would take action because petitions had charged fraud in the registration of some voters and in attempts to register others.

So the commission wrote a new subpena to Wallace and formally demanded the files from him.

Other Resistance

Resistance of a less spectacular nature has come also from the other four counties—Dallas, Lowndes, Macon and Wilcox—where Negroes have filed complaints against registration officials.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who becomes Governor Jan. 19, has advised county boards of registrars to withhold the records on the grounds they are private and confidential files which cannot be touched even by court order.

Mr. Patterson has promised to use every legal recourse to keep the files away from the new Federal agency.

Judge Wallace announced months ago he would arrest any FBI agent who attempted to get access to jury boxes in his court.

He said Friday "I still mean it," but to explain why he took no action against investigators who served the subpena on him, he added:

"I have never said I would arrest errand boys."

Bullock County Group Takes Wait-See Stand On Abolition

By BOB INGRAM
Advertiser Staff Writer

UNION SPRINGS, Ala., March [illegible] reluctant Bullock County of[illegible] took wait - and - see attitude here today in testifying before a legislative committee on the proposed abolition of Macon Coun[illegible]

The Macon County Abolition Commission held a public hearing today seeking the suggestions and sentiments of Bullock residents, inasmuch as this county would be expected to absorb a part of what is now Macon.

The commission got a number of expressions of sentiment, but only one concrete suggestion. It came in the form of a written statement from J. W. Springer Sr., a former member of the House from Bullock.

Springer suggested an automotic plan calling for the abolition of Macon in the event a Negro was elected to public office there. He did not, however, specify what part of Macon he felt Bullock should inherit.

And it was this point which had Bullock officials at their reticent best today. Bullock already has a population of 75 per cent Negro and 25 per cent white and officials here emphasized that they weren't willing to accept many more Negroes into their county.

Former State Sen. L. K. (Snag) Andrews urged that Macon be abolished only as a "dire necessity" and added that the county should be divided on a "theory of neighbors helping themselves." But there are some counties in a position to stand the shock of accepting a large Negro population," Andrews warned, in obvious reference to Bullock. "We in Bullock are going to take our portion of the load," he said, "but we have about as many colored people as we can take care of right now."

Almost identical sentiments came from R. J. Lawrence, county superintendent of education. "We have more Negroes now in our schools than we can handle," Lawrence declared.

He said the county now had 34 schools of which 31 were Negro and three were white. The school population he said was 3,200 Negro children and only 800 white children.

But Lawrence emphasized he would endorse abolition if it was necessary to prevent a county from being dominated by Negroes.

J. P. Thompkins, a county commissioner, warned that there were five Negro schools in the southern section of Macon which adjoin Bullock County.

"That would be the part of Macon we would probaly take, and by giving up that many more Negroes you would be adding insult to injury," he warned.

Others testifying yesterday were Sheriff D. C. Beckham, W. H. Garner of the Union Springs City Council, County Solicitor Richard B. Stone and Circuit Solicitor Seymour Trammell.

Also testifying were several Bullock citizens including Roy Thornton and Allen Tucker Thornton, who said he was 78 years old, said he "lived through one reconstruction and I don't want to live through another." He favored abolition "if that is what Macon County wants."

Macon Group Sets Hearing For Bullock

Montgomery Advertiser
3-6-58

A legislative committee seeking an answer to Macon County's racial problems will hear testimony today from residents of another county where Negroes outnumber white residents.

The hearing at Union Springs in Bullock County will be the first in a surrounding county which, like Macon, has a preponderance of Negroes among its population. The ratio in Bullock is nearly 3-1.

Previous hearings have been conducted in Tallapoosa and Montgomery counties, both of them with more white residents than Negroes.

P-1A

The special Senate-House committee was created by a constitutional amendment which empowered the Legislature to abolish Macon County as a means of preventing Negroes from gaining political control.

Committee members have agreed, however, to try other solutions first, including a reduction in size of Macon County in preference to outright abolition.

And to guide them, they are holding hearings in each of the five neighboring counties which would absorb Macon's population.

Because Bullock already has a predominantly Negro population, the original draft of the gerrymandering legislation would give that county the bulk of Macon's white population. Other counties would get the Negroes.

Macon has almost seven Negroes to each white resident and white spokesmen have expressed fear that the new federal civil rights law will enable enough Negroes to vote to dominate the county.

'Open date' proposal made for Macon County

UNION SPRINGS, Ala., March 7—(AP)—An "open date" proposal for the abolition of Macon County "when and if" a Negro is elected to public office, was recommended yesterday by a former legislator.

The plan, proposed by former State Rep. J. W. Springer Sr., was explained at a public hearing conducted here by the Macon County Abolition Committee.

THE COMMITTEE is holding a series of public hearings to determine opinion in counties which will be affected if Macon County is dissolved or reduced in size. Previous hearings have been held in Tallapoosa and Montgomery Counties. Although both of these have a preponderance of white residents, Bullock has a ratio of about three Negroes for every white person.

Most of the witnesses at yesterday's meeting recommanded abolition of Macon only as a last resort.

ANOTHER LEGISLATOR, Lawrence K. Andrews, asked the committee to divide Macon's Negro population only among counties that can "stand the shock," and said the division should be in proportion to present population.

He also suggested if Macon is abolished, Russell County be included in the plan for dividing population.

Andrews, who is unopposed for the Democratic nomination for the Macon-Bullock Senate seat, is a former member of the Senate and has represented both counties in the Legislature.

Although the details of dissolving the county should be worked out in advance, Springer suggested, no date should be specified for removing Macon from the map. Then, "When and if a Negro should be nominated or elected to any office," the county would automatically be abolished.

BULLOCK COUNTY does not want "any more Negroes than we can handle," commented R. J. Lawrence, superintendent of Bullock's city-county school system. The county's schools currently have about 800 white pupils and about 3200 Negroes, he said.

Negroes are involved in most of the law violations in Bullock County, said Sheriff D. C. Beckham. And, he added, while his force is willing to "do all we can to help" Macon, the addition of more Negro residents in Bullock would mean additional law enforcement work.

The Legislature should decide on the abolition of Macon and not delegate the authority, Circuit Solicitor W. S. Trammel replied in answer to a committee member's question.

"If we take on many more Negroes, we'll have to go to Pike County for help," testified J. P. Tompkins, a member of the County Commission.

13,000 in Alabama County Voteless, Rights Group Told

Miami Herald

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A witness told the federal Civil Rights Commission Monday that not one of 13,000 Negroes in Alabama's Lowndes County is registered to vote.

Miami Herald

Another county official, one of the handful who agreed to take the stand at the first hearings conducted by the new commission, said that of 8,000 registered voters in Dallas County, Ala., only 128 are Negroes.

Aug 12-9-58

Five other county officials flatly refused a direct order by the commission, appointed by the President, to take the oath and answer questions about allegations that Negroes are denied the right to vote in six Alabama counties.

Commission officials indicated the group may be laying groundwork for a court test of its powers to subpena witnesses and require them to testify under oath.

A circuit judge not only refused to testify Monday but defied a subpena to appear at the hearings.

In one surprise development, the Commission was presented with subpenaed vote registration lists for predominantly-Negro Macon County over the protests of Gov.-Elect John Patterson.

Then it developed that the records included only the lists of registered voters and not the records of registrars showing applications which were rejected.

Patterson, who is state attorney general, had ordered Macon County officials to disobey the Commission's subpena of the records and when Probate Judge William Varner of Macon County appeared with them, Patterson protested vigorously.

He told the Commission it has no legal authority to take possession of the records. Judge Varner has no authority to take the records from his county." Varner turned over the records, saying "No court has told me not to turn them over to you."

Alabama Comments On Wallace

The Federals Squirmed

The Enterprise Ledger

JUDGE WALLACE pleaded guilty as charged to disobedience to court order and offered no defense. Judge Johnson listened to prosecution witnesses defend Wallace's actions and the circumstances in case that Wallace had contrived to help them. Then Johnson told Wallace he was not guilty since he had committed—

Has there ever been such an open and shut case of the federal authority being backed against the wall and trying to squirm out saving their face and smearing the defendant?

We await round 2.

Alabama Editors Are Saying

Robbed

The Clarke County Democrat

JUDGE GEORGE C. WALLACE was robbed of a sure-fire political issue when Federal Judge Johnson refused to commit him to jail on a contempt-of-court charge. Grover C. Hall Jr. described him as "probably the most distressed appellee man ever to appear before the court."

Gallant Wallace

Union Springs Herald

WHEN the history of federal encroachment upon states rights is finally written, Judge George C. Wallace will be listed among those who fought gallantly for the rights of the people of the sovereign states to resist the dictatorial infringement of the federal government upon their constitutional rights.

The people of Alabama have won another battle against the forces which would finally destroy our way of life, and Alabama should be grateful for men like Judge George C. Wallace who has the courage of his convictions.

Two Losers

The Huntsville Times

THE unfortunate case of Judge George Wallace vs. the federal court system is now concluded, and while the former south Alabama judge did not go to jail, there are two possible losers in the case. The first possibility is George Wallace. Had he been sent to jail for [illegible] a federal court order to turn over voter records, he would have stepped a long way toward winning the governor's chair four years hence. As it is, U.S. District Judge Frank Johnson's refusal to convict him because of "politicaly generated whirlwinds" may backfire on Judge Wallace and his four-year headstart may prove ineffective.

The second and more important possible loser in the case is Alabama and the Southern cause for states rights. The loudly predicted clash and court test of state vs. federal rights failed to materialize after Judge Wallace made, with much show, voter records in question available to the Civil Rights Commission. This in itself is perhaps fortunate for the South and other advocates of states rights, for the history of the present law-writing Supreme Court certainly gives little reason to think a decision might have resulted in favor of states rights.

Judge Wallace's alleged defiance, aided by now-Gov. John Patterson, therefore resulted only in strengthening the hand of those politicians pushing for stronger cicil rights legislation, by turning public opinion outside the South against Alabama and in favor of new legislation.

In all fairness, Judge Wallace might have been very sincere in his effort of resistance, but a quieter approach without so much political overtone would have been the better course if this was the case.

The Loyalists Won

The Tallassee Tribune

SAM ENGLEHARDT won the fast gavel-banging championship of the world in Montgomery on Monday of [last] week.

The record had previously been held jointly by former Speaker of the Alabama House of Representatives Rankin Fite and U.S. Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn. Mr. Fite won his laurels by pounding through a legislative pay raise on the first day of he session four years ago. Mr. Rayburn's handling of the hickory of authority at the last Democratic national convention entitled him to share honors with Mr. Fite.

Mr. Engelhardt, however, now has the undisputed championship. He is the new chairman of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee by virtue of five broken pledges in the ranks of the states rights wing of the committee. The loyalist wing of the committee, solidly backing the former Macon County senator, is now back in the saddle after upending Frank J. Mizell, Jr. Mr. Mizell is the Montgomery attorney who led the successful fight to wrest control of the committee from the loyalists and to repeal the dastardly oath that binds Alabama office seekers to support Walter Reuther, Adam Clayton Powell, Eleanor Roosevelt, Soapsuds Williams, or whoever is chosen as the national party standard bearer.

Pioneer Wallace

The Andalusia Star-News

THE federal district court, presided over by Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., has been defied. And that federal jurist, in the face of a defiance that would have blanched his predecessor, the late Judge Charles B. Kennemer, seeks to squirm off the hot spot that Circuit Judge George Wallace cooked up.

Judge Johnson, in a specific order, directed Circuit Judge Wallace turn over voter registration records of Barbour and Bullock counties to Civil Rights investigators.

Judge Wallace thumbed his nose at the federal bench and deliberately put the records of both counties into the custody of grand juries. Judge Wallace went further and instructed the grand juries to hold or release the records as they wished.

Federal Judge Johnson argues this was not a defiance of his order.

The people and taxpayers of Alabama, who must look to the Middle District Federal Court in Montgomery for justice to be dispensed, can have no faith in a logic so blind as that.

The actions of Judge Wallace, in defying the federal court and cornering the Civil Rights Commission, was a pioneering venture.

Wallace demonstrated effectively what a state judge can do to quell the Civil Rights holy-rollers when they are bent on meddling with ballot registrations.

A Service To Alabama

Lee County Bulletin

GEORGE WALLACE of Clayton has served Alabama well as legislator and jurist. He has been a knowledgeable and popular public servant. We have been sorry that his recent performances in the public arena have not measured up to the record of service he previously had put together.

Judge Frank Johnson, Alabama born and bred and a classmate of Mr. Wallace's at University of Alabama, did his native state a service of inestimable value when he refused to fall for Wallace's attempt to maneuver himself into political martyrdom.

Of course, following the federal court hearing at Montgomery, Mr. Wallace made the expected fire-eating statement which has been applauded by the more unreasoning. But even he must know that Judge Johnson unmasked what appeared to be his effort to get placed in federal jail, and in doing so made Mr. Wallace look a bit ridiculous.

No "outsider," Judge Johnson has handed down a ruling which ends, once and for all, we hope, this political circus occasioned by efforts of the federal government to determine whether voter rights have been denied. The government got information it was after. Nobody has been handed a sure-fire ride to political office. And if voter registration efforts have been unlawfully denied, no doubt registrars henceforth will be persuaded that those who meet the requirements must be registered.

JUDGE WALLACE
CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION

Johnson Was Too Smart

The Centreville Press

JUDGE GEORGE WALLACE tried his best to get Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. to put him in jail for contempt of court, but the judge was too sharp for Mr. Wallace. The facts are that Judge Wallace tried to make it appear through the newspapers that he was defying the federal courts and the Civil Rights Commission, while all the time he was giving them the information that they wanted.

Wallace Flopped

The Florala News

GEORGE C. WALLACE has failed again. He can't even get himself put in jail and he sure tried hard enough to.

We wonder just what did he accomplish by his publicity stunt. At this time we can't see that he accomplished anything that would benefit him in any direction. He claims that he did not keep the records from the Civil Rights Commission solely for the purpose of hiding anything. But his efforts to keep the records failed and anyway, if there was nothing wrong why all the commotion?

Absolutely nothing was accomplished toward keeping the state courts from being plowed under by higher judicial edict, as he claims was his motive. He only worsened conditions. Why did he give the impression that he was defying the court's order by turning the records over to the grand jury when actually he "through devious methods, assisted agents in obtaining the records in the two counties?"

There are many questions George C. Wallace will have to answer if ever again he pokes his head out for governor. Apparently he is ambitious for George C. Wallace and not for the state of Alabama nor for the South.

Harassed And Threatened

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER—Since the publication, in a weekly newspaper, of the story of the meeting of a group of Montgomery church women last September, and carried by the weekly two months later, anonymous calls and letters have harassed, threatened and intimidated many of this group of women.

Inaccuracies in reporting the meeting have been called to the attention of the publisher, who has ignored the corrections and continued to misrepresent facts.

Among the inaccuracies in the weekly paper were statements that the meeting was "secret" and "devoted to the problems of integration." The meeting was open to all interested persons and not considered any more newsworthy by our reputable dailies, than other meetings of church groups.

The subject of integration was not discussed. The program was designed to show woman's role in world affairs.

This inter-faith group met for the purpose of religious study and prayer. Such meetings have been held regularly in our city over the past 15 years.

Irresponsible reporting by the same weekly was further evident in the fact that license numbers of cars in the vicinity of the meeting were taken down, and, whether or not owners attended the meeting, were published by this paper with the purported owner's business and address.

Let The Supreme Court Do It

Editor, The Advertiser:

Mr. Eisenhower has on several recent television appearances asked the states to assume a greater responsibility in the affairs of the nation.

He is now asking for an increase in the federal tax on gasoline. While we don't claim to be an authority on national finance or the nation's budget, we submit that any cross-roads lawyer might conceivably balance our budget, if given the power to increase, forevermore, the tax on a necessity such as gasoline.

This tax if at all necessary should be a job for the states, not the federal government.

Maybe as a shortcut, and to save the wear and tear on committees, the budget balancing could be referred to the Supreme Court. This august body of infallibles would no doubt do the job in quick time.

This court has served notice on the states that they, the states, are not qualified to: operate their public schools, register their voters, operate their public parks, or qualify any applicant to practice law within state boundary, to mention a few of their recent decisions.

We believe these decisions to be of far more importance to our nation than the balancing of the nation's budget in any given fiscal year.

Alabama Editors Are Saying

Robbed

The Clarke County Democrat

JUDGE GEORGE C. WALLACE was robbed of [illegible] political issue when Federal Judge Johnson refused to commit him to jail on a contempt-of-court charge. Grover C. Hall Jr. described him as "probably the most distressed acquitted man ever to appear before the bar."

Gallant Wallace

Union Springs Herald

WHEN the history of federal encroachment upon states rights is finally written, Judge George C. Wallace will be listed among those who fought gallantly for the rights of the people of the sovereign states to resist the dictatorial infringement of the federal government upon their constitutional rights.

The people of Alabama have won another battle against the forces which would finally destroy our way of life, and Alabama should be grateful for men like Judge George C. Wallace who [illegible] courage of his convictions.

Two Losers

The Huntsville Times

THE unfortunate case of Judge George Wallace vs. the federal court [illegible] is now concluded, and while the former south Alabama judge did not go to jail, there are two possible losers in the case.

The first possibility is George Wallace. Had he been sent to jail for defying a federal court order to turn over voter records, he would have stepped a long way toward winning the governor's chair four years hence. As it is, U.S. District Judge Frank Johnson's refusal to convict him because of "politicaly generated whirlwinds" may backfire on Judge Wallace and his four-year headstart may prove ineffective.

The second and more important possible loser in the case is Alabama and the Southern cause for states rights. The loudly predicted clash and court test of state vs. federal rights failed to materialize after Judge Wallace made, with much show, voter records in question available to the Civil Rights Commission. This in itself is perhaps fortunate for the South and other advocates of states rights, for the history of the present law-writing Supreme Court certainly gives little reason to think a decision might have resulted in favor of states rights.

Judge Wallace's alleged defiance, aided by now-Gov. John Patterson, therefore resulted only in strengthening the hand of those politicians pushing for stronger civil rights legislation, by turning public opinion outside the South against Alabama and in favor of new legislation.

In all fairness, Judge Wallace might have been very sincere in his effort of resistance, but a quieter approach without so much political overtone would have been the better course if this was the [illegible]

The Loyalists Won

The Tallassee Tribune

SAM ENGLEHARDT won the fast [illegible] championship of the [illegible] Montgomery on Monday of [last] week.

The record had previously been held jointly by former Speaker of the Alabama House of Representatives Benjamin Fite and U.S. Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn. Mr. Fite won his laurels by pounding through a legislative pay raise on the first day of the session four years ago. Mr. Rayburn's handling of the [illegible] of authority at the last Democratic national convention entitled him to share honors with Mr. Fite.

Mr. Engelhardt, however, now has the undisputed championship. He is the new chairman of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee by virtue of [illegible] in the ranks of the states rights wing of the committee. The loyalist wing of the committee, solidly backing the former Macon County senator, is now back in the saddle after upending Frank J. Mizell, Jr. Mr. Mizell is the Montgomery attorney who led the successful fight to wrest control of the committee from the loyalists and to repeal the dastardly oath that binds Alabama office seekers to support Walter Reuther, Adam Clayton Powell, Eleanor Roosevelt, Soapsuds Williams, or whoever is chosen as the national party standard bearer.

The Fruits The Same

The Selma Times-Journal

THIS time there were 36 who remained to drink from the Common Cup, while five went forth to receive their pieces of silver. But the fruits will be the same.

For the five, only suicide (political) lies ahead, while the 36 never will be lacking in honor among their fellows.

Wallace's Statement Misconstrued

The Clayton Record

ONE of the nuisances of a man being catapulted into the headlines, such as Judge George Wallace has experienced recently, is that they often get blamed for a lot they don't say, as well as full credit for things they perhaps wish they hadn't said.

One misconception that keeps cropping up with irritating regularity in regard to the civil rights investigation is Wallace's statement, made many months ago to the effect that he would lock up any FBI agent tampering with the jury boxes in his circuit. Knuckling under the temptation to create colorful material, some news reporters in rehashing the original story, interpreted this statement to mean that Wallace would forthrightly lock up the civil rights investigators when they came to check the Barbour voting records. The misunderstanding continued to grow until half the populace is now wondering why Wallace has failed to jail the federals "as he said he would."

ACTUALLY, the two situations, though similar in the federal vs. state category, are widely divergent in circumstance and in fact. Judge Wallace did make the positive statement, repeated it often, and is quick to reiterate it, that if any agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation come snooping around the jury boxes in his circuit, he'll jail them. However, and this is a fact that should be gotten straight if only for the record, the Judge has never made the statement, to our knowledge, that he would jail civil rights investigators for attempting to see voting records in a peaceful and lawful manner. Voting records are public records, and public records are open to the public.

Judge Wallace is the first to point out that if these records had not been legally impounded by a grand jury for investigation, and subsequently placed in his custody, there never would have been any arguments about who could or could not see the files.

THE whole issue boils down to whether the commission has the authority to demand access to material that has been legally impounded by a lower court. The issue is not whether or not the commission may come in and examine public documents.

We feel that Judge Wallace has acted in good faith and has shown the marks of a statesman in courageously defending a principle he considers worth defending. Whatever the final outcome of the present difficulty, Judge Wallace will have established himself as a man thoroughly dedicated to the principle of state sovereignty. He is apparently quite willing to face contempt charges and jail, if that's what it takes, to stand by his convictions.

In Wallace, we seem to have a modern-day throwback to the likes of certain olden patriots, to whom intestinal fortitude was no stranger.

Some Friends Hope Wallace Is Sent To Jail

The Andalusia Star- News

IT'S not often that you want to see a friend go to jail. But many Alabama folks who admire Judge George Wallace, for his vigorous challenge of the Civil Rights Commission, are hoping the "Barbour bantam" gets put behind bars. A jail term for Wallace now would pave the way for the Clayton jurist in the next gubernatorial election.

Whether he goes to jail, or not, Judge Wallace has his challenge to Big Jim Folsom on the record for Alabama voters come 1962.

Big Jim, in his swan song message to the Alabama legislature this week, made wild claims for every advance Alabama has made for half a century. The tone of the Folsom speech hinted he wants a third term as governor of Alabama.

The stage is about set for Wallace to tackle Folsom head-on.

Folsom has been reluctant to detail how he staged a cocktail party to entertain Congressman Adam Powell when that Negro solon visited Montgomery some years ago. Folsom has proclaimed that incoming Gov. John Patterson erred in prohibiting Negroes to march in the Patterson inaugural parade.

Folsom, they say, is invincible as a candidate for governor. That invincibility is going to melt when an opponent plasters Folsom with the label: "Negro-lover."

George Wallace can do it and make it stick.

Wallace Should Be Commended

Richmond Times-Dispatch

GEORGE C. WALLACE, an Alabama State Circuit Judge, was fully aware that he risked a federal contempt citation and possibly a jail sentence, when he refused to turn over voter registration records of two counties to the United States Civil Rights Commission.

Judge Frank W. Johnson Jr., of the Federal District Court in Montgomery, had issued an order directing Wallace to make the records available to the commission.

Instead, Wallace turned the records over to hastily summoned special grand juries in the respective counties. He defended his action as a lawful maneuver to protect the records "as a matter of principle."

He did, however, offer to turn over files of four Negroes who had complained to the commission that they had been denied the right to vote.

THIS, it seems to us, would have complied with the federal court's original demand for "relevant" records. These were the records of direct concern to the federal commission, which, so far as we can see, trespassed beyond its congressionally assigned function by demanding all county registration records.

If and when this controversy comes before the United States Supreme Court, it may decide otherwise. It may decide that the "intent of Congress" was to have the commission inspect all voting records as relevant to the four specific complaints.

Judge Wallace is to be commended, not only for risking contempt proceedings and a possible jail sentence, but for inviting a showdown involving the right of states under the circumstances.

ONE of the grand juries offered to let Civil Rights Commission agents look at the records. While investigators were checking these records, the other county made a similar offer. A. H. Rosenfeld, Civil Rights Commission complaints director, said he would notify the second county later if its proposal would be accepted.

At first Rosenfeld turned down the first offer. His contention then was that he had no authority to deal with the grand jury.

"Our authority," he said, "is to deal with Judge Wallace."

The legal distinction is important. Wallace, as a circuit judge of the state of Alabama, refused to produce the records on order of a federal court. The special grand jury, however, was willing to have the commission examine the records, not in compliance with a federal court order, but of its own volition.

This would seem to be the crux of the problem.

The state judge—on a matter of principle—considered himself oath-bound to protect the right of the state. The county grand jury, for the same reason, asserted its independence of federal jurisdiction by taking the initiative in cooperating with the commission.

Judge Johnson Should Be Commend

New York Herald Tribune

THE question of the merits of appointive judges, as against elected ones, is of long standing, and with many cogent arguments on both sides. The controversy in Montgomery, Ala., where an elected judge has defied an appointed federal judge, sheds some interesting new light upon it.

Judge George C. Wallace, who has defied Federal Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. on the matter of turning over Negro registration records to the Civil Rights Commission, obviously must think that his action will be politically popular with the Alabama electorate on which he depends for his present position, and his possible future advancement.

Judge Johnson, however, as an appointive judge, has no such dilemma. He is just as much a Southerner as Wallace; the two men in fact were classmates at the University of Alabama Law School. But, secure in a lifetime job he can devote himself to

JUDGES - REGISTRARS

Commission Will Get Records With Fed. Court Orders

By DONALD F. MARTIN

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(UPI)—The Federal Civil Rights Commission abruptly ended its two-day hearing into charges of denial of Negro voting rights Tuesday with a call for Justice Department action against defiant witnesses.

Chairman John A. Hannah announced he would ask the Department to seek a federal court order to secure voter registration records in six Alabama counties. The records were impounded by local officials prior to the hearing.

Hannah made his terse and formal announcement, then abruptly adjourned the hearing with the comment "there will be no more action in this case until the [illegible] future."

Two of the 25 subpoenaed witnesses remained to be called when the commission suddenly called off the hearing, first public meeting of the group since it was formed last year.

REFERRED TO JUSTICE

"The commission respectfully refers the complete record of this hearing to the attorney general of the United States for such action as he deems appropriate to the end that will assist this commission to have made available to it the information that is required to enable it to carry out the mandate of the law," Hannah said.

Under the law creating the commission in 1957, Congress gave the Justice Department authority to take necessary action against witnesses who defy the orders of the commission. The federal agency, itself, does not have the power to issue contempt citations. The citations must be issued through federal courts.

Six county registrars refused to testify Monday about qualifying Negro voter applicants and they defied a commission subpoena ordering them to turn their registration records over to the federal agency.

Five of the registrars refused to be sworn in as witnesses.

Circuit Judge George Wallace, outspoken segregationist and running candidate for governor in the spring Democratic primaries, said he was "unimpressed" with the commission's announcement it would seek the help of the Justice Department.

SAYS POSITION SOUND

"My position is sound legally and I don't care who they call in. They can call in the Justice Department or any department or airborne troops as far as I'm concerned. I'm going to test any move they make in the courts of the land."

A Negro witness opened Tuesday's testimony with the statement economic reprisals and threats were the principal reasons none of the 8,000 Negroes in Wilcox County have been qualified to vote.

"I know economic pressure has been applied to members of my race (in Wilcox County) and because of this they have not applied for voter registration," said Mrs. Amelia Platts Boynton, 47, of Selma, Ala.

Selma is located in Dallas County, adjoining Wilcox. Mrs. Boynton is state chairman of the Negro Political Action Committee and chairman of an Elks Civil Liberties Committee. She said her responsibilities included traveling throughout Alabama to check on Negro voter registration.

Against Defiant Officials

Legal Action Launched In Civil Rights Inquiry

News Observer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Civil Rights Commission, with assent from Southern members, started legal action Tuesday to compel defiant public officials to produce evidence about Negro voter registration in Alabama.

In a dramatic announcement which abruptly ended a two-day hearing, the commission unanimously asked the Justice Department to seek a federal court order against registration officials who refused to testify or surrender voter records.

A spokesman for Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers said in Washington the matter will be handled through Hartwell Davis, the U.S. district attorney at Montgomery. The U.S. District Court in Alabama will be asked to issue the order.

Contempt Situation.

The spokesman noted that if the court order is issued and is not obeyed, a contempt situation will be presented.

Six vote registrars, protesting what they called an invasion of their rights as judicial officers, declined to talk about the functions of their office when called as witnesses at the outset of the hearing Monday. Five of them refused even to testify under oath.

Another subpoenaed witness, Circuit Court Judge George C. Wallace of Clayton, Ala., didn't appear. He had been instructed to produce registration files he has subpoenaed in two of the six counties into which the civil rights agency's first public hearing extended.

In one fashion or another, state and county officials kept the voting records out of the commission's hands in all six counties.

Besides the files in Barbour and Bullock counties which Wallace had impounded, county grand juries in Dallas, Lowndes and Wilcox took custody of the records there, and the files in Macon County were seized by the state's prosecutor in that circuit, Thom F. Young.

Cccepts Challenge.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who directed the massive resistance, accepted the commission challenge.

"If they are going to attempt to try our public officials," he said, "they ought to do it in a court of law, and we will take advantage of every means we have available to represent our judicial officers and protect them from invasions by the federal government and legislative and executive branches of the government."

Patterson contended the voter registration records are confidential and that registrars themselves, as judicial officers, cannot be called to account for their official acts.

Judge Wallace, who ran second to Patterson in the Democratic primary for governor last spring, refused to answer the commission subpoena with the explanation that the federal agency had no legal right to summon him.

The commission heard further testimony Tuesday from Negroes who told of being denied the right to vote in Dallas, Barbour and Bullock counties. It followed the pattern described Monday by more than two score complaining witnesses from Macon County.

The hearing ended without direct testimony from Negroes in Lowndes or Wilcox counties, but two Lowndes County registrars told the commission that no negroes have tried to register there in recent years.

Mrs. S. W. Boynton of Selma, a Negro businesswoman, offered an explanation for that. She told the commission that Negroes in those two counties have been discouraged from seeking registration because of economic pressure.

The commission itself can take no punitive action against any public official because of the denial of voting rights. Its authority is limited to recommending any new federal legislation it may feel is needed to protect civil rights.

Alabama Officials Move to Guard Voting Records

But Rights Commission to Hold Hearings

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) —Alabama officials and grand juries are erecting a barrier of legal red tape around voting records the federal civil rights commission has subpenaed for its first public hearing Monday.

Records or no records, the commission planned to go ahead as scheduled with its investigation of charges that Negroes in six Alabama counties have been denied the right to vote.

Grand juries in three counties Saturday impounded voter registration records subpenaed by the commission. And circuit Judge George Wallace earlier had impounded the records of Barbour and Bullock counties.

These actions left the new fact-finding commission with two alternatives:

1. Seek a federal court order to produce the files.
2. Hear testimony from complaining Negro witnesses and make no further effort to obtain the records.

DECLINES COMMENT

Gordon Tiffany, staff director of the commission, declined comment on the impounding action by the grand juries. But a commission spokesman had said earlier that the hearing would proceed with or without voter records.

The commission has subpenaed registration files from Dallas, Lowndes, Wilcox, Macon, Barbour and Bullock counties.

After impounding the Barbour and Bullock records, Wallace said he will refuse to surrender them to the commission and will jail any commission agent who tries to get them.

Circuit Judge James A. Hare said voting records in Dallas and Wilcox counties were turned over to the county grand juries for investigations in the state courts.

Probate Judge Harrell Hammonds confirmed that he turned over Lowndes county voter records to a grand jury Saturday.

SESSION HINTED

In Macon county, circuit solicitor (prosecutor) Tom Young and circuit Judge Will O. Walton conferred Saturday night on the possibility of calling a grand jury into session. Walton said no action was taken because he had no formal complaint. However, Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson has specifically instructed Macon county authorities not to surrender voter records to the civil rights commission.

Hare said he instructed the Dallas and Wilcox juries to investigate the same complaints made to the commission.

"If there has been a mal-administration of Alamaba's voting laws," he said, "it should be investigated in state courts."

A. H. Rosenfeld, director of the commission's office of complaints, said the agency would first consider voting complaints from Macon county, home of the famed Negro colloge, Tuskegee Institute.

FILES PRIVATE

He declined to say how many complaints were received from this county where Negroes outnumber whites about six to one.

Gov. Elect Patterson claims the registration files are private and confidential papers immune even from court order.

Negroes outnumber white residents in all six counties, but white voters dominate poll lists.

The civil rights commission picked Alabama for its public inquiry after the Macon county registration board of Tuskegee refused to open its records to investigators last month.

The commission can take no punitive action against registration officials accused of racial discrimination.

A staff attorney, Burton Stevenson, said the agency's sole function is to determine if civil rights are being violated and whether, in its judgment, stronger federal laws are needed to protect them.

No Negroes Voting In Ala. County

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (UPI) — A witness told the Federal Civil Rights Commission Monday that not one of 13,000 Negroes in Alabama's Lowndes County is registered to vote.

Another county official, one of the handful who agreed to take the stand at the first hearings conducted by the new commission said that of 8,000 registered voters in Dallas County, Ala., only 128 are Negroes.

Five other county officials flatly refused a direct order of the commission, appointed by the President, to take the oath and answer questions about allegations that Negroes are denied the right to vote in six Alabama counties.

Commission officials indicated the group may be laying groundwork for a court test of its powers to subpoena witnesses and require them to testify under oath. A circuit judge not only refused to testify Monday but defied a subpoena to appear at the hearings.

Testifying Monday, probate judges Harold Hammonds of Lowndes County and Bernard A. Reynolds of Dallas County presented figures on Negro vote registrations in their counties. Those who refused to take the oath included Bullock County Registrar M. F. Evans, registrars J. W. Spencer, and W. A. Stokes of Barbour County, and two Macon County registrars.

Rights Unit Starts Legal Action To Get Alabama Voter Records

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 9 (AP)—The federal Civil Rights Commission, with assent from Southern members, started legal action Tuesday to compel defiant public officials to produce evidence about Negro registration in Alabama.

In a dramatic announcement that abruptly ended a two-day hearing, the commission unanimously asked the Justice Department to seek a federal-court order against registration officials who refused to testify or surrender voter records.

Shortly afterward a spokesman for Attorney General Rogers said in Washington that the matter would be handled through Hartwell Davis, the United States district attorney at Montgomery. The U. S. District Court in Alabama will be asked to issue the order.

The spokesman noted that if the court order is issued and not obeyed, a contempt situation will be presented for handling by the federal court. Contempt penalties are fixed at the discretion of the court involved.

Patterson Accepts Unit's Challenge

Six voter registrars, protesting what they called an invasion of their rights as judicial officers, declined to talk about the functions of their office when called at witnesses at the outset of the hearing Monday. Five of them refused even to testify under oath.

Another subpoenaed witness, Circuit Judge George C. Wallace of Clayton, Ala., didn't even show up. He had been instructed to produce voter-registration files he has subpoenaed in two of the six counties into which the civil-rights agency's first public hearing extended.

Besides the files in Barbour and Bullock that Wallace had impounded, county grand juries in Dallas, Lowndes, and Wilcox took custody of the records there, and the files in Macon County were seized by the State's prosecutor in that circuit, Thom F. Young.

Alabama Attorney General John Patterson, who directed the resistance, accepted the commission's challenge.

"If they are going to attempt to try our public officials," he said, "they ought to do it in a court of law, and we will take advantage of every means we have available to represent our pudicial officers and protect them from invasions by the Federal Government and legislative and executive branches of the Government."

More Negroes Say Voting Right Withheld

Patterson contended the voter registration records are confidential and that registrars themselves, as judicial officers, cannot be called to account for their official acts.

The commission heard further testimony Tuesday from Negroes who told of being denied the right to vote in Dallas, Barbour, and Bullock counties. It followed the pattern described Monday by more than 40 complaining witnesses from Macon County.

The hearing ended without direct testimony from Negroes in Lowndes or Wilcox counties, but two Lowndes County registrars told the commission that no Negroes have tried to register there in recent years.

A Negro businesswoman, Mrs. S. W. Boynton of Selma in Dallas County, offered an explanation for that Tuesday. She told the commission that Negroes in those two counties have been discouraged from seeking registration because of economic pressure.

IKE DENOUNCES DEFIANCE OF ALA. OFFICIALS TO PROBERS

Next Balk May Bring Officials Contempt Of Court Citations

BY HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower denounced as 'reprehensible" Wednesday the defiance of Alabama officials toward his Civil Rights Commission investigating the alleged denial of voting rights to Negroes in the state.

The President told his news conference their action showed the American people that individuals "can defy the laws of the land" at their pleasure if they had the support of public opinion in their particular community.

"I think this is a rather sad sort of thing," he said. He added that it could lead to a deterioration in the quality of governmental activity and a loss of respect toward authority on the part of the public.

RECORDS TO BE DEMANDED

He said such results are what "make this kind of thing so repre-

Meanwhile, Justice Department officials disclosed that the Federal District Court in Montgomery, Ala. would be asked to compel balky Alabama voting registrars to testify before the commission and to produce records.

If these officials persist in their defiance of the commission in the face of a court order, they could be held in contempt of court.

Department officials also disclosed that they had been conducting their own investigation of charges that Alabama Negroes had been denied voting rights. But they said their investigators had met the same sort of defiance.

In Montgomery, Governor-elect John Patterson, of Alabama, declined comment on the President's statement. But Patterson said Attorney General William P. Rogers had changed his position on the separation of governmental powers.

He said Rogers recently stated in an article in the American Bar Assn., Journal that "Legislative and judicial branches have no right to encroach upon executive branches." He said Rogers wrote the article after attempts by Congress and the courts to force the Justice Department to open its files.

REFUSAL TO TESTIFY

Now, Patterson said, Rogers apparently is trying to force Alabama officials to give up their records.

The President's remarks were prompted by a question about how he felt about the refusal of Alabama authorities to cooperate with the commission. Six officials refused to testify and five even declined to be sworn as witnesses.

"Well, I don't feel very well about it," he replied. In appointments they have always been.

The court, he said, merely held that a state violates the Federal Constitution when it denies a colored child, who is otherwise qualified for admission to a particular public school, and who seeks admission, the right to enter that school.

"The legal issue has been settled," Mr. Rogers said, adding: "No serious-minded person can doubt the permanence of the school decision. The issue now is the manner and method of accommodation to it.

"If the community's attitude is governed by a respect for the constitutional rights of others the problems can be solved with due consideration for all of the interests involved."

BOMBINGS CITED

Attitudes of defiance, Mr. Rogers said, "create an atmosphere in which extremists and fanatics are encouraged to take the law into their own hands." He pointed to the actual bombings or threats of violence against churches, synagogues, and schools.

"For the most part," Mr. Rogers said, "these shameful acts have taken place in communities where necessary adjustments have been made without incident. They appear to be retaliation against people of good will who are demonstrating by their acts that the adjustments required do not lead to the dire consequences predicted by the fanatics.

"The responsibility for this wanton destruction of property rests, in my opinion, on the doorsteps of those who stir up race prejudice and advocate defiance of law."

The Attorney General said the FBI is lending every possible assistance in an all-out effort to catch the guilty persons.

Another consequence of "attitudes of defiance," Mr. Rogers said, is an upsurge in hate literature. He said there has been about a 400 per cent increase in this type of mail, "much of it printed in the basements of professional bigots."

Justice Department Sets Next Effort To Get Voter Records Of Counties

Bullock counties. It followed the pattern described Monday by more than two score complaining witnesses from Macon County.

The hearing ended without direct testimony from Negroes in Lowndes or Wilcox counties, but two Lowndes County registrars told the commission that no Negroes have tried to register there in recent years.

Mrs. S. W. Boynton of Selma, a Negro businesswoman, offered an explanation for that. She told the commission that Negroes in those two counties have been discouraged from seeking registration because of economic pressure.

The commission itself can take no punitive action against any public official because of the denial of voting rights. Its authority is limited to recommending any new federal legislation it may feel is needed to protect civil rights.

All six members of the commission attended the hearing, including three Southerners — Dean Robert G. Storey of Southern Methodist University law school, the vice chairman; former Gov. John Battle of Virginia and ex-Gov. Doyle Carlton of Florida.

The other members are Dr. John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University and commission chairman; the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University; and J. Ernest Wilkins, Chicago Negro attorney who is U.S. assistant secretary of labor.

After a two-day hearing in which officials of six Alabama counties closed ranks to oppose what was termed Federal "snooping," the Civil Rights Commission adjourned Tuesday noon and shortly thereafter it was announced that the Justice Department will move in to throw its weight against the balky county officials.

Voter records, sought by the Commission for its investigation into alleged violation of civil rights in connection with failure to register Negroes, were largely denied the Commission although some records from Macon County were presented.

Circuit judges in all counties affected, with the exception of Judge Will O. Walton and Judge Albert Hooten, of the circuit which includes Macon, had impounded voter records and the state, led by Atty. Gen. John Patterson contended that the Commission had no right to inspect the records since they are not public property and members of the Boards of Registrars are judicial officers.

One circuit judge, George Wallace, of Clayton, not only did not turn over records which he had impounded but failed to respond to a summons as a witness.

Witnesses during the two-day hearing were mostly Negroes, who responded to a repetitious series of leading questions by a Negro member of the Commission, J. Ernest Wilkins, with replies which indicated some Negroes had not been registered.

After conclusion of the hearing it was disclosed that the Justice Department had sent two agents to Alabama, apparently to lay the ground work for legal action against the reluctant Alabama officials.

It was expected that Federal court orders will be issued calling on the county officials to produce the records. In event this action is taken, it was expected a bitter legal battle will be waged in Federal court by Atty. Gen. Patterson to prevent seizure of the records.

Macon County Vote Records Subpoenaed By Rights Group

The Civil Rights Commission Monday subpoenaed Macon County Probate Judge William Varner and the voting records in his possession for next Monday's hearing on Negro voting.

Varner said he was subpoenaed to appear at the hearing and produce all voting files in his office covering the past three years. He would not reveal what the records contain.

The judge said he planned no individual resistance, but would come here from Tuskegee to discuss the matter with Atty. Gen. John Patterson.

E. P. Livingston, chairman of the Macon County Board of Registrars, said he was out of town Monday and received no subpoena.

The records in possession of the Board of Registrars are believed to contain the data on the number of Negroes turned down for registration. The scope of Varner's records had not been determined.

It was not known whether Civil Rights Commission agents, working in close-mouthed secrecy, had served any other subpoenas. They have refused to disucss the matter.

Civil Rights Commission Members As Seen In Profile After Montgomery

BY E. L. HOLLAND, JR.
Associate Editor, The News

WITH THE FEDERAL government's civil rights intrusion highly aggravating to the people of Alabama, in consequence of the hearing in Montgomery and the obvious difficulties bound to grow out of the reluctance of some state officials to testify, or turn over records, all who wish thoroughly to understand the situation should know as much as possible about the makeup and manner of the six men who make that commission.

Chairman Hannah

THE CHAIRMAN is Dr. John Alfred Hannah, 56. He is, as he was seen on the commission bench in small Room 416, fourth floor of the Montgomery Federal and Post Office Building, a man of slightly taller than average stature, with a clear firm voice, a thatch of graying hair which is neither bountiful nor particularly sparse. With reporters he was a blunt, cooperative fellow and Alabamians may well take note of the fact that he is no simple pedagogue whose head is in the clouds. In brief, a man of sternness, of capacity, who by his record has shown he can handle himself in the company of men.

A member of some six fraternities, a member of the board of visitors of the Air Force Academy, a director in several solid business firms, participant on the joint United States-Canada Defense Board, onetime chairman of the board of directors of the Detroit branch of the Federal Reserve Bank, and with a host of other impressive affiliations, professional and businesswise, this man from Grand Rapids, Mich., is somebody to be reckoned with. Be it noted that when sovereign states' rights advocates are dealing with someone who is in essence thing less than a heavyweight politically. It is possibly of some interest that "Who's Who in America" has not listed him at least since 1951, that being the earliest volume still in our files. Carlton's position as to the Southern view of federal encroachment seems to be somewhat clouded, consequently, since little or nothing has been heard from him or about him in some years. It would be interesting, of course, to know why and how President Eisenhower happened to name him.

THESE SIX MEN, then, are the members of the Federal Civil Rights Commission. On the whole they are men of stature and established reputation. As we have said, it is a good idea to know with whom you're dealing.

distinguished legal career behind him and is a granite rock on the commission on which Southerners generally can fix some staunch hopes. He will not "win" the commission struggle, but it can be said that the other members listen to his caution and counsel.

Carlton Of Florida

SIXTH MEMBER OF the commision is former Gov. Doyle Carlton of Florida. Carlton is a quiet man obviously—this can be said because during the full day's hearing Monday, when every other member of the commission was speaking up to ask questions, Carlton said not a word. He finally asked a few questions Tuesday morning, the first time he spoke up bringing from one press table observer the all but shocked comment: "He's in there!" Carlton was governor of Florida in the mid-thirties, had been a city attorney of Tampa before that and is considered by newsmen who have observed him in his home state as being somewhat critical of them, they had best measure their opponent, and measure him well. Thus Hannah who on the bench in Montgomery was polite but unyielding. The fact that he gave over the chairmanship of the commission to Dean Robert G. Storey of Southern Methodist University Law School was solely because the commission wanted the bulk of the group's business to be handled by a lawyer.

were white. With Negroes he was, to some at the press tables, occsionally almost paternalistic but even with those of his race who were clearly up from the cornfields he dealt in a manner of total equality. In brief, he could not be rated as a Negro who thought himself better, economically or otherwise, than the least fortunate of his race. Wilkins has been an assistant secretary of state of the United States, was admitted to the bar in 1921, is cut in the Chicago pattern, has several degrees, has served on a number of government and private boards, and knows, too, what he is doing.

Battle Of Virginia

THE MAN ON the commission clearly most dedicated to the solid cause of Southern tradition as well as state sovereignty was former Gov. John Stewart Battle, 68, in the latter years of his active career, and a man who seemed to an observer to be somewhat weary but yet firm to the core and devoted to dignity among men. A pipe smoker who, as no other commission member did, occasionally yielded to a need of the weed and ducked out for a few puffs, Battle has gray eyes which flit from one person's face to another with an incisiveness to make the person being watched feel almost as if he were being looked through, summed up and assessed in mathematical fashion. Gov. Battle's questions to Negroes were courteous to a maximum, even when he clearly thought some wool was being pulled over others' eyes, and he addressed Negro men as "Mr.," Negro women as "Mrs." or "Miss." He yielded nothing but stood firmly and impressively as a true Southern gentleman, and in a manner to give that phrase a refreshed value. Gov. Battle comes from Charlottesville, Va., has a solmenly said "I direct and command" witnesses to take the oath. This was a technique applied for the Justice Department, of course, distasteful to Alabamians, but nevertheless something that had an impact. We cannot wisely ignore this man in any way.

The Rev. Hesburgh

ALSO ON THE COMMISSION were four other men. President of Notre Dame, the Rev. Theodore Martin Hesburgh, born in New York, is the youngest member of the group. He is 41, handsome as a movie star in a rugged way, has rich black hair and speech which borders on being clipped. He has a substantial background, is a graduate of several colleges with a hatful of degrees, has served as a military chaplain, is affiliated in an academic way with the Ford Motor Company Fund, the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, is a member of the board of visitors of the U. S. Naval Academy and has been called on before by the government to serve on advisory boards. Father Hesburgh is also an impressive man and certainly, as president of the University of Notre Dame, a man who knows what he is and what he is about when dealing with human beings and human problems.

J. Ernest Wilkins

A FOURTH MEMBER of the commission is its sole Negro member, J. Ernest Wilkins, 64, and doesn't look it, born in Farmington, Mo., Wilkins is clearly a dedicated servant of the cause of Negro advancement. His questioning of the white witnesses at Montgomery was exceedingly polite but naturally, for a man with his record and background, giving no ground because of the fact that they teous alike to whites and Negroes. He proved himself adept at getting all fundamental facts about every witness into the record, occasionally showed a genuine tendency toward humor of a non-aggravating sort, and was clearly highly respected by all members of the commission. The press found him not to be effusive, but quite reachable and a master of the business at hand. He was firm but rode not a whit roughshod over anyone except in the cases of witnesses, subpoenaed, who refused to take the oath. At such points of refusal, he was not a man to be rated lowly when he

Texas' Storey

LAWYER TO THE CORE is Robert Gerald Storey, 65, who was born in Greenville, Tex. A graduate of Texas University with a law degree from T. C. U., he has practiced law, served in state legal capacities, been a counsel for several business firms and is himself a director of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The list of his achievements is impressive and it may be noted that he served valiantly in the armed services in both world wars and holds the Legion of Merit and Bronze Star from our country and the Legion of Honor—no small award—from France.

Macon Registrars Quit In State-Federal Clash

By Leon Goggin

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)— A federal versus state power clash loomed today on a federal court's demand that an Alabama judge and five voter registrars show their records to the U. S. Civil Rights Commission.

After District Court orders were issued Thursday, rapid-fire developments indicated further possible difficulty for the year-old federal agency probing complaints of discrimination against Negro voters.

Macon County Registrars E. P. Livingston and Grady Rogers, two of the five who silently defied the commission at its first hearing Monday and Tuesday, resigned on grounds they were being intimidated.

They said they would obey orders to appear at a second hearing here before the six-man commission or a subcommittee Dec. 19.

But they said, "We aren't registrars any more and no records are in our possession." What effect this may have on the investigation had not been determined.

Refusal to obey the orders could bring contempt citations and possible penalties of imprisonment or fines. This would be at the court's decision.

A promise of "vigorous opposition" to the court orders came from Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who will take office as governor next month.

The 37-year-old official, upon whose advice the registrars kept silent at the hearing, said he was considering intervention in the form of a motion to set aside the orders issued by U. S. Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr.

"We would like to argue the merits of Judge Johnson's orders in court without having the risk of a contempt citation," he said.

Served with the orders, in addition to Livington and Rogers, were Circuit Judge George C. Wallace of Clayton, Ala., Registrars J. W. Spencer and W. A. Stokes of Barbour County and M. P. Evans of Bullock County.

Wallace, who would only say he was conferring with his attorney about the federal order, refused even to appear at the first hearing. As a state judge, he said, he is immune from federal investigations.

The subpoenaed registrars refused—on similar grounds of immunity—to be sworn in, to testify or produce their records.

Their defiance caused the Civil Rights Commission to abruptly halt its inquiry Tuesday with the announcement it would seek stronger means of persuasion from U. S. Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers. Two Justice Department agents then came here and worked secretly toward issuance of the court orders.

Atty. Gen. Patterson emphasized he did not advise Livingston and Rogers to resign. "They told me they were considering resignning because they felt the civil rights commission was intimidating them."

Patterson contends the federal government lacks authority over state judicial officers, but that the investigating was uncalled for because there is no discrimination against anyone as to voting rights. If there was, he says, the persons affected have proper recourse under state law.

The Alabama official said he was "at a loss to understand" President Eisenhower's reference Wednesday to the massive resistance as a "sad and reprehensible thing."

"The commission would have no more right to do what they tried to do down here than they would have to subpoena a member of the Supreme Court of the United States and ask him why he decided a case in a certain way," Patterson said.

Indications were strong, meanwhile, that Dr. John A. Hannah, commission chairman, has named a subcommittee to hold the second hearing here next Friday.

This was brought out in the justice department's petition for the court orders. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, could not be reached for comment, and names of the subcommittee members had not been learned.

The commission's first hearing dealt mostly with testimony from numerous Negroes, some of them weigh high academic degrees.

They testified they tried persistently to register, but that difficult tests, tedious procedures and uncooperative officials prevented them from attaining their constitutional rights because of their race.

Fair Skies May Presage Heavy Vote In Alabama

By TOM INGRAM

A last-minute flurry between the Democratic and Republican candidates for governor coupled with a forecast of fair skies may result in a near-record vote Tuesday in the general election.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, the Democratic nominee, closed out his campaign Monday with the prediction of a heavy vote. He said Democrats would turn out en masse to protest the use of federal troops to enforce integration at Little Rock's Central High School.

But William L. Longshore Jr., the Republican candidate, disagreed. He insisted that segregation was not an issue in the governor's race because "I am just as much opposed to integration as my opponent."

Patterson said he had found "a lot of enthusiasm" among Democratic voters, adding that Tuesday's vote may reach an all-time high for the formal election of a governor in Alabama. The record vote for such an election was established in 1954 when 332,000 voters went to the polls.

While Patterson and Longshore were having their last say-so, a third candidate in the gubernatorial race took a swing at the state Democratic Party's so-called "loyalty oath." Jackson, running as an independent, commented:

"I am happy that history will record that I made the choice of Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee to remain a patriot rather than take an oath of allegiance to a national party that would destroy our segregated way of life."

OPEN AT 8 P.M.

Polls will open at 8 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. in counties where there are no voting machines; they will be open until 6 p.m. where machines are used except in Jefferson County where the machines will not be closed until 7 p.m.

Republican candidates are challenging Democratic nominees in all other statewide offices—lieutenant governor, attorney general, auditor, treasurer, secretary of state and agriculture commissioner.

In addition, a GOP candidate is running for Congress in the Ninth District (Alabama's other eight congressmen, all Democrats are unopposed for reelection) as well as for 12 seats in the Alabama Legislature.

Unchallenged are the Democratic nominees for nine other state offices—state school superintendent, three seats on the Supreme Court, three seats on the Court of Appeals, and two places on the Public Service Commission.

Prior to departing for Phenix City where he will vote Tuesday, Patterson issued an election eve statement in which he tagged segregation and civil rights as the issues uppermost in the minds of the voters.

"The people in Alabama have a deep resentment over the way the Republican administration has treated the South on civil rights and segregation," Patterson declared. "The use of troops at Little Rock shocked them. They are going to the polls tomorrow as much to vote against the Republicans as to vote for the Democrats."

Longshore responded with the observation that the Democratic Party is more objectionable to the South than the Republican Party.

"We will never have any influence in either major party until we have two strong parties in the South," he added.

In addition to voting in the seven contested state races, voters will also decide the fate of three proposed amendments to the state Constitution. All three are local in application, affecting but one county.

Amendment No. 1 would prohibit legislation being passed to alter the form of government in Lauderdale County, or to abolish or shorten the term of an elective office there.

No. 2, being submitted for the fifth time, proposes to give the Marion County governing body unlimited power to go into business and to levy taxes on the people of that county. The amendment has been rejected overwhelmingly four times previously.

Amendment No. 3 would authorize the levying of an additional 5.5 mill property tax in Montgomery County, earmarked for schools. Such a tax would have to be approved by local voters before going into effect.

In Alabama Cities—

Republicans Get Most Negro Votes

The Republicans got the biggest chunk of the big city Alabama Negro vote in Tuesday's general election.

Republican candidates showed strength in Negro boxes in Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile and Tuskegee.

Republican Gubernatorial Candidate William L. Longshore Jr. carried two boxes near Legion Field in a heavily-populated Negro area.

In one of them, Longshore polled 507 votes to Patterson's 313. In the other, Longshore polled 313 votes to Patterson's 272.

In four Mobile boxes, also heavily Negro, Longshore led Patterson by a score of 390 to 136.

Incomplete returns from Tuesday's election gave the Republicans nearly a third of the votes in Macon County. Normally, as Sheriff Preston Hornsby expressed it — "You can count the Republican votes on your fingers."

Longshore made his best showing in Montgomery in the two boxes where Negroes have heavy voting strength.

A segregationist leader, outgoing Sen. Engelhardt of Macon, said the heavy Republican vote among Negroes in his county indicated:

1. An endorsement of President Eisenhower's racial policies, particularly the use of Federal troops to enforce an integration order in Little Rock, Ark.

2. A protest against the governor-elect, Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who tried to break up a Negro boycott against white merchants in Tuskegee, Macon County seat.

Negroes have been boycotting Tuskegee white-owned stores for 16 months in protest against an Engelhardt-sponsored law which has virtually eliminated Negro voting there by "gerrymandering" the town boundaries so that most Negroes now live outside the city.

Patterson sought a court order to prohibit members and followers of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization, from using force or pressure to stop other Negroes from trading with white merchants.

A judge in state court denied the injunction request because he said Patterson had failed to prove the TCA was sponsoring the boycott.

Macon County Votes Strong For The GOP

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Republican candidates polled an unusually heavy vote yesterday in Macon County where Gov.-elect John Patterson, a Democrat, tried to break up a Negro boycott of white Tuskegee stores.

Returns from 14 of the county's 18 boxes gave Patterson 1,208 votes and his GOP opponent, W. L. Longshore Jr., 394.

Sheriff Preston Hornsby said most of the Republican votes came from the boxes near Tuskegee Institute and the Veterans Administration hospital, centers of heavy Negro population.

Normally in a general election for governor, Hornsby said "you can count the Republican votes on your fingers."

Negroes have boycotted Tuskegee merchants for 16 months in protest against a legislative act which virtually eliminated Negro voting in the city by rearranging the boundaries and leaving most Negro residences outside the city limits.

Patterson sought in vain to get a permanent court injunction to prohibit members and followers of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization, from using force or pressure to keep other Negroes from trading in town.

The TCA's acting president, the Rev. K. L. Buford, said he does not know how most Negroes voted.

He explained that his organization endorsed neither candidate for governor because "we did not feel any of the candidates was worthy of our support."

Longshores and Patterson both took a firm stand against integration.

SLAP AT EISENHOWER

Patterson Says Alabama Repudiated Race Policy

BY BOB INGRAM

Gov.-elect John Patterson said Wednesday his landslide victory in the Democratic election was a repudiation of the Eisenhower Administration's racial policies by Alabama voters.

Patterson had been a heavy favorite to win in this Democratic state, but the margin of his triumph was a crushing blow to the Republican Party in Alabama which in recent years had shown some signs of strength.

With returns from Tuesday's election still incomplete, Republican gubernatorial nominee William L. Longshore Jr. found himself hardpressed to corral a measly 12 per cent of the total vote.

Returns from 2,232 of the state's 3,068 boxes gave Patterson 167,829 votes. Longshore was far back with 26,888 while Marvin Jackson, running as an independent, had received 1,275.

This was a far cry from the governor's race four years ago when GOP nominee Tom Abernethy received 26.6 per cent of the total vote and set the Republicans to talking of a two-party system in Alabama. The voters put a stop to that talk Tuesday.

The rout of the Republicans would have been worse had it not been for the Negro vote.

The GOP slate polled nearly a third of the vote in Macon County, a county not known to be a Republican stronghold. A Macon official said most of the Republican votes came from the vicinity of Tuskegee Institute, a Negro college.

The same pattern was evidenced in Birmingham, both predominantly Negro; In Mobile the four boxes won by the Republicans have a mapority of Negro voters.

The Republicans failed to carry a box in Montgomery County, but the boxes where they made the most respectable showings were where Negro voting was heaviest.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, segregation leader, interpreted the Negro bloc vote for the GOP as being an endorsement of President Eisenhower's racial policies and a protest against Democratic nominee Patterson and his strong stand in support of segregation.

While the Democrats margin of victory was enormous, the winning party could get little consolation from the turnout. There had been predictions of a record vote in protest to Eisenhower, but this failed to materialize.

Alabama Officials Display Callous Contempt for Law

The defiance of the Civil Rights Commission by state and county officials of Alabama, led by Gov.-elect John Patterson, could not have been calculated to do more damage to the segregationist position if it had been planned by the NAACP itself.

Refusal of Alabama authorities to turn over voting records to the commission is simply another way of saying that the State of Alabama is attempting to prevent the objective truth about discrimination against Negroes at the polls from becoming a matter of public and official record. It cannot and will not succeed in this attempt. The commission, sharply divided between Southerners and Northerners, is established by law not as a law-enforcing but as a fact-finding body. Whatever it is going to do, however, it has to have the help of the courts to do it.

In his fine statement at the opening of the hearings, chairman John A. Hannah of the commission emphasized in the most moderate and conciliatory language that the group "does not consider itself a protagonist for one view or another" but that it hopes "through dispassionate evaluation and appraisal of the facts" to bring "some sort of reason and light" to bear on these controversial and inflammatory matters of national concern. Who, seeking the truth, could ask for less?

The Montgomery hearings are the first to be held in public by the commission and were opened by what vice chairman Robert G. Storey referred to as "the cradle of the Confederacy" solely because the largest number of seemingly substantial complaints of voting discrimination happened to come from Alabama. Dr. Hannah took the occasion to point out, as any fair-minded person would do, that great progress has been made in the South in recent years in admitting Negroes to the exercise of the voting franchise. But it is common knowledge that in many localities the Negro is still denied that most fundamental right of American citizens.

It is the statutory duty of the commission to look into the evidence before submitting its report to the President and Congress next September. In their resistance to the reasoned efforts of this ultra-moderate presidential commission to carry out its sworn duty the new state and county officials are displaying an intolerable contempt for law.

Patterson And The Law

EDITOR, THE ADVERTISER — On several occasions I have had the great privilege and pleasure of talking to John Patterson, the attorney general and governor-elect of Alabama. Mr. Patterson is one of the most attractive and persuasive figures in American public life.

John Patterson gained his office after the heinous murder of his father. The people of Alabama sympathized with the Patterson family and were moved by the drive of John Patterson to chase the gamblers out of Alabama and revenge his father's death. Many of us in law enforcement throughout the country have been inspired by his deeds.

There is, therefore, dismay to read in our local paper that Mr. Patterson is actually opposing the efforts of the United States Civil Rights Commission to discover whether the voting privileges of American citizens have been denied. There is wonder as to why John Patterson cannot give the same protective sympathy to Negro American citizens as he gave to all the citizens of Alabama when he waged his war against crime.

It is hurting to the democratic ideal to consider that a man who was elected because of his fight for law and order, now acts to hinder the recognition of legal rights of all the citizens of his great state. I would ask John Patterson and the citizens of Alabama to return to that flame of justice which lead them to clean up Alabama. Is it not time for Alabama to be fair to all its citizens?

The South Must Resist

Editor, The Advertiser:

I read with interest your article concerning cooperation with the Civil Rights Commission. There are many reasons why resistance is the best policy. Not the least of these is that we ought to have the right to test the constitutionality of the law creating the commission.

You and Battle seem to think that the same is constitutional. I think not. Assuming that it is constitutional, the statute does not give the commission the right to subpoena our judicial officers or any other officers for that matter. There is no law allowing such. We certainly ought to be allowed to test that power and give the Supreme Court the chance to rewrite some more of the Constitution. They may decide this time not to hold hands and jump.

The President has refused to give up records of his office and the executive branch to our elected officials in Congress, which I believe he had a right to do. Now he has the nerve to say that it is reprehensible for our officers to refuse to give their records to a politically inspired commission.

If we should follow the advice of Battle and others then we waive our sovereignty. If we agree that a circuit judge of this great state of ours, charged with the responsibility of the protection of our citizens, can be brought before a body such as the Civil Rights Commission at their call, then we have thrown out the window the last vestige of states rights. That would be an admission that the federal government is supreme. This I will not admit even if they occupy the South in a show of power.

In my opinion we are in the last stages of abolition of state governments. We must resist.

Wallace, 5 Others Could Go To Jail For Months

U.S. JUDGE INSTRUCTS THEM TO PRODUCE VOTE RECORDS

By REX THOMAS
AP Staff Writer

An Alabama judge and five other public officials may go to jail, perhaps for months, unless they abandon their refusal to produce evidence about Negro voter registration.

A federal judge noted as a courtroom hearing has instructed them to surrender contested records to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission and refrain from questioning about registration in their counties.

DESPITE THEIR PROTESTS of judicial immunity, the officials could be put behind bars and kept there even while appealing the sentence to higher courts.

The fantastic crisis over the disputed right of the federal government to question the acts of registration officers has left troubled Macon County once again with no functioning machinery to register new voters.

Both surviving members of the Macon Board of Registrars — the third member died last month — resigned in protest against the civil rights hearing at which they and registrars in two other counties refused to testify.

THE RESIGNATION of Chairman E. P. Livingston and Grady Rogers left prospective voters with no way to register in the county where Negroes out-number white residents nearly 6-1.

Livingston and Rogers refused to testify under oath at the two-day hearing in Montgomery, protesting that they are judicial officers whose official conduct cannot be challenged. So did registrars W. A. Stokes and J. W. Spencer in Barbour County and M. T. Evans in Bullock.

They also appeared without their registration files explaining they had been impounded by state authorities. The same strategy likewise kept the commission from getting records in Dallas, Lowndes and Wilcox counties, but the refusal to testify did not extend to registrars in those counties.

THE VOTING FILES in Barbour and Bullock were impounded by Circuit Judge George Wallace even before the commission subpoenaed them. Wallace ignored a demand to produce them at the hearing and refused even to appear himself.

Wallace and the five silent registration officials were all included in the federal court order issued Thursday by U.S. Dist. Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. in Montgomery.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Alabama's governor-elect who directed the resistance at the hearing, has promised to resist the court order. He contends the commission had no right to subpoena the voter registration records or question the official acts of the board members.

HE SAID HE WILL ask Johnson for a hearing next week to give him the chance to raise the legal issues before the Friday afternoon deadline. If he could do that, then appeal to higher courts if turned down by the judge here, the question could be settled before reaching the point of a contempt citation.

But Johnson may not agree to that. He may wait until Friday and then cite the defiant officials if they fail to produce the requested evidence.

If the federal judge pursues that course, he will give the defendants a chance then to show why they shouldn't be punished for defiance of his order. They might convince him that they had a legal right to refuse to testify or to produce their records.

If they failed, Johnson could send them to jail and keep them there until they agree to comply with the commission's demands, no matter how long it might be. He could even refuse to release them on bond pending an appeal to higher courts.

Civil Rights Echoes From Alabama

The Civil Rights Commission, because of a defiant attitude on the part of Alabama local officials, began action on Tuesday to compel public officials to produce evidence about Negro voter registration in Alabama. This was incurred after non-cooperation on the part of local officials to turn over to the commisssion certain evidence in the voter registration investigation.

This is well on the road to the issuance of contempt citations and in such a procedure the federal government would be the winner. A judge is the sole determiner of contempt. Hence former Governor Battle of Virginia, a member of the commission, warned the Alabama officials that attempts to defy the order of the commission would suggest that there was something to hide; that cooperation was the wise course to take.

Still the advice of Governor Battle was not heeded and now there remains no other than the rigid course the government is on the border of instituting in support of the commission.

The condition posed in Lowndes County, Alabama, alone where the Negro residents outnumber the whites three to one, and not a single Negro on the registration books, would of itself be an alarming situation. It is therefore no matter of surprise that such a flagrant violation of legal rights would be followed into.

The whole of our legal system would fall into disrepute, if with such an undercurrent going by unnoticed, in time it would route the whole of our Democratic procession.

It must be said that the government has moved in a plausible direction; it is saying more than is summed up in the administration. It is writing a parable of legal merit not only for Alabama, but for the nation as a whole.

Thusly, may "the stars that fell on Alabama," emit a flood whose powerful glow may enlighten the ages.

Civil Rights Commission Drumming For Business

Monday the first public hearing of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission will be held here.

According to reports from Washington the Commission was eager to have chance to hold an investigation before it had run into difficulty with Congressional interference.

The Commission was established by the civil rights law passed in the year of 1957. Although given broad powers for investigating reporting on alleged cases of racial discrimination in a number of fields, including housing — the principal purpose of the law was to enforce voting rights for Negroes.

But the Commission's admitted embarrassment, there have been precious few complaints. And more and more Negroes are registering and voting. In the year and a half since the civil rights law was passed by Congress there have been less than 40 complaints of voting discrimination considered worth serious inquiry. And many of these have been thrown out.

One New York newspaper reported a Commission spokesman the other day as saying, with remarkable candor: "People around here are surprised and disappointed." They had expected a rush once they opened for business. It didn't materialize. So when the Macon County complaint came along, it was a natural; the Commission is anxious to show some activity before Congress convenes.

Because the Commission hasn't done anything to speak of, Northern politicians have been clamoring for a new, stronger law. But even the civil rights division of the Justice Department reports it has received only 16 valid complaints since the civil rights act was passed. (The law granted the Department new enforcement powers.)

And this out of an average of 1,200 letters a month containing gripes about all manner of alleged discrimination, including denial of suffrage to women and ex-convicts. There have been very few complaints from Negroes protesting voting discrimination.

The Wall Street Journal points to the biggest reason: Negro registration was increasing at a rapid clip, political distortions to the contrary notwithstanding, all over the Deep South before the passage of the civil rights act. From 1947 to 1956, for instance, Negro registration in 11 southern states jumped from 600,000 to 1,300,000—more than double in less than a decade.

Last year, to cite another example, total registration of all new voters, white and Negro, decreased in Georgia, but the number of registered Negro voters in the state increased by about 2,000 in the same period.

All of which adds up to a distressing dearth of complaints for the Commission. This is undoubtedly the chief reason for the haste in scheduling a hearing here. It wouldn't look good to have 1958 end without some southern devilry to report.

DEC. 8, 1958
CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION HEARING
MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA

Probers Coming Dec. 8 To Air Negro Charges

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (UPI) — The Civil Rights Commission agreed unanimously today to hold a hearing at Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 8 to look into charges that Negroes are being denied the right to vote in the state.

Vice Chairman Robert G. Storey said conditions of the hearing will determine whether the commission will subpena voting records of Macon County, Ala., which were denied its staff representatives Monday. Storey said he thought the records would be needed for a full hearing.

The commission also announced it will hold a hearing Feb. 2 in New York City on discrimination in public housing and urban renewal projects. Chairman John A. Hannah said the choice of New York as the site did not indicate any feeling the city has been negligent.

"We have no feeling that the housing situation is worse in New York than elsewhere," he said. "We desire to accumulate as much information as we can get regarding public housing and civil rights."

The Alabama hearing will be conducted by the entire commission and probably will last about three days. Storey said he assumed the proceedings would be open to the public, although no decision was reached at today's regular commission meeting.

The commission reported additional complaints of voting discrimination denials in Alabama and Mississippi since its previous meeting on Sept. 10. It ordered preliminary surveys of these new complaints. As customary, it did not identify the source of the complaints.

The commission said its Montgomery hearing was called in connection with its duty "to investigate sworn allegation that certain citizens are being denied the right to vote and to have their votes counted by reason of their color, race, religion or national origin."

It said it had hoped to get all the facts necessary "through the co-operation and understanding of local and state officials." But it noted its agents had been denied access to voting records "by Macon County officials acting on the advice of the attorney general of Alabama." Macon County is predominantly Negro.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson has advised the state's 67 county voter registration boards to withhold their records from Federal agents.

Storey said the commission's decision to hold the Montgomery hearing was not based on refusal to furnish the records. He said the commission merely thought it proper to hold the inquiry "from the information we received."

The commission also said it was making a preliminary investigation of a complaint of denial of voting rights in a Northern state. Hannah said the complaint charged denial on the ground of national origin, rather than race. He declined to identify the state because of the "inconclusive nature" of the charge.

Hearing Scheduled For Dec. 8

Alabama Cases Will Come Up In Montgomery

By BETTY PRYOR

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Civil Rights Commission has implied it may use its subpoena powers, if necessary to obtain voting records for a forthcoming hearing at Montgomery, Ala.

The new commission scheduled as first hearing in the Alabama capital Dec. 8 to look into complaints that colored residents in the state are being denied their right to vote. It promised a thorough and open-minded inquiry.

THE commission also scheduled a hearing Feb. 2 in New York City on discrimination in public housing and urban renewal projects. Chairman John A. Hannah said the choice of New York as the site did not indicate any feeling the city has been negligent.

"We have no feeling that the housing situation is worse in New York than elsewhere," he said. "We desire to accumulate as much information as we can get regarding public housing and civil rights."

THE ALABAMA hearing will be conducted by the entire commission and probably will last about three days. Hannah said he assumed the proceedings would be open to the public although no decision was reached at Thursday's commission meeting.

In announcing the Alabama hearing, the commission expressed disappointment that Macon county, Ala. registrars refused to let its investigators look at voting records last Monday. The registrars said they acted on advice from State Atty. Gen. John Patterson that the records were not public and need not be shown.

Site Sought For Rights Hearing Here

An official of the Civil Rights Commission was in Montgomery Thursday making arrangements for the Dec. 8 hearing of the commission to be held here.

Col. A. H. Rosenfeld of Mount Holly, N. J., director of the Office of Complaints, Information and Survey for the commission, said that a definite site for the hearings has not been set yet. He was making inquiries in the Post Office as to a possible location for the hearings.

The hearings will be open to the public, the retired infantry officer said, unless "circumstances arise such that testimony given might be harmful to someone." Under such circumstances the commission can go into executive session and close the hearings to the public, Rosenfeld said.

The colonel said the commission's job is simply to investigate sworn complaints filed with the commission. It is strictly a fact-finding body which is required to file its report with the President and with the Congress," he said. "It is not a police body and is not interested in integration."

Rights Panel Sets Hearing In Alabama

By ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON The Civil Rights Commission will hold public hearings in Montgomery, Ala., beginning Dec. 8 in a move to compel disclosure of Alabama voting records.

Officials of Macon County, Ala., refused this week to give registration documents to commission investigators. They acted on the advice of John Patterson, Alabama attorney general and Democratic nominee for governor.

The six-member rights commission voted unanimously today to go to Alabama and investigate charges of discrimination against Negro voters. The hearings will be the first held since the commission was created a year ago by the Civil Rights Act of 1957.

SUBPOENA POWERS

The commission has subpoena powers under the act. While no statement was made on the subject Thursday, all indications were that the Macon County voting records would be subpoenaed.

Dr. John A. Hannah, commission chairman, said the position of Alabama officials was not the only reason for the hearing. He said the basic ground for going to the area was to investigate complaints about voting discrimination for reasons of race.

Commission investigators have been studying such charges in Alabama, Mississippi and Florida. Dr. Hannah indicated that they had met no resistance in the other two states like that in Alabama, but he would not rule out the possibility of hearings there, too.

SWORN COMPLANT

The commission also disclosed it has authorized a voting investigation in a Northern state. The state was not identified.

In this case, Dr. Hannah said, the commission has received a sworn complaint about denials of the right to vote on grounds of the would-be voter's national origin.

The commission also announced that it would hold public hearings in New York City starting next Feb. 2 on the subject of discrimination in housing.

Dr. Hannah said the inquiry would be purely a fact-finding one.

Reporters asked Dr. Hannah why the commission has not scheduled hearing on education, in Little Rock, for example, or in the Virginia areas where schools have been closed to avoid racial integration.

Dr. Hannah said no need has been felt for school hearings so far. He repeated that the commission "is a fact-finding organization," and said it was not clear what good the group could do in the troubled school situation.

All the members of the commission, including the three from the south, voted to proceed with an Alabama hearing.

The Southern members are Robert G. Storey, vice-chairman, of Texas; John S. Battle of Virginia, and Doyle E. Carlton of Florida. The two other commissioners are Father Theodore M. Hesburgh of Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind., and Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of labor.

In Montgomery Patterson accused the rights commission of playing politics.

Patterson denounced as "politically inspired" the commission's announcement that a hearing will be held to look into charges of the denial of Negroes' voting rights.

The attorney general said Thursday's announcement from the commission "is further proof of the intention of the Republican administration to destroy the rights of the states and reduce our Constitution to a mere scrap of paper."

Info 'leaking' banned by law

BY JAMES FREE, News Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 11—The first hearing set by the Civil Rights Commission at Montgomery starting Dec. 8 may offer a test run on one of the toughest secrecy rules ever written for a federal agency.

This rule was part of the act creating the commission, and it was approved by all but the Southern opponents of the civil rights act.

It will apply automatically whenever the commission takes any testimony in a closed hearing.

And it is likely that at least part of the Alabama hearing (on alleged denial of voting rights to certain Negroes in Macon County) may be closed.

THIS IS BECAUSE of another statutory provision in the act—one that says if the commission determines that any evidence it is getting may tend to degrade or incriminate any person, it shall receive such evidence in closed session.

The secrecy rule is as follows:

"No evidence or testimony taken in executive session may be released or used in public sessions without the consent of the commission.

Whoever releases or uses in public without the consent of the commission evidence or testimony taken in executive session shall be fined not more than $1000 or imprisoned for not more than one year."

THIS WOULD SEEM to apply to anyone—whether a witness, a commission member or official, a newspaper or a radio or television station.

Thus, a newspaper could be taken into court if it printed a "leaked" story.

The fact is that no committee of Congress, nor any other federal agency that this reporter knows of, has so stiff a secrecy rule covering closed hearings.

The penalties were put into the law presumably to help the commission in its efforts to protect citizens from baseless or irresponsible charges. Aim is to give the commission a chance to evaluate such charges in closed session before allowing witness to state them in public.

OTHER COMMISSION rules for its hearings include:

1. A requirement that all prepared statements that witnesses want to read into the record be submitted to the commission 24 hours in advance. That is, the day before the hearing. (The commission can permit, or forbid the reading.)

2. Questioning of witness will be by members of the commission or authorized staff members only. This means that a citizen will not have the privilege of cross-examining a witness who makes charges against him, although accused persons can appear volutarily to give their side of a story.

3. Witnesses get $4 a day pay, eight cents a mile for travel and $12 a day for living expenses, if they do not live in the vicinity. Witnesses cannot be summoned from outside the state in which the hearing is held.

THE COMMISSION will meet here tomorrow to make final plans for the Montgomery hearings. It will decide then whether it will issue subpoenas to compel Macon County Voter Registration Board members to bring their records. On advice of Atty. Gen. John Patterson, board members have declined to let agents of the commission see the records.

Patterson, who is governor-elect as well as attorney general, said that the commission's agents want to "conduct a fishing expedition." He said he was told that agents declined to name the persons who complained to the commission that their voting rights were being denied, and also refused to specify in what manner those rights had been denied.

IF THE LOCAL OFFICIALS persist in their refusal to give the commission access to the records, the commission is expected to go into Federal Court and file contempt proceedings.

The Federal Court having jurisdiction in this case would be that of Judge Frank Johnson Jr. in Montgomery.

Civil Rights Commission Starts Work in Montgomery

MONTGOMERY (AP)—Agents of the Civil Rights Commission were in Montgomery today, reportedly with subpoenas to serve on witnesses for next Monday's hearing on Negro voting.

The commission has ordered the hearing in Montgomery to investigate complaints that Negroes have been denied the right to vote in Macon and perhaps other Alabama Counties.

It will be the first major proceeding for the new federal agency since its creation by Congress last year.

A spokesman, Burton Stevenson of Washington, declined to discuss the nature of the agents' visit here, but said "conceivably" they will serve subpoenas while in Alabama. He said they probably will return to Washington later in the week.

Stevenson refused to say whether witnesses might be called from other counties besides Macon, where members of the County Registration Board at Tuskegee earlier refused to let commission agents see their records.

Complaints have been made by Negroes in Montgomery as well as Macon County.

The two agents who tried in vain last month to get the Macon County records—O. J. Peterson and B. J. Goodyear—were here today with Stevenson.

The registration boards in Macon and Montgomery, and all other counties in the state, were in session today by law. They are required to meet on the first and third Mondays of each month in addition to other fixed periods.

President told he needs good legal advice

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 11—(AP)—An Alabama White Citizens Council official suggested today that President Eisenhower would do well to find "an able constitutional lawyer" to explain the 10th Amendment to him.

William E. Garner, vice chairman of the pro-segregation Montgomery Citizens Council, made his suggestion in a letter addressed to the President.

Garner's letter was in reply to Mr. Eisenhower's criticism yesterday of public officials who refused to cooperate with the U. S. Civil Rights Commission during a hearing here this week.

THE PRESIDENT termed conduct of the Alabama officials as "reprehensible."

At Washington today, White House Secretary James C. Hagerty said the president had made his position clear yesterday and there would be no comment on Garner's letter.

Garner, a Montgomery attorney, told the president in defending the Alabama officials himself guilty of the "reprehensible" kind of action attributed to the Ala-

"reprehensible" kind which you talk about widespread disregard for the law of the land—really is not in Alabama. It is in the District of Columbia.

"There the Supreme Court arrogated to itself the making of national policy and the unmaking of law by its pandering to the radicals in Congress abandoning principles to court the vote of left-wing minorities and you slavishly are acting as errand boy for both of these branches of government rather than acting as a check on them as the Constitution commands."

GARNER SAID American people if called on to list "reprehensible" actions in U. S. history, "could place at the top much of your own conduct—such as your sending elite troops to occupy an American city and bayonet its citizens."

GARNER ACCUSED the president of denouncing radicals in political speeches but "inviting them into the White House to advise you, as you did on June 23 when you conferred with an NAACP delegation the members of which have scores of citations of Communist front affiliations."

"You have sounded an appeal for respect for the law," Garner said. "We suggest that you begin such a movement yourself by meeting at an early date with Attorney General Rogers and members of doubt that the lease of four acres or more of land fronting on the causeway to Mrs. Finch was largely, if not overwhelmingly, in her favor.

Rental rate figures interesting

THE STATE APPARENTLY PROVED that the annual rental rate, amounting to about 20 to 30 cents a year per front foot for the 745 feet fronting on the causeway, was about one-tenth of what the state had been receiving from other causeway leases.

The state also presented through testimony of a real estate appraiser that a fair rental cost for the property should have been $7.50 a year for each front foot.

Mrs. Finch apparently was correct in her claim that the same land had been leased to her late father at virtually the same rate set out in her lease.

That, however, apparently did not disprove the state's contention that the terms of the lease were in Mrs. Finch's favor.

Van Antwerp supports lease

PRINCIPAL WITNESS IN SUPPORT of the lease was former State Sen. Garet Van Antwerp of Mobile.

The witness, who also represented her in the case, sought to show that the terms were not out of line. He said he had a working knowledge of realty values of causeway property.

Van Antwerp testified also that Mrs. Finch's father was a longtime friend and that he was representing her without charge.

34e 1958 CONFERENCE ON VOTING RESTRICTIONS

CONFERENCE HELD UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE SOUTHERN CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL FUND- HEADED BY MR. AUBREY WILLIAMS, (MONTGOMERY, ALA).

Negro Voting Data Compiled

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

After hearing reports on Negro voting curbs in eight Southern states, the one-day "Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern States" voted yesterday to turn the information over to the Civil Rights Commission.

An interracial audience of an estimated 400 persons heard the reports from white and Negro speakers at the session, sponsored by the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., of New Orleans, and held at Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K sts. N.W.

The vote followed a summary of the reports by James Nabrit Jr., secretary of Howard University, who said: "Negro voters must run the gauntlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, economic reprisals, bodily harm and racial discrimination in order to register as voters and, having registered they must then face these same obstacles in order to vote."

The Conference also urged the Senate Judiciary Committee to confirm appointments to the Civil Rights Commission immediately, and personnel immediately, and said, by resolution without debate or dissent, that voting curbs "call for immediate remedial action by the Executive and Legislative branches of Government."

Speaking from Mississippi was the Rev. John LaBauve, pastor of St. Gabriel's Catholic Church of Mound Bayou, who read a report by two other Negro leaders unable to be present.

The report stated that in only six of Mississippi's 82 counties is the Negro free to vote; and in 33 there is "gross intimidation." Father LaBauve left the prepared text to say: "We are appealing to every right-minded man and woman in the nation and the world. Keep in mind. Some of us might have to leave Mississippi—many of us already have—and we ask you to receive us with open minds and open hearts. They are asking for a fight and we are going to fight."

Charles G. Gomillion, staff member of Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Ala., said obstacles for Negroes in his State include involved questionnaires, rejection for minor errors, harassment by registrars who often hold irregular hours, and a system where by prospective Negro voters need to be vouched for by white voters.

Minister Fled

From Florida, the Rev. Ben F. Wyland of St. Petersburg, president of the Florida Council for Racial Cooperation, told how the Rev. Dee Hawkins and three other Negroes went to register in Liberty County in North Florida where one Negro is on the voter list:

"Mr. Hawkins said the supervisor was polite and told them to go ahead and register, but that night all hell broke loose.

"The minister wrote me a letter saying, 'They are causing me to leave home. I was bomb-shot in my home.' He fled from Liberty County."

Speakers from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Louisiana painted a brgihter picture for Negro voters.

Kenneth Walker, editor of the Colfax, La., Chronicle, said the recent purging of Negroes from registration books by the White Citizens Council was as much a political scheme as racial—an attempt by the "anti-Longs" to reduce the power of the "Longs."

Carolina Report

Modjeska M. Simkins of Columbia, S. C., vice president of the SCEF, reported that only Williamsburg County in South Carolina has "obvious restrictions" against Negro voters.

Miss Willson Whitman of Southern Pines, N. C., said apathy among Negro voters was the principal deterrent to their voting in North Carolina. In Virginia, said W. Hale Thompson, Newport News attorney, "the greatest restrictions against voting are not legal at all, but rather sociological and psychological . . . The pattern of segregation has inflicted upon the masses of Negroes a feeling of despair."

Said Austin T. Walden, Atlanta attorney, after stating that Negro voting curbs in Georgia primarily arise in rural areas:

"In all candor, and notwithstanding the attitude of the State officials, it should be said that the greastest obstacle in the way of registration of Negroes arises from the indifference and timidity on the part of too large a segment of the Negro people of Georgia . . .

"Our biggest job, therefore, is one of education among our own people."

Keynote speaker was Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., SCEF president and director of the National Youth Administration in the early days of the New Deal.

He said the Negro struggle today may force a realignment of the major political parties—pushing the "Southern oligarchy" of the Democratic Party and the "right wing" of the Republican Party into one faction, and the "liberals" of both parties into another.

"We must aim at political reform in the South and force the liberal Southerners in the Senate and House to cease their playing footsie with the Byrds and Talmadges and the Eastlands," he said.

Southern leaders tell of vote ban, plan campaign

WASHINGTON

There has been a noticeable hardening of attitudes against integration and free exercise of voting rights in the South, delegates attending the Conference on Voting Restrictions agreed here Sunday.

The two-day session was held at Asbury Methodist Church.

The general belief that the White Citizens Council is just a dedicated minority is dangerous, contended Aubrey Williams, president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, which sponsored the meeting.

"The danger lies," he said, "in the fact that the so-called good and decent white people in the South are hiding behind the activities of the councils."

THE FAILURE of the churches to exercise a militant leadership role in solving the racial conflict was pointed up by the Rev. Benjamin F. Whalen of St. Petersburg, Fla. He is secretary of the Florida Council of Churches.

Delegates from Virginia and North Carolina reported that while the situation in these states was bad, it was by no means as vicious as it is in the deep South. Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi appear to be "the hardest nuts to crack," they said.

He said: In Florida we are facing two ways. We have political leaders who face the future and favor a colored citizen's basic right to vote and advance himself.

"And we have political leaders who face the past determined to block the path of colored citizens by threats and intimidation."

The Rev. Mr. Wyland said the colored population in Florida is about 600,000 and that 369,463 of these are old enough to vote, but only 148,636 have been able to qualify.

"FIVE COUNTIES in northern Florida use intimidation whenever necessary to prevent or discourage colored persons from registering. In these counties, there are 16,533 colored persons old enough to vote but only 110 have been able to register.

"Union County has 2,542 colored persons over 21 and not one is registered to vote; Gadsden County has 10,930 with five registered."

MRS. MODJESKA M. SIMKINS, vice president, Southern Conference Educational Fund and former secretary, South Carolina NAACP Conference, said:

"A rather thorough check of possible difficulties surrounding voter registration in South Carolina failed to turn up reports of obvious restrictions, except in Williamsburg County; of which Kingstree is the county seat.

". . . The fact is, of course, that the underlying purpose of those opposed to the exercise of voting rights is to delay things."

AUSTIN T. WALDEN, an attorney, of Georgia, said:

"Out of a potential of 650,000, only 160,000 colored persons are registered to vote in Georgia.

"More than four-fifths of that registration was placed on the books within two years following the demise of the white primary."

He continued: "In the past lives have been lost and property practically confiscated. Colored citizens have been driven out of the community, their homes fired into at night because of their efforts to register and vote."

". . . It should be said that the greatest obstacle in the way of registration arises from the indifference and timidity on the part of too large a segment of the colored people in Georgia . . . our biggest job, therefore, is one of education among our own people."

KENNETH WALKER, editor, Colfax (La.) Chronicle, said:

"I think the shortage of colored registrants in Louisana stems from essentially two things. One is lack of concern —a 'don't want to cause no trouble' attitude. The other is plain lack of ability to read and write well.

"Voting restrictions do exist Louisiana — with political as well as racial overtones . . . The situation in Louisiana is good . . . and getting better."

REGISTRARS in Alabama use various techniques to discourage colored potential voters from qualifying, Charles G. Gomillion, chairman Division of Social Sciences, Tuskegee Institute, said.

"The registrars themselves retard the process by holding conversations with the applicants. In some counties, the registrars do not function regularly because they lack supplies or equipment, or there is no room available in which they can work.

"Some boards have resigned rather than provide opportunities for colored citizens to qualify as electors."

AARON E. HENRY, executive secretary, Regional Council of Negro Leadership, said:

"The colored citizen registers and votes freely in only six of the 82 counties of Mississippi. In 43 counties there is a situation where every now and then a favored colored citizen is able to register.

"The application to vote in Mississippi makes it necessary for one to be more highly trained to qualify as a voter than to qualify as a school teacher."

W. HALE THOMPSON, Emporia, Va. attorney, said:

"Voting restrictions in Virginia are designed to keep the Vote Restrictions

electorate small and controllable.

"About 34 percent of the white population went to the polls in 1956. However, 64 to 66 percent of the qualified colored citizens voted."

"Of approximately 750,000 colored persons in Virginia, slightly more than 80,000 are qualified to vote. However, a greater percentage of them generally vote than do the whites who are qualified."

AUBREY WILLIAMS of Montgomery, Ala., in an address entitled "Report from the South," said:

"We must do all within our power to see to it that the federal government gives unequivocal support to the mandates of the federal courts and increasingly pressure the federal law enforcement departments to do their duty.

"We must work to secure southern white support and assistance. We must aim at political reform in the South and force the liberal Southerners in the Senate and House to cease their playing footsie with the Byrds and the Talmadges and the Eastlands . . ."

MISS WILLSON WHITMAN, author and editor, of North Carolina, said:

"It is estimated that only 26 percent of the eligible colored voters go to the polls in North Carolina.

"In the northeastern part of the state, notably in Northampton and Halifax counties, literacy tests, so-called, have been used to disqualify colored voters and it is hoped that cases now pending will show that these tests are contrary to the Bill of Rights of the Federal Constitution."

Southerners Threatened And Harmed

Launch Movement On Registration At D. C. Meeting

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPS)—Colored persons who seek to register and vote in some southern states must "run the gauntlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, bodily harm and racial discrimination," James M. Nabrit, Jr., declared Sunday in summing up the reports made to the Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern States.

Mr. Nabrit, who is secretary of Howard university and professor of civil rights law in the Howard Law school, added that if a colored person desires to run for office or poses a threat to entrenched segregationist interests "repeated purges" of the voting registration list or actual carving up of entire counties" to nullify any effective participation in politics.

Three types of action were suggested by Mr. Nabrit:

1. Political action to enlist national party support of a strong and decisive Civil Rights Commission.

2. A southwide state-by-state campaign to get colored people to register.

3. An educational campaign to instruct colored people in the value of the vote, the use of the ballot, how to register, how to vote, and that voting is a federal right.

Violations Easy To Find

The Civil Rights Commission "if it ever begins operation," Mr. Nabrit said, should have an easy job of pinpointing violations of the right to vote because of color.

Hearings on the civil rights bill, he said, are full of testimony of "threats, violence, murder, roving registration and polling places, absent registrars, trick questions asked of colored applicants only, repeated purges of voting lists and economic and political intimidation of colored persons by whites."

Quoting figures of the Southern Regional Council, Mr. Nabrit said there was a total of 1,238,000 (one million two hundred thirty-eight thousand thirty-eight) colored voters in the South in 1956, as follows:

Alabama, 53,366; Arkansas, 69,577; Florida, 148,703; Georgia, 163,389; Louisiana, 161,410; Mississippi, 20,000; North Carolina, 135,000; South Carolina, 99,890; Tennessee, 90,000; Texas, 214,000, and Virginia, 82,603.

There are probably 200,000 more colored voters now, Mr. Nabrit said, with the likelihood of a total increase of 1,000,000 in those states by 1960 "if purges do not offset a large part of this gain."

The Howard professor urged "a strong campaign" to increase the number of colored registered voters.

One-Day Campaign

The one-day "Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern States" was held at Asbury Methodist church here Sunday afternoon.

The meeting was sponsored by the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.

Aubrey Williams of Montgomery Ala., president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and keynote speaker for the conference, said in his keynote address that the conference was held to "report on a region of our nation which trouble exists for many citizens in obtaining the right to vote." He said he was speaking of some six or seven states of the Deep South.

"We feel Congress can profit by a greater knowledge of what is going on in these states," he said.

Struggle Into Open

Admitting that racial relations in the South have worsened since the Supreme court decision outlawing racial segregation in public education, Mr. Williams called "degrading" the peace which had previously existed between colored and white people.

"The struggle is into the open," he said, "and we are not afraid of it."

NEGRO POLL GAINS IN SOUTH FORECAST

WASHINGTON, April 27 (UP)—A Negro leader told [illegible] conference on voting restrictions Sunday that Negroes "must run the gantlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, bodily harm and racial discrimination" to register or vote in the South.

James M. Nabrit Jr., secretary of Howard University, summarized reports by representatives of nine states. Some said much progress had been made in recent years. Several speakers of the Southern Conference Educational Fund said a small turnout at the polls had resulted from apathy as much as direct interference.

Mr. Nabrit said that by 1960 the number of Negro voters in eleven Southern states might be 1,000,000 higher than in 1956 "if purges do not offset a large part of this gain." He estimated a gain this year of 200,000 Negro voters over the 1,238,000 in 1956.

"All over America voting participation is lowest in the low income, low education groups in our population, black as well as white," he said.

Mr. Nabrit listed these points to encourage eligible voters to go to the polls:

Bipartisan support for "a strong and decisive report by the Civil Rights Commission," a drive to get Southern Negroes to register and a campaign to "instruct Negroes in the value of the vote, the use of the ballot, how to register, how to vote and that voting is a Federal right."

"actual carving up of entire counties" to nullify any effective participation in politics.

Three types of action were suggested by Mr. Nabrit:

1. Political action to enlist national party support of a strong and decisive Civil Rights Commission.

2. A southwide state-by-state campaign to get colored people to register.

3. An educational campaign to instruct colored people in the value of the vote, the use of the ballot, how to register, how to vote and that voting is a federal right.

Violations Easy To Find

The Civil Rights Commission "if it ever begins operation," Mr. Nabrit said, should have an easy job of pinpointing violations of the right to vote because of color.

Hearings on the civil rights bill man in charge of suggested and current action and a group of consultants.

Five of the workshops will be held simultaneously on Monday, May 12, beginning at 1 p.m. and lasting for three hours. Six workshops will be held Tuesday, May 13, beginning at 9 a.m. and running for three hours.

In addition to the workshops, several full meetings drawing together all of the conference participants will be held.

Eisenhower To Speak

A highlight of the Summit meeting, it was announced this week, will be an address by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who will speak at a luncheon meeting on Monday. Other speakers at open meetings will be Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky, Thurgood Marshall, the Rev. A. H. Shuttleworth of Birmingham and Judge William Hastie of the U. S. Appeals court, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Thomasina W. Norford of New York is serving as coordinator for the conference. She urged this week that all persons planning to attend the 'Summit meeting make their hotel reservations at once.

Mrs. Norford said that hundreds of persons already have indicated their enthusiasm over the coming meeting. Among the comments on the conference received from various parts of the country are:

JAMES N. NABRIT, JR., secretary, Howard university, "... I think this may very well be one of the most momentous and history-making meetings ever held by us . . ."

JACKIE ROBINSON, "I consider it a great honor to be invited to speak before such a distinguished group."

LESTER B. GRANGER, executive director, National Urban League, "From May 10-15, I am scheduled to be in Chicago attending the National Conference on Social Welfare. However, the NNPA's scheduled conference of Negro leaders in Washington seems to me to be so important that I am arranging to fly down to Washington to participate in the conference."

JOHN HOPE 2d, "I wish to congratulate the National Newspaper Publishers association for taking the leadership in convening such a timely and important meeting."

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, "I think the meeting is timely and the program significant."

Threatened And Harmed

Launch Movement On Registration At D. C. Meeting

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPS)—Colored persons who seek to register and vote in some southern states must "run the gauntlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, bodily harm and racial discrimination," James M. Nabrit, Jr., declared Sunday in summing up the reports made to the Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern States.

Mr. Nabrit, who is secretary of Howard university and professor of civil rights law in the Howard Law school, added that if a colored person desires to run for office or poses a threat to entrenched segregationist, he faces "repeated purges" of the voting registration list or

34e 1958 CONFERENCE ON VOTING RESTRICTIONS

Southern Leaders To Tell Of Fight For The Ballot

34e

The Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern [illegible] Methodist Church here on Sunday, April 27, will hear a report from the leader of the fight against the abolishment of Macon County, Ala., designed to curb colored people from voting in that community.

He is Dr. Charles G. Gomillion, head of the social science department at Tuskegee Institute and president of the Tuskegee Civic Association, the organization campaigning to gain equal voting privileges for colored people in that area.

As spokesman for TCA, Dr. Gomillion appeared before a committee of the Alabama Legislature and voiced the protest of those opposed to the plan. However, the state enacted the law gerrymandering all but a few colored voters out of that district. Dr. Gomillion said that his organization will continue their efforts despite this.

SAID THE TCA leader, "—We want every individual, white and black, to enjoy the dignity of full American citizenship. — Our 'Crusade for Freedom' is to have all share these hallowed rights."

Others who will report at the conference on developments in their respective states are the Rev. Ben F. Wyland, Tampa, Fla., executive secretary of the Florida Council for Interracial Cooperation; Aaron Henry, Clarksdale, Miss., executive secretary, Regional Conference of Negro Leadership;

Kenneth Walker, Colfax, La., editor, Colfax Chronicle newspaper; W. Hale Thompson, a Newport News, Va. attorney; Miss Willson Whitman, Southern Pines, N.C., author and editor;

Mrs. Andrew S. Simkins, Columbia, S.C. civil rights leader; Austin T. Walden, Atlanta, Ga. attorney and the Rev. John L. Tilley, Baltimore, Md., who led a campaign that recently added over 10,000 new voters to the rolls in less than three months.

Making the keynote address at the conference will be Aubrey Williams, editor, Farm and Home magazine and president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, sponsors of the Conference. Dr. James M. Nabrit, secretary of Howard University, will summarize the conference reports.

Bishop Edgar T. Love of the Methodist Church, is general chairman of the conference. Heading the local arrangements committee is Francis A. Gregory, an assistant superintendent of Washington public schools.

Mixed Group Hears Tales Of 'Reprisals' In South

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stories of economic reprisals, literacy tests, fear and apathy were related at a Negro-white conference Sunday on voting restrictions in the Southern states.

The conferees listened to reports from leaders interested in gaining full voting rights for Negores in eight Southern states and the border states of Maryland.

Leaders said the reports would be turned over to the new federal Civil Rights Commission for consideration when it gets down to business.

The conference was held under the auspices of the Southern Conference Educational Fund headed by Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala., publisher and former head of the National Youth Administration in the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration.

Williams in a keynote speech said the federal government is allowing what he called its stable of informers to be used to destroy white persons in the South who stand up for the rights of individuals regardless of color or nationality.

"This is not only a shameless thing, but it is a dangerous thing," said Williams. "Unless we Americans turn our faces against liars and informers, no man's character or livelihood will be safe."

Williams said if what he called the state of repression continues to grow in the South it will be in the same condition it was three years before the explosion of the Civil War. He said a blanket of silence lies over the whole South as men fear to talk about a different point of view on the race question.

Saying the overwhelming weight of evidence is that the Negro has at last made up his mind to secure his rights as a citizen, Williams said:

"If this is true, then we may well have the stuff out of which can come a true and sincere realignment of political parties in the country."

Chairman of the conference was Bishop Edgar A. Love of the Baltimore area of the Methodist Church (Negro). He is a vice president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

Summarizing the state reports, James M. Nabrit Jr., secretary of Howard University of Washington, said they show Negro voters "must run the gauntlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, bodily harm, and racial discrimination" in order to register.

"The Negro must be aroused," Narbit said, "until he seeks registration by the tens of thousands. It is much easier to deny registration to 1 or 10 than it is to 100 or 1,000."

Here in brief are excepts from the reports made on the Carolinas:

North Carolina — Miss Willson Whitman, editor and writer of Southern Pines, said it is estimated that only 26 per cent of the eligible Negro voters go to the polls in the state. She said there is little or no trouble registering Negro voters in the larger cities and in those parts of the state where white elments in control feel little or no fear of Negro majorities.

But she said in the northeastern part of the state, notably in Northampton and Halifax counties, "literacy tests, so-called, have been used to disqualify Negro voters and it is hoped that cases now pending will show that these tests are contrary to the Bill of Rights of the federal Constitution."

South Carolina — Mrs. Andrew W. Simkins, a vice president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, said a check of possible difficulties surrounding voter registration in her state failed to turn up reports of obvious restrictions, except in Williamsburg County, of which Kingstree is the county seat.

She said a businessman, J. F. Dimery, a product of Howard University, reported last Dec. 5 he had been turned down in Williamsburg County on a literacy test.

South Denying Negro Rights, Meeting Told

Washington, April 27 (AP)— Stories of economic reprisals, literacy tests, fear, and apathy were related at a Negro-white conference Sunday on "voting restrictions in the Southern states."

The conferees listened to reports from leaders interested in gaining full voting rights for Negroes in eight Southern states and the border states of Maryland. The eight were Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Virginia and North and South Carolina.

Leaders said the reports would be turned over to the new federal Civil Rights Commission for consideration when it gets down to business.

The conference was held under the auspicies of the Southern Conference Educational Fund readed by Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala., publisher and former head of the National Youth Administration in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Administration.

Williams, in a keynote speech, said the Federal Government is allowing what he called its "stable of informers" to be used to destroy white persons in the South who stand up for the rights of individuals regardless of color or nationality.

He said a "blanket of silence" lives over the whole South as men fear to talk about a "different point of view" on the race question.

Summarizing the state reports, James M. Nabrit, Jr., secretary of Howard University at Washington, said they show Negro voters "must run the gauntlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, bodily harm, and racial discrimination" in order to register.

South Curbs Negro Votes, Group Says

Southern States have renewed efforts to curb Negro voter registration despite passage of the Civil Rights Act by Congress last year, the Southern Regional Council reported yesterday.

The Council, a biracial organization seeking better racial relations, issued the special report from its Atlanta headquarters. It consisted of excerpts from newspaper articles which, the Council said, "give a clear picture of the move to disenfranchise the Negro."

The report came as another biracial organization, the Southern Conference Educational Fund of New Orleans, completed plans for a public meeting here Sunday on voting restrictions aimed at Negroes in the South.

The one-day "Conference on Voting Restrictions in the South" is scheduled from 2:30 to 5 p. m. at the Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K sts. nw.

Speakers from nine Southern States will make reports. Keynote speaker will be Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., president of the SCEF and editor of "Southern Farm and Home." James M. Nabrit, secretary of Howard University, will summarize the reports at the conclusion of the conference.

Reports will be given from these States and speakers:

Virginia—W. Hale Thompson, Newport News attorney; Maryland—The Rev. John L. Tilley of Baltimore; Louisiana—Kenneth Walker, editor of the Colfax Chronicle; Mississippi—Albert Powell, president of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League; Georgia—T. Austin Walker, Atlanta attorney; Florida—The Rev Ben T. Wyland of St. Petersburg, president of the Florida Council for Interracial Cooperation; North Carolina—Miss Willson Whitman, Southern Pines author and editor, and South Carolina—Mrs. Andrew W. Simkins, Columbia.

Negro Calls Voting Easier In Virginia

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

Compared to some other Southern states, Virginia is "heaven" for prospective Negro voters, a Negro attorney said yesterday.

The crux of the problem in Virginia is that all the people —colored or white—don't have an interest in voting," said W. Hale Thompson, Newport News attorney and member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's legal staff.

Only three state offices—Governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general — are filled by elections and there isn't much to generate interest," he said, adding that Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) is running unopposed in the Democratic primary and the Republicans "are flopping around and it looks like they won't offer any opposition."

Thompson made his comments during a press conference of principal speakers of a one-day "Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern States," scheduled from 2:30 to 5 p. m. today at the Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K sts. nw.

The meeting is sponsored by the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. and will be open to the public.

Thompson had just heard a report by Charles G. Gomillion, chairman of the division of social science at Tuskegee Institute, who outlined how Alabama registrars use delaying tactics and other gimmicks to block Negro registrants.

"Virginia is heaven to what you have in Alabama," said Thompson.

He discounted the Virginia poll tax as a deterrent to Negro voting, saying that many people forget to pay it in time, "but that happens irrespective of race."

Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Ala., president of the SCEF and keynote speaker for Sunday's conference, said the session was being called to give Congress and the Civil Rights Commission more information on Negro voting restrictions in the South than is presented in the press.

He said several members of Congress and Gordon M. Tiffany, nominated for staff director of the Civil Rights Commission, had been invited. Tiffany, however, replied he would not attend because his nomination has not yet been confirmed.

One speaker for the conference, the Rev. Ben F. Wyland of St. Petersburg, Fla., said he was disturbed by "the silence of the white church" in the South. "When they do their duty," he said, "the racial problem will be on its way to solution."

Negroes Arrested At 3 City Polling Places As Violators

Three Negroes were arrested Tuesday at three polling places on charges of violating statutes governing elections. Commissioner Clyde C. Sellers said, and a fourth was arrested as a witness.

Sellers said three of the Negroes were charged with violating title 17, section 144 of the state code. The section states, "Except as voters are admitted to vote and assist them and except the inspectors or his deputies, the inspectors, returning officer, clerks of election and watchers, not more than two shall be permitted within the bar of polling places."

Sellers identified the three arrested as A. H. Huffman, 45, of Union Cr.; Fannie Allen Neal, of 2002 Rutland St.; and Rufus Lewis, 50, 801 Bolivar St.

Herman Powell, 20, of 183 Hobson Ferry Rd., was booked on loitering charges, Sellers said. Detectives W. H. Simpler and C. G. Cox said Huffman was arrested on the steps of the City Auditorium and the Neal woman was picked up at the Hamner Hall precinct.

Lewis was arrested outside the County Courthouse by Detectives C. J. May and C. W. Jones.

Sellers said all three arrests were made after they had received complaints from election officials.

Powell was arrested at the City Auditorium by Patrolman Robert Hamilton, who said Powell had been told to move on but didn't. Detective Captant E. P. Brown said none of the arrests were made by warrant. He said one of the Negroes had marked ballots on his person but that the marked ballots were immaterial to the charges.

MARKED IN RED

Police said Lewis had a pocketful of marked ballots and that some of the ballots had names written on them. The ballots were marked with red pencils.

All four of the suspects were released on $100 bonds and were ordered to appear in Recorder's Court Friday for a preliminary hearing.

A Negro, who identified himself as R. H. Harris, posted cash bonds for all four of the suspects, police said.

Powell was reported to have had on his person when he was arrested a notebook with all the pages torn out and the covers torn nearly into two pieces.

The suspects carried clip boards with a roster of registered Negro voters of Montgomrey, Sellers said.

A poll watcher identified two of the suspects, Huffman and Neal, as vote checkers for labor endorsed candidates. Earl Pippin, legislative director of the Alabama Labor Council, AFL-CIO, could not be contacted for comment.

Detectives said Lewis, Huffman and Neal were at the polls with a list of the Negro voters to check them as they came to vote. They said the suspects had been told they must remain at least 30 feet from the doors of polling places.

Sellers said the possession of marked ballots and a list of voters 30 feet from the polling places is not in violation of state election laws.

Three Negroes charged in capital election case

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 7—(AP)—Three Negroes were charged with violating the Corrupt Practices Act yesterday during the Democratic primary election, city police reported.

The three were identified as the Rev. A. H. Hoffman, Rufus Lewis and Fannie Allen Neal. They were charged with violation of Title 17, Section 144 of the state code, which provides that only persons permitted by law are allowed within 30 feet of a polling place.

City detectives testified that the three were arrested with voter lists in their possession within the prohibited zone near the Hamner Hall Precinct. Lewis is chairman of the MIA voter registration committee.

UNCONFIRMED reports said marked ballots to guide Negro voters were being distributed. However, Lewis declined to comment on this.

As Negroes came from the polling place, he said he and Hoffman were checking off their names to obtain a percentage of the number who had cast their ballot.

The charges against the three had nothing to do with whether or not they possessed a sample ballot, said City Detective Capt. E. P. Brown.

The three, free on $100 bond each, are to appear Friday in City Recorder's Court.

The defendants, Rufus Lewis, the Rev. A. H. Hoffman and Annie Allen Neal, all of Montgomery, were fined $25 and costs. They were charged with violating a state law which says no one except certain authorized persons are allowed within 30 feet of a polling place.

In a separate case, Rosa Wilson, another Negro who was charged with disorderly conduct as a result of a scuffle with a white woman on a city bus recently, was fined $50 and costs.

Mrs. B. A. Gray of Montgomery testified that the defendant sat on her lap while trying to occupy a seat alongside her.

Negroes Fined In Poll Case

Montgomery Trio Plan To Appeal

MONTGOMERY, May 9 (AP)—A Montgomery Improvement Assn. official and two other Negroes were convicted in city court today on charges of violating an election law during Tuesday's election.

Their attorney, Fred D. Gray of Montgomery, served notice of appeal to Circuit Court.

Three Negroes Charged In Election Case

MONTGOMERY (AP) — Three Negroes were charged with violating the corrupt practices act yesterday during the Democratic primary election, city police reported.

The three were identified as the Rev. A. H. Hoffman, Rufus Lewis and Fannie Allen Neal.

They were charged with violation of Title 17, Section 144 of the State Code, which provides that only persons permitted by law are allowed within 30 feet of a polling place.

Lewis is chairman of the voter registration committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., a Negro organization which figured prominently in the 1956 boycott of segregated city buses here.

Hoffman was identified as pastor of a Montgomery Negro Baptist Church.

Unconfirmed reports said marked ballots to guide Negro voters were being distributed. However, Lewis declined to comment on this.

As Negroes came from the polling place, he said he and Hoffman were checking off their names to obtain a percentage of the number who had cast their ballot.

The charges against the three had nothing to do with whether or not they possessed a sample ballot, said City Det. Capt. E. P. Brown.

Alabama Voters Have A Big Job Between Now And May 6

The date of the Democratic primary in Alabama is May 6. Many people are going to run for many offices in Alabama and elsewhere this Fall, and here in Alabama, of course, the winners of the Democratic primary, in the great majority of instances, are as good as in office if they win the primary.

The run-off of course will come four weeks later, or June 3.

Simply a list of the offices to be filled—not a list of offices with candidates running for those offices—is an impressive reminder that voters in this state will have to do a considerable amount of studying and thinking if they are to make informed decisions in marking their ballots.

Here is a list of offices to be filled:

Governor.
Lieutenant Governor.
Attorney General.
State Auditor.
Secretary of State.
State Treasurer.
Superintendent of Education.
Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries.

Two associate members of the Alabama Public Service Commission.

Thirty-five State Senators.

One hundred and six State Representatives.

The Chief Justice of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Two associate justices of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Three judges of the Court of Appeals.

All Circuit Judges—ten in Birmingham, and two in the Bessemer division.

All Circuit Solicitors.

All Judges of Probate.

All Sheriffs.

All clerks of Circuit Courts.

County Commissioners or members of the Boards of Revenue.

All members of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

These are the positions to be filled in the counties. In addition there is one federal race in each Congressional District.

Lord Byron once wrote:

"For what were all these country patriots born?
To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?"

In Alabama, let us all be hunting for the best candidates and then vote.

Fire Destroys Vote Machines

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 16 (U.P.)—Roaring flames swept through a city warehouse today, gutting an undetermined number of city voting machines and leaving the building a total loss.

Mayor W. A. Gayle said no estimate of the loss was available until it was determined exactly how many voting machines were lost in the Alabama blaze.

Many of the machines, costing between $1500 and $1600, were saved by canvas covers and thousands of gallons of water poured on the flames.

Gayle said the machines and the building were "fully covered" by insurance.

Fire Chief R. L. Lampley said a coal heater was believed cause of the fire, which was fanned by stiff winds. The flames spread rapidly throughout the building and almost set afire the city jail.

Four pumpers and a ladder truck fought the fire for almost two hours.

Gayle said the building would be razed and new construction started immediately.

Alabama Vote Leader Fights Intimidation

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—In spite of continued harassments and intimidations of Negroes who would register to vote in Alabama, the campaign of the Alabama State Coordinating Association is moving ahead quietly and effectively.

President W. C. Patton, head of the seven-year-old organization, has disclosed that special forms have been prepared for Negroes refused the right to register and these forms are so prepared that they will constitute each a formal complaint and petition to the new Civil Rights Commission.

Mr. Patton also disclosed that intimidations of upper echelon Negroes is continuing wherever they seek to break down the registration barriers.

IN CLARK COUNTY where only 400 Negroes are registered out of an eligible 6422, two Negro teachers were fired for their registration efforts.

In Washington County another Negro teacher went under severe pressure after the 1952 registration total of 36 Negroes was upped to 600 in 1954. In the county there are 1,677 eligible Negro voters.

Late in 1957 the association mailed out 140,000 pieces of printed matter explaining the answers to tough questions propounded to kayo would-be Negro registrants.

This matter was sent by first-class mail, Mr. Patton said, because that is now the only safe may to assure its reaching its addressees. He said that mails other than first-class are tampered with, as also are bus express shipments from his office.

MR. PATTON said he believed these things to be the work of the White Citizens Councils, but his group is going ahead with its plans to push the statewide registration in Alabama in spite of any sort intimidations.

"The new Civil Rights Commission should have a fertile field in Alabama," Mr. Patton said, in telling how the special "rejection forms" of his group are to be used.

There are 516,000 eligible Negro voters in Alabama, 53,000 are registered.

Negroes Shape Drive For Vote Registration

With a goal of two million new voters by 1960, Southern Negroes are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration campaign in 11 Dixie states.

The massive drive which would more than double the estimated number of Negroes now eligible to vote in the Deep South will start with a series of Lincoln Day rallies in 20 or more Southern cities Feb. 12. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) is among the Negro leaders scheduled to speak.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery, treasurer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which is sponsoring the campaign, said his people will be urged to use the new federal civil rights law "wherever necessary to point out discrimination."

Abernathy and other members of the conference executive committee will discuss detailed plans for the voter registration effort at a meeting in Atlanta today.

The Baptist minister said no state-by-state allocations have been announced but that the "long-range goal" of the campaign is two million new Negro voters within the next two years. He said the conference has adopted a budget of $200,000 to spend on the vote drive this year.

Abernathy said an estimated 1,238,000 Negro voters were registered in the 11 Southern states in 1956, only about one-fourth of the 4,980,000 Negroes of voting age.

By contrast, he said 60 per cent of the white residents in those states are registered voters.

The conference leader said Texas, with 214,000, led the Southern states in the number of eligible Negro voters while Mississippi, with only 20,000 estimated Negro voters in 1955 was at the bottom of the list.

Alabama had 53,366 last year, he said; Arkansas had 69,677, Florida 148,703, Georgia 163,389, Louisiana 161,410, North Carolina 135,000 South Carolina 99,890, Tennessee 90,000 and Virginia 82,693.

Abernathy said Lincoln Day rallies will launch the campaign in Atlanta; Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile and Tuskegee Ala.; New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Shreveport, La.; Tallahassee, Jacksonville, and Miami, Fla.; Chattanooga, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Dallas and Houston, Tex.; Clarksdale, Miss.; Durham and Greensboro, N.C., Columbia, S.C., and possibly others in Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia.

Powell is scheduled to address the Houston rally and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, the conference president, will speak in Miami. King led the bus boycott which preceded the Supreme Court decision outlawing bus segregation in Montgomery.

NEGROES TO DISCUSS DRIVE TO GET VOTES

To Discuss Plan At Atlanta Meeting Today

2,000,000 MORE SOUGHT

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 29.—With a goal of two million new voters by 1960, Southern Negroes are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration campaign in 11 Dixie states.

The massive drive which would more than double the estimated number of Negroes now eligible to vote in the Deep South will start with a series of Lincoln Day rallies in 20 or more Southern cities Feb. 12. Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D. N. Y.) is among Negro leaders scheduled to speak.

Plan $200,000 Budget

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery, treasurer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which is sponsoring the campaign, said his people will be urged to use the Federal Civil Rights Law "wherever necessary to point out discrimination."

Rev. Abernathy and other members of the conference executive committee will discuss detailed plans for the voter registration effort at a meeting in Atlanta Thursday.

The Baptist minister said no state-by-state allocations have been announced but that the "long-range goal" of the campaign is two million new Negro voters within the next two years. He said the conference has adopted a budget of $200,000 to spend on the vote drive this year.

By contrast, he said 60 per cent of the white residents in those states are registered voters.

Texas Total Highest

The conference leader said Texas, with 214,000, led the Southern states in the number of eligible Negro voters while Mississippi, with only 20,000 estimated Negro voters in 1955, was at the bottom of the list.

Alabama had 53,366 last year, he said; Arkansas had 69,677, Florida 148,703, Georgia 163,389, Louisiana 161,410, North Carolina 135,000, South Carolina 99,890, Tennessee 90,000 and Virginia 82,603.

Rev. Abernathy said Lincoln Day rallies will launch the campaign in Atlanta; Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile and Tuskegee, Ala.; New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Shreveport, La.; Tallahassee, Jacksonville and Miami, Fla.; Chattanooga, Memphis and Nashville; Dallas and Houston, Texas; Clarksdale, Miss.; Durham and Greensboro, N. C., Columbia, S. C., and possible others in Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia.

Representative Powell is scheduled to address the Houston rally and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, the conference president, will speak in Miami. King led the bus boycoat which preceded the Supceme Court decision outlawing bus segregation in Montgomery.

Evidence Found In Choctaw Of Illegal Absentee Voting

BUTLER, Ala. (AP)—A state Democratic subcommittee has found evidence of illegal absentee voting in the probate judge's race in Choctaw County, the subcommittee chairman said today.

John Petree Jr., Jasper attorney, said the three-man subcommittee found illegal votes for both candidates in the absentee box. Petree said some of the voters had not paid their poll tax, others had insufficient reason to vote in the absentee box, and some were registered as voters in other states.

The subcommittee recessed indefinitely after hearing legal arguments by opposing counsel Friday. Petree said the absentee box will be recounted to determine which candidate got the most legal votes in that box.

The month-long hearing stemmed from a contest of the nomination for probate judge in the May Democratic Primary. Incumbent Probate Judge Hunter Phillips contested and claimed fraud in the absentee voting.

Richard E. McPhearson of Silas filed a cross-contest in which he charged irregularities in the county's other 35 boxes.

The county Democratic committee originally declared McPhearson the nominee by a 62-vote margin over Phillips. After filing of the contests, the county committee vacated the nomination and voted to call a new primary.

McPhearson appealed the ruling to the state committee and state party chairman Ray Mayhall named the three-man committee to investigate the case.

Petree said if Phillips gains 62 or more votes on McPhearson in the recount of the absentee box, the subcommittee will resume its investigation of voting in the other 35 boxes on McPhearson's cross-contest.

The chairman added, however, that if Phillips fails to increase his margin by 62 votes the investigation will be ended.

The subcommittee has questioned scores of witnesses so far, including many former residents of Choctaw County who now live in the Mobile area but continue to vote in the Choctaw absentee box.

Petree said the subcommittee will deliver its verdict on the absentee voting to Mayhall.

Double-voting suspected—

Marion County Grand Jury starts election investigation

BY EDWIN STRICKLAND
News staff writer

HAMILTON, Ala., May 15 — The Marion County Grand Jury began today probing into reports of illegal voting in the May 6 primary in which Rep. Rankin Fite apparently lost out by [illegible] votes.

All of the ballot boxes in the county were ordered impounded for Grand Jury consideration.

Superior Court Judge Nelson Vinson last week ordered two boxes, 18-A at Brilliant and 18-B at Pulltight, impounded. The two boxes, located three miles apart, used the same voting list.

Judge Vinson said he took the action after receiving reports that some persons had voted at Brilliant and then drove down the road to Pulltight and voted again.

This election was the first time the two boxes have been divided.

CIRCUIT Solicitor Bob Moore of Winfield said he charged the Grand Jury to look into rumors "and some affidavits" of double voting. He said he impounded all the boxes in case the Grand Jury wanted to look into them.

Reports in Marion County on the eve of the beginning of the Grand Jury probe were that voting irregularities may have been fairly widespread in this primary.

One member of the county's Democratic Executive Committee told The News that Box 1-F at Hamilton appeared to have been tampered with.

He said that hours after the election the box appeared to be empty of ballots but when checked later it contained the ballots. The committeeman declined to allow his name to be used.

HAMILTON ATTY. John Self was the apparent winner over House Speaker Fite by a vote of 3995 to 3992.

Fite, strong supporter of Gov. Folsom's legislative program, had served two terms in the Legislature.

He did not file an official request for a recount of the election. Presumably, such formal request could be made in the event there is a clear indication that fraud or irregularities of some kind might have cost him the election.

REPORTS IN Marion County were that perhaps as many as three persons could be shown to have voted at both Brilliant and Pulltite.

Should this be proved—and nothing else—the final results of the election would depend upon whether it could be shown that these voters cast ballots for Fite's opponent.

In such event, presumably six ballots against Fite could be declared void.

Fite has made no statement pending the Grand Jury inspection.

No fraud found in probe of Marion vote

HAMILTON, Ala., May 24— No fraud was found by a Marion County Grand Jury which spent more than a week looking into charges of illegal balloting in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Reporting Friday afternoon to Circuit Judge Bob Moore Jr., the jury returned no indictment but recommended that a school for election officials be held prior to the June 3 primary.

CIRCUIT Solicitor Wayne Weaver of Haleyville said the Grand Jury did find some instances of mistakes in procedure brought about by the failure of some poll workers to fully understand the election laws.

Closest race in Marion County was that in which Rep. Rankin Fite, speaker of the House in the last administration, lost his bid for reelection by a margin of three votes to Hamilton Atty. John Self. The count was 3995 to 3992.

REP. FITE told The News Saturday he planned no action.

"I do not, and never had, any intention to contest the election," Rep. Fite said.

The special jury, headed by Rayford Cantrell of Hamilton, was convened by Judge Moore to investigate reports of double voting and other irregularities.

Three Negroes convicted in election case

MONTGOMERY, May 10—(AP)—A Montgomery Improvement Assn. official and two other Negroes were convicted in city court Friday on charges of violating an election law during Tuesday's election.

Their attorney, Fred D. Gray of Montgomery, served notice of appeal to Circuit Court.

The defendants, Rufus Lewis, the Rev. A. H. Hoffman and Annie Allen Neal, all of Montgomery, were fined $25 and costs. They were charged with violating a state law which says no one except certain authorized persons are allowed within 30 feet of a polling place.

City detectives testified that the three were arrested with voter lists in their possession within the prohibited zone near the Hammer Hall Precinct. Lewis is chairman of the MIA voter registration committee.

In a separate case, Rosa Wilson, another Negro who was charged with disorderly conduct as a result of a scuffle with a white woman on a city bus recently, was fined $50 and costs.

Mrs. B. A. Gray of Montgomery testified that the defendant sat on her lap while trying to occupy a seat alongside her.

Covington Ballot Box Impounded

ANDALUSIA (AP)—Circuit Judge B. W. Simmons Tuesday ordered the Covington County absentee ballot box be impounded pending an investigation by the county grand jury.

Simmons directed in his court order that the Alabama attorney general be notified "for his information and also for his cooperation with the grand jury conducting an investigation if said attorney general so desires."

Attorney Lenoir Thompson, charged prior to last Tuesday's Democratic primary that three persons whose names were listed as casting absentee votes denied doing so.

Thompson asked the FBI to investigate the reports. An FBI spokesman at Mobile declined comment on the charges.

Thompson said the absentee list carried 615 names as compared with a normal 300 to 350.

Hiram J. Brogden, Covington probate judge the past 36 years, also issued a statement requesting that Simmons call for an immediate grand jury investigation instead of waiting to convene the jury this summer.

Brogden led the race in seeking renomination in the May 6 primary and faces a runoff with Leland Enzor, mayor of Andalusia.

Charges of voting irregularities in the primary have been made in four other counties—Baldwin, Choctaw, Fayette and Marion.

Contests were filed Monday in the sheriff's race in Baldwin and the probate judge's race in Choctaw. In addition, two boxes have been impounded in Marion County, and all boxes were impounded in Fayette for investigation into alleged voting irregularities.

Mrs. Agnes Baggett for state treasurer.

Races which will require a runoff include, lieutenant governor, with candidates Albert Boutwell, 197,854, and E. W. Skidmore, 143,881, for secretary of state, Charles (Pete) Mathews, 119,545, and Bettye Frink, 109,573; superintendent of education, Frank R. Stewart, 236,884, and I. G. Browder, 172,193.

The certified vote recorded for other gubernatorial candidates included:

Laurie C. Battle, 38,955; John G. Crommelin, 2,245; W. E. Dodd, 4,753; Shearer Elebash, 1,177; Jimmy Faulkner, 91,712; James Winston Gullatt, 798; Karl Harrison, 12,448; George Hawkins, 24,152; C. C. (Jack) Owen, 15,270; Ralph (Shorty) Price, 655; A. W. Todd, 59,240; and Billy Walker, 7,963.

In the three-man race for attorney general, Gallion received 277,712; Richmond Flowers, 126,023, and C. W. (Charlie) McKay Jr., 115,533.

Mrs. Garner won a decisive victory in her bid for the auditor's office with 283,709 votes, while her opponent, John Brandon received 211,585.

In addition to Mathews and Frink in the race for secretary of state, Anne L. Conway received 72,121; Ruby Folsom Ellis, 72,085; Roy T. King, 82,324; and Eloise Stewart, 65,336.

Behind Mrs. Baggett, who had 299,794 votes, were R. A. (Bob) Davison with 73,308 votes, and Carl Griffin with 131,055.

Floyd D. Dotson, a third candidate in the race for superintendent of education received 106,188.

The official vote count for the race for commissioner of agriculture and industries, included 300,908 for Bamberg, 121,770 for J. C. Gentle, and 79,402 for Crowford Roquemore.

Other candidates in the race for lieutenant governor included, Robert (Bob) T. Butler, 36,037; Asa E. (Ace) Carter, 35,501; and Sam Englhardt with 123,007.

Sitting on the committee with Mayhall here Tuesday were James T. Beeland of Greenville, Nelson O. Fuller of Centreville, J. W. Lovelace of Dadeville and Charles M. Pinkston of Montgomery.

Vote Contest Papers Filed By Johnston

WETUMPKA, Ala. — Leonard Johnston, a Wetumpka barber who lost his race for the state House of Representatives by one vote, has sent papers contesting the election to the Democratic state chairman.

Johnston had 3,494 votes to 3,495 for John A. Howle, a Wetumpka insurance man, in official returns from the June 3 runoff for the Democratic nomination for House Place No. 1 in Elmore County.

Johnston said the contest papers contend the barber was fraudulently deprived of the nomination.

The attorney also said the papers charge Howle is ineligible to hold office. But, pending a hearing, he declined to state the grounds for that contention.

He added that the suit also contends that in the runoff, legal ballots were rejected and illegal votes counted.

Roy Mayhall of Jasper, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, said Wednesday night that he had received the papers and would officially file them Thursday.

Mayhall will now appoint a three-man committee to investigate the charges and make recommendations to the state committee, but he declined to say whom he would appoint.

Absentee Voting Underway About 55 Have Voted Here

Absentee voting for the June 3 election is off to a brisk start here.

About 55 persons have voted absentee so far, said Register M. R. Joiner Friday afternoon.

Balloting was to have started May 15 but did not begin until four days later because the ballots had not arrived, Joiner said.

The delay was caused by an error in counting votes in the Democratic executive committee races. The ballots had to be printed because of the error twice, local officials were told.

The deadline for absentee voting is through Thursday, May 29.

Patterson Vow To Aid Vote Probe Reported

GUNTERSVILLE (AP)—Marshall County authorities reportedly have been promised help by Atty. Gen. John Patterson in an investigation of voting in the May 6 Democratic primary.

The report from Circuit Judge Stuart Stone Friday conflicted, however, with a statement by Patterson assistant that it was the policy of the attorney general's office to stay out of "local situations."

Asst. Atty. Gen. William N. Brown said he made this remark to Circuit Solicitor John W. Brown when the latter asked for help with a grand jury investigation scheduled to begin June 2.

But according to the ciurcuit judge, Patterson said he would send a solicitor from an adjoining county to help the Marshall County authorities.

Brown said that 153 challenged votes were cast in Marshall County in the May 6 balloting, the largest in the history of the county. It is the duty of a grand jury to investigate all votee challenges.

ATTY. GEN. PATTERSON TESTIFIES
Macon Probers Hear Perjury Hint

TUSKEGEE—Atty. Gen. John Patterson appeared before the Macon County Grand Jury Wednesday to give testimony concerning a possible perjury case resulting from a January injunction hearing on a Negro boycott of white merchants here.

Patterson appeared before the grand jury with three of his assistants, Joe Robertson, Joe Malone and James Webb.

The jury is expected to report Thursday on the possible perjury law violations along with some 46 other cases before the panel.

Details of the case before the jury were not revealed, but The Advertiser learned that the testimony Wednesday concerned a witness who appeared at the boycott injunction hearing last January.

At the January hearing, the attorney general sought a permanent injunction against the Tuskegee Civic Assn., a Negro organization which Patterson accused of directing a Negro boycott of white businesses here.

The TCA has been under a temporary injunction since Aug. 15, 1957, when Circuit Judge Will O. Walton enjoined the organization from "using any force, threats, intimidation, and coercion to prevent any persons from trading with or buying goods and services from any merchant in Tuskegee and Macon County."

The boycott started in June, 1957, as a protest to legislation which gerrymandered Tuskegee's city limits to exclude from the city all except 10 of a total of 120 Negro voters.

The hearing this year climaxed an investigation by Patterson and his staff which was high lighted by raids on the TCA office and a printing shop to seize records and other materials for evidence.

Choctaw Judge Vote Voided

BUTLER, May 29 (AP) — The Choctaw County Democratic Executive Committee has voided the May 6 primary nomination for probate judge, and a new election is to be called.

The committee ruled after a day-long hearing at Butler yesterday of a contest of returns from the May 6 primary. Committee voted 18-14 to throw out the nomination of Richard E. McPhearson and call a new primary election.

Either side may appeal to the State Democratic Committee witnin 10 days.

An official canvass of returns from the May 6 primary has listed McPhearson as winner over incumbent Probate Judge Hunter Phillips by a margin of 2140 to 2078.

Phillips filed a contest May 12 contending there had been irregularities in handling of the absentee vote. McPhearson later filed a cross contest charging fraud and misconduct in handling of the vote at the county's other 35 ballot boxes.

Party officials said it will take between 90 and 120 days to prepare for a new primary.

Seven bonded, two are sought in vote cases

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala., June 21—Two more persons were being sought Saturday by Sheriff L. P. Dickson on election irregularity charges.

Seven others are free on bond as a result of indictments returned by a Marshall County Grand Jury investigating charges stemming out of the May 6 Democratic primary.

All of those arrested were residents of Guntersville Rt. 2. Six of the seven were officials at Crossroads Box of Beat 2.

The seventh was charged with intoxication at the polls. It was understood the two others being sought also are charged with being drunk at the polls.

Those arrested Friday were released on bond of $500 on each count against them.

Indictments were returned against the following who have been arrested:

Walter A. Parker, 61, seven counts of altering or changing ballots and one charge of being intoxicated at the polls.

John Sorter, 67, seven counts of altering of changing ballots.

Frank Sorter, 42, seven counts of altering or changing ballots.

D. Whitworth, 71, seven counts of altering or changing ballots.

Herman Hyatt, 48, seven counts of altering or changing ballots.

Doris Sorter, 31, seven counts of altering or changing ballots; R. B. Johnson, 27, intoxication at the polls.

than group are: Mrs. E. B. McDaniels Jr., president; Mrs. Clark Rutledge, vice president; Mrs. Helene Elliott, secretary and Mrs. William Nomberg, treasurer.

The fourth week in each month has been proclaimed "Provisional League of Women Voters Week" in Dothan.

officials as John Sorter, 67; Frank Sorter, 42, Walter A. Parker, 51, D Whitworth, 71, and Herman Hyatt, 48, all officials of the Cross Roads box of Beat 2 in Marshall County.

He said that Parker in addition was charged with being drunk at the polls, as was R. B. Johnson, 27, Guntersville Rt. 2, who was not an election official.

The jury was called into session June 2 by Judge Stuart Stone after election boxes were impounded. County Solicitor John W. Brown said 153 challenged votes were cast May 6, highest in county history.

Names of accused persons not yet in custody were withheld pending their arrest.

Dothan Forms Provisional Voter League

DOTHAN (AP)—After a series of pre-provisional meetings to form a League of Women Voters in Dothan a provisional league has been organized. The group will remain on a provisional status for one year and after having completed the required study, will become a qualified League of Women Voters.

Mrs. I. Berman of Montgomery, president of the Alabama League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Marie Frutell, organizational chairman of the Alabama League, assisted the Dothan women in organizing.

11 Indicted In Marshall Vote Probe

GUNTERSVILLE (AP) — Eleven persons including at least five election officials were indicted Friday on charges of voting irregularities in the May 6 Democratic primary.

The Marshall County grand jury, in returning the indictments, charged that "serious irregularities" occurred in almost every voting box in the primary.

The grand jury report accused some election officials and citizens of failing to cooperate in its investigation, and indicated more indictments may be returned.

The jury recessed until Aug. 5.

Marshall County Sheriff L. P. Dickson said five election officials were indicted on seven counts each of altering or changing ballots, and allowed $500 bond on each count.

Lamar County People Favor Cleanup Of Voter Lists

BY HALE SCARBROUGH
Post-Herald State Editor

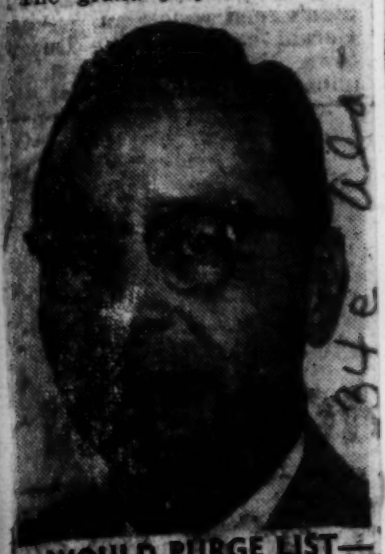
The sentiment of Lamar County people is that the county's voter registration list has to be cleaned out, says Veteran Legislator Jack Hankins, Vernon weekly newspaper publisher.

Hankins said he probably would sponsor local legislation in the regular session of the Legislature to require a re-identification of voters who registered in Lamar prior to the time the state's 1951 voter qualification law went into effect and also to bring about re-registration of all who have registered since that time.

The Lamar grand jury, investigating numerous complaints of election frauds in the May and June Democratic primaries, proposed the re-identification and re-registration.

Several counties over Alabama already have used one or both methods of cleaning up voting lists.

The grand jury also recommended that Lamar County buy and use voting machines, and Hankins said the county government may put that proposition to a referendum this Fall.



WOULD PURGE LIST—Rep. Jack Hankins.

Still another grand jury recommendation was for doing away with absentee balloting, except for persons in the military service. Much of the dispute over the Spring primaries in the West Alabama county concerned the absentee box.

Hankins said he had talked to a good many people about the voting list situation in his county, and also with Woodrow Roberts of Fayette, who holds the Democratic nomination for senator from Fayette, Lamar and Walker Counties. Roberts agrees, he says, that a clean-out is needed.

Hankins said he intended to investigate the way other counties have handled re-identification before deciding how to provide for it in his county. He said it might be done at a long session, six months or so, of the Board of Registrars, or by the probate judge's office over a period of a year or more.

Lamar County had, by the 1950 census, 16,441 residents, and has more than 8500 names on the poll list. "That's more that we have people over 21 in the county, he said."

He said he did not believe the list had been purged properly in 25 years.

The county had several vote fraud indictments returned four years ago, but no convictions. This time the grand jury made no indictments, but said it found mistakes in all but eight boxes used in the two primaries and listed various other abuses.

There were 583 ballots in an absentee box, the jury noted. About 6500 votes were cast in the June 3 runoff.

Re-identification means that all voters would be required to appear and sign a statement that they still are eligible to be on the list. Those who don't would be cut off.

A re-identification presumably would clear the poll list of dead people and persons who have left the county or are disqualified in other ways. Re-registration simply would require everybody wanting on the poll list to register again, thereby gaining the same end.

Hankins, 44, has served two terms in the Legislature and part of another. He won the Democratic nomination from Lamar in the May 3 voting.

MISCOUNT CHARGED

Elmore Jury Indicts 2 Election Officials

WETUMPKA — [illegible] election officials were indicted Wednesday on vote [illegible]ges growing out of the Democratic runoff primary in [illegible]nty June 3.

They w[illegible]ed, following their arrest, as J. A. Ruffin and Herm[illegible]ns, who live near Holtville. They were inspectors [illegible] Box 2. Both were free[illegible] bonds of $500 each.

The [illegible]nts charge both Ruffin [illegible], and Evans, an electr[illegible]d plumber, with a m[illegible] ballots which resulte[illegible] false return of the votes in [illegible] box.

Evans also was accused of marking a voter's ballot for the opposing candidate after she had asked him to help her. The indictment alleges that Mrs. Bessie Culpepper expressed a desire to vote for Leonard Johnston for the House of Representatives but that Evans marked the ballot for Johnston's opponent, John Alfred Howle.

Circuit Solicitor Glen Curlee said that under Alabama law, an inspector may help a voter at the voter's request.

Evans, contacted Wednesday night, said he had no comment to make in regard to the charges. He indicated that he and Ruffin would issue a formal statement later. Ruffin could not be contacted.

The charges all grew out of the Johnston-Howle runoff contest. The official canvass of returns at first gave Howle the nomination by one vote, but a recount by a subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee showed Johnston nominated by 59 votes.

The grand jury besides returning the indictments also disclosed that county officials have made plans to replace the old paper ballots with voting machines in future elections in Elmore County.

Grand juries many times in the past have recommended the use of voting machines in the county, and the jurors in their report Wednesday said it should be done.

The jury also criticized absentee voting practices and recommended passage of a state law abolishing the absentee ballot except for members of the armed forces.

Teacher tells Tuskegee not to be complacent

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — "The kingdoms are crumbling. You and I have a part to play, not so much in the destruction of these little kingdoms, but in the building of a new kingdom."

Under the theme, "The Complacent Negro in Today's Crisis," Mrs. Daniel W. Wynn recently emphasized those words to the 61st mass meeting of the Tuskegee Civic Association in a Washington Chapel AME Church address here.

She asserted, "the faithless administrators and the mystified, mixed-up, insecure leaders of our state and local governments and our educational institutions cannot reign much longer."

MRS. WYNN, a public school teacher, said certain school officials "are ready to abolish PTAs if they continue to expose the weaknesses of the administration which include the local boards and school principals."

She stated pointedly:

"In this area of the country, local school administrators say very plainly by their actions that colored schools do not need efficient janitorial service;

"That is is all right for colored children to be pulled out of class to clean up the building and that colored schools do not need to follow the state law respecting the required course of study."

* * *

SHE CONCLUDED HER address by calling upon colored persons to "beseech our faithless brother to create a new faith in himself and in those who are our leaders."

Get Out The Vote Rally In The Bessemer City Election Planned

BESSEMER, Ala. (SNS)—A meeting to complete plans for getting out the vote in the Bessemer city election Monday, Sept. 15, was set for this Friday night at Dunbar High School.

The Get-Out-the-Vote Rally is sponsored by the special advisory committee working for passage of a proposed $1 million school bond issue. Two other measures are an $800,000 hospital bond issue and extension of a 2½ mill school tax levy.

Advisory committee members are J. S. Abrams, principal of Dunbar High School; Mrs. Pearl Wyatt, P. T. A. leader; Dr. J. W. Dowdell, Herbert Pinson, Rev. Leon Glover and Silas Gamble.

The Bessemer Voters League headed by Asbury Howard, is understood to have met last Friday night to discuss the three proposals. The league is scheduled to meet again Friday night at 8:00 at First Baptist Church of East Bessemer of which the Rev. J. S. Saunders is the pastor.

Bessemer leaders have failed to explain their endorsement of the hospital proposal in the face of the charge that public hospitals in Jefferson County usually exclude Negro students from nurse training and deny staff privileges to Negro doctors.

A rift is believed to have developed in the usually solid Bessemer leadership over the alleged selection by city officials of the "Committee of Six" which is understood to be working vigorously for approval of the three proposals.

Lamar Jury To Resume Vote Probe

VERNON, Aug. 18 (UPI)—The Lamar County Grand Jury will resume its recessed investigation of reputed irregularities during the June 3 Democratic runoff primary tomorrow.

The jury convened last week to look into the charges but recessed until tomorrow after taking testimony. Deputy Sol. O. E. Young Jr. said it may take "several more days" to complete the investigation.

The grand jury inquiry was touched off by the nomination of Rex Frazier for commissioner in District One over J. Lester Street.

Street contested the vote outcome, however, and a recount by the County Democratic Executive Committee gave the nomination to Street. The committee said it found a discrepancy of 119 votes in Box 3 at Vernon and in the absentee box.

Street was declared the official winner by the committee, son of Silas the winner over incumbent Judge Hunter Phillips by a margin of 2,140 votes to 2,078 in the May 6 party primary.

Phillips contested and charged there was illegal absentee voting. McPhearson filed a cross-contest in which he charged fraud and misconduct in handling of the county's other 35 boxes.

The committee then voted May 23 to vacate the nomination and call a new primary. McPhearson appealed that decision to the State Democratic Executive Committee.

The first days of the hearing were devoted primarily to hearing of testimony on absentee voting irregularities. A number of witnesses said numerous persons who voted in the absentee box were not qualified, including many who no longer live in the county.

John Petree Jr., of Jasper, the subcommittee chairman, said the group wished to convene at Mobile next week in order to hear testimony from more than 100 witnesses in that area. The testimony will concern absentee ballots.

11 Indicted In Marshall Vote Probe

GUNTERSVILLE (AP) — Eleven persons including at least five election officials were indicted Friday on charges of voting irregularities in the May 6 Democratic primary.

The Marshall County grand jury, in returning the indictments, charged that "serious irregularities" occurred in almost every voting box in the primary.

The grand jury report accused some election officials and citizens of failing to cooperate in its investigation, and indicated more indictments may be returned.

The jury recessed until Aug. 5.

Marshall County Sheriff L. P. Dickson said five election officials were indicted on seven counts each of altering or changing ballots, and allowed $500 bond on each count.

The sheriff named the election officials as John Sorter, 67; Frank Sorter, 42, Walter A. Parker, 51, D Whitworth, 71, and Herman Hyatt, 48, all officials of the Cross Roads box of Beat 2 in Marshall County.

He said that Parker in addition was charged with being drunk at the polls, as was R. B. Johnson, 27, Guntersville Rt. 2, who was not an election official.

The jury was called into session June 2 by Judge Stuart Stone after election boxes were impounded. County Solicitor John W. Brown said 153 challenged votes were cast May 6, highest in county history.

Names of accused persons not yet in custody were withheld pending their arrest.

Unit Hears Testimony On Choctaw Balloting

BUTLER, Ala. (AP)—A state Democratic subcommittee Friday heard testimony concerning alleged vote selling in Choctaw County.

The subcommittee took testimony from in excess of 30 more witnesses in the third day of its hearing on irregularities in Choctaw balloting. The subcommittee then recessed until Thursday when it expects to convene at Mobile.

The subcommittee was named by State Democratic Chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper to hear an appeal of a Choctaw County Democratic Executive Committee ruling voiding the nomination for county probate judge.

One acquitted, five dis

Six freed in voting case at Fayette

BY AL STANTON
News staff writer

FAYETTE, Ala., Aug. 28—Vote fraud charges against five persons were nolle prossed (quashed) here yesterday after a Circuit Court jury acquitted a rural mail carrier of violating the election law.

The jury deliberated only 20 minutes in finding a not guilty verdict for Earl Cannon, 37, of nearby Berry.

Circuit Judge Cecil Strawbridge of Vernon quashed charges against five persons whose cases were pending. The nolle prosses were entered at the request of Circuit Sol. Louis P. Moore, who prosecuted Cannon.

The jury verdict and subsequent court orders closed out the first cases of voting law violations in Fayette County in more than a quarter of a century.

TEN PERSONS had been indicted by the Grand Jury on charges of irregularities in the May 6 Democratic Primary election.

Three women and one man pleaded guilty and were fined $100 before Cannon came to trial.

Sol. Moore had charged that all 10 conspired to "round up" voters and get them to cast absentee ballots for certain candidates in the May 6 Primary.

Cannon, a mail carrier seven years, had been charged with five counts of aiding persons to cast illegal ballots.

He was tried on only one count, of aiding a Negro tenant farmer, Doc Glass, to cast an illegal absentee ballot.

Cannon's defense attorneys argued that Cannon had no part in any conspiracy.

They said he merely drove the five voters to the courthouse at the request of Mrs. Louise Barnes, one of the women who pleaded guilty.

CANNON, taking the witness stand in his own behalf, testified Mrs. Barnes came to his house and asked him to drive her car, in which there were four passengers, to Fayette.

He said she asked him to pick up Glass on the way into town.

Passengers in the auto had testified earlier Mrs. Barnes complained of a headache.

Cannon testified he took the five persons to the office of the Register in Chancery at the courthouse.

He said he assisted them in voting only after they "insisted," because they couldn't read or write.

Cannon said he read the names of candidates from the ballot but marked no ballots for the voters.

He said he held the hand of one of the voters, an elderly man whose hand shakes so that he can't write.

CANNON TESTIFIED he didn't ask any of the five if they planned to be out of town on election day.

The state had contended Cannon knew the five voters had no right to cast absentee ballots.

The law provides that voters may cast absentee ballots only if they will be out of town on regular business on election day.

Cannon was defended by Edward deGraffenreid and his son, Ryan, of Tuscaloosa, and David Enslen of Fayette.

Moore was assisted in the prosecution by Fayette County Sol. C. M. Holder.

The state dropped charges against Glen Ballard of Winfield, William Edgar Gray of Berry, Mrs. Mamie Holt of Winfield and Mrs. Mary Nell Earnest of Winfield, all charged with aiding persons to cast illegal absentee ballots, and James Black of Fayette, charged with bribery.

In addition to Mrs. Barnes, those who pleaded guilty were Mrs. Mildred Simpson, Mrs. Loyal Collins and Riley Sparks of Berry.

REPORT ONLY 25 OUT OF 100 REGISTERED TO VOTE

By VICTOR CALVERTON

NEW YORK — (ANP) — You can complain all day and weep all night, but public officials will not pay much attention to you. Local, state and federal governments listen to voters.

This is a warning given to non-voters in a little folder published by the NAACP, under the title "Is Your Name Written There? - on the voting list?" Readers are told:

"If you want to have a say about how you are treated as a citizen, you must register and vote."

The apathy of the Negro is a problem of great concern to the NAACP and other civic organizations. The report that only 25 out of every 100 Negroes in the South of voting age are actually registered, is startling to some leaders. The folder says "Sixty out of every 100 white citizens of voting age" in the South "are registered."

In some localities fewer than 25 out of 100 Negro citizens are registered.

Henry Lee Moon, NAACP public relationist, is in charge of all regions in the current drive to get more Negroes to qualify to vote.

Rep. Martin Seeks Tightening Up Of Election Laws

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 10 (AP)—A veteran Black Belt legislator proposed today a general tightening up of Alabama's voter registration laws by raising the qualifications for voting.

Rep. W. L. (Doc) Martin of Greene County made his proposal at a meeting of the Alabama Legislative Council which recommends prospective new laws to the Legislature.

Martin suggested that the present law might be changed to require all voter applicants to take an examination. They would get their exams in sealed envelopes, he said, and send them to Montgomery for grading on an electric (IBM) tabulating machine.

The Eutaw insurance man, who won the Democratic nomination to a sixth consecutive four-year term in the House last Spring, said under his plan there would be no indication on the examination papers as to the sex or race of the applicant.

The papers would be sealed up by each individual after finishing the examinations, he suggested, then mailed immediately to Montgomery for grading by machine.

Martin said there would be no means of identity as to the sex or race of the applicant. All examination papers would be treated alike with provision for machine grading to guard against human errors.

His proposal was passed on to Charles Cooper, director of the Legislative Reference Service, with instructions to work out a bill along these lines for consideration by the council later.

Council members passed a resolution requesting that the 1959 Legislature authorize a special study of state and county election laws with a view to enacting a new election code.

Several lawmakers commented that the present election laws have become outmoded and should be revised so they will be more workable.

At the suggestion of Rep. Joe Goodwyn of Montgomery the council group voted to recommend several minor changes in the Alabama corrupt practices act to next year's Legislature.

Goodwyn proposed that a requirement that candidates file pre-election campaign expense statements before primary and general elections be deleted.

Under the present law candidates must file reports on campaign expenditures and contributions before and after each election.

The Legislative Reference Service director said he checked laws of 40 other states and found only 14 now require pre-election reports.

PROPOSES CHANGE—Rep. W. L. Martin.

"About Denial Of Voting Rights"

Writing June 15 in The New York Times with a Washington dateline, Anthony Lewis discusses the "slow" work of the nine-month-old Congress created Civil Rights Commission in which he makes this disturbing report, in part: ". . . The surprising fact—announced by Mr. (Gordon MacLean) Tiffany (staff director) this week—is that no properly sworn complaints about the denial of voting rights have been received. The reason can only be guessed."

What has happened to some of the information allegedly collected, say in Alabama, by the Alabama Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights and the Montgomery Improvement Association? An answer is in order from the leadership of these organizations. For how can one explain satisfactorily the reportedly high rejection of Negro voter-registration applicants in Montgomery County, the alleged baswelling in Jefferson County, the devious schemes operative reportedly in Macon County, and the stream of alleged complaints out of Dallas County?

What about the total denial of Negro voting in Wilcox and Lowndes counties? Does anyone mean to say that such conditions as these have gone unreported by "properly sworn complaints" from either the victims or those expected to speak for them? Our leaders of voter-registration are called on to explain this.

Reporter Lewis tries to explain the lack of "properly" presented vote denial complaints this way: "In many parts of the South Negroes might be afraid to sign their names to complaints against discriminatory treatment. There have been at least, many allegations of physical and economic reprisals for such public protest."

If that be true, then why isn't it checked into, aired and corrected? Under the watered down new Civil Rights Law the Department of Justice seems to have the law by which it can move in hard and fas. against such calculated, designed and wilful practices to hamper the right to vote. This new law to provide fully the right to vote, and to protect it vigorously must never be allowed to lie unused. Above all, Negro leaders should not sit silently by and permit the new voting law to waste away while would-be Negro voters are frozen in disfranchisement.

This important observation is made by Reporter Lewis: "But the Civil Rights Act does not require the injured person to swear out the complaint. It could be done by ministers or other Negro leaders. And these leaders, who are lacking in neither skill nor courage, have not come to the commission with proper complaints either."

All this is in contrast to what in Alabama we have been hearing from our major voter-registration leaders. For they have conducted workshops which included discussions of the Civil Rights Acts, provided forms on which complaints could easily be made, and set up what seemed to be machinery for pre-screening of complaints. This is one of the reasons we think that our voter-registration leaders should be asked to explain the delay in getting the voter rejection complaints before the Civil Rights Commission.

Cannon Freed In Vote Trial

FAYETTE, Aug. 27 (UPI)—Earl Cannon, Berry, rural mail carrier, was found not guilty of vote fraud charges in circuit court here after the jury deliberated only 20 minutes this afternoon.

Cannon was accused of illegally helping Negro Doc Glass of Berry cast a ballot in the absentee box during the May 6 Democratic primary. Had he been found guilty, Cannon might have lost his job for violation of federal law.

The trial stemmed from a grand jury investigation into alleged voting irregularities in the May voting. Ten persons were indicted by the grand jury.

Four persons have pleaded guilty, Cannon was found innocent and five others are yet to be tried. After completing Cannon's case, the court adjourned until its Spring term next year.

All four persons pleading guilty to charges were from Berry. Riley Sparks admitted aiding a person to vote illegally in the absentee box and was fined $100. Mrs. Betty Barnes, wife of Berry Mayor Garland Barnes, was fined $100 after she pleaded guilty to vote fraud charges.

Others fined $100 after entering guilty pleas to charges of vote fraud were Mrs. Mildred Simpson, widow of a former state representative, and Mrs. Loyal Collins.

Bonds Forfeited On Negroes Charged With Poll Violations

Bonds of three Negroes charged with violating Alabama elections laws during the May Democratic Primary were ordered forfeited Monday by Circuit Judge Eugene W. Carter and new warrants for their arrests issued after the trio failed to appear for arraignment proceedings.

A. D. Huffman, 45 of 810 Union Cr.; Fannie Allen Neal, 62, 262 Rutland St.; and Rufus D. Lewis, 50, 810 Bolivar St. were charged with standing too close to polling places and fined $15 and costs each in Recorders' Court.

They were arrested at polling places at Hamner Hall, city hall and the county courthouse after election officials reported they were standing within 30 feet of the polls, police said.

The cases of the three defendants were listed on Monday's docket along with those of persons indicted by the Montgomery County Grand Jury which reported last week.

According to Circuit Clerk John K. Mathews the three cases were heard by Judge Eugene Loe sitting as an ex officio justice of the peace and when appealed by Negro attorney Fred Gray to circuit court were placed on the docket with state cases.

Mathews said the cases were not regular city appeal cases—scheduled to come up for trial in circuit court Wednesday and Thursday.

MACON COUNTY has 697 Todd votes that will either go to Wallace or Patterson — or by the boards. Shorty Price landed one vote in Macon and four kinsmen voted for Attorney Gullatte. The final tally of Todd to go for Wallace over Patterson in Macon puts quite a value on the Todd vote.

Judge William Varner's friends were elated over the election results which found the veteran probate judge leading his combined opposition by more than 600 votes.

Biggest vote getter in the county was State Senator Sam Engelhardt who polled 1,867 votes to 903 for Skidmore and 273 for Boutwell. The runoff for the office of lieutenant governor in Macon will be interesting.

Grand Jury Will Probe Chilton Vote

CLANTON, Ala. (AP) — Chilton County officials are investigating charges of double voting and voting by unauthorized persons in the May 6 Democratic primary.

County Solicitor L. F. Gerald said Tuesday night all the Chilton primary results had been impounded for investigation by his office and the county grand jury.

Officials had not determined whether to call a special grand jury session for the probe, he said, declining elaboration on the alleged irregularities.

Chilton was the sixth county in which the first primary vote has been questioned. Probes also are pending in Marshall and Covington counties, while alleged discrepancies in Marion, Baldwin and Fayette were declared of no consequence.

Latest county to call off inquiries in the primary was Baldwin, where Tuesday the county Democratic executive committee upheld the nomination of Sheriff Taylor Wilkins.

The committee declared Wilkins the Democratic nominee after a two-hour hearing on charges Hamilton F. Hall's charges of bribery and fraud.

Hall, who polled 5,423 votes to Wilkins' 6,676, contested the election files on charges of mistake or misconduct in all the county's 44 voting boxes.

None of several witnesses at the hearing testified he had seen any specific irregularities during the voting.

Choctaw Vote Inquiry Ends Mobile Probe

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A state Democratic subcommittee Thursday wound up its hearings in Mobile in the contested probate judgeship election in Choctaw County.

The three member panel which has authority to make a final decision in the election contest recessed until next Wednesday, when it will convene again at the Choctaw County Courthouse in Butler.

The recess was voted after attorneys for Richard E. McPhearson of Silas, put about 10 witnesses on the stand.

Attorneys for Probate Judge Hunter Phillips have completed presentation of evidence in connection with Phillips' charges that sufficient fraud existed in Choctaw absentee balloting to change the results in McPhearson's favor.

200 QUESTIONED

Counsel for McPhearson is now presenting evidence to refute the charges brought in the Phillips contest. McPhearson also has filed a cross-contest, alleging that fraud existed in the other 35 boxes of Choctaw County in the May 6 primary balloting.

So far, almost 200 witnesses have been questioned.

The subcommittee is composed of John Petree Jr. of Jasper, chairman, Ralph Smith of Guntersville, and Grady Cleveland of Eufaula. They were appointed by State Party Chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper, after an appeal was filed with the state committee.

Phillips won a round in the contest Thursday prior to recess of the hearings.

The subcommittee denied a motion by McPhearson's attorneys asking that the evidence presented by Phillips' counsel be thrown out because they contended it did not prove Phillips' allegations. If granted, the action would have had the effect of ending Phillips' contest.

The subcommittee members made no comment on their decision to deny the motion.

Subcommittee members are trying to determine if a sufficient number of illegal votes were cast to change the results as shown in the official canvass.

McPhearson was declared the nominee on the basis of a 62-vote margin. Phillips then contested and McPhearson filed a cross-contest.

The Choctaw County Democratic Executive Committee voted May 28 to vacate the nomination and hold a new primary. McPhearson appealed this decision to the state committee.

The subcommittee opened its hearings in Butler nearly three weeks ago. It questioned a number of witnesses there before moving to Mobile to interrogate more than 100 former Choctaw Countians who now live in Mobile but who voted absentee ballots in Choctaw in the May primary.

There was no indication when a final decision can be expected.

Elmore vote fraud case may be dropped

BY TRUDY CARGILE
News staff writer

WETUMPKA, Ala., July 2—A hearing on vote irregularities in the Elmore County June 3 runoff was suspended here today as counsel for opposing principals conferred on a proposal to drop all charges and counter-charges.

Leonard Johnston, candidate for the House of Representatives who initiated the contest, made an offer this morning to drop charges of voting irregularities and settle for a simple recount of the ballots.

JOHNSTON was defeated by John Alfred Howle by one vote in the race for the Elmore County House of Representatives seat.

Johnston had previously withdrawn the charge that Howle was ineligible to be a candidate in the race.

The conference became more complex than anticipated when it was learned that Howle intended to press a charge, in turn, of ballot box tampering.

The hearing is being held by a subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

JOHNSTON'S charges have largely been centered on allegations of unqualified people acting as poll workers.

Much of the testimony in the hearing, which began yesterday, revolved around Box 1, Beat 8, the last box to be reported in the June 3 tally. The box gave Howle an edge of 35 votes, which gave him a one-vote margin in the countywide canvass.

Eighty-eight witnesses had been subpoenaed for the hearing.

Attorney for Johnston in the case is George Howard. Ross Milner and Robert Tyler are attorneys for Howle.

Motion made to end Choctaw vote case

MOBILE, Ala., July 2—Attorneys for a Silas, Ala., man moved today for dismissal of a contest of the Choctaw County probate judge nomination.

The motion by counsel for Richard E. McPhearson, declared the winner in the race, contended that attorneys for incumbent Probate Judge Hunter Phillips failed to prove charges of fraud in handling of absentee ballots in Choctaw. Phillips had contested the nomination.

A State Democratic subcommittee has been hearing evidence in the contest for the past three weeks.

If the motion is denied, the three-man group will begin hearing witnesses called by McPhearson's attorneys.

Elmore Vote Probe Ready

Demos To Hear Johnson Complaint

WETUMPKA, June 30 (UPI) —A three-man subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee begins an investigation tomorrow of charges of election irregularities in Elmore County.

The subcommittee will hear complaints by Leonard Johnson, Wetumpka's sitting barber, who lost his bid for a House seat from Elmore by one vote.

The three-man subcommittee is composed of Floyd Ansley of Birmingham from the Ninth District, chairman; William B. Fite of Hamilton, Seventh District; and Jack M. Bridges of Headland, Third District.

The official returns from the Elmore runoff primary June 3 gave Johnson 3494 votes and John A. Howle, 3495. Howle is an insurance man.

Johnson charged in protest papers filed with Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, chairman of the executive committee, that vote buying, intimidation and/or "other misconduct" prevented a fair election. He also said Howle was ineligible for election, but gave no specific reasons why.

The subcommittee is empowered to determine which candidate received the most legal votes and declare him the winner or it can declare it cannot determine which candidate received the most legal votes and call another runoff.

Mayhall said any action of the subcommittee is final.

Dothan Forms Provisional Voter League

DOTHAN — After a series of pre-provisional meetings to form a League of Women Voters in Dothan a provisional league has been organized. The group will remain on a provisional status for one year and after having completed the required study, will become a qualified League of Women Voters.

Mrs. J. Bertram of Montgomery, president of the Alabama League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Marie Frutell, organizational chairman of the Alabama League, assisted the Dothan women in organizing.

Officers elected to head the Dothan group are: Mrs. E. P. McDaniels, Jr., president; Mrs. Clark Rudder, vice president; Mrs. Helene Elliott, secretary and Mrs. William Nomberg, treasurer.

Members of the board of directors are: Mrs. R. A. Dowling Jr., publication chairman; Mrs. S. A. Cherry, voters service chairman; Miss Sicily Raley, resource chairman; Mrs. Billy Joe Adams, finance chairman; Mrs. C. C. McEachin Jr., local survey chairman; Mrs. J. B. Hart, membership chairman and Mrs. Pat Elliott, public relations chairman.

Mrs. David Wilson will serve as "Bulletin" editor. Mrs. Drury Flowers is budget chairman and serving with her are: Mrs. Billy J. Adams, Mrs. William Nomberg and Mrs. Coke Jones Jr.

The main project of the new Provisional League of Women Voters of Dothan, which will be undertaken this summer, will be a complete survey of Dothan city government.

The fourth week in each month has been proclaimed "Provisional League of Women Voters Week" in Dothan.

10 booked in Fayette County fraud

FAYETTE, Ala., July 18 — Sheriff Oscar Pinkerton served four more warrants yesterday bringing to 10 the number of persons booked here on vote frauds.

The 10 were named in indictments returned by Fayette County Grand Jury last Tuesday. The charges cited violations during the May 6 Democratic primary voting in the county.

The last four were Mrs. Mamie Holt and Mrs. Mary Nell Earnest, both of Winfield and sisters of Fayette County Tax Collector P. D. Berry; Glen Ballard of Winfield and William Edgar Gray of Berry.

Each was charged with one count of aiding a person to vote illegally. Each was released under $900 bond.

TAX COLLECTOR Berry was defeated in the race for probate judge in the May 6 election.

The first arrest was made Wednesday night when Riley Sparks of Berry, Rt. 1, farmer, surrendered himself to the sheriff. Sparks, charged with three counts of aiding a person to vote illegally, made $900 bond.

Previously named by the sheriff as having been served warrents were:

Mrs. Betty Barnes, wife of Mayor Garland Barnes of Berry, four counts of aiding in preparation of an absentee ballot and two counts of bribery, $1200 bond.

Mrs. Mildred Simpson of Berry, a member of the County Board of Registars, one count of vote buying and two of illegally assisting in preparation of an absentee ballot, $900 bond. She is the widow of Red Simpson, a former Fayette County Commissioner, and ex-wife of Earl Cannon, who is also under indictment.

Cannon, a rural mail carrier of Berry, is charged with three counts of aiding a person to cast an illegal absentee ballot, $900 bond.

Mrs. Loyal Collins of Berry, 10 counts of aiding a person to vote illegally and five counts of buying votes, $1500 bond.

James Black, Fayette junk dealer and service station operator, three counts of bribery, $900 bond.

Sol. Louis P. Moore of the 24th Judicial Court said the cases against the 10 would be docketed for the week of Aug. 28 in Circuit Court.

Elmore Jury Probes Vote

WETUMPKA—The Elmore County Grand Jury went into session Tuesday and made clear as its first order of business an investigation of complaints of irregularities in the June 3 Democratic runoff.

Eight or three witnesses were subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury Thursday in connection with the alleged vote fraud, Circuit Solicitor Glen Curlee said.

The Grand Jury was scheduled to meet in September, but the date was moved up after the vote dispute arose.

Leonard Johnston, a candidate for Place No. 1 in the House of Representatives from Elmore County, contested the election after losing to John Alfred Howle of Wetumpka by one vote.

During a contest hearing both candidates agreed to abide by a recount. Johnston was declared the winner after a 31-vote error was discovered in one box (Beat 9, Box 2).

Before the investigation is over, Curlee said, "several hundred witnesses may be subpoenaed."

"I am not going to leave a stone unturned in this investigation," Curlee said. "I am convinced it was no honest mistake in that one box."

Registrars Pass On County Voters

The principal duty of the Montgomery County Board of Registrars is to take the applications, and to determine the eligibility, of those who wish to become qualified electors in this county.

Only those who meet the qualifications as set forth by Alabama law may become registered voters.

The board meets in regular session, beginning the second Monday in June and continuing through the third week in October, and again from the second Monday in November through the month of January.

Between Jan. 31 and the start of the next regular session, the board meets only on the first and third Mondays of each month.

There are three members of the board, Mrs. C. B. Willis, chairman, Mrs. Attilus Mullin and George W. Penton.

Members of the board of registrars are appointed by an appointing board composed of the governor, the state commissioner of Agriculture and the state auditor.

The office of the board of registrars is located on the third floor of the new courthouse.

Hearings start in Choctaw election

MOBILE, Ala., July 1—(AP)—A State Democratic subcommittee continued an investigation here today which may lead to a new primary election in Choctaw County.

The subcommittee moved here from Butler to question some 150 absentee voters of Choctaw County about alleged voting irregularities during the May 6 primary.

About 30 absentee voters testified yesterday there had been vote-buying and absentee voting by unauthorized persons during the election.

After the remaining Mobile residents testify, the subcommittee will return to Butler where about 130 witnesses already have appeared. A decision is expected in four or five weeks.

THE PROBE BEGAN after Incumbent County Probate Judge Hunter Phillips, defeated in a bid for renomination, charged fraud in absentee vote handling.

Richard E. McPhearson of Silas, who won nomination with 2140 votes to 2078 for Phillips, followed his opponent's action with a cross-contest. He claimed there was fraud and misconduct on the part of election officials at the county's other 35 boxes.

The Choctaw County Democratic Committee then voted to vacate the nomination and call a new primary. McPhearson appealed the decision to the state committee.

John Petree Jr., Jasper attorney, is chairman of the State Democratic subcommittee.

Investigations open in voting irregularities

WETUMPKA, Ala., July 1 (AP)—Investigation began today into charges of voting irregularities during the June 3 runoff primary in Elmore County.

A three-man subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee was slated to hear complaints by Leonard Johnson of Wetumpka, who lost his House race with John A. Howle of Wetumpka, 3495 to 3494.

Johnson, in a protest filed with State Democratic Chairman Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, charged vote-buying, intimidation and that Howle was ineligible for election. He offered no specific reason for the latter accusation.

The three-man subcommittee is composed of Floyd Ansley, Birmingham, Ninth District, chairman; William B. Fite, Hamilton, Seventh District, and Jack M. Bridges, Headland, Third District.

The subcommittee may either determine the final winner, or declare itself unable to do so and call another runoff.

VIEWED AS PROTEST AGAINST SEGREGATIONISTS

Alabama GOP Gains Negro Votes

By FRED TAYLOR

Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 5—Although Alabama Republican candidates were snowed under, as expected, by Democrats in Tuesday's general election, the GOP scored decisive gains among Negro voters, particularly in the larger cities.

Fred Taylor

This was shown by returns from boxes having Negro majorities in Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile and also in heavily populated Macon County.

Ballot tabulations substantiated earlier reports that Negro leaders sought to line up all the votes they could against Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who was elected governor; State Sen. Albert Boutwell, chosen lieutenant governor, and other candidates on the Democratic ticket. Patterson and Boutwell are two of Alabama's strongest leaders in the fight to preserve states' rights and maintain segregation of the races.

And the returns followed the swing of the Alabama Negro vote to the Republicans in 1956 when President Eisenhower was re-elected.

William L. Longshore Jr., Birmingham lawyer and Republican nominee for governor, who was swamped by a seven-to-one majority piled up by Patterson, said he and other GOP candidates "probably got the Negro boxes by default, because they had to vote for somebody."

ALABAMA

Longshore, who repeatedly emphasized his stand for segregation during the campaign, added that, "We certainly didn't appeal to the Negroes for their vote. They probably went Republican because of my opponent's suits against the NAACP."

Two Birmingham boxes with a heavy Negro vote gave Longshore 820 to 585 for Patterson, even though Patterson carried Jefferson County (Birmingham is county seat) by 38,383 to 7,951.

In four Mobile boxes, also having Negro vote majorities, the GOP nominee got 390 to 136 for Patterson. And Longshore made his best showing in Montgomery in the two boxes where Negroes have their heaviest voting strength.

Former State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. of Macon, segregationist leader, said the unusually large Negro support there for Longshore represented an endorsement of President Eisenhower's racial policies, particularly the use of federal troops to enforce integration at Little Rock.

And Engelhardt, author of legislation gerrymandering Tuskegee's corporate boundaries to eliminate many Negro voters from that town, said the Negro vote also was a protest against Atty. Gen. Patterson for bringing court action seeking to break up a Negro boycott of white merchants in Macon's county seat.

Negro Boxes Go To GOP In B'ham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Republicans won both of the Birmingham boxes dominated by Negroes in Tuesday's general election.

This trend followed the swing of the Alabama Negro vote to the Republican party in 1956.

The largest Negro box, near Legion Field, gave W. L. Longshore Jr., Republican nominee for governor, 507 and Democrat John Patterson 315. The other, in the same general area, gave Longshore 313 and Patterson 272.

Both have substantial numbers of white voters. A nearly 100 per cent white box nearby gave Patterson 360 votes to 21 for Longshore.

Republicans lost their hold on the Mountain Brook area south of Birmingham, however. The Mountain Brook school vote was 315 for Patterson and 181 for Longshore. That box was overwhelming Republican in 1956.

Patterson carried Jefferson with 38,383 to 7,951 for Longshore. In 1956, Republicans carried the county, 43,695 to 38,604.

CIVIL RIGHTS SNOOPERS HAVE BEEN IN STATE

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—A federal civil rights investigator was in Montgomery recently but "didn't get anywhere," Atty. Gen. John Patterson said last night.

Speaking to the Dallas County Citizens Council, Patterson said the agent was "sent down here to spy on our people and to look over the shoulders of our boards of registrars. He found, however, a cool reception from the people of our state and didn't get anywhere."

The Democratic gubernatorial nominee's statement was the first specific report of the locality of an investigation by a Civil Rights Commission agent. The new agency recently announced it was investigating reports that Negroes had been denied voting rights in Alabama, Florida and Mississippi but no definite sites of investigations were given.

Patterson added: "The Civil Rights Commission has planned a frontal attack on our civil rights."

In addition, he criticized the Republican administration and the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People which he said were "trying to force integration down our throats."

The U. S. Supreme Court, he continued, "realizes the possibility of bloodshed and ruin of our public school system— and this thing is going to get more serious."

Alabama's Defiance Of Federal Vote Probe Promises Hot Fight

By DAN COGGIN

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — The Civil Rights Commission's failure to gain access to county voter records may touch off a legal struggle which could forecast effectiveness of the federal agency in the South.

Implications are strong that a state's right to governmental privacy as well as racial discrimination will be prime factors in any federal action over Macon County's closely guarded registration files.

Such a legal fight, some observers believe, might make or break the new Civil Rights Commission.

White supremacy will not be surrendered easily in Macon County, where racial strife long has been commonplace, these observers say. And Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Democratic nominee and thus assured of the next governorship in this Democratic stronghold of the Deep South, has solidly blessed efforts to maintain white reign.

Negroes outnumber white residents about 6-1 in the county, home of famed Tuskegee Institute. At the polls, however, white voters rule by a 2-1 margin and sew up all county and city government posts.

Defiance of any possible change in this pattern came to the fore Monday when county voter registration officials refused to turn over their records of two of the commission's agents from Washington.

Indications that a showdown may be brewing came Tuesday night in a telephone interview between the Montgomery Advertiser and A. H. Rosenfeld, director of the commission's Office of Complaints, Information and Surveys.

"The commission will have to consider some sort of action when it meets in Washington Thursday," Rosenfeld said, "but I don't have the slightest idea what the action will be."

Rosenfeld, reached at Alexandria, Va., said he had not heard from Burton J. Goodyear and O. J. Peterson, the agents who he said "intended to check the voter records as a result of complaints we had received."

New vote law proposal gets go ahead sign

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 10—A new voter qualification law to clarify and strengthen state statutes was proposed by the Alabama Legislative Council today.

The council adopted a resolution asking for an appropriation of not more than $20,000 for survey work leading to drafting of a new election code.

REP. MARTIN

Rep. W. L. Martin Jr. of Greene County submitted the proposal to the council this morning. He is a member and former head of the group.

Present election laws have become obsolete in many respects and should be brought up to date, council members said.

Rep. Martin asked the group of senators and representatives to draft a bill setting up a three-member state board to prepare and supervise examinations for prospective voters in each county.

"This proposal would not affect any present voter in Alabama, since they would be automatically qualified under a grandfather clause," said Rep. Martin.

"But new and more rigid requirements would be specified for all who seek to become voters.

"Our voter qualification laws are inadequate and should be clarified and strengthened.

"There couldn't be any discrimination in my plan, because examination forms would be prepared, sealed and numbered to be sent out to the boards of registrars in each of the 67 counties. There would be no identification other than number and the examination papers would be graded and sorted by an IBM machine."

MARTIN TOLD the council members that those serving on the three-member state board would be appointed by the governor and be subject to approval by the state Senate. No two members could be chosen from the same congressional district.

His plan called for examinations to be conducted four periods each year for prospective voters.

The plan would go into effect, if approved by the incoming Legislature, Jan. 1, 1960.

State Rep. Charles Adams of Tallapoosa, who has been chosen by Gov.-Nominate John Patterson for speaker of the incoming House of Representatives, is council chairman.

Mayor's wife, two other women guilty in vote fraud cases

FAYETTE, Ala., Aug. 20—The wife of the mayor of Berry was one of three women fined $100 each in Circuit Court here yesterday on guilty pleas to vote fraud charges.

Mrs. Betty Barnes, wife of Mayor Garland Barnes of Berry, and Mrs. Mildred Simpson, a member of the Fayette County Board of Registrars, and Mrs. Loyal Collins pleaded guilty before Judge Cecil Strawbridge.

THE INDICTMENTS were returned by the Fayette County Grand Jury in July.

The charges grew out of voting irregularities in the Democratic Primary Election in May.

Seven other persons are scheduled for trial next Tuesday.

Mrs. Barnes was charged with four counts of bribery.

Mrs. Simpson, widow of former State Rep. Red Simpson, was charged with two counts of vote buying and one of aiding in preparation of an absentee ballot.

FACING TRIAL Tuesday are: Earl Cannon, Berry rural mail carrier, three counts of aiding a person to cast an illegal absentee ballot; Riley Sparks, Berry Rt. 1 farmer, three counts of aiding; James Black of Fayette, three counts of bribery; Glenn Ballard of Winfield, one count of aiding. William Edgar Gray of Berry, one count of aiding; Mrs. Mamie Holt of Winfield, one count of aiding; Mrs. Mary Nell Earnest of Winfield, one count of aiding.

Mrs. Collins was charged with 10 counts of aiding a person to vote illegally and five of vote buying.

Revealed in Tuesday's vote—

Alabama's politicos eye swing of Negroes to GOP

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 6—Alabama politicians noted with special interest today the further swing of Negro voters to the Republican column in this state as shown by returns from Tuesday's general election.

They said it began when boxes having Negro majorities, which formerly went Democratic, backed the Republican ticket in 1956 when President Eisenhower was re-elected.

TAYLOR

Although Alabama Republican candidates were snowed under, as expected, by Democrats in Tuesday's balloting the GOP registered substantial gains among Negro leaders sought to line up the larger cities.

This was revealed by returns from boxes with Negro majorities in Birmingham, Montgomery and Mobile and also in heavily Negro populated Macon County.

BALLOT TABULATIONS bore out earlier reports that Negro leaders south to line up all the votes they could against Atty. Gen. John Patterson, who was elected governor; State Sen. Albert Boutwell, chosen lieutenant governor, and other candidates on the Democratic ticket.

Patterson and Boutwell are two of the strongest leaders in the fight to preserve states' rights and maintain segregation.

BIRMINGHAM Atty. William L. Longshore Jr., Republican candidate for governor, who was swamped by a seven-to-one majority piled up by Patterson, said he and other GOP candidates "probably got the Negro boxes by default, because they had to vote for somebody."

Longshore, who repeatedly stressed his stand for segregation during the campaign, declared:

"We certainly didn't appeal to the Negroes for their vote. They probably went Republican because of my opponent's suits against the NAACP."

BUT POLITICAL observers here cited the fact the Negro boxes also went strongly for GOP nominees running against Democratic candidates other than Patterson.

They also pointed to a bitter attack made by Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn upon Sen. Sparkman for his strong segregation stand.

The GOP chieftain, in referring to a speech made by Sparkman, declared the Alabama senator and former Democratic vice presidential nominee had destroyed for all time the "illusion" that the Democrats are for "civil rights."

GOPer Alcorn alluded to an address in which Sen. Sparkman pointed out that Northern and Western Democrats in Congress helped the Southerners defeat "civil rights" measures.

Although the Alabama Republicans this time polled only about one-half the percentage of the state (and Jefferson County) vote they received in 1956 when President Eisenhower was reelected, returns from Macon County gave Longshore about one-third the total vote there.

MACON SHERIFF Preston Hornsby said that normally "you can count the Republican votes in this county on your fingers."

Former State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. of Macon, segregationist leader and probable choice of Gov.-Elect Patterson for state highway director, said the unusually large Negro support there for Longshore represented an endorsement of President Eisenhower's racial policies.

Engelhardt said he thought the Negros particularly approved use of federal troops to enforce school integration at Little Rock.

Longshore said sending troops to Little Rock undoubtedly had much to do with the lopsided defeated suffered by Republicans Tuesday, even though the GOP in Alabama has a platform plank urging continued separation of the races.

ENGELHARDT said he felt the heavy Negro vote for the GOP ticket in Macon also was a protest against Patterson for bringing court action seeking to break up a Negro boycott of white merchants at Tuskegee.

The largest Negro majority box near Legion Field (Precinct 9, Box 1) gave Longshore 507 votes to 313 for Patterson. This box reportedly has about 65 per cent Negro voters and 35 per cent white.

The other box with a heavy Negro vote in the same general area (Precinct 9, Box 4) gave Longshore 313 to 272 for Patterson.

A nearly 100 per cent white box nearby gave Patterson 360 votes to 21 for Longshore. And returns showed that Patterson carried Jefferson County 38,383 votes to 7951 for Longshore.

This compared with a Republican victory in Jefferson in 1956 when Eisenhower polled 43,695 to 38,604 for the Democratic ticket.

In four Mobile boxes, also having Negro vote majorities, the GOP nominee got 390 to 136 for Patterson. And Longshore made his best showing in Montgomery in the two boxes where Negroes have their heaviest voting strength.

RETURNS FROM 2232 of Alabama's 3062 boxes gave this vote for governor-Patterson 188,029; Longshore 26,888; Independent Marvin Jackson 1275.

THE VOTE for other statewide offices, all won by Democrats from 2119 of 3062 boxes:

Lieutenant governor—Albert Boutwell 166,974; James H. Jones 21,690.

Attorney general—MacDonald Gallion 169,299; Louis Salman 21,121.

Secretary of state—Bettye Frink 166,708; Glenn Andrews 23,358.

State auditor—Mary Texas Hurt Garner 166,108; Ben White 21,732.

State treasurer—Agnes Baggett 169,585; E. C. Herren 21,665.

Commissioner of agriculture and industries—E. C. Bamberg 166,454; J. R. Bennett Jr., 21,727

1623 BOXES gave this vote on the constitutional amendments:

No. 1 Lauderdale—For 33,080 against 30,365.

No. 2 Marion—For 13,548 against 49,014.

No. 3 Montgomery—For 30,410 against 32,877.

Alabama To Observe Citizenship Sunday

W. C. Patton, President of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting announced this week that Sunday Nov 30 will be observed through Alabama as Citizenship Sunday. The purpose of which is two fold (1) To impress upon the minds of the citizens the importance of paying their poll tax which is due now and is payable on or before February 1st 1959. The only persons exempt from poll tax and still have the right to vote are veterans past 45 years of age. Persons who plan to register at some later date may pay their poll tax now and register later.

The second purpose of the observance is to urge prospective voters to register and pay their poll tax before the February 1st dead line. The boards of Registrars in every county of the State are required by law to meet Monday, December 1st for the purpose of registering prospective voters.

"With the prospective legislation to be voted on in 1959", says Mr. Patton, "It is almost manditory that all persons become qualified to cast their ballots."

All Churches, Civis, Social, Fraternal, Labor and other organizations have been called upon to cooperate with this observance.

Alabama Vote May Be Small

Democratic Victory Seen In All Major Races

GOP ENTERS BIG SLATE

(By United Press International)

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 3.—Alabamans elect a new governor and other state officials Tuesday with the segregation issue and traditional one-party adherence expected to assure a Democratic victory for all but a few minor offices.

The Republicans have put up their largest slate of candidates in years but there was little doubt the Democratic ticket, headed by gubernatorial nominee John Patterson, 37-year-old attorney general, would sweep into office on an expected light vote.

Mr. Patterson had opposition for the job as Alabama's 49th governor from Republican William L. Longshore Jr., Birmingham attorney, and Marvin Jackson, former short order cook from Montgomery.

Small Vote Forecast

The Democrats were also opposed by Republican nominees for lieutenant governor, attorney general, secretary of state, state auditor, agriculture commission and state treasurer.

Incumbent representative George Huddleston Jr. of Birmingham faced Frank Mason, also of Birmingham, but was expected to be returned to Washington for his third term.

Political observers forecast a vote of no more than 350,000 between poll opening at 8 a.m. and the final closing at 6 p.m. That would be a little better than half of the Democratic primary vote.

All three gubernatorial candidates pledged a continuance of segregation.

Would Be Youngest

Should he win as predicted, Mr. Patterson will be the youngest governor elected in state history and also will have won the state's highest political office in his first contested election.

In addition to the seven statewide offices and the Ninth District seat in Congress, the GOP also put up candidates for the state House of Representatives in Winston, Jefferson, DeKalb, Franklin and St. Clair Counties. They were given their best chance of winning in Winston long a North Alabama Republican stronghold.

Alabama Vote Count Official

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—States Rights Democrats were officially assured of the votes needed to control party machinery in Alabama in the next four years.

The official canvass of returns from the June 3 Democratic runoff primary gave the States Righters 39 seats on the 72-member state Democratic executive committee which takes office next January.

It showed, too, that Atty. Gen. John Patterson won the Democratic nomination for governor in the runoff with a record 315,353 votes to 250,541 for Circuit Judge George Wallace.

The biggest vote-getter until this year was Gov. James E. Folsom, who received 309,384 four years ago.

States Righters won seven of the 17 state committee seats which were decided in the second primary, six of them in contests where there was national party loyalist opposition.

Alabama Seeking Leaders Of Southern Voting Drive

By DONALD J. MARTIN

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (UPI) — Atty. Gen. John Patterson, successful in getting the NAACP outlawed in Alabama in 1956, is scheduled to pry into the records of another Negro group today in an effort to prove it is the NAACP's "alter ego" and should be fined for contempt of court.

Patterson won permission Friday from Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones to check the records of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting.

But he ran into a snag when W. C. Patton of Birmingham, president of the organization, said he had not been served with a subpena to produce the records.

Patton swore under oath, however, he would present the records today but indications were that there would be no membership lists or material connecting the group to the NAACP.

Robert L. Carter of New York, chief counsel [illegible] will attending the hearing.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, also is expected to attend the hearing as a subpenaed witness.

Jones outlawed the NAACP June 1, 1956 after Patterson charged the group refused to register as an out-of-state corporation trying to attack the state's segregation laws. The jurist also slapped a $100,000 fine on the NAACP for contempt of court when it refused his order to produce its records and membership lists in the state.

An appeal of the giant fine is pending before the U. S. Supreme court.

Patterson, youthful Democratic nominee for governor, filed contempt papers against the NAACP April 9 accusing it of operating in Alabama under its "alter ego," The Coordinating Association for Voting and Registration.

The NAACP immediately filed a motion asking that Jones disqualify himself from the case on grounds he was "biased and prejudiced."

Jones, who admitted he was a staunch believer in segregation and convinced the NAACP was "Communist-inspired" and "Communist dominated," dismissed the request on grounds "I stand legally indifferent between the parties and have neither bias for the state nor prejudice against the respondent."

Jury Vote Probe Call Withdrawn

OPP, June 12 (UPI)—Circuit Judge Bowen Simmons issued a withdrawal order today of his order to convene a special grand jury to probe alleged absentee voting irregularities in Covington County in the May 6 primary.

Simmons, who had impounded the absentee box during the height of the June 3 runoff campaign, said "it appears there is no imperative and compelling necessity for a special session of the grand jury that was ordered as a precautionary consideration in the light of potential election violations."

Simmons was trounced in the election by a 3178 vote majority.

Simmons pointed out the regular grand jury, which can be convened in August or early September, can hear any complaints about election violations.

All three candidates who led in the absentee box May 6 were defeated in the June 3 runoff. Those included, in addition to Simmons, Probate Judge Iram Brogden and Ed Brogden, candidate for the House.

Judge Hiram Brogden had served for 36 years as Covington's Probate judge and he has held elective office for 46 years. He was defeated by Andalusia Mayor Leland Enzor, who used the absentee box issue as a key campaign plank.

Defeated Elmore Candidate Charges Bribery, Threats

JASPER, Ala. (AP) — Leonard Johnston, Wetumpka's "singing barber" who lost by one vote in his race for one of Elmore County's two House seats, filed an election contest Thursday.

In contest papers filed with Roy Mayhall, state Democratic chairman, Johnston charged that vote-buying, intimidation "or other misconduct" prevented a fair election in his county in the June 3 runoff.

The official count of Elmore County ballots showed Johnston had 3,494 votes to 3,495 for insurance man John A. Howle, his runoff opponent.

Johnston's contest alleges that one voter was offered $2 to vote for Howle and says the voter cast an absentee ballot in Howle's favor.

His suit contends also that Howle is ineligible for nomination to the office. No explanation was given and Wetumpka Atty. George Howard who drew up the papers declined to elaborate at this time.

The complaint charges that offers of "bribery, intimidation, malconduct or misconduct" prevented a "fair, free and full exercise of elective franchise."

Johnston also claims that there was "miscalculation" in counting, tallying, certifying or canvassing the votes.

He said incumbent Rep. Carol Jack Law, defeated in his bid for the same House seat in the first primary May 6, was allowed to serve as an election clerk though he wasn't legally appointed and qualified.

Law's brother, Tarvis, likewise was used as an election officer, although he hadn't legally been designated, the suit charges.

Absentee Balloting Probed In Choctaw

BUTLER, June 18 (AP)—A state Democratic Executive Committee subcommittee today probed into absentee voting practices in Choctaw County.

The three man group devoted itself to the study of absentee voting in the opening day of a hearing of an appeal of a ruling voiding the nomination for Choctaw probate judge.

The subcommittee heard testimony by more than a dozen persons concerning the practice of former residents of Choctaw to continue to vote in the county by casting absentee ballots.

Scores of witnesses were waiting to be heard and observers said the hearing may continue a week or more.

No testimony concerning alleged vote fraud was taken today. The hearing stemmed from charges of irregularities filed by the two candidates for the judgeship in the May 6 Democratic primary.

The Choctaw County committee originally declared Richard E. McPhearson of Silas the winner over incumbent Probate Judge Hunter Phillips. The official canvass gave McPhearson 2140 votes to 2078 for Phillips.

Phillips contested and charged there were irregularities in the handling of the absentee vote. McPhearson then filed a cross-contest in which he charged fraud and misconduct in the handling of the county's other 35 boxes.

The county Democratic committee voted May 28 to vacate the nomination and call a new primary. McPhearson then appealed to the state committee.

The subcommittee was named by Circuit Judge Roy Mayhall, Jasper, the state chairman. It is composed of Chairman John B. Petree Jr., Jasper; Ralph Smith Jr., Guntersville; and Grady G. Cleveland, Eufaula.

The State Committee, on recommendation of the subcommittee, has the authority to name a nominee or call a new primary.

Teacher tells Tuskegee not to be complacent

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — "The kingdoms are crumbling. You and I have a part to play, not so much in the destruction of these little kingdoms, but in the building of a new kingdom."

Under the theme "The Complacent Negro in Today's Crisis," Mrs. Daniel W. Wynn recently emphasized those words to the 61st mass meeting of the Tuskegee Civic Association in a Washington Chapel AME Church address here.

She asserted, "the faithless administrators and the mystified, mixed-up, insecure leaders of our state and local governments and our educational institutions cannot reign much longer."

MRS. WYNN, a public school teacher, said certain school officials "are ready to abolish PTAs if they continue to expose the weaknesses of the administration which include the local boards and school principals."

She stated pointedly:

"In this area of the country, local school administrators say very plainly by their actions that colored schools do not need efficient janitorial service;

"That is is all right for colored children to be pulled out of class to clean up the building and that colored schools do not need to follow the state law respecting the required course of study."

* * *

SHE CONCLUDED HER address by calling upon colored persons to "beseech our faithless brother to create a new faith in himself and in those who are our leaders."

Macon, Vote Law Reports To Be Studied

Legislative Council Will Consider Proposals Friday

MONTGOMERY, Oct. 6 (AP)—Three interim committee reports and a proposal for changes in the states voting laws will be studied by the Alabama Legislative Council Friday.

Reports from the insurance, Macon and health committees will be under study although final reports for insurance and health will not be submitted for possibly several weeks.

The council also will consider proposals to lengthen time for taking an appeal from justice of the peace court, and for changing requirements for a candidate's financial statements during election periods.

One proposal asks that the length of time for appeal from JP court be changed from five to 15 days.

Rep. Joe Goodwyn of Montgomery County is asking that candidates for public office be required to file financial reports after election only. Candidates now are required to file statements both before and after each election.

The Macon Abolition Committee filed its final report Friday recommending formation of a permanent committee in Alabama "to keep an eye on the race situation."

Charles M. Cooper, director of the Legislative Reference Service, said in each case the council "probably will act as a transmission unit; accepting recommendations of the committees and merely passing them on to the next Legislature in the form of proposed legislation."

Proposed voting law changes, to be studied by the council, include plans for requiring statewide use of voting machines. Or, as an alternative, amendments which would allow county and city governments to turn to use of machines without the necessity of a referendum.

The council will convene at 11 a.m. Friday. It is composed of 12 members, six from the House, four from the Senate, and the lieutenant governor and speaker of the House as ex-officio members.

Sparks Guilty In Voting Case

FAYETTE (AP)—Riley Sparks of Rt. 1 Berry was fined $100 Tuesday after he pleaded guilty to aiding an unauthorized person cast an absentee ballot.

Sparks, a farmer, was the first of seven persons called for trial in Fayette County Circuit Court. All are charged with voting misconduct in the spring Democratic primaries.

Sol. Louis P. Moore said Earl Cannon, a Berry rural mail carrier, went on trial Tuesday facing the same charges as Sparks. A verdict was expected Wednesday.

The solicitor said the only other person scheduled for trial this week is James Black of Fayette. He faces three charges of bribery.

Hearing Scheduled On Alabama Voting

WASHINGTON (AP)—Denied access to registration records in Alabama, the Federal Civil Rights Commission Thursday ordered a hearing on alleged denial of voting rights in that state. The hearing, opening in Montgomery Dec. 8, will be the first held by the commission since it was created by Congress in 1957.

Chairman John A. Hannah told a news conference the hearing would be confined to allegations of denial of the right to vote in Alabama. He had been asked whether it also would be concerned with the refusal of the Macon County voter registration board to show its records to commission agents.

Vice Chairman Robert G. Storey said it had not been decided whether the Montgomery hearing would be open to the public, but added that as far as he could see now it probably would be. The commission's decision to hold the hearing was unanimous.

The commission also announced after a closed session that it had authorized further investigations of alleged denial of voting rights in Mississippi and Florida. The first investigations in those states were authorized in September. There have been additional complaints since then.

A fact-finding hearing on the subject of housing was scheduled to start in New York Feb. 2. Hannah and other commission officials emphasized this was not based on any complaints but was deemed advisable to obtain information which would not be available otherwise.

Concerning the Alabama situation, the commission said in a statement:

"While the commission has hoped that it might be able to collect the facts necessary for a complete report on voting complaints received from the state of Alabama through the cooperation and understanding of local and state officials, its field representatives on Monday were denied access to registration records by Macon County officials acting on the advice of the attorney general of Alabama.

"Congress imposed upon the commission a duty to investigate every valid allegation that certain citizens are being denied the right to vote and have that vote counted by reason of their color, race, religion, or national origin.

"In fulfillment of that duty, the commission has acccordingly approved a hearing to be held at Montgomery, Ala., beginning on Monday, Dec. 8, 1958."

More than 50,000 Negroes—

900,000 Alabamians to be eligible to vote

BY HUGH SPARROW, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 19—All won't vote, of course; but, just the same, between 875,000 and 900,000 Alabamians—an all time high—will be eligible to cast their ballots in the forthcoming May 6 primary.

As of April 15, the registered voter total was about 875,000. Between now and April 30, when registration books will close so far as the May 6 primary is concerned, names of several thousand additional men and women will be added to the voting lists.

The eleventh hour qualifiers should bring the total to close to 900,000, if not in excess of that number.

Of the 875,000 already qualified to vote, between 50,000 and 60,000 are Negroes, most of them qualifying during the last year or two. The number of Negroes eligible to vote, moreover, is reported here about five times the total just four years ago when Alabama last elected a governor.

The record 875,000 total, as of April 15, would have been much higher if several counties, Cullman and Geneva in particular, had not conducted voter reidentifications. As a result, names of several thousand erstwhile voters were eleminated from the lists.

Exhaustive study

FIGURES INCLUDED in this list were compiled by this reporter after an exhaustive study of the voting lists of Alabama's 67 counties which recently appeared in daily and weekly newspapers in the respective counties.

According to the official Jefferson County list, made public the past week, the county's registered voter total is approximately 127,500. When names of the April qualifiers are added, the number by April 30 should be about 130,000.

Of the 127,500 voters, 11,000 are Negroes.

In 1956, just before the May primary, Jefferson had 115,000 voters, of which 7000 were Negroes.

Mobile's registered vote total increased from 50,000 for the entire county in 1956 to 57,860 on April 15, 1958. The number of Negro registrants increased from 3136 to 5152.

Montgomery's registered voters as of April 15 totaled 31,835, representing a gain of about 2000 since 1956. Montgomery County had 2107 Negro registrants in 1956. Today the number is 3017.

Tuscaloosa County, it appears, has an even larger number of Negro voters than Montgomery. The total stands at 4000.

No Negro total before

UNTIL NOW Alabama has not had a total list of Negro registered voters. In the past the number has been largely a mystery. In fact, many counties even now do not identify Negro voters in the official poll list.

In making the check it was necessary to count the number of Negroes in those county voting lists which identified Negro voters.

In counties not identifying Negroes it was necessary to check with county voting authorities to get the figures.

Custom abandoned

IT APPEARS from the voting lists which this reporter closely checked that Boards of Registrars abandoned an old custom in allocating Negro voters to polling places.

Just two years ago, for instance, Box 3 in Precinct 9, Jefferson County, was almost a 100 per cent Negro box. After the May, 1956, primary, the official tally, for example, showed Gov. Folsom received 582 votes for Deocratic National Committeeman and his two opponents received one vote apiece.

That indicated Negroes were inclined to vote as a bloc.

In the present race for governor, some have been saying as soon as the votes in the May 6 race are counted it will be known whether or not Negroes voted bloc fashion and also just which of the gubernatorial candidates was the recipient of the Negro bloc vote.

It appears new arrangements have been made by most of Alabama's registrars this year, which will make conclusions more difficult if not well nigh impossible to reach.

No longer is Box 3, Precinct 9, an all Negro box.

Instead, there appears to be just one big voting place—Box 1, Precinct 9. The poll list shows that about 2000 voters have been assigned to that box. Of that total, by actual count, about 55 per cent of the voters are Negroes.

The mixing of Negro and white voters to form a much larger box may have been occasioned by the expanded use of voting machines. But, just the same, the proportion is so nearly even that it will be difficult, if not impossible, to draw any clear cut conclusions when the votes are counted.

The same procedure was resorted to in Macon County. That conuty has about 1000 Negro registered voters. Most of them are concentrated in the area near Tuskegee Institute.

The voters in that area have been assigned to one big box or voting machine station in which the proportion is about three times as many white voters as Negroes.

Again, very little conclusion can be drawn from what may be the voting result.

tomery County, too, appears o be in a voting box or station in which about three times as many white voters also cast their ballots.

In Mobile County, 321 Negro voters, in one instance, are assigned to the same voting place which has a voter total of 1476. In Ward 22 there are 783 Negro voters out of 1476, and in Ward 2-P 880 out of 2504 are Negroes.

In Precinct 15, however, 304 out of 330 are Negroes, and in Precinct 16 the ratio is 248 Negroes to 69 white.

Almost double

IN OTHER WORDS, the situation appears to be this:

Not only is the Negro vote almost double what it was in 1956 and sufficiently large to be used as a coercive weapon if voted in a bloc, but there is now less chance than ever that the voting ways of Negroes will become generally known.

In the table which accompanies this story, the voter total for 1958 is given for each county, along with the number of Negro voters. Where no Negro voters are shown it could mean there are no Negro voters or it could also mean that identification of Negro voters could not be made.

Given also is the county population according to the 1950 census, the number of white people 21 and over in each county and the number of registered voters, white and Negro, in each county in 1956.

Negro Vote League Opposes Proposed New State Charter

MIAMI, April 21 (AP)—The Florida Voters League, a group pushing Negro registration to vote, has decided to oppose Florida's proposed new constitution.

Elmer Ward of Miami, league vice president, said the action was taken at a weekend meeting at Bethune-Volusia Beach near Daytona Beach.

He reported league members are opposed to the segregation and apportionment provisions of the new constitution to be voted on in November.

The provision calling for separate white and Negro schools "doesn't agree with the U.S. Supreme Court decision or our national Constitution," he said.

State news roundup—

Registration closed until after primary

Some of the top news items around the state today included lines of citizens taking advantage of their last chance to sign up to vote . . . the organization of a search after a prison shirt tossed from a car . . . the sale of a public utility in South Alabama.

MONTGOMERY—Voter registration boards closed their doors to prospective voters today for the last time until after the May 6 Democratic primary.

Men and women over 21, whose poll taxes are paid up or who are exempt, could register during the day to be eligible to take part in next month's election.

Registrars Meet Monday

MONTGOMERY (AP)—Prospective voters who have paid their poll taxes, or who are exempt, have one last chance to register for the May 6 Democratic primary in Alabama.

Boards of Registrars in all 67 counties will meet next Monday for the final registration period before the election.

They will meet again May 5, the day before the primary, but the law says a voter must be registered at least 10 days to vote.

Men and women over the age of 45 and war veterans are exempt from the $1.50 a year poll tax aren't affected by the recent Feb. 1 deadline for paying the tax.

Those who are exempt can vote May 6 if they are registered by the close of business Monday.

HIGHEST COURTS SPLIT

2 Amendments On Ballot Tuesday

A constitutional amendment already rejected three times, and another which has Alabama's two highest courts divided as never before, will be ratified or defeated in Tuesday's election.

They were added to the ballot for the Democratic primary to save the expense and a special return trip.

Only one of the proposed constitutional changes is of statewide interest. No. 1 on the ballot, it would take all criminal jurisdiction away from the State Supreme Court and turn it over to the Court of Appeals.

Amendment No. 2, sponsored by House Speaker Rankin Fite, applies only to Marion County but has created widespread controversy in the three times it has previously been voted on, and turned down.

It would empower the Marion County government body to issue bonds and levy new taxes to acquire property for industrial development.

If the Marion County amendment is rejected again Tuesday, Alabama voters must act on it again. It will be resubmitted in the general election in November.

The split between the state Court of Criminal Appeals has produced an unprecedented split between the present Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court. All seven justices on the Supreme Court are opposed to the change; the three judges on the Court of Appeals have endorsed it.

Both tribunals have made formal statements and the judges have spoken publicly for and against the amendment.

In a recent statement in the Alabama Lawyer, the justices on the Supreme Court warned that the change would result in chaos in Alabama courts. They foresaw the possibility that the two courts could construe the same law differently, one on a civil suit, the other on a criminal appeal.

The Court of Appeals, writing in the same publication, said chaos already exists in the state's judicial system because of what it called an overlapping jurisdiction which it said causes unnecessary delays.

Under the present law, all decisions of the Court of Appeals can be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

The lower appellate tribunal now has jurisdiction over criminal sentences of 20 years or less and civil judgments of $1,000 or smaller. Other appeals go direct to the Supreme Court.

If the amendment is ratified Tuesday, the Court of Appeals will take over all criminal jurisdiction except death sentences, and the Supreme Court will handle only civil matters.

In appeals from the death penalty, four justices on the Supreme Court would be designated to sit with the three on the Court of Appeals as a special tribunal.

The Marion County amendment would validate the provisions of a legislative act passed during the 1957 session. It seeks to give the county governing body authority to:

Acquire property and equipment to lease or sell to new industries, and become a stockholder in any concern.

Lend credit or "grant public moneys and things of value" to help new industry.

Issue bonds to finance the acquisition of industrial property.

Levy a 2 per cent property tax.

Build dams for irrigation projects or to generate hydroelectric power.

AROUND 53,000 NEGRO VOTERS TO GO TO POLLS

Alabama voters Tuesday, May 6 began to weigh candidates for public and party office in the Democratic Primary.

An estimated 53,000 Negro voters are expected to be among the 600,000 going to the polls.

In the 14-candidate race for governor, most of the aspirants have ridden the race issue hard. Considerable attention has centered around control of the 72-member Alabama Democratic Executive Committee.

Approximately 11,000 Negro voters are among the estimated 120,000 voters in Jefferson County. Negro voting has not figured as a dominant issue in the campaign.

Arthur B. Tiddle, 49-year-old, Kentucky-born motion picture operator, is seeking one of seven Jefferson County seats in the State Legislature.

In Mobile, some 25 Negro candidates are said to be seeking membership on the Mobile County Democratic Executive Committee. Two of those seeking committee seats are already members of it.

In communities rallies last Monday night, civic leaders made fervent go-to-the-polls appeals.

Joining in such appeals were Atty. Arthur D. Shores, president of the Jefferson County Progressive Democratic Council; James Cotton, president of the Young Negro Democratic Club, Inc.; Atty. Orzell Billingsley, president of the Ninth Congressional District of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting.

Big Negro Vote Expected In Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (INS) — Alabama's 14-man race for the Democratic governor's nomination ended Monday night as the major candidates wound up their campaigns with television and radio appearances.

A large Negro vote, despite the fact that every candidate has sworn to uphold racial segregation, is expected today.

There were an estimated 53,000 Negroes eligible to vote a year ago, and an undetermined number have been added since their demands for registration have been intensified.

Besides governor, voters, who if the sun shines are expected to set a new mark in votes cast, will choose between five nominees for Lieutenant Governor and three for Attorney General, all 140 seats in the Legislature, nine places in Congress, State Auditor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Superintendent of Education and Commissioner of Agriculture posts are also all on the line.

Victory in the Democratic Primary in Alabama historically assures an election.

Front-runners in the gubernatorial race are Jimmy Faulkner of Bay Minette, runner-up to Gov. James E. Folsom in the last election; Atty. Gen. John Patterson, son of the late Albert Patterson of Phenix City fame, and fiery Circuit Judge George Wallace of Barbour County who has waged an all-out campaign.

Primary voters will also get a chance to elect a 72-member State Democratic Executive Committee that may alter the State's role in the 1960 presidential election.

The new group will decide if Alabama is to remain the party's bastion of white supremacy or if they will not be pledged in advance to vote for the Democratic presidential nominee.

Alabama Vote Will Be Today

Segregation Among Issues In Democratic Primary

14 RUN FOR GOVERNOR

By The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, May 5.—Candidates made final appeals Monday on the eve of a Democratic primary election which may affect Alabama's future conduct in the fight to preserve segregation.

An expected record number of voters Tuesday will pick the Democratic nominees for governor, lieutenant governor, a new Legislature and scores of lesser state and district offices.

Besides the 14 candidates for governor and five for lieutenant governor, the voters will choose from a long list of contenders for the 141 seats in the Legislature; for attorney general, state auditor, state treasurer, secretary of state, superintendent of education, agriculture commissioner, circuit judges and solicitors, and scores of county offices.

Each Has Own Formula

They will vote for 72 members of the state Democratic executive committee, eight from each of Alabama's nine congressional districts.

Racial segregation has been uppermost among the campaign issues in the race for governor. One by one, the candidates have all promised to prevent integration, but each has offered his own formula.

Some of the candidates have advocated mandatory closing of integration - threatened schools. Some have promised to keep them segregated on a separate-but-equal basis.

The Negro vote will be a factor, especially in a close race. The Montgomery Improvement Association, a Negro organization, estimated 53,000 Negroes were registered to vote a year ago. An undetermined number has been added since.

Running For Governor

Seeking the gubernatorial nomination are:

Former United States Representative Laurie Battle of Birmingham, retired Adm. John Crommelin of Wetumpka, W. E. Dodd of Bessemer, Shearen Elebash of Montgomery, former State Senator Jimmy Faulkner of Bay Minette, Winston Gullatte of Selma, State Representative Karl Harrison of Columbiana, State Representative George Hawkins of Gadsden, President Jack Owen of the Public Service Commission, Montgomery; Atty. Gen. John Patterson of Phenix City, Ralph Price of Louisville, Agriculture Commissioner A. W. Todd of Russellville, the Rev. Billy Walker of Pell City, and Circuit Judge George Wallace of Clayton.

Two Citizens Council leaders, State Senator Sam Engelhardt of Macon County and Asa Carter of Birmingham, are among the candidates for lieutenant governor.

Others seeking the nomination for the state's second highest elective office are State Senator Albert Boutwell of Birmingham, Robert T. Butler of Montgomery and State Senator E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa.

Voters Set New Record In County

Montgomery County voters went to the polls in record numbers last Tuesday to cast their ballots in the gubernatorial, other statewide and local races.

A comparison of the total votes cast in Tuesday's Democratic primary with the 1954 primary which broke all previous records shows that 22,951 citizens voted in the gubernatorial race this year—about 2,600 more than the 20,355 who voted in 1954.

Leading local race in the vote gathering category this year was the probate judge's race in which a total of 21,646 votes were cast. This was only 1,305 less votes than those cast in the gubernatorial race.

In 1954 the top polling local race was the four - man race for sheriff in which Addie Mosely polled 8,429 votes to lead the ticket but lost in the runoff to Mac Sim Butler who netted 5,208 votes in the primary. Third that year with 4,473 votes was John Daniel. A total of 19,715 votes were cast in that race.

Five of the candidates for the legislature this year also appeared on the 1954 ballot. They were Joe Dawkins, Ramon Farnell, O. J. (Joe) Goodwyn, J. Paul Pitts, and H. James Hall.

Three of the candidates, Goodwyn, Farnell and Pitts were fighting for the same seat—No. 3. Goodwyn who led Farnell by only 125 votes in the primary won in the runoff.

Tightest race four years ago and one of the most bitterly fought of recent times was that for tax assessor. Mrs. Louise Champion, then a clerk in the office, defeated incumbent Dave Crosland by only 110 votes. The final count was Champion 9,079 and Crosland 8,969.

Loan official held on voting charge

BY EDWIN STRICKLAND
News staff writer

A Winston County man who manages a loan company in Birmingham, was in County Jail Saturday charged with voting or attempting to vote illegally at a Mountain Brook polling place last Tuesday.

R. B. Jones, manager of Tide Finance Co., was indicted late Friday by the Jefferson County Grand Jury. He was arrested shortly after noon Saturday and placed in jail under a $1000 bond.

His address is listed as Double Springs, Ala., but he was living at a Pratt City address while working in Birmingham. The offense, on conviction, carires a minimum of two years imprisonment and a maximum of five, at the discretion of the jury.

Jones, according to Solicitor Emmett ePrry, went to Mountain Brook School (Precinct 59, box 1) and signed the name of Charles J. Larson. He signed the polling list as the 16th voter of the day.

ELECTION officials became suspicious and Harry deBuys questioned the man as to his identy.

Jones allegedly went ahead and voted, insisting he was Larson.

Poll workers and bystanders got the license number of the cars as the man drove away. They began some detective work which quickly brought the case before the Grand Jury.

Larson, they found, was in Chicago. He lives at 2506 Randolph in Mountain Brook.

JONES WAS arrested by Chief Deputy Sheriff Wilton Hogan and Deputy B. M. Dinken, at the Tide Finance Co.

Debuys went with the officers and identified Jones as the man he had questioned at the poll ing place.

The Tide Finance Co., was one of five loan establishments in Birmingham which were restrained as a public nuisance after Atty. Gen. John Patterson brought suit against them. The companies lated won a writ in Supdeme Court which allows them to operate while further legal action is pending.

THIS WAS THE second time in two years that alleged voting irregularities have gone before the Grand Jury here. Four years ago it was found that official tally sheets had been changed.

A Grand Jury which stayed in session for many weeks brought indictments against three persons, including Si Garrett, who was then attorney general, and Russell County Solicitor Arch B. Ferrell.

The investigation in Jefferson County then was credited with kicking off an election cleanup in Phenix City which resulted in the assassination of Albert L. Patterson, nominee for attorney general.

Listed as witnesses on the warrent against Jones were deBurys, Larson, Plato G. Britton, Mrs. Dorothy Hoyt, R. H. Woodrow and Mrs. Donald B. Dumas.

AUBREY WILLIAMS KEYNOTER

Bi-Racial Group Charges South Hampers Negro Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stories of economic reprisals, literacy tests, fear and apathy were related at a Negro-white conference Sunday on voting restrictions in the Southern states.

The conferees listened to reports from leaders interested in gaining full voting rights for Negroes in eight Southern states and the border state of Maryland.

Leaders said the reports would be turned over to the new federal Civil Rights Commission for consideration when it gets down to business.

The conference was held under the auspices of the Southern Conference Educational Fund headed by Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala., publisher and former head of the National Youth Administration in the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration.

Williams in a keynote speech said the federal government is allowing what he called its stable of informers to be used to destroy white persons in the South who stand up for the rights of individuals regardless of color or nationality.

"This is not only a shameless thing, but it is a dangerous thing," said Williams. "Unless we Americans turn our faces against liars and informers, no man's character or livelihood will be safe."

Williams said if what he called the state of repression continues to grow in the South it will be in the same condition it was three years before the explosion of the Civil War. He said a blanket of silence lies over the whole South as men fear to talk about a different point of view on the race question.

Saying the overwhelming weight of evidence is that the Negro has at last made up his mind to secure his rights as a citizen, Williams said:

"If this is true, then we may well have the stuff out of which can come a true and sincere realignment of political parties in the country."

Chairman of the conference was Bishop Edgar A. Love of the Baltimore area of the Methodist Church (Negro). He is a vice president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

Summarizing the state reports, James M. Nabrit Jr., secretary of Howard University of Washington, said they show Negro voters "must run the gauntlet of apathy, ignorance, fear, bodily harm, and racial discrimination" in order to register.

"The Negro must be aroused," Narbit said, "until he seeks registration by the tens of thousands. It is much easier to deny registration to 1 or 10 than it is to 100 or 1,000."

Here in brief are excerpts from the reports made by the state leaders:

Alabama — Charles G. Gomillion, president of Tuskegee Civil Assn., complained of lengthy questionnaires for registrants and said Negroes who are greatly dependent on the white community for their economic well-being "are afraid to manifest any interest in, or to participate in, politics."

"Perhaps the most important factor," he said, "is the difficulty of getting a certificate of registration."

Some registered Negroes, he added, do not vote because they are afraid "they will lose the good will of white citizens or will lose their jobs, or will not be able to secure credit."

Florida — The Rev. Ben. F. Wyland, executive secretary, Florida Council for Racial Cooperation, said of a state Negro population of around 600,000 a total of 369,463 are old enough to vote but only 148,636 have been able to do so.

He said five counties in northern Florida use intimidation whenever necessary to prevent or discourage Negroes from registering. He added there are 16,533 Negroes old enough to vote in those counties, but only 110 have been able to register. Union County has 2,542 Negroes over 21 and not one is registered, he said; Gadsden County has 10,930 with five registered.

"At one courthouse, loungers told Negroes who came to register: 'Go ahead and register if you can take what comes afterward'," Wyland said.

Georgia — Attorney Austin T. Walden: The greatest obstacle to Negro registration "arises from the indifference and timidity" on the part of too large a segment of the Negroes.

"This observation," said Walden, "is not made at all for the purpose of justifying the discriminatory practices which prevail in some remaining areas of the state, nor to condone the unjustifiable attitude upon the subject manifested by the top political figures of our state. Our biggest job, therefore, is one of education among our own people."

Louisiana — Kenneth Walker, editor of the Colfax Chronicle, a weekly: "I think the shortage of Negro registrants in Louisiana stems from essentially two things. One is lack of concern on the part of the Negro—a 'don't want to cause no trouble' attitude. The other is plain lack of abiliy to read and write well.

"Negro registrations in Louisiana will continue to grow, in part because of the schools on how to fill our registration cards, but more so because of the coming of a better-educated generation."

He said voing restrictions do exist in Louisiana, with political as well as racial overtones.

Maryland—Dr. John L. Lilley, pastor of New Metropolitan Baptist Church, told of a drive being conducted by a citizens committee which has resulted in adding more than 15,000 Negro voters to the rolls in Baltimore in 12 months.

He said the drive was set off by refusal of the Baltimore City Council and the state Legislature to pass civil rights legislation, and by statements that councilmen and legislators considered the Negro vote of no significance.

Mississippi — The Negro registers and votes freely in only six of the 82 counties, reported Albert L. Powell, president, Mississippi Progressive Voters League. The counties named are Harrison, Hinds, Warren, Washington, Lauderdale and Coahoma.

Powell said in 43 counties there is a situation where every now and then a favored Negro is able to register. In the remaining 33 counties, he reported, there is "gross intimidation that creates a fear complex to such an extent that the Negroes in these counties are in most instances afraid to try to register."

He said in most elections in Mississippi "the candidate that can yell 'nigger, nigger' the loudest will be elected."

North Carolina — Miss Willson Whitman, editor and writer of Southern Files, said it is estimated that only 26 per cent of the eligible Negro voters go to the polls in the state. She said there is little or no trouble registering Negro voters in the larger cities and in those parts of the state where white elements in control feel little or no fear of Negro majorities.

But she said in the northeastern part of the state, notably in Northampton and Halifax counties, "literacy tests, so-called, have been used to disqualify Negro voters and it is hoped that cases now pending will show that these tests are contrary to the Bill of Rights of the federal constituion."

South Carolina — Mrs. Andrew W. Simkins, a vice president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, said a check of possible difficulties surrounding voter registration in her state failed to turn up reports of obvious restrictions, except in Williamsburg County, of which Kingstree is the county seat.

She said a businessman, J. F. Dimery, a product of Howard University, reported last Dec. he had been turned down in Williamsburg County on a literacy test.

Virginia — Attorney W. Hale Thompson of Newport News, said voting restrictions in this state are designed to keep the electorate "small and controllable."

"Legal procedures for qualification do not tell the whole story," Thompson added. "You have all heard how Negroes are kept from registering and voting by manipulation of the poll tax and the use of questionnaires about the constitution and the statues.

"Less well known are the harsh economic reprisals against Negroes who dare to encourage others to qualify to vote, or who seek to run for public office in Virginia."

Call To Non-Voters

This Wednesday night, February 12 — Abraham Lincoln's birthday — a rally to spur non-voters to get their names on the voters' list will be held at the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. It was Lincoln's slavery-ending Emancipation Proclamation which paved the way for the group to achieve citizenship freedom. The time has come when a number of those members of the deprived group can help themselves.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference under the brilliant and dedicated guidance of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., has formulated a two-year campaign targeted toward doubling the Negro vote in the Deep South. The double-the-vote campaign has a modest goal. Yet to put over such a campaign it will need the cooperation, support and help of our civic, community, church, business and professional leaders. The task is so enormous, the barriers so formidable, and the opposition so tough that every source of leadership will need to be mobilized and marshalled into voter-registration action.

Here in Jefferson County, the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights is undertaking to coordinate the leadership for this vital campaign. This is a time for united, sustained, area-wide action for new voters. There are a number of overlooked community leaders who are seething with new ideas, fresher approaches, and who are fired up with spirit on voter-registration. Leadership needs to be measured in terms of production and the intensity of determination.

Jefferson County has an estimated 121,000 Negro persons of voting age. There are approximately 25,000 Negro war veterans in this same county. Yet there are less than 10,000 Negro voters. Something is either wrong with the voter-registration system or with this disgracefully large number of non-voters among the Negro group. If the voter-registration system is responsible for the small Negro electorate, it should be corrected. If the Negro non-voters have failed to do their duty, they should be aroused and awakened to it.

This newspaper is not primarily interested in placing blame for the low suffrage status among our group. But it is interested in knowing the cause of it so that some way can be found to substantially bolster the voting rolls in Jefferson County. A program based upon the total leadership effort together with self-effort on the part of this large body of Negro non-voters should pay off. No persons possessing the qualifications to vote can continuously be denied the ballot by those who want to vote are determined to vote and are ready to pay the full price for such an opportunity. The wage of non-voting is second-class citizenship.

The Reverend T. J. Jemison, the Selma-born secretary of the National Baptist Convention, Inc., of Baton Rouge, La., is scheduled to deliver the keynote speech. As a minister, he knows how to get the message across. As a native of the Alabama Black Belt he knows first hand the evils of racial disfranchisement. The militant minister deserves capacity audience when he speaks here.

All-Time High

Near 19,000 Countians Are Qualified To Vote

Approximately 19,000 Talladega Countians — a record number — will be qualified to cast votes in the coming Democratic primary, figures compiled at the Probate Office revealed Wednseday.

The exact number of eligible voters to date is 18,625 and that number will be increased before election day.

In the last gubernatorial primary 13,680 Talladega Countians voted to set a new record, but a much larger vote is anticipated in the coming election because of intense interest in local races as well as the contest for state officers.

Home reporters Wednesday talked politics with a number of shrewd local observers and found most of them inclined to the opinion that Faulkner, Todd and Wallace, but not necessarily in that order, are leading at this stage of the race.

There was belief that Faulkner and Todd have attained peak rating at the moment while Wallace is gaining.

"These three have some very active supporters in all parts of the county," reporters were told. "Their backers are working hard."

They report an almost total lack of interest in the race for lieutenant governor and said that the county will give overwhelming support to Charlie McKay of Sylacauga in his race for attorney general.

Observers said that support in the steaming 11-man race for sheriff now appears divided to an unusual degree.

"Each one of them is going to get some votes," reporters were told. "They are all working hard they are all, or almost all, showing some strength, and a runoff is just about a sure thing."

Of the total number of qualified voters, 6205 are women.

There is no way of telling exactly how many voters are white and how many Negro, but it is believed that Negro voters in the county number between 2000 and 2500.

New Houston Voters Top 1,000 In 10 Days

DOTHAN, Ala., Jan. 30 — The Houston County Board of Registrars today reported an unprecedented number of new voters registered for the Democratic Primary.

In the last 10 days, more than 1,000 persons have qualified as new voters, Board of Registrars secretary Mrs. Pauline Cumbie said today. This week 607 persons have been registered. The breakdown: Monday 116, Tuesday, 126, Wednesday 171 and Thursday 194. Approximately 10 per cent of the registrants are Negroes.

The sudden rash of registrants is considered here as an indication of great interest in the elections, particularly local races.

More than one-half the number of persons registered are long-time residents of Dothan and many do not have to pay the poll tax, but registered for the first time. Today was the deadline for registering for persons required to pay the poll tax (veterans and persons more than 45 years of age are exempt).

Negro Leader Tells Of State Voting Drive

A spokesman disclosed Tuesday that Negro leaders in Alabama are undertaking a statewide effort to advise their people how to vote in the May 6 Democratic primary.

But whether the Alabama Coordinating Council which is directing the project will endorse individual candidates is yet to be determined, said Rufus Lewis of Montgomery, a council member.

Lewis said the council "has discusses," the candidates at one meeting and probably will have one or two more sessions before the election. Regardless of whether it singles out certain candidates for support, Lewis said the council will offer "general suggestions" to guide other Negroes in voting.

The Montgomery Negro, who heads the registration and voting committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., predicted "a fairly good amount of unanimity" among his people in casting their ballots. But, he added, "I wouldn't call it a bloc vote."

Rather, he said, Negroes will "vote in accord with their interests."

The MIA estimated a year ago that there were 53,000 registered voters in Alabama. By now, Lewis said, the number may have grown to 60,000 or 70,000.

LIST OF MACON COUNTY VOTERS APPEARS IN THIS ISSUE OF NEWS

The 1958 list of qualified voters for Macon County, required by law to be published once every two years, appears in the second section of The News this week. The list contains the names of approximately 3,350 voters.

Probate Judge William Varner, in releasing the list, asked that voters check it carefully to see that they are properly listed and if not, to notify his office at once. A supplemental list containing the names omitted from this list will be published in two weeks.

County Commission Selection By Districts Declared Void

The Alabama Supreme Court Thursday declared unconstitutional a 1957 Coosa County act which sought to allow county commissioners to be elected by district rather than in a county-wide election.

The high tribunal was divided on the question, but by a vote of four to three it upheld a decision by the Coosa County Circuit Court that the law was invalid.

The court killed the bill on the grounds that it was not advertised as a local bill, but introduced as a general bill applying only to Coosa County. The tribunal said this was in violation of Section 106 of the Constitution which requires local bills to be advertised for four weeks before being introduced in the Legislature.

The measure resulted in a sharp political fight between Coosa's legislative delegation—Sen. Staten Tate and Rep. Charles Franklin, both of Goodwater.

Tate opposed the measure while Franklin was in favor of the plan.

Associate Justice James Coleman wrote the opinion, and it was concurred in by Chief Justice J. Ed Livingston and Justices Davis F. Stakely and John L. Goodwyn.

Dissenting were Justices Thomas S. Lawson, Robert T. Simpson and Pelham J. Merrill.

NEGROES GET VOTE AID

Council Preparing For May 6 Primary

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 1. —(AP)—A spokesman disclosed today that Negro leaders in Alabama are undertaking a statewide effort to advise their people how to vote in the May 6 Democratic primary.

But whether the Alabama Coordinating Council, which is directing the project, will endorse individual candidates is yet to be determined, said Rufus Lewis of Montgomery, a council member.

Lewis said the council has discussed the candidates at one meeting and probably will have one or two more sessions before the election.

The Montgomery Negro, who heads the registration and voting committee of the Montgomery Improvement Association, predicted "a fairly good amount of unanimity" among his people in casting their ballots. But, he added, "I wouldn't call it a bloc vote."

Rather, he said, Negroes will "vote in accord with their interests."

The MIA estimated a year ago that there were 53,000 registered Negro voters in Alabama. By now, Lewsi said, the number may have grown to 60,000 or 70,000.

60,000 votes to be determining factor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —The 60,000 votes of the colored people in Alabama are not apt to go to the leading contender June 3 because of his bitter opposition to colored persons, it was learned here Saturday.

"Neither of the leading candidates for Governor was on our side, so we were not on either of their sides," said the Rev. Ralph Abernathy, vice president of the Montgomery Improvement Association, told the AP.

He was discussing the primary election of May 6 in Alabama in its relation to the coming election June 3 during which the aspirants to the Governorship and the Legislature will be picked (the MIA) were in favor of A. W. Todd, who received 46,643 votes, placing fourth," he stated.

"HOWEVER, IN the present heat of the campaign," the Rev. Mr. Abernathy went on, "it looks like we're going to have to support one or the other of them, and I don't know who it will be."

He was referring to John Patterson, the former attorney general of Alabama, who as the attorney general of the state waged relentless warfare upon colored organizations in the state including the NAACP, the MIA, and the Tuskegee Improvement Association.

Patterson got 145,980 votes from the state's 3,292 ballot boxes.

He was comparing him to Judge George Wallace, Patterson's opponent, who garnered 117,726 votes. With the 60,000 votes controled in the state by the MIA he would have a total vote of 177,000 or a greater number than Patterson.

THE REV. MR. Abernathy shied clear of the question: Who will your organization support? He indicated that it would take several meetings and considerable discussion before a decision could be made.

"We will support one of them," he reiterated.

Patterson, son of a slain anti-vice crusader, A. L. Patterson, filed a court suit two years ago which resulted in an injunction order to put the NAACP out of business in Alabama. The NAACP was fined $100,000 for refusing to produce membership lists and other records sought by Patterson. Both the fine and the injunction have been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

IN THE meantime, returns from Tuesday's primary showed that the faction in Albama opposed to a loyalty pledge adopted in 1950 has won a majority State Democratic Executive Committee.

Under the loyalty pledge, candidates in the primary must swear they supported Democratic nominees in the last general election, and will support them in the next one.

In 1948 Alabama candidates for Democratic presidential election pledged in advance that if President Truman were nominated again they would not support him. The State primary was before the National nominating committee.

State's Righters say the pledge hurts the South's chances of getting an acceptable civil rights platform or an acceptable nominee for President at the national convention — because Alabama support is pledged in advance.

IN UNOFFICIAL returns, the anti-oath group had 36 candidates apparently elected. In the Ninth (Birmingham) District, the six candidates for three places to be decided June 3 included four anti-oath candidates, insuring at least one States Rights win.

The loyalty oath advocates apparently elected a total of 29.

The June 3 runoff will decide the remaining places.

Big Vote Cast By Alabamans

Campaign Gimmicks And Long Ballot May Have Brought New Record

By The United Press

BIRMINGHAM, May 6. — Alabamans, lured in heavy numbers to the polls by campaign gimmicks and a huge ballot, voted Tuesday for a Democratic candidate for governor with 14 segregation-dedicated hopefuls seeking a place in an almost certain runoff.

From the Gulf Coast to the mountains of northern Alabama, the word from election officials was of a "heavy" to very heavy vote. It indicated a possible record turnout, surpassing the 1954 mark of 595,000.

Three Head Field

Heading the big field in quest of the governorship in this Deep South state where Democratic nomination is tantamount to election were Bay Minette publisher Jimmy Faulkner, Atty. John Patterson and Circuit Judge George Wallace.

The competing for interest were a number of secondary races, including lieutenant governor, an intra-party squabble over the state loyalty oath binding candidates to the ticket, and two constitutional amendments.

The primary drew a record number of 755 candidates for state and party offices, including the entire 72-man Democratic Executive Committee.

Segregation Big Issue

All 14 gubernatorial candidates bore down heavily on the segregation issue which was sure to be a major factor in the four-year term of Gov. James E. Folsom's successor. Only difference among the candidates was the degree of emphasis placed on maintenance of separate facilities for white and Negro.

Folsom, who cannot succeed himself, maintained a hands-off attitude, refusing to back any candidate.

Ballot boxes in Fayette are impounded

Repercussions from last Tuesday's primary echoed around the state today as all ballot boxes were ordered impounded in Fayette County, and races for sheriff in Baldwin and probate judge in Choctaw were contested.

Circuit Judge Cecil Strawbridge impounded Fayette's 34 boxes as a result of what was termed "widespread reports of vote buying, double voting and absentee voting by unauthorized persons."

STRAWBRIDGE'S order was the second resulting from the Democratic primary election. Last week, Marion County Superior Court Judge Nelson Vinson ordered boxes at Brilliant and Pulltight impounded for investigation of double voting.

Fayette Solicitor Louis P. Moore said he petitioned Judge Strawbridge to hold the boxes for the Grand Jury. He said his office and the Grand Jury will probe the reported voting irregularities.

The Fayette Grand Jury will hold its next regular session in August. Moore said it had not been determined whether the Grand Jury will meet in an earlier special session to investigate the charges.

Moore was renominated in the primary for the solicitor's post.

THE BALDWIN County sheriff's contest was filed by Hamilton F. Hall, Fairhope, who trailed Sheriff Taylor Wilkins in official returns by 5679 to 5423.

Hall contended there were various irregularities, including the casting of illegal votes, errors in the official tabulation, birbery and intimidation.

He requested a recount of all 44 Baldwin election boxes. No date has been set for the County Democratic Committee hearing.

Wilkins was running for nomination for his fourth term as sheriff.

CHOCTAW Probate Judge Hunter Phillips contested returns in his county, which listed his opponent, Richard E. McPhearson, as winner of the nomination by a 62-vote margin.

Phillips contended there were irregularities in the handling of the absentee vote in Choctaw.

Voters urged to examine plan—

Amendment No. 1 proposes radical changes in appeals

BY HUGH SPARROW, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 12—Although the governor's race is holding the spotlight now, Alabama voters—most Capitol Hill observers agree—should take time out make close examination of Amendment No 1 on the May 6 ballot.

It is the proposal which would convert the three-member Court of Appeals into the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals.

If ratified, it would make radical changes in Alabama's long-established system of appeals.

SPARROW

The new court would, in some respects, supersede the Supreme Court. It would have final jurisdiction in all criminal appeals except those involving the death sentence. In capital cases the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court would have joint jurisdiction.

Otherwise the Supreme Court would have to take a back seat and confine itself exclusively to civil cases.

AT PRESENT Alabama has but one court of final jurisdiction.

It is the Supreme Court, with roots extending deep into Alabama's Constitutions since 1819. The Court of Appeals is a statutory court.

The Supreme Court now has jurisdiction over all criminal appeal cases where the defendant has received a sentence of 20 or more years. The Supreme Court also has jurisdiction over all civil cases in which the amount involved is in excess of $1000.

But even in the cases handled by the Court of Appeals the Supreme Court now may be petitioned to review Court of Appeals decisions under a writ of certiorari.

Those who have made a close study of the new proposal and the effect it would have in the future say the plan has a few "bugs" which could develop into real trouble if the amendment is ratified.

Which would rule?

ONE OF THEM is just which court would have jurisdiction in impeachment and disbarment cases?

The Supreme Court now has jurisdiction, but there appears to be a difference of opinion, even among members of the two courts, as to whether such proceedings are civil, criminal or quasi-criminal.

Since Alabama, under the amendment, would have two appeal courts but neither of them a court of final jurisdiction in all matters, the question is, just which court would rule as to whether impeachment and disbarment cases are civil, criminal or quasi-criminal?

Could be disadvantage

FROM the standpoint of the public generally, the new setup might work to the disadvantage of a person appealing from a lower court conviction in a criminal case involving life imprisonment or lesser penalties.

With three members of the Court of Appeals sitting, the prisoner's fate on an appeal could be decided by just two judges.

At present the Supreme Court is divided into three divisions, of four justices each. In all criminal cases except those in which the prisoner has received the death sentence the division to which the case has been referred usually decides the case.

But there is nothing in the law to prevent all seven justices from deciding a case.

In capital cases all seven justices act.

Friction grows

MOST OBSERVERS are becoming aware of an increasing feeling between members of the two courts on account of the amendment.

Supreme Court justices and Court of Appeals judges maintain a calm front but it is no longer a secret that heat is generated between them.

It is no secreet to legislators and reporters that the amendment is the Court of Appeals' project. Not only did the measure reportedly originate in the minds of the appeals court judges, but some of the judges were on hand in legislative halls and lobbies every time the measure came up.

It was passed finally on the last night of the 1957 session, and among the very last bills acted upon in the small hours after midnight.

Supreme Court members did not leave their benches to become lobbyist.

On the other hand, while the Legislature was under the impression that the high court did not object to the new plan, it is known now that no consent was ever authorized by the Supreme Court.

The fact that all seven Supreme Court members signed the recent statement in "The Alabama Lawyer" giving their reasons for opposition is regarded as indication enough to many observers of the growing feeling between the courts.

The question that follows, in the minds of observers, is would this feeling develop into sharp and lasting bitterness if the amendment is ratified?

Lawyers cautious

LAWYERS who have to practice before the two courts reportedly find themselves on the spot. They hesitate very much, it develops, in expressing an opinion either way.

About the only members of the legal profession who reportedly are on record for the amendment are the prosecutors. That, it is said, is because the new plan might speed up final decisions in criminal cases.

Admit delays

SUPREME COURT justices admit that there have been delays and an accumulation of litigation before the court.

What they don't like about it is that Court of Appeals members pushing the amendment appear to be reflecting, in a way, on the high court because of delays.

There are several factors to be considered, say experts, in understanding the reason for the delay in the Supreme Court.

During just about all the first Folsom administration, the chief justice was ill and unable to serve on the court.

He would have resigned, it was said, except for the fact that there was pressure against it from those who disliked the idea of Gov. Folsom appointing a new chief justice.

During a part of the Persons administration, too, there was another vacancy that remained unfilled about a year ago.

The court thus has been noticeably short handed much of the time during the last 10 years.

Added labor

SEVERAL YEARS AGO the Legislature passed a bill abolishing bills of exception.

Such bills were a concise statement of the main points of contention in appealed cases. They were a big help to the justices and saved them time in many instances in not having to make a full and close reading of the record.

Doing away with the necessity for filing bills of exception has been felt especially in handling an increasing number of cases such as the Western Grain, the Ingalls Iron Co., and other cases in which the records—to be read in full—were of Gargantuan proportions.

All of which adds to the labor of high court members.

Another point

ANOTHER noteworthy point about the amendment is that it would freeze all three Court of Appeals members in their new and higher offices for six years.

All three judges are up for reelection now and are unopposed. The offices they seek and the ones they would hold if the amendment is ratified, however, are different in many respects, including a much higher salary under the amendment.

Chances are that if the Court of Appeals judges were running now for the higher positions, instead of for reelection to their present offices, there would be opposition to all three.

The Negro Vote Looms Large In May

By Bob Ingram

FOR PERHAPS the first time in recent Alabama political history Negro voters are in a position to play a major role in determining who the next governor will be.

INGRAM

This fact has apparently gone unnoticed by the electorate as well as by some of the candidates. Yet simple arithmetic makes it so—the Negro bloc vote can make a challenger out of an also-ran.

With 14 candidates running and the vote split in as many directions, he who corrals the Negro vote must be reckoned with.

It is strictly a guess as to the number of registered Negro voters in the state. Estimates range from as low as 35,000 to as high as 55,000. Either figure represents a lot of votes. And it's a good bet that most Negroes registered will vote, many of them for the same man.

Rather strangely, very little has been said by the various candidates about the Negro vote and which direction it might go. While all 14 have preached segregation long and loud, none has publicly accused another of courting the Negro.

But the Negro voter has a dilemma of his own. For him it will be a case of voting for the lesser evil.

About the only recourse available to Negro leadership will be to determine which candidate has been least outspoken about maintaining segregation. Small though it might be, that appears to be the only loophole they can seek.

The Blocs May Have Formed

IT IS QUITE possible the decision has already been made as to how the Negro will mark his ballot May 6, but if so, it has been a well-kept secret.

Of the eight leading candidates for governor, at least four are obviously not in line for the Negro vote — Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Judge George C. Wallace, PSC President Jack Owen and Laurie Battle.

These four were most certainly the first to be stricken from the ballot by the Negroes as undesirable.

Patterson led a legal assault against the NAACP and also called the hand of Negroes who were boycotting white merchants in Tuskegee; Wallace has made a series of threatening gestures at any and all (the FBI included) who dared suggest integration; Owen restored the "White" and "Colored" signs in the train terminals and Battle went to Little Rock.

This reduces the field of four — Karl Harrison, Jimmy Faulkner, George Hawkins and A. W. Todd.

Of late Harrison has become increasingly outspoken on the race issue. He now opens all of his stump speeches with a reference to the fact that a portrait of Gen. Robert E. Lee hangs on the wall of his office. Harrison doesn't look like a horse for the Negroes to bet on.

And then there were three — Faulkner, Hawkins and Todd.

Of these three, Faulkner seems the least likely to win the favor of the Negro. While taking pokes at some of the other candidates as being "arm-waving demagogues" on the race question, Faulkner has nevertheless been quite firm in his declaration that "white boys and girls ain't going to school with colored boys and girls when I am governor."

Two Possibilities

DESPITE FAULKNER'S forthright stand on segregation, there might be some advantage in the Negro voters supporting him. He is certainly in far better position to be elected governor than either Todd or Hawkins, and Negroes might be willing to sacrifice in order to back a winner.

But damaging though it might be, Hawkins and Todd shape up rather clearly as the lesser evils Negroes are probably looking for.

Not that either has advocated anything short of segregation. Hawkins in fact was a co-sponsor of the School Placement Act of 1957, designed to preserve segregation.

But neither has gone overboard on the race issue. They have said segregation shall be maintained, but they've said it in fewer words than the others. Vague as it is, this might make the difference.

In addition, both are linked closely with Gov. James E. Folsom, the recipient of the bulk of the Negro vote in 1954 and again in 1956 in his unsuccessful bid for Democratic National Committeeman. In that latter race Folsom got little more than the Negro vote.

Todd owes his very political existence to Folsom, as it was the governor who pressured the State Democratic Executive Committee in appointing Todd to his present position. Hawkins has served as Folsom's floor leader in the House of Representatives.

Todd has another point in his favor in that he employed a young Negro woman to work in the egg marketing division of his department, an incident which brought an uproar from Black Belt legislators.

And finally, although neither man would dare say so publicly, both are said to be counting heavily on receiving the Negro vote.

Formula For Winning

TODD STRATEGISTS reportedly have it figured that their man could parlay 75,000 white votes and the Negro bloc into a run-off spot June 3.

Much the same thinking is going on in the minds of the Hawkins forces. This group is counting on Hawkins coming out of heavily populated Northeast Alabama with upwards of 40,000 votes, a sizable vote in Northeast Alabama where Howell Heflin is at work, and a good labor vote in Birmingham and Tuscaloosa.

This strength, coupled with the Negro vote, is what the Hawkins boosters believe may make a winning combination.

Potent though the Negro vote may be May 6, it could backfire four weeks later in the run-off, if a second primary is necessary.

There are a half-dozen voting places in Alabama — three boxes in Tuskegee, a couple in Montgomery and Birmingham and one in Ozark — which will clearly reflect how Negroes voted.

And should a candidate ride into the run-off on the Negro vote, he will have to do a lot of explaining before the June 3 vote.

The Negro vote might give the needed impetus to put a man in the run-off, but it can scarcely accomplish anything else.

Other Races, Other Run-Offs

IF A RUN-OFF is necessary in the governor's race, and every indication points to just that, the chances are good that the gubernatorial hopefuls won't be lacking company. Run-offs also seem very likely in several other state races.

It is doubtful any one candidate can muster a majority in crowded races for lieutenant governor, secretary of state, superintendent of education and possibly attorney general.

R. C. (Red) Bamberg of Uniontown is given an excellent chance of being nominated as agriculture commissioner in the first primary over his two opponents. The same holds true for Mrs. Agnes Baggett of Montgomery, in her bid for state treasurer.

Obviously no run-off will be necessary in the auditor's race, as but two candidates are in the race. This is the one race where not even the bravest of souls will hazard a guess as to the outcome.

Mrs. Mary Texas Hurt Garner of Scottsboro and John Brandon are the opponents.

Mary Tex is waging an active campaign throughout the state; Brandon has done little. But for 32 years he has done little in his campaigns except whip any and all comers.

In the five-man scrap for lieutenant governor, Sens. Albert Boutwell of Birmingham and E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa are considered the most likely run-off candidates. Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon is generally rated close behind the two front-runners.

MacDonald Gallion of Montgomery is the favorite in the attorney general's race, but a run-off here would not be a surprise. What has been surprising in many quarters has been the headway

A run-off also seems probable in the secretary of state race, late but apparently has gained considerable ground despite Folsomism and Alabama General.

A run-off also seems probable in the secretary of state race, what with six candidates in the field. To date none has displayed sufficient strength to outvote the field.

The same apparently holds true in the superintendent of education race, where three prominent educators are running. A run-off has nearly always been required in the past to decide this race, and no change appears likely this time.

Alabama Voting Today In Segregation Test

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Candidates made final appeals Monday on the eve of a Democratic primary election which may affect Alabama's future conduct in the fight to preserve segregation.

An expected record number of voters Tuesday will pick the Democratic nominees for governor, lieutenant governor, a new legislature and scores of lesser state and district offices.

Besides the 14 candidates for governor and five for lieutenant governor, the voters will choose from a long list of contenders for the 141 seats in the legislature, for attorney general, state auditor, state treasurer, secretary of state, superintendent of education, agriculture commissioner, circuit judges and solicitors, and scores of county offices.

Racial segregation has been uppermost among the campaign issues in the race for governor. One by one, the candidates have all promised to prevent integration, but each has offered his own formula.

The Negro vote could be a factor, especially in a close race. The Montgomery Improvement Assn., a Negro organization, estimated 53,000 Negroes were registered to vote a year ago. An undetermined number has been added since then.

Seeking the gubernatorial nomination are:

Former Congressman Laurie Battle of Birmingham, retired Adm. John Crommelin of Wetumpka, W. E. Dodd of Bessemer, Shearen Elebash of Montgomery, former state Sen. Jimmy Faulkner of Bay Minette, Winston Gullatte of Selma, state Rep. Karl Harrison of Columbiana, state Rep. George Hawkins of Gadsden, President Jack Owen of the Public Service Commission, Montgomery; Atty. Gen. John Patterson of Phenix City, Ralph (Shorty) Price of Louisville, Agriculture Commissioner A. W. Todd of Russellville, the Rev. Billy Walker of Pell City, and Circuit Judge George Wallace of Clayton.

Two Citizens Council leaders, state Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County and Asa Carter of Birmingham, are among the candidates for lieutenant governor.

Others seeking the nomination for the state's second highest elective office are state Sen. Albert Boutwell of Birmingham, Robert T. Butler of Montgomery and State Sen. E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa.

CD Practice To Coincide With Voting

Alabamians will have a double reminder of the responsibilities of citizenship Tuesday.

A Civil Defense practice alert opens on the same day as the state's Democratic primary election.

However, Civil Defense Director Pitt Tyson Maner said the alert won't interfere with voting.

Some observers have predicted a record turnout for Tuesday's balloting. Estimates range up to 750,000 voters. The previous record, 595,000, was set in the 1954 primary.

The Alabama Civil Defense alert is part of the national "Operation Alert — 1958" which is scheduled for May 6-7.

"Purpose of the alert," Maner said, "is to examine the readiness of the nation at local, state and national levels to meet a direct nuclear attack . . ." It will also provide training for government personnel, auxiliaries and the general public, he added.

Manner said the operation is divided into three phases: Attack, federal action and evaluation. State and local CD agencies are participating in the first phase only, he continued.

The initial phase, he said, will involve the maximum use and testing of operational survival plans and other state and local programs, and survival training will be put into effect in Alabama at the same time.

The alert will not affect "the man on the street," Maner said, and will mainly be a communications exercise.

And, he added, all personnel taking part in the alert will be excused from their duties long enough to vote.

'Operation Alert' Won't Stop Voting

MONTGOMERY (AP) — Citizenship has a doubly special meaning for Alabama residents today.

They are to cast their ballots in the State's Democratic primary election. And today is also the opening of a practical civil defense alert.

Pitt Tyson Maner, state CD director, said the alert wont interfere with voting, however.

"The man on the street" will not be affected by the alert, which will be mainly a communications exercise, Maner continued. And all CD personnel will be relieved at their duties in the operation long enough to vote.

"Operation Alert—1958," scheduled for May 6-7, is being observed in 46 of the nation's 48 states.

The Alabama activities are part of the national program.

WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE

Sparkman Tells Foreign Trade Need

"A total of 18 million Americans, or four and one-half million farm and factory workers and their families, are dependent upon foreign trade," Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala) told the state convention of the League of Women Voters of Alabama here Thursday morning in a foreign trade policy discussion.

"If foreign countries are to buy from us and keep these workers employed they must be able to sell their goods to us," he said, noting that foreign trade is vital to Alabama as well as the rest of the nation.

"Alabama over the years has been a heavy cotton producer for foreign markets and also depends upon foreign markets for about 15 per cent of her peanut output," he stated. "A few types of businesses in Alabama considerably benefited by export markets are metal, chemicals, food and kindred products, petroleum and coal, transportation equipment, machinery and fabricated products.

"Trade between nations is essential to world peace," he said, listing Canada, Japan, and the United Kingdom as our staunchest friends and best customers. Citing the relationship between Japan and the United States, Sparkman said: "It is not possible to erect tariff walls high enough to give protection against such low wages as are paid in the manufacture of Japanese textiles."

Recognizing the "fear" that American textile industries have of the impact of Japanese textiles, Sparkman pointed out that Japan in 1957 purchased 1,440,000 U.S. bales, or 21 per cent of our total cotton export—more than was produced in all Alabama during 1956 and 1957 combined.

Sparkman said Japanese officials assured him last fall that they did not want to flood our markets with cheap, shoddy goods and that they were interested in controlling the textile trade so as to provide orderly marketing.

He vigorously objected to high tariff walls as an anti-recession measure, recalling that in the past, recession had actually been deepened by high tariffs. High tariffs would also endanger the role of the United States as a world leader, according to the senator, who reminded his listeners that only last year Khrushchev said: "We declare war upon you—excuse me for using such an expression—in the peaceful field of trade."

Pointing to the Soviet bloc's economic offensive in the underdeveloped countries, Sparkman said a return to high tariffs "would make Russia the dominant power of the world.

"It seems to me that a return to the high tariff era would result in certain inevitable consequences," he observed, listing the following consequences:

1. Disastrous blow to our foreign policies, placing in jeopardy the 275 American-held foreign bases.

2. Making inevitable a prolonged and severe business depression in this country.

3. Jeopardizing the tremendous foreign business investments held by American businessmen.

4. Increasing farm surpluses and imposing further hardships on the farm economy.

5. Adding to the ranks of the unemployed.

6. Endangering the import of raw material necessary to a high living standard and to winning any future wars.

Earlier, delegates discussed items to be selected for study during the next two years.

In a vote, they chose to discuss legislation which would broaden the powers delegated to city managers as one of the items to be selected for study.

Two other items up for discussion were:

Support for legislation to strengthen enforcement of registration laws and to reduce state and county residence requirements, and study of the state finance and taxation system.

At least two of these three items will be chosen as subjects for intensive league study.

The women also displayed hats which represented the products produced in their respective areas of the state.

Peanuts, lumps of coal, bottles, metal products, and a wide variety of agricultural and industrial products adorned the hats. The hats were made as part of the League's program dealing

WOMEN VOTERS' HATS DRAW INTEREST

Special "trade" hats worn by delegates to the League of Women Voters convention here are a feature of the meeting. Mrs. J. A. Finch of Guntersville (left) extolls that area's boats, fishing, and recreation with a beach scene. Mrs. W. E. Lacy of Wetumpka (right) shows a pine bough and wood pulp for newsprint. Mrs. W. H. McDonald of Montgomery displays peanuts, syrup, fertilizer and other local products.

Don't void your ballot—

'Single shot' vote rule illegal in House race

Single-shot voting will be permitted in Jefferson or in any other county in the races for State Democratic Executive Committee posts in the May 6 Democratic primary election.

But voters in Jefferson must vote for seven—no more or no less—in the race for seven House seats from this county.

That is the interpretation of the primary election laws, and amendments to these statutes, by Probate Judge Paul Meeks.

Judge Meeks pointed out that a 1956 amendment passed by the Legislature provides for single-shot voting—that is voting for less than the eight State Democratic Executive Committee places to be filled in each of the nine congressional districts. There are a total of 72 seats on the state party governing body.

BUT THE PROBATE judge says that his interpretation of a 1957 conditional amendment applying to Jefferson balloting means that voters cannot vote for less than the seven House posts to be filled.

A total of 36 candidates are seeking the seven House seats from this county, with 20 aspirants seeking eight committee seats from this county which comprises the Ninth District.

Judge Meeks cited the original Section 361, Title 17, code of Alabama, which stated: "A ballot commonly known as a single shot shall not be counted."

Where two or more candidates are to be nominated for the same offices, the voters must express his choice for as many candidates as there are offices to be filled, and if he fails to do so, the ballot, so far as said particular office is concerned, shall not be counted and recorded, but as to the rest of the ballot, it shall be counted and recorded."

JUDGE MEEKS then cited an amendment written into the section in 1956 which stated:

"Provided, however, the provisions of the foregoing sentence shall not apply to the nomination or election of members of party executive committees nor delegates to national conventions of political parties.

"Provided further, in counties of 500,000 population or over, according to the last or any succeeding federal census, where voting machines are used, the voter may vote for fewer candidates than there are offices to be filled, if there are more qualified candidates than the number for whom the voting machine can accurately record the results.

IN SUCH EVENT, the provisions of the second sentence hereof shall not apply."

In other words, a Jefferson voter may cast his ballot for one candidate, eight candidates, or any number less than eight, for places on the state committee.

But he must vote for seven—no more or less—for the seven House posts.

OLIN BROOKS, railroad man and one of the 36 candidates for the House from Jefferson, declared that if elected he would seek to push through a bill to designate the Jefferson House seats and number them one through seven.

Repeated attempts have been made to pass such a bill in legislative sessions for many years. If this were done, candidates could qualify for a specific post, rather than run in a huddle for the seven.

HIGHEST COURTS SPLIT

2 Amendments On Ballot Tuesday

A constitutional amendment already rejected three times, and another which has Alabama's two highest courts divided as never before, will be ratified or defeated in Tuesday's election.

They were added to the ballot for the Democratic primary to save the expense of a special referendum.

Only one of the proposed constitutional changes is of statewide interest. No. 1 on the ballot, it would take all criminal jurisdiction away from the State Supreme Court and turn it over to the Court of Appeals.

Amendment No. 2, sponsored by House Speaker Rankin Fite, applies only to Marion County but has created widespread controversy in the three times it has previously been voted on, and turned down.

Both tribunals have made formal statements and the judges have spoken publicly for and against the amendment.

In a recent statement in the Alabama Lawyer, the justices on the Supreme Court warned that the change would result in chaos in Alabama courts. They foresaw the possibility that the two courts could construe the same law differently, one on a civil suit, the other on a criminal appeal.

The Court of Appeals, writing in the same publication, said chaos already exists in the state's judicial system because of what it called an overlapping jurisdiction which it said causes unnecessary delays.

Under the present law, all decisions of the Court of Appeals can be reviewed by the Supreme Court.

The lower appellate tribunal now has jurisdiction over criminal sentences of 20 years or less and civil judgments of $1,000 or smaller. Other appeals go direct to the Supreme Court.

If the amendment is ratified Tuesday, the Court of Appeals will take over all criminal jurisdiction except death sentences, and the Supreme Court will handle only civil matters.

In appeals from the death penalty, four justices on the Supreme Court would be designated to sit with the three on the Court of Appeals as a special tribunal.

The Marion County amendment would validate the provisions of a legislative act passed during the 1957 session. It seeks to give the county governing body authority to:

Acquire property and equipment to lease or sell to new industries, and become a stockholder in any concern.

Lend credit or "grant public moneys and things of value" to help new industry.

Issue bonds to finance the acquisition of industrial property.

Levy a 2 per cent property tax.

Build dams for irrigation projects or to generate hydroelectric power.

It would empower the Marion County government body to issue bonds and levy new taxes to acquire property for industrial development.

If the Marion County amendment is rejected again Tuesday, Alabama voters must act on it again. It will be resubmitted in the general election in November.

The amendment to create a Court of Criminal Appeals has produced an unprecedented split between the present Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court. All seven justices on the Supreme Court are opposed to the change; the three judges on the Court of Appeals have endorsed it.

Lawyer Asks FBI To Probe Covington Absentee Ballots

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—An attorney said he asked the FBI Monday to investigate reports that three persons whose names were listed as casting absentee ballots in Covington County have denied they have done so.

Lenior Thompson, Bay Minette, said he presented affidavits signed by the three to the FBI.

Fred Hallford, special agent in charge of the Mobile FBI office, said he had "no comment at all."

Thompson said he was representing Aubrey Potter and Delmer Potter, both of Fairhope. He said the brothers were former Covington County residents who still vote in that county.

The attorney also said he had an affadavit signed by Buddy Jackson of Covington County.

All three were listed at Andalusia as having cast absentee ballots, Thompson said, but they denied having voted prior to Tuesday's Alabama Democratic Primary.

Another affadavit signed by Mrs. Sarah Mae Bryan claimed that someone had cast an absentee ballot under the name of her husband, who died in March 1953. Thompson said one of the names on the list of absentee voters was Joseph R. Bryan, the name of Mrs. Bryan's late husband.

Register in Chancery Abner Powell confirmed at Andalusia that the four names were on the absentee voter list there as having voted. He said the ballots with signed affidavits were on file.

CONGRESSIONAL RACE

"I couldn't tell you anything about the details of any of those. I don't personally know any of the persons," Powell said. In each case, the ballot was voted by a person who identified himself and signed an affidavit, Powell said.

Thompson said the absentee voting list carried 615 names, compared with a normal 300-350.

He said he went to the FBI instead of to state authorities because a U.S. congressional race is being decided and because some matter connected with the absentee voting has passed through the mails.

George Grant of Troy and State Rep. Wilbur Nolen of Montgomery are seeking the Second District congressional post now held by Grant.

To Civil Rights Probers

Alabama Judge Closes Records

CLAYTON, Ala. — (AP) — A South Alabama judge declared Sunday that records of his court will be closed to federal civil rights investigators.

Circuit Judge George Wallace said he is uncertain whether the order can include voting records but he is "studying the possibility."

WALLACE

Voter registration is handled by a separate board whose members themselves are defined by law as judicial officers.

Wallace, probable candidate for governor in the Alabama Democratic primary this spring said he has given verbal instructions to the clerk of his court and a formal order is being prepared. His circuit, composed of Barbour, Bullock and Dale counties, has a heavy Negro population.

The judge said the new Civil Rights Commission, as a part of the executive branch of the government, has no constitutional right to "review or condemn" the actions of state courts.

"Only a higher court has such authority under our separation of powers theory of government," the statement declared.

"Any attempt by the Civil Rights Commission to collect information for such purpose would be a gross usurpation of authority by the executive branch and a direct encroachment upon the judicial branch of state government."

Wallace said any subpoena issued by the Civil Rights Commission to see the records of his court will be refused and "the legality of such subpoenas shall be tested in the courts of the land."

He said any federal agent who persists in trying to get information in violation of his order "will be treated as a contemptor having committed contempt in the presence of the court." That could mean a fine or jail sentence.

Wallace, who previously threatened to jail any FBI agent who tried to investigate jury rolls in his circuit, said the records of his court are public documents, but only to be used "for lawful purpose."

He said it would be "an illegal action" for the Civil Rights Commission to review the court records to see if the judge has denied "equal protection under the laws." Therefore, he said, the records would not be available for such use.

Wallace said his refusal to let federal agents see his court files "is not defiance, but legal resistance within the law."

He also disavowed any race-baiting intent, saying his action is deemed solely at "preserving that system of government which has made it possible for all citizens, regardless of race, creed or color, to enjoy freedom and peace."

The judge declared the civil-rights law empowers the commission to "study and collect information concerning legal developments which constitute a denial of equal protection of the law under the constitution."

THREE MORE DAYS

Counting Thursday through Saturday, February 1, there are only three more days left to pay the poll tax. Last year, an estimated 5,000 members of our group neglected to pay the ballot toll. Already poll tax payment is lagging despite the approaching deadline. Our civic and community leaders need to bestir for a dramatic climax. With the vital elections coming up in 1958, no thinking person will forfeit his right to vote through failure to pay the poll tax where it is due.

In Alabama, the poll tax is only $1.50 a year. No matter how many years one missed paying it, he can never owe more than the maximum of $3. Persons 45 years and older and certain war veterans do not have to pay the poll tax. There are twenty neighborhood centers where one can pay the vote levy. Meantime, it may be mailed to the tax collector's office, Jefferson County Courthouse, Birmingham, Alabama. The office of tax collector is making it easy, convenient, and challenging for those who owe poll tax to pay it.

Could it be said that our civic leaders have matched this service? Let us believe that they have done this. Still, it is the prime duty of the good citizen to see that his or her name gets on the voting rolls.

Remember this: time is running out for paying the poll tax. After February 1 it will be too late. Go today and pay your poll tax. Clear your name for voting so that you will be a citizen of weight at the polls. The poll tax paying campaign must triumph. Our civic leaders should have a hand in the victory by helping in the campaign. The ballot list is the citizens' honor roll in a democracy.

POLL TAX DEADLINE

The deadline for paying the poll tax so that those who currently owe it can vote in the 1958 elections, is Saturday, February 1. This newspaper for over a month has kept this information attractively before the public. It feels that it has performed its duty. Yet performance of duty is best judged by the results it gets.

How well was this newspaper able to alert, activize, arouse and stimulate the civic leadership to meet squarely the challenge of self-disfranchisement we do not know. How effective our appeals were to those who owe the poll tax not to allow themselves to become self-disfranchised, with their votes needed in the 1958 elections? What response came of our plea for a neighbor-to-neighbor campaign for paying the poll tax must await the publication of the voters' list in April.

Yet as the deadline approaches we are still on the inky firing lines urging that those who owe the poll pay it. Paying the poll tax is not merely a patriotic and civic responsibility, is a self-defense and self-interest action for those who want free, clean, progressive government. The ballot is the citizen's sharpest civic tool. Without the ballot the citizen is politically disarmed in a democracy.

The poll tax is only $1.50 a year. No maximum can not go higher than $3. Every reasonable service is being provided by the Tax Collector's Office in the Jefferson County Courthouse to assist those who want to pay their poll tax. No newspaper is strong enough to tie time down so that the deadline will not come. All it can do is to remind that the deadline, like time itself, will keep its schedule. February 1 is the deadline for paying your poll tax.

Bullock County Tax Vote Set

UNION SPRINGS, Ala., Feb. 11 (Special)—A special election has been called in Bullock County for Feb. 25 to determine if the Court of County Commissioners will be authorized to levy and collect a one-cent countywide sales tax to be used for industrial purposes.

The voters of Alabama gave Bullock County this privilege last December with the passage of amendment No. 14 to the state constitution. Following the state election a mass meeting of county citizens asked the county governing body to call the special election.

In calling the election the commissioners also appointed an industrial board of representative county citizens to administer the tax funds which will be placed in a special account for industrial purposes alone. The board, appointed for staggered terms, consists of lawyers, bankers, businessmen, farmers, and at least two women.

Little opposition is expected at the polls Feb. 25.

The county has secured one new industry, a shirt manufacturer who will employ 150-200 people. Construction on the building is expected to begin in a few weeks. It was pointed out, however, that one plant will not be sufficient to employ all the people who want jobs. Employes in the garment factory will be chiefly women. The industrial committee has contacts with other industries desiring to locate in the county if financial backing can be secured.

Jemison Warns Race To Vote In Far Reaching Address Here

"If we don't register to vote, we don't deserve to be free," thundered the Rev. T. J. Jemison of Baton Rouge, La. Wednesday night, Feb. 14 at the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church.

The Selma-born minister who is secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which sponsored 22 simultaneous double-the vote rallies in 11 Southern cities, used the subject, "The Road Ahead."

"Once we make up our minds that we are as good as anybody, no one can keep us down", the Rev. Jemison declared.

In his remarks on the occasion, the Rev. N. H. Smith, Jr. asserted that "If man would live completely, he must have the ballot... If one would be a decent citizen, he must have among other things, the ballot ..... The person who does not vote is selling himself out. He is selling out his race. He is selling out justice. He is selling out democracy."

The program was sponsored locally by the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights as a part of "The Crusade for First-Class Citizenship."

Others listed on the program included the Rev. J. C. Sanders, devotion; W. C. Patton, president of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting, the voter-registration appeal; John J. Drew, Dr. J. W. Dixon and W. E. Shortridge, the offering appeal; introduction of the guest speaker by the Rev. C. H. Parker; remarks by A. G. Gaston, Sr. and the Rev. Edward Gardner, vice-president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, remarks; and benediction by the Rev. Abraham Woods, Jr. Roy Woods served as master of ceremonies.

On Voter-Registration

There is still enough time for persons 46 years and older together with veterans exempted from the poll tax to register in time to vote in the May 6 primary. Speech-making, placard-placing, bond issue-casting do not by themselves offer enough to make volume voter-registration a reality.

The fact that less than eight per cent of the estimated 121,000 potential Negro voters have their names on the voters' list in Jefferson County represents a civic scandal. Some of it is due to ineffective voter-registration drives. Yet the heaviest blame rests upon the non-voters themselves.

The current political campaign with its emphasis on a single issue should be enough by itself to arouse interest among this talked-about group to get their names where they can talk back with the ballot. Unfortunately, that has not been the case. Obstacles do exist, like poll-selling, but they do not prevent anyone from applying for registration.

The non-voter is politically weaponless against those who would take advantage of him. He is politically voiceless and therefore is unable to make known his wants at the ballot box. The non-voter is a politically handcuffed citizen. But the non-voter has within himself the power to remove the handcuffs by presenting himself for voter-registration.

Voter-registration is a personal matter. It is one of the things a citizen himself must do, if it is to be done.

Leaders Push Voting Drive

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — With the approaching May 6 state primaries, at which time most of Alabama's political office holders will be up for election, the Negro Voter Registration leaders, in cooperation with the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting, are pushing a special drive to get all persons over 45 years of age and veterans to qualify by April 1 in order to vote on May 6.

The deadline for payment of poll tax was Feb. 1, but persons over 45 years of age are exempted from the payment and can qualify to vote by time of the election.

A special appeal to the pastors of churches and leaders of various organizations was made this week by W. C. Patton, president of the State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting.

Patton Hits Mistreatment Of Negroes In Swaying Address

By OLIVA B. BAXTER

Blasting mal-treatment of Negro citizens and other minorities in America, W. C. Patton, president and co-ordinator of the Alabama State Co-ordinating Association for Registration and Voting, compared the treatment of the southern dog and American Negro, in his 75-minute keynote address at the 16th Street Baptist Church Friday, Jan. 1. He said the dog is treated better seemingly than some Negroes.

Speaking before a capacity crowd who witnessed the 95th annual celebration of the Emancipation Day program, Mr. Patton also said, "that in the social realm and in transportaton, the Negro has had to take what was left."

He added that "most segregated times are on Sunday at the 11 o'clock services when there seems to be organized religion."

The speaker suggested that "we must all stick together or we will surely hang separtely. He asked why should'nt the churches establish or set-up credit unions, and why should'nt Negroes start a savings account with the Citizens Federal Savings and Loan Association?"

He stated that it was deplorable that out of 121,000 Negroes of voting age, only 13,000 are registered. Out of this small total only 8,000 can vote, because the other percentage failed to pay poll tax.

Mr. Patton, however, cited the the Negro has made un-paralleling progress. The Negro has a purchasing power of $15 billion; one-third per cent own their own homes; 24 per cent have civil service jobs and 221 per cent have clerical and salesmen jobs.

He made the remak that "we may falter and stumble but we cannot fail."

Mr. Patton centered his address around the subject, "The Messenger of a New Day."

The Rev. Luke Beard, pastor of of the host 16th Street Baptist Church introduced the speaker, Mr. Patton.

This program was sponsored by the Emancipation Association of Birmingham and Vicinity of which the Rev. J. L. Ware is president.

Prof. B. M Montgomery presented an award to Miss Jennie Ree Hakwins for her excellent service rendered on the program. The award was a book titled, "Teen-Agers Talk It Over... The committee along with Prof. Montgomery selected six persons to present citations to for their services above and beyond the call of duty."

They included: Attorney Arthur D. Shore, Rev. C. W. McMurray, Rev. S. H. Ravizes, pastor of New Zion Baptist Church, Bessemer; Dr. W. A. Bell, president of Miles College; Mrs. Lucinda B. Robey, principal of 42nd Street School, and Mrs. Mamie L. Foster, teacher at Rosedale High School.

Dr. Bell presided over the re-election of officers. Re-elected officers were, Rev. Ware, president; Rev. McMurray, vice-president; Rev. Beard, second vice-president; Rev. D. B. Todd, secretary; W. C. Patton, assistant secretary, Prof. Montgomery, corresponding secretary and chairman of music committee; Rev. C. H. George, treasurer and Emory O. Jackson, chairman, publicity committee.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Marie Parrish; a mixed group of Church Choirs and the Dunbar High School Chorus, the latter under the direction of Mrs. Flordia Wright.

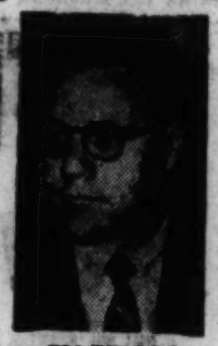
Presentation of Colors by the Boy Scout Troop No. 166 of St. James Baptist Church, David Jackson, scout master; National an them; scripture by Rev. W. P. Foley; Invocation by Dr. M. Thornton, occasion by Mrs. Wilhelmina M. Vaugh appeal by Rev. McMurray and reading of Emancipation Proclamation by Miss Jennie Ree Hawkins rounded out the program.

The Negro Vote Looms Large In May

34e Ala

By Bob Ingram

FOR PERHAPS the first time in recent Alabama political history Negro voters are in a position to play a major role in determining who the next governor will be.



INGRAM

This fact has apparently gone unnoticed by the electorate as well as by some of the candidates. Yet simple arithmetic makes it so—the Negro bloc vote can make a challenger out of an also-ran.

With 14 candidates running and the vote split in as many directions, he who corrals the Negro vote must be reckoned with.

It is strictly a guess as to the number of registered Negro voters in the state. Estimates range from as low as 35,000 to as high as 55,000. Either figure represents a lot of votes. And it's a good bet that most Negroes registered will vote, many of them for the same man.

Rather strangely, very little has been said by the various candidates about the Negro vote and which direction it might go. While all 14 have preached segregation long and loud, none has publicly accused another of courting the Negro.

But the Negro voter has a dilemma of his own. For him it will be a case of voting for the lesser evils.

About the only recourse available to Negro leadership will be to determine which candidate has been least outspoken about maintaining segregation. Small though it might be, that appears to be the only loophole they can seek.

The Blocs May Have Formed

IT IS QUITE possible the decision has already been made as to how the Negro will mark his ballot May 6, but if so, it has been a well-kept secret.

Of the eight leading candidates for governor, at least four are obviously not in line for the Negro vote — Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Judge George C. Wallace, BSC President Jack Owen and Laurie Battle.

Adventure B. 3-B

These four were most certainly the first to be stricken from the ballot by the Negroes as undesirable.

Patterson led a legal assault against the NAACP and also called the hand of Negroes who were boycotting white merchants in Tuskegee; Wallace has made a series of threatening gestures at any and all (the FBI included) who dared suggest integration; Owen restored the "White" and "Colored" signs in the train terminals and Battle went to Little Rock.

This reduces the field of four — Karl Harrison, Jimmy Faulkner, George Hawkins and A. W. Todd.

Montgomery, Ala

Of late Harrison has become increasingly outspoken on the race issue. He now opens all of his stump speeches with a reference to the fact that a portrait of Gen. Robert E. Lee hangs on the wall of his office. Harrison doesn't look like a horse for the Negroes to bet on.

And then there were three — Faulkner, Hawkins and Todd.

Of these three, Faulkner seems the least likely to win the favor of the Negro. While taking pokes at some of the other candidates as being "arm-waving demagogues" on the race question, Faulkner has nevertheless been quite firm in his declaration that "white boys and girls ain't going to school with colored boys and girls when I am governor."

Two Possibilities

DESPITE FAULKNER'S forthright stand on segregation, there might be some advantage in the Negro voters supporting him. He is certainly in far better position to be elected governor than either Todd or Hawkins, and Negroes might be willing to sacrifice in order to back a winner.

But damaging though it might be, Hawkins and Todd shape up rather clearly as the lesser evils Negroes are probably looking for.

Not that either has advocated anything short of segregation. Hawkins in fact was a co-sponsor of the School Placement Act of 1957, designed to preserve segregation.

But neither has gone overboard on the race issue. They have said segregation shall be maintained, but they've said it in fewer words than the others. Vague as it is, this might make the difference.

In addition, both are linked closely with Gov. James E. Folsom, the recipient of the bulk of the Negro vote in 1954 and again in 1956 in his unsuccessful bid for Democratic National Committeeman. In that latter race Folsom got little more than the Negro vote.

Todd owes his very political existence to Folsom, as it was the governor who pressured the State Democratic Executive Committee in appointing Todd to his present position. Hawkins has served as Folsom's floor leader in the House of Representatives.

Todd has another point in his favor in that he employed a young Negro woman to work in the egg marketing division of his department, an incident which brought an uproar from Black Belt legislators.

And finally, although neither man would dare say so publicly, both are said to be counting heavily on receiving the Negro vote.

Formula For Winning

TODD STRATEGISTS reportedly have it figured that their man could parlay 75,000 white votes and the Negro bloc into a run-off spot June 3.

Much the same thinking is going on in the minds of the Hawkins forces. This group is counting on Hawkins coming out of heavily populated Northeast Alabama with upwards of 40,000 votes, a sizable vote in Northeast Alabama where Howell Heflin is at work, and a good labor vote in Birmingham and Tuscaloosa.

This strength, coupled with the Negro vote, is what the Hawkins boosters believe may make a winning combination.

Potent though the Negro vote may be May 6, it could backfire four weeks later in the run-off, if a second primary is necessary.

There are a half-dozen voting places in Alabama — three boxes in Tuskegee, a couple in Montgomery and Birmingham and one in Ozark — which will clearly reflect how Negroes voted.

And should a candidate ride into the run-off on the Negro vote, he will have to do a lot of explaining before the June 3 vote.

The Negro vote might give the needed impetus to put a man in the run-off, but it can scarcely accomplish anything else.

Other Races, Other Run-Offs

IF A RUN-OFF is necessary in the governor's race, and every indication points to just that, the chances are good that the gubernatorial hopefuls won't be lacking company. Run-offs also seem very likely in several other state races.

It is doubtful any one candidate can muster a majority in crowded races for lieutenant governor, secretary of state, superintendent of education and possibly attorney general.

R. C. (Red) Bamberg of Uniontown is given an excellent chance of being nominated as agriculture commissioner in the first primary over his two opponents. The same holds true for Mrs. Agnes Baggett of Montgomery, in her bid for state treasurer.

Obviously no run-off will be necessary in the auditor's race, as but two candidates are in the race. This is the one race where not even the bravest of souls will hazard a guess as to the outcome.

Mrs. Mary Texas Hurt Garner of Scottsboro and John Brandon are the opponents.

Mary Tex is waging an active campaign throughout the state; Brandon has done little. But for 32 years he has done little in his campaigns except whip any and all comers.

In the five-man scrap for lieutenant governor, Sens. Albert Boutwell of Birmingham and E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa are considered the most likely run-off candidates. Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon is generally rated close behind the two front-runners.

MacDonald Gallion of Montgomery is the favorite in the attorney general's race, but a run-off here would not be a surprise. What has been surprising in many quarters has been the headway

A run-off also seems probable in the secretary of state race, late but apparently has gained considerable ground despite Folsomism and Alabama General.

A run-off also seems probable in the secretary of state race, what with six candidates in the field. To date none has displayed sufficient strength to outvote the field.

The same apparently holds true in the superintendent of education race, where three promihent educators are running. A run-off has nearly always been required in the past to decide this race, and no change appears likely this time.

Vote 'No' On Proposed Amendments

There will be on the ballot in next Tuesday's election, as citizens should know by now, two proposed amendments to Alabama's Constitution.

Proposed Amendment No. 1 would constitute the Alabama Court of Appeals into the Court of Criminal Appeals, which would have final, exclusive and irrevisable supreme appellate jurisdiction in all criminal and quasi-criminal cases of any grade. This amendment, we believe, should be defeated because it would in effect establish two supreme courts in this state and make for the development of two distinct bodies of substantive law, which could cause uncertainty, confusion and delay in litigation.

Proposed Amendment No. 2, substantially the same as proposed Amendment No. 13 which voters defeated in last December's election, would give the governing body of Marion County extensive powers to promote the development of industry without the voters of that county having the opportunity to approve or reject any development project. This amendment too should be defeated, we believe, for it is, we think, not sound democratic practice to vest such powers in a local governing body with no provision being made for a referendum on prospective projects, which could conceivably cost the taxpayers of that county considerable amounts of money.

Proposed Amendments Nos. 1 and 2 should be defeated next Tuesday by a vote of "No."

Negro bloc tops 50,000—

750,000 votes seen in primary

MONTGOMERY, May 3—Alabama Democrats will nominate candidates for governor and scores of lesser offices Tuesday.

All 14 contenders seeking the Democratic nomination for governor in the party primary have sworn to uphold the tradition of separate racial facilities.

Each candidate has offered his own formula for stopping integration.

ESTIMATES of the probable vote have run as high as 750,000, far exceeding the previous record of 595,000 in the governor's race four years ago.

Recent demands for Negro registration have intensified interest in their votes. With an estimated 53,000 Negroes eligible to vote a year ago and an undetermined number added since then, a bloc vote, if one exists, could be an important factor in the elections.

Besides a governor, the voters will choose nominees for lieutenant governor, all 141 seats in the Legislature, nine places in Congress, attorney general, state auditor, secretary of state, state treasurer, state superintendent of education, and commissioner of Agriculture.

Automatically nominated without opposition will be three justices on the state Supreme Court, three on the Court of Appeals and two members of the Public Service Commission.

The voters also will elect a new 72-member State Democratic Executive Committee, and in so doing may decide Alabama's role in the presidential election two years hence.

Loyalty oath

THE OUTCOME will hinge on whether a majority on the newly elected committee is for or against the controversial party loyalty oath.

If the pledge is retained by the incoming committee, candidates running for presidential elector in 1960 must promise in advance to support the party's presidential ticket.

NNTY-NINE of the candidates have endorsed the loyalty oath; 43 others opposed it. The remaining 28 in the race declined to reply to the questionnaire.

Many of the state and district races may be left undecided since a majority of the votes cast is necessary to win a nomination. A runoff is scheduled June 3 with the top two candidates competing in each race where no one gets a majority.

Segregation is a major issue, too, in the campaign for lieutenant governor.

Among the five candidates remaining are two who have been closely identified with white Citizens Council activity, although representing divergent factions.

State Sen. Sam Englehardt of Macon County was executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of Citizens Councils before he resigned to run. Asa E. Carter, a onetime associate of convicted Segregationist John Kasper, was connected with another council organization in North Alabama.

The other candidates for the state's second highest elective office are State Sen. Albert Boutwell, Birmingham; former State Rep. Robert T. Butler, Montgomery, and Sen. E. W. Skidmore, Tuscaloosa.

Seven of the nine Alabama members of the U. S. House of Representatives got by without opposition.

Rep. George Grant, Troy, in the Second District is defending his place again against State Rep. Wilbur Nolen, Montgomery. Rep. Albert Rains, Gadsden, seeks renomination against Gadsden Industrialist R. H. Hardin.

Other faces

THE ATTORNEY general's race has attracted more than usual interest this year, too, with accusations of Phenix City gangster activity.

McDonald Gallion, Montgomery, one of the three candidates, took part in the Patterson murder investigation four years ago as special counsel for Ex-Gov. Gordon Persons. Like John Patterson, he says the underworld is fighting him.

Two members of the Legislature, Sen. Richmond Flowers, Dothan, and Rep. Charles W. McKay Jr., Sylacauga, are the other contenders.

Although Folsom isn't running this year, his sister, Mrs. Ruby Folsom Ellis, Montgomery, is one of six candidates for secretary of state. The others are Mrs. Anne Conway, Birmingham; Mrs. Bettye Frink, Leeds; Roy T. King, Montgomery; State Rep. Pete Mathews, Ashland and Mrs. Eloise Stuart, Montgomery.

The dean of Alabama officeholders, 69-year-old State Treasurer John Brandon, is running for his ninth consecutive four-year term as a state official. His lone opponent for state auditor is Mrs. Mary Texas Hurt Garner, Montgomery, the outgoing secretary of state who is ineligible to succeed herself.

The incumbent auditor, Mrs. Agnes Baggett, is running for treasurer since she cannot serve two consecutive terms in her present office. Opposing her are R. A. Davison and Carl Griffin, Montgomery, the latter a brother of Georgia Gov. Marvin Griffin.

Grant, Nolen Near Accord On Voter League Queries

The two candidates for representative from the Second Congressional District—George Grant and Wilbur D. Nolen—have answered a questionnaire sent by the League of Women Voters on eight different issues before Congress.

Grant and Nolen were asked to indicate "favor," "oppose," or "undecided" on each of the issues. On several of the answers, a brief statement was made by one or both of the candidates as well.

The eight issues, and the two opinions:

1. Further action by the federal government to curb inflation. Grant and Nolen—favor.

2. Federal aid to school (or road) building program. Grant—favor. Nolen—"Only if state authorities have complete control and with no strings attached by Washington."

3. More coordination in dealing with water pollution problems. Grant and Nolen—favor.

4. Granting the President the power to veto single items in appropriation bills. Grant—oppose. Nolen—"Oppose, unless Congress sees fit to grant this power."

5. Continuing economic assistance to other countries. Grant—"Oppose, except in small amounts." Nolen—"I favor cutting foreign aid to a minimum commensurate with the safety and security of the United States."

6. Limiting U.S. contributions to international programs to 33 1-3 per cent of each budget. Grant—favor. Nolen—"I favor a stricter limitation than 33 1-3 per cent to international programs."

7. A permanent United Nations peace force. Grant—"Favor, with limitations." Nolen—"Favor, provided all of the nations participating bear their fair share of the financial cost."

8. Extension of the loyalty-security program to cover all federal employes. Grant and Nolen—favor.

The league requested an explanation, in 200 words or less, of any one of the eight answers from both candidates.

Grant answered on No. 4—"While I am aware that the present law does not allow a veto of single items and has allowed a custom of log rolling, it would place the South in an unfavorable position if the president had authority to veto."

Nolen answered on No. 1: "I favor immediate action to curb inflation and the high cost of living. The dollars which are earned by our farmers, businessmen and workers continue to buy less and less as each day goes by. Unless we curb the high interest rates which have been foisted on us by the Wall Street bankers, the average man in America doesn't have a chance."

Gandhi Goofed In Alabama

JAN. 30 will mark the 10th anniversary of the assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi in New Delhi.

An appraisal of the Gandhism decade that followed is offered by Dr. Homer A. Jack in a guest editorial for The Saturday Review. Dr. Jack, minister of the Unitarian Church of Evanston, Ill., will be remembered by some Montgomerians for his visit here during the bus boycott as well as his attacks, which The Advertiser has reprinted, on segregation in Chicago.

More recently, Dr. Jack has distinguished himself as a member of the sponsoring committee of pacifists—"Non-Violent Action Against Nuclear Weapons"—who will sail a 30-foot ketch, The Golden Rule, into the Pacific bomb test area in April. The idea is to display a non-violent protest to man's violence. Since the U.S., unlike some other countries, protects its screwballs and cranks, the pacifists are in no danger and they know it. They will simply be towed out of the target area by the Navy.

But Dr. Jack is nonetheless a foremost exponent of this Gandhi business. He is in fact the author of two books about the Indian leader—The Wit And Wisdom Of Gandhi and The Gandhi Reader. In his editorial for The Saturday Review, Dr. Jack reviews Gandhi's rise to greatness and discusses how he evolved satyagraha, or non-violent resistance, from the writings of Thoreau, Tolstoy and the Sermon on the Mount.

Satyagraha has not been forgotten since Gandhi's death, Dr. Jack says: "If anything, it has increasingly become a universal method for an individual, a group, or an entire people to use against such evils as racism or colonialism."

FROM this it is inevitable that Dr. Jack should point to the Montgomery bus boycott. He does:

The legacy of Gandhism beyond India's borders began before his death. One early aspect was the work of a tiny group in America named CORE (Committee Of Racial Equality). In the early 1940s, CORE adapted Gandhi's non-violent methods to the American race relations scene, especially in "opening up" restaurants and theaters to Negroes in the North. The bus boycott in Montgomery, Alabama, starting in December, 1955, was an extension of this technique to the American South, although it was quite independently started.

Although we have wearied of correcting those who have swallowed the enormous myth that non-violence, or satyagraha, licked the white folks in Montgomery, the prominence Dr. Jack has given his repetition of the common error seems to warrant another reply.

Gandhism had nothing to do with the race-mixing order which ended the bus boycott in Montgomery. When the boycott had obviously failed to achieve its purpose, Negroes filed suit in federal court as a face-saving move. They could have done this without the boycott, without once invoking the spirit of the Indian leader.

BUT as for the boycott itself—an entirely unrelated exhibition so far as the court action is concerned—this could by no stretch of the rational imagination be called passive resistance. It was extremely active resistance, employing an elaborate car pool, a fleet of shiny new station wagons—all sustained by thousands of dollars of outside money. Compare this to the naked protest of Gandhi and his followers and the analogy looks pretty silly.

The singular fact about boycott—or non-violent resistance, or satyagraha—as attempted in the South has been its failures. It failed in Montgomery; it failed in Tuskegee. In both instances, the boycott succeeded in inflicting severe economic damage. But in neither did it win any concessions. Quite the contrary: it aroused white resistance and generated animosities which had not been known since Reconstruction.

Dr. King himself has apparently lost confidence in Gandhi. He supported federal bayonets, not satyagraha, for Little Rock's nine Negro children.

Women Voters Name Officers

The annual meeting of the Montgomery League of Women Voters was held on Wednesday, at the Montgomery Country Club, Mrs. R. F. Futrell, outgoing president, presiding.

Mrs. Hal Bloom read, and it was moved and seconded, that the new local item for the Montgomery League for 1958-59 be "A Study of the Finances of the City of Montgomery." The former local item, "Health and Sanitation in Montgomery City and County," was placed on 'continuing responsibilities, with action to be taken when the occasion arose.

Mrs. H. T. Hill, nominating committee chairman, gave her committee's report for new officers.

The following officers were then elected: Mrs. M. H. Yeoman, president; Mrs. William McDonald, and Mrs. Hines Wolters, first and second vice presidents, respectively; new board members, Mesdames Ben Heninger, Ruth Nathan and William Washburn.

Mrs. Yeoman as the new president, presented Mrs. Errol Horner, National League of Women Voters representative, who spoke of the responsibility of women, and league members in particular, in government.

Rally to GOP, Lieut. Lee Tells Voters in B'ham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—In a masterful address here Thursday night, Lieut. George W. Lee, Republican whip of Memphis and Grand Commissioner of Education for the Elks, said: "Negro leadership is challenged to save the two-party system in the South by saving the Republican party."

The noted orator was addressing the fifth annual banquet of the Abraham Lincoln Republican Club in Carver Half Acre.

Pointing to the recent prayer crusade to Washington, D.C., Lieutenant Lee said: "What we need now is a freedom crusade to the Southern communities, to the court houses and to the ballot boxes."

"Negro leadership is challenged to prove to the rest of the nation that Negroes are serious about freedom and are making the ballot box the symbol of their power as Gandhi made salt the symbol of his power in his fight to achieve the great break from colonialism," he added.

CONTINUING, Mr. Lee declared: "Negro leadership is challenged to make good the pledge to double the Negro voting strength in the South by 1960. White America is waiting and watching to see if Negroes keep that pledge."

Mr. Lee challenged Negroes in the South to rally to the Republican party. He said the Republicans need new strength in Dixie because many whites deserted the party after President Eisenhower found it necessary to send troops to Little Rock, Ark.

"Let history say that Negroes did not stand on the sidelines and watch the Republican party done to death by bitter men, but that a million Negroes marched to the rescue," he concluded.

Double Voting Is Reported, Boxes Seized

HAMILTON, Ala. (AP)— Marion County Superior Court Judge Nelson Vinson today said he had ordered two ballot boxes used in Tuesday's Democratic Primary impounded for grand jury investigation.

Vinson said the action was taken after reports that some people had voted at both boxes.

He said the boxes were 18-A at Brilliant and 18-B at Pulltight. Although they are about three miles apart, the same list of voters is used for both boxes.

"I've had reports that some people voted at one box, then drove down the road and voted in another box," said Vinson.

The judge said he ordered the boxes sealed for grand jury action to determine if there had been double voting, which is a criminal offense.

Voter-registration leaders will meet

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The voter - registration leaders from Alabama's 67 counties are expected to be on hand when the Alabama State Coordinating Association For Registration Voting meets in its annual session, Sunday, April 27.

Being election year in the state where practically all the candidates have a one plank platform (the preservation of segregation) the meeting is expected to attract wide attention and a heavy turnout is also anticipated according to W. C. Patton, state president.

The colored persons threw heir hats in the ring. One "Tiger" Thompson who qualified to run for lieutenant governor withdrew from the race. The business session is scheduled to be held at the Masonic Temple and the mass meeting at the 16th Street Baptist Church.

MR. PATTON stated that several colored candidates public office holders (three of Alabama) have been invited to appear on a panel discussion at the mass meeting. The morning session is expected to deal with some of the problems in increasing registration and getting out the vote.

While the association is nonpartisan the question of candidates running for offices is expected to come up. A special committee to study the candidates, platform drew up a statement for release a few days ago.

ganization, has undertaken to offer suggestions to Negroes in marking their ballots in the election.

HOWEVER, HE said the matter of endorsing individual candidates is yet to be determined.

Lewis represents the 2nd Congressional District on the council and also is chairman of the voting and registration committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., the organization formed during the Negro bus boycott in Montgomery..

He said council members "have discussed" candidates at one meeting and probably will get together "one or two more times" before the May election.

WHETHER THEY endorse specific candidates or not, Lewis said the Negro leaders will offer what he called "general suggestions" to guide their people in supporting office seekers.

He said he believes Negroes "will vote in accord with their interests" and that there probably will be "a fairly good amount of unanimity in their voting." But, he added, "I wouldn't call it a bloc vote."

Lewis said the most recent official estimate of Alabama's Negro vote made by the MIA was 53,000 last year, but that there may be as many as 60,000 to 70,000 by now.

Unanimity seen in Negro vote in May primary

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2—(AP)—A Negro leader predicts "a fairly good amount of unanimity" among his people in voting for candidates in the May 6 Democratic primary, but he disavows the term "bloc voting."

Rufus Lewis of Montgomery disclosed at the same time that the Alabama Coordinating Council, a statewide Negro or-

Negro bloc tops 50,000—

750,000 votes seen in primary

MONTGOMERY, May 3—Alabama Democrats will nominate candidates for governor and scores of lesser offices Tuesday.

All 14 contenders seeking the Democratic nomination for governor in the party primary have sworn to uphold the tradition of separate racial facilities.

Each candidate has offered his own formula for stopping integration.

ESTIMATES of the probable vote have run as high as 750,000, far exceeding the previous record of 595,000 in the governor's race four years ago.

Recent demands for Negro registration have intensified interest in their votes. With an estimated 53,000 Negroes eligible to vote a year ago and an undetermined number added since then, a bloc vote, if one exists, could be an important factor in the elections.

Besides a governor, the voters will choose nominees for lieutenant governor, all 141 seats in the Legislature, nine places in Congress, attorney general, state auditor, secretary of state, state treasurer, state superintendent of education, and commissioner of Agriculture.

Automatically nominated without opposition will be three justices on the state Supreme Court, three on the Court of Appeals and two members of the Public Service Commission.

The voters also will elect a new 72-member State Democratic Executive Committee, and in so doing may decide Alabama's role in the presidential election two years hence.

Loyalty oath

THE OUTCOME will hinge on whether a majority on the newly elected committee is for or against the controversial party loyalty oath.

If the pledge is retained by the incoming committee, candidates running for presidential elector in 1960 must promise in advance to support the party's presidential ticket.

NNTY-NINE of the candidates have endorsed the loyalty oath; 43 others opposed it. The remaining 28 in the race declined to reply to the questionnaire.

Many of the state and district races may be left undecided, since a majority of the votes cast is necessary to win a nomination. A runoff is scheduled June 3 with the top two candidates competing in each race where no one gets a majority.

Three educators

THREE EDUCATORS are competing for the nomination for state superintendent of education—I. J. Browder, Gadsden; Floyd R. Dotson, Montgomery and Frank R. Stewart, Centre.

R. C. Bamberg, Uniontown, the runner-up for agriculture commissioner four years ago, is trying for that job again along with J. C. Gentle, Birmingham, and Crawford Roquemore, Burkville.

Illegal Voting Is Alleged In Covington

MOBILE (AP)—A Bay Minette attorney says he represents two of three persons who claim their names were erroneously listed as casting absentee ballots in Covington County.

Atty. Lenoir Thompson said yesterday, on the eve of today's Democratic primary, that he had filed an oral complaint with the FBI alleging illegal voting in Covington. The FBI declined comment.

Thompson said he gave the FBI affidavits signed by Aubrey Potter and Delmer Potter, brothers who live in Fairhope but still vote in Covington; and Buddie Jackson of Covington County. He said the three denied that they had cast absentee ballots for the primary.

The attorney said he also presented an affidavit signed by Mrs. Sarah Mae Bryan. He quoted this affidavit as saying that an absentee ballot was cast under the name of her husband, who died in 1953.

Thompson said the Covington absentee voting list has 615 names, compared with 300 - 350 in recent elections.

HARD, ACTIVE CAMPAIGN PLANNED

Engelhardt Resigns Post With Council

MONTGOMERY (UP) — State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr., one of the South's leading integrationists, announced today his resignation as executive secretary of the Alabama Assn. of White Citizens Councils, to devote his full time to campaigning for lieutenant governor.

Engelhardt said he will qualify for the state's No. 2 race in the "very near future" and leave his Citizens Council post Feb. 14 in order to be "fair to both the council and myself."

The nationally known segregation leader said he felt it would be impossible for him to continue to do an effective day-by-day job in the council office and run an active statewide race simultaneously.

"And I intend to carry my campaign for lieutenant governor into every section of Alabama and to run an extremely active race," he said.

Engelhardt said he would remain "close" to the council movement.

"I feel we have accomplished a great deal in the Citizens Council movement," he said. "The Alabama Assn. of White Citizens Councils has never been connected with any violence of any kind. Yet we have brought about a decided slackening of pressure from the north. This is indicated by the increased publicity northern newspapers are giving their own race problems.

"There's no doubt that this has come about because of our continued presentation to the world of the moral and legal right to our own way of life. We shall continue to do his in the future, and I shall work closely with Citizens Council leaders throughout the South to see that our segregated way of life is maintained."

Outcome depends on runoff—

Primary vote indicates party bolt again in '60

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, May 19—(AP)— A strong States Rights vote in Alabama's recent Democratic primary has pointed the way to a possible revolt against the national party at the 1960 [illegible].

If the States Righters come out of the June 3 runoff with a majority of the State Democratic Executive Committee—they must win only five seats out of 17—Alabama may see its electoral votes go once again to a third party candidate for President.

Defeat for the party regulars who have held control of the state committee since 1950 would mean almost certain repeal of the loyalty oath which tied Alabama to the national party in the past two presidential elections.

THE PARTY governing body elected this year will be in office when rules are made for the party primaries in 1960.

As it stands, the loyalty oath requires candidates running in the primaries to swear allegiance to the Democratic nominees in the general election. It disqualifies those who voted Republican in 1956.

If the national party loyalists retain control and keep the oath in force, candidates for presidential elector will be bound in advance to support whomever the Democrats nominate at the 1960 national convention.

But if the States Righters win the upper hand on the state committee, they are sworn to repeal the loyalty pledge. That would leave candidates for electors free, as they were in 1948, to bolt the party.

THE OATH of allegiance was written into the party rules in Alabama in 1952 to prevent a recurrence of the famed revolt of eight years before.

Alabama's 11 presidential electors in 1948 even though they ran as Democrats, rebelled against the party's racial policies and cast their ballots instead for the Thurmond-Wright States Rights ticket.

They could do it even with the loyalty oath in effect, because the courts have held that an elector is a free agent with the right to vote for anyone of his choice. But the oath binds the candidates morally to uphold it.

A FINAL OFFICIAL count of returns from the May 6 primary gave the States Righters 32 of the 72 seats on the state committee and the loyalists 23, with the remaining 17 to be decided in the runoff.

Under Alabama election procedure, if no one gets a majority of the votes cast, the top two candidates battle it out in a second primary.

Actually, while 17 seats are at stake on June 3, the loyalists are sure to pick up seven of them because no States Righters are running for the six places to be decided in the Seventh Congressional District and one in the Eighth District.

For the same reason, the States Righters will get at least one more in the Ninth District. With three seats in doubt there, four States Righters and two loyalists are running. The loyalists could win two at the most.

So, the States Righters are sure of 33 seats on the committee; the loyalists 30.

CONTROL of the party machinery will be determined, then, by runoff contests for two places in the Ninth District, five seats in the Second District and two in the Fourth.

And while the candidates are evenly divided among States Righters and loyalists, the opponents of the loyalty oath with one exception outran their rivals in the first primary.

Mathematically, they have that advantage in the runoff.

Jury Recesses Marion Probe Of Ballot Boxes

HALEYVILLE (AP)—Circuit Solicitor Wayne Weaver said Friday a grand jury investigating alleged voting irregularities was recessed until next Friday.

Ballot boxes used in the May 6 Democratic Primary election were impounded in Marion County pending action by the grand jury.

Rankin Fite, speaker of the Alabama House of Representatives, lost out to attorney John Self in the legislature race in Marion by three votes.

However, officials said there was no contest of this particular election, but that the grand jury was asked to investigate charges of [illegible] in the communities of Brilliant and Pultight, which used identical voting lists.

Weaver said the grand jury called a recess to permit further investigation.

Fayette Votes Are Impounded

FAYETTE, May 12 (AP)—Circuit Judge Cecil Strawbridge today impounded all 35 Fayette County ballot boxes used in last Tuesday's Democratic primary election.

Solicitor Louis P. Moore, who was re-nominated for the 24th Judicial Circuit in the election, said he petitioned for an order impounding all ballot boxes "containing ballots cast in the May 6 Democratic primary elections."

"Judge Strawbridge has issued an order impounding the boxes. I have taken this step because of the widespread charges of voting irregularities particularly in connection with absentee voting. This office is now conducting an investigation and all evidence obtained will be presented to the Fayette County grand jury," the solicitor said.

Strawbridge's order was the second resulting from the Democratic primary.

Last week, Marion County Superior Court Judge Nelson Vinson ordered the boxes at Brilliant and Pultight polling places impounded after hearing "reports that some people voted at one box, then drove down the road and voted in another."

Vinson said the boxes were three miles apart but used the same voting lists.

Absentee voting already under way

Absentee balloting in the June 3 Democratic primary runoff election began yesterday and will continue through May [illegible].

Voters who will be out of town election day may vote absentee, said Register in Chancery George A. Boyd.

Boyd said he is mailing absentee ballots to service men only. Other voters will have to go to the second floor at the Courthouse [illegible] to vote, Room 227.

Record vote absentee in runoff here

The absentee ballot box for Tuesday's Democratic runoff primary closed yesterday, bulging from the biggest turnout of early voters in the history of the county.

A total of 1646 voters topped the old record of 1475 set in the 1954 primary, according to George H. Boyd, register in chancery who administers the absentee ballot box.

Yesterday's closing rush brought in 321 votes, which set a one-day total for absentee balloting in the county.

BOYD POINTED out that there are 17 counties in the state that annually cast less ballots than will be counted in the absentee box here Tuesday night.

The total may be swelled, too, by ballots received from servicemen and their wives in today's mail. They are the only people permitted to vote by mail.

At least two reasons for the bulging ballot box were numerous vacations set immediately after the closing of schools today, and the fact that the Alabama Air National Guard will be on Summer maneuvers on election day, officials said.

Key Judges Explain Court Proposal To Voters

BY ALFRED McCORMACK JR.
United Press Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, May 3— Members of Alabama's two highest courts stepped off the bench today to carry the fight centering around Amendment No. 1 directly to the voters.

The amendment is one of two to be voted on in the Democratic Primary Tuesday. It would abolish the present three-member Court of Appeals and create, instead, a Criminal Court of Appeals, thereby taking away jurisdiction of any and all criminal cases from the Alabama Supreme Court.

The central figures in the battle are Supreme Court Justice Pelham J. Merrill and Presiding Judge Robert B. Harwood of the Court of Appeals. All seven justices of the Supreme Court vigorously oppose the amendment while the three Court of Appeals judges "strongly recommend" it.

Harwood and Merrill gave United Press the following reasons for their stand:

SUPREME COURT JUDGE MERRILL—"We are opposed to Amendment No. 1 because it would create two Supreme Courts with no way to reconcile the decisions of the two courts.

"It is my opinion that it would bring confusion and chaos to our judicial system. We should first experiment with our judicial system by acts of the Legislature, rather than tinkering with it by putting something permanent in the constitution."

HARWOOD

APPEALS COURT JUDGE HARWOOD — "The positive benefits flowing from the enactment of the amendment render insignificant the farfetched and hypertechnical objections which have belatedly been conjured up.

"This natural division of appeals will decrease the vicious delay now found in our overlapping, double appeals system. Even those who have pleaded guilty now can trifle with justice by dragging their cases from court to court. It would cut out the bewildering confusion from present technicalities."

The proposed change in Alabama law would recreate the State Court of Appeals as a Criminal Court of Appeals with sole jurisdiction over all criminal cases. Under the present setup, the Appelate Court takes jurisdiction in criminal appeals only when the prison sentence is 20 years or less, with more severe cases, including the death penalty, going to the Alabama Supreme Court.

The Court of Appeals now also reviews civil cases where the judgment is $1000 or less. Others go straight to the Supreme Court, in both criminal and civil action, but any decision of the lower court now can be appealed to the Supreme Court.

If the amendment passes, the Court of Appeals will have jurisdiction over all criminal appeals; the Supreme Court over all civil matters. It is this point that has brought the judges off the bench to engage in personal debates.

On specific questions concerning the amendment, the two judges told United Press:

MERRILL: "It would be possible under the amendment for a person to be imprisoned under a law which the Supreme Court had held unconstitutional. It would permit the case of a person sentenced to life imprisonment to be affirmed by a 2-1 vote, where now it requires the affirmative vote of at least four (Supreme Court) justices."

HARWOOD—"This anomalous possibility is much more likely under the present law than it would be under the amendment. Under Amendment No. 1, this possibility, which indeed is a rare one, would almost be eliminated because of the natural division of appeals between civil cases going to the Supreme Court only and criminal cases going to the Court of Appeals. It is hard to say the mere addition of more judges improves the quality of justice.

"Many appelate courts in America and other English-speaking countries operate with three justices. All in all, a 5-4, a 4-3 or a 2-1 decision is essentially one made by a single judge."

MERRILL—"While it would lighten the work load of the Criminal Court of Appeals it would add to the burden of the work of the Supreme Court. It would be like swapping 20 cases that take two days, for 20 cases that take two weeks—with the Supreme Court deciding all the two-week cases."

HARWOOD—"This matter was investigated. Record evidence from court statistics shows that the amendment will lighten the work of the Supreme Court and should speed up their decisions of civil cases.

"Whether civil or criminal, each case stands by itself. Some are more difficult than others. In criminal cases, our appelate courts must examine every word of the transcript. But in civil cases, the appelate courts need only look for briefs."

MERRILL—"Both Oklahoma and Texas have a setup like the one now proposed for Alabama. . . . but in each of those states the Legislature has the power to regulate the courts.

"Under our amendment, the Alabama Legislature would not be able to abolish the Criminal Court of Appeals even if it wanted to later. And it's interesting to note that although Oklahoma and Texas had their systems for more than 50 years, no other state in the union has seen fit to follow suit."

HARWOOD—"Oklahoma and Texas Legislatures never have had to exercise their powers.

"In Alabama, a constitutional amendment was necessary because of prior Alabama Supreme Court decisions holding they would review the Court of Appeals despite the act of the 1911 Legislature creating the Court of Appeals, which made its judgments final. Furthermore, under the proposed amendment, the Legislature still can pass clarifying laws, if experience shows the need for them."

The Right To Vote

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

When Congress was hammering out the present civil right legislation this newspaper pointed out repeatedly that narrowing its scope chiefly to voting rights by no means meant devitalizing it. People who have the vote and who exercise that right do not long encounter legal discriminations in other areas.

Does the American Negro understand this? Certainly Negro leadership does. And it is striving to get Negroes to register and to vote wherever they succeed in qualifying.

Do those who oppose changes in the old pattern of segregation appreciate this power of the ballot? Indeed they do. Mississippi's Governor J. P. Coleman wrote members of the state Legislature last year.

If the Negro can command the vote under the civil rights bill, then he can as a matter of course get everything else.

The Southern Regional Council has made a survey, documented with news stories from local newspapers, which comes to the conclusion that at least in Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia there are conscious official efforts to curb Negro registration.

Are these also designed to raise standards for white voters? The council says no, and quotes a Georgia legislator who opposed a new 30-question preregistration test, saying the NAACP would "school" the Negroes, "But who is going to school the poor white people who can't pass the test?" And it cites a plan drafted by the Georgia Democratic Executive Committee which would require would-be registrants to subscribe under oath to the tenet that the 14th Amendment was never legally adopted, hence is null and void.

Raising the qualifications of a state's whole electorate is one thing, with good arguments in its favor; administering them so as to deliberately disqualify those of a certain race is another. The right to associate or not to associate is one thing the exercise of which should be left to voluntary choice as much as possible; the right to vote is quite another.

The 15th Amendment pledges to "citizens of the United States" that this right "shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

Wayward Electorate Does The Unexpected

ALABAMA'S voters, bless their unpredictable hearts, wrote an unexpected page into the state political history Tuesday.

Adv. Montgomery Ala. 3-8

With the official tabulations still uncompleted, it is not yet discernible just what happened other than the obvious. Patterson went into orbit, Wallace likewise but not so well, and Faulkner fizzled.

Adv. Montgomery Ala. 5-11-58

One thing is apparent — the much discussed "silent vote" ceased to be silent. It went solid for Patterson. In addition there was a wholesale desertion among the Faulkner ranks in the last 10 days of the campaign. Most of these switches went to Patterson.

INGRAM

Looking at the election from a county basis, Patterson's showing is even more impressive. The most up-to-date returns show that the attorney general led his two major opponents — Wallace and Faulkner — in 49 of the 67 counties.

Wallace was the top man of the three in 16 counties, while Faulkner led in but two counties. In addition, Patterson was runner-up in 15 counties, finishing behind Wallace and Faulkner in but three counties.

Precedent Favors Patterson

AS FAR AS the runoff is concerned political precedent makes the odds 4-to-1 that Patterson will be elected. Only three times since 1900 has there been a gubernatorial runoff, and twice the man who led in the primary went on to be elected. On one occasion the runner-up in the primary forged to the top in the runoff.

The most recent gubernatorial runoff was in 1946. Gov. James Folsom led in the primary by 15,000 votes over his nearest challenger, Handy Ellis. In the runoff Folsom won going away, his margin being 59,000 votes.

The story was the same in 1934. Bibb Graves, running for a second term, led Frank Dixon by 35,000 votes. In the runoff Graves again led, this time by 22,000 votes.

Henderson Reversed Primary Results

THE ONLY other runoff for governor was in the 1914 election, and it was here that the second place man in the primary was elected in the runoff.

The combatants in that '14 race were Charles M. Henderson, former Gov. B. B. Comer, Lt. Gov. Walter Seed and Reuben F. Kolb, the latter making his fourth futile race for governor.

It was a fierce race from the outset, with the paramount question being prohibition.

Comer, the standard bearer of the Anti-Saloon League and the Drys, led in the primary. He received 48,189 votes to Henderson's total of 36,589. Henderson was the local option candidate. Comer carried 37 counties, Henderson but 14.

But in the runoff the outcome was reversed. Henderson carried 34 counties and polled 69,184 votes while Comer received but 58,857 votes, leading in 32 counties.

The 1914 election, much like that of last Tuesday, was almost beyond comprehension. The Wets were successful in electing Henderson and U. S. Senator Oscar W. Underwood. In reverse, the Drys elected Thomas E. Kilby as lieutenant governor and Frank S. White to the U. S. Senate.

Both seats in the Senate were filled in that election and both men elected came from Jefferson County, the first and only time this ever happened.

Folsomism Was A Factor

BUT RETURNING to developments more recent, another factor which may have entered into Patterson's fine showing last Tuesday was the issue of Folsomism.

Practically all the major candidates for governor were strangely silent on the subject of the current administration. The one exception was Patterson, who blasted Folsom from every stump in the state.

And judging from what happened to Folsom stalwarts in other races, it now appears that attacking Folsom was the politically expedient thing to do.

Fite And Others Defeated

IN PRACTICALLY every section of the state, Folsom supporters bit the dust. There were a few exceptions, but by and large the Folsom gang was rejected.

On the state level there were the cases of Folsom's sister, Mrs. Ruby Folsom Ellis, as well as Senator Richmond Flowers in the attorney general's race. Both were soundly trounced.

But it was in the county races where the worst beating was administered. House Speaker Rankin Fite of Marion and Senator Broughton Lamberth of Tallapoosa, Folsom's two leaders in the opposite chambers of the Legislature, both went down to defeat.

In Mobile County the voters rejected Senator Garet Van Antwerp and Rep. Otto Simon, both closely associated with the administration.

Two members of Folsom's cabinet who resigned to make races for the state Senate tasted defeat. Former Finance Director Fuller Kimbrell ran a poor third in his race, while Press Secretary Ed Brown was given a sound thrashing in his race against Montgomery Senator Vaughan Hill Robison.

Folsom's two legislative leaders went down swinging. House Speaker Fite was defeated by three votes in his bid for another term, and Lamberth was whipped in an effort to cop one of Tallapoosa County's House seats.

Worst Defeat In Cullman

THE SITUATION was perhaps worse in Folsom's home county of Cullman than anywhere. Circuit Judge Murray Battles, one-time Folsom legal advisor, was snowed under in a bid for reelection by Kenneth Griffith.

In addition, Senator Harlan G. (Mutt) Allen and Rep. Bryce C. Davis, both of Cullman, met the same fate. Allen ran last in a bid for probate judge, Davis was third in a bid for reelection.

Two Folsom figures in the Legislature from the Wiregrass ran into the same trouble. Rep. Bob Stembridge lost in Houston and Rep. George B. Mathison was last in a bid for reelection to the House from Henry.

DeKalb County's legislative delegation followed suit. Senator M. H. Moses and Rep. Hello Ferrell were both candidates in a five-man race for Ferrell's House seat. Moses came in third, Ferrell fifth.

Rep. Carol Jack Law of Wetumpka, who often as not went with Folsom, was knocked out of the legislature from Elmore. He came in third in a race for reelection.

Also going down to defeat was Senator George Yarbrough of Wedowee, a candidate for the House from Randolph. Rep. Jack Kelly of Winston, a big Folsomite, was also defeated.

Some Folsomites Won

THERE WERE several exceptions to this anti-Folsom outburst by the voters. Rep. Joe Dawkins of Montgomery, assistant floor leader for Folsom, ran a strong first in his bid for a third term. However, he faces a runoff.

Rep. Emmet Oden of Franklin was reelected without a runoff, despite his strong Folsom tendencies. Washington Rep. Emmett Wood finished second in his bid for another term, but qualified for the runoff.

Senator Neil Metcalf of Geneva, who did little without getting approval from the governor, finished second in his race for the House. He faces a runoff with Rep. Roland Faulk.

Rep. J. B. Burkhalter of Cherokee, also a wearer of the Folsom colors, led the field in a bid for the state Senate. He too faces a runoff.

Coming through to victory without a runoff was Senator Kyser Leonard of Talladega, a tried and true Folsomite. He whipped former state Senator Graham Wright in a close race.

Democracy And Gunpowder

Louis J. Halle: "Choice For Survival"

IT IS a fact that, through the range of history, the changes that have been most notable, or most revolutionary, have been those that have taken place among the martial means, the means of physical combat . . . The longbow and gunpowder not only made Don Quixote obsolete as a fighting man, they made the Amadis romances and the Poema del Cid obsolete as literature. They not only created the King of France, one man supreme over the land of France, they also created Machiavelli and the revolutionary philosophy associated with his name. You could argue quite plausibly, and surely with some validity, that gunpowder gave rise to modern democracy, which had among its most important early manifestations that of "the nation in arms."

Rights Vote Points Way To Bolt In '60

By REX THOMAS
Associated Press Staff Writer

A strong states' rights vote in Alabama's recent Democratic primary has pointed the way to a possible revolt against the national party again in 1960.

If the states righters come out of the June 3 runoff with a majority on the State Democratic Executive Committee — they must win only five seats out of 17—Alabama may see its electoral votes go once again to a third party candidate for president.

Defeat for the party regulars who have held control of the state committee since 1950 would mean almost certain repeal of the loyalty oath which tied Alabama to the national party in the past two presidential elections.

Adv. Montgomery Ala. 5-11-58

The party governing body elected this year will be in office when the rules are made for the party primaries in 1960.

Adv. Montgomery Ala.

As it stands, the loyalty oath requires candidates running in the primaries to swear allegiance to the Democratic nominees in the general election. It disqualifies those who voted Republican in 1956.

Ala.

If the national party Loyalists retain control and keep the oath in force, candidates for presidential elector will be bound in advance to support whomever the Democrats nominate at the 1960 national convention.

But if the States Righters win the upper hand on the state committee, they are sworn to repeal the loyalty pledge. That would leave candidates for elector free, as they were in 1948, to bolt the party ticket if they wished.

WRITTEN IN '48

The oath of allegiance was written into the party rules in Ala

...ance of the famed revolt of eight years before.

Alabama's 11 presidential electors in 1948, even though they ran as Democrats, rebelled against the party's racial policies and cast their ballots instead for the Thurmond-Wright States Rights ticket.

They could do it even with the loyalty oath in effect, because the courts have held that an elector is a free agent with the right to vote for anyone of his choice. But the oath binds the candidates morally to uphold it.

FINAL COUNT

A final official count of returns from the May 6 primary gave the States Righters 32 of the 72 seats on the state committee and the Loyalists 23, with the remaining 17 to be decided in the runoff.

Under Alabama election procedure, if no one gets a majority of the votes cast, the two top candidates battle it out in a second primary.

Actually, while 17 seats are at stake on June 3, the Loyalists are sure to pick up seven of them because no States Righters are running for the six places to be decided in the Seventh Congressional District and one in the Eighth District.

SURE OF 33

For the same reason, the States Righters will get at least one more in the Ninth District. With three seats in doubt there, four States Righters and two Loyalists are running. The Loyalists could win two at the most.

So, the States Righters are sure of 33 seats on the committee; the Loyalists 30.

Control of the party machinery will be determined, then, by runoff contests for two places in the Ninth District, five seats in the Second District and two in the Fourth.

And while the candidates are evenly divided among States Righters and Loyalists, the opponents of the loyalty oath with one exception outran their rivals in the first primary.

Mathematically, they have that advantage in the runoff.

Ballot Boxes Face Probe In Marshall

GUNTERSVILLE (AP)—Marshall County ballot boxes used in the May 6 Democratic primary election were ordered impounded Friday following charges of voting irregularities.

Circuit Judge J. S. Stone issued the order impounding the ballot boxes at the request of Solicitor John W. Brown of Boaz.

Brown said a special session of the grand jury will hear the complaints June 2.

The solicitor said no particular race is affected in the complaints, which are general.

There were heated campaigns in the races for sheriff, probate judge, circuit judge and circuit clerk in Marshal County.

Stone, who issued the order impounding the boxes, was defeated. H. H. Conway and Edward Neal Scruggs are in a runoff for circuit judge in the June 3 primary election.

Sheriff L. P. Dickson did not run for reelection, but there were six other candidates seeking this job and six seeking the position as probate judge.

"I think things will quiet down after we present our evidence to the grand jury," said Brown.

Voters Set New Record In County

Montgomery County voters went to the polls in record numbers last Tuesday to cast their ballots in the gubernatorial, other statewide and local races.

A comparison of the total votes cast in Tuesday's Democratic primary with the 1954 primary which broke all previous records shows that 22,951 citizens voted in the gubernatorial race this year—about 2,600 more than the 20,355 who voted in 1954.

Leading local race in the vote gathering category this year was the probate judge's race in which a total of 11,648 votes were cast. This was only 1,305 less votes than those cast in the gubernatorial race.

In 1954 the top polling local race was the four - man race for sheriff in which Addie Mosely polled 8,429 votes to lead the ticket but lost in the runoff to Mac Sim Butler who netted 5,208 votes in the primary. Third that year with 4,473 votes was John Daniel. A total of 19,715 votes were cast in that race.

Five of the candidates for the legislature this year also appeared on the 1954 ballot. They were Joe Dawkins, Ramon Farnell, O. J. (Joe) Goodwyn, J. Paul Pitts, and H. Paton Bellomy.

Three of the candidates, Goodwyn, Farnell and Pitts were fighting for the same seat—No. 3. Goodwyn who led Farnell by only 125 votes in the primary won in the runoff.

Tightest race four years ago and one of the most bitterly fought of recent times was that for tax assessor. Mrs. Louise Champion, then a clerk in the office, defeated incumbent Dave Crosland by only 110 votes. The final count was Champion 9,079 and Crosland 8,969.

County 'Freezes' Absentee Box

Grand Jury To Check Covington Claims

ANDALUSIA, May 13 (U.P.)—Circuit Judge Bowen Simmons today ordered the Covington County absentee ballot box in last Tuesday's Democratic primary impounded for investigation.

It was the third Alabama county in five days to have ballot boxes impounded as the result of alleged election irregularities.

Simmons ordered the ballots held for investigation "so that the next grand jury of Covington County may have the opportunity to investigate an irregularities which may have taken place."

Probate Judge Hiram J. Brogden, a candidate for re-election immediately issued a statement calling on Simmons to summon a grand jury into session immediately.

"I am making no accusations against anyone," Brogden said, "but the investigation should be now, not later. The subject we are concerned with is more important than any candidate or candidates in the election."

Last week, Lenoir Thompson, Bay Minette attorney, announced he had affadavits from four Covington County citizens stating that votes had been cast illegally in their names in the absentee box. Thompson said he had asked for an FBI investigation but the federal agency "has taken no action to intervene in the election."

Brogden has been the probate judge of Covington County for 36 years. He now is engaged in a runoff election with Mayor Leland Enzor of Andalusia.

Yesterday, all Fayette County ballot boxes from the Democratic primary were impounded for investigation of alleged voting irregularities.

Circuit Judge Cecil Strawbridge impounded the county's 34 boxes on a petition by Solicitor Louis P. Moore who was renominated for the 24th Judicial Circuit in the primary.

Moore said his office and the county grand jury will investigate reports of vote buying, double voting and absentee voting by unauthorized persons.

Vote Probe Jury Order Withdrawn

ANDALUSIA (AP) — Circuit Judge Bowen Simmons has withdrawn an order to convene a special grand jury to investigate alleged absentee voting irregularities in Covington County in the May 6 Primary.

Simmons had previously called a special session for July 7 after impounding the county's absentee boxes.

In withdrawing the grand jury order, Simmons said:

"It appears there is no imperative and compelling necessity for a special session of the grand jury that was ordered as a precautionary consideration in the light of potential election violations."

He said that the regular grand jury due to convene in August or September can hear any complaints of election violations. Simmons added that the expense of a special session does not appear warranted.

A Bay Minette attorney, Lenoir Thompson, had charged before the primary that three persons whose names were listed as casting absentee votes denied doing so. Thompson asked the FBI to investigate the reports. An FBI spokesman at Mobile declined comment.

Vote Fraud Issue Raised By Lamberth

An administration leader in the Alabama Senate said Saturday he expects to bring election fraud charges against several Alexander City voting officials in the May 6 Primary.

Broughton Lamberth, who was defeated in his bid for the Tallapoosa County House seat now held by Rep. Charles C. Adams, said he doesn't intend to contest the outcome of the race.

"I am going to bring a suit against the officers in charge of Beat 2, Box 2 in Alexander City," he said, "because I know that at least six relatives voted for me and officials counted me out entirely."

Lamberth said this box, the home voting place for Adams, was counted as follows: Adams 276; Lawton A. Baker, 18; Lamberth, 0.

The official canvass of voting in the May primary showed that Adams won renomination to a four-year term with 4,996 votes to 1,538 for Baker and 2,315 for Lamberth.

"I know positively that my three brothers and their wives voted for me in this box," he said. "Others have told me that they voted for me also, but for some reason, their votes weren't accounted for."

Lamberth said he plans to bring the suit against the three beat managers, James O. Mann, Emerson Foy, and Alton Black, all of Alexander City. None of the three could be contacted Saturday.

He said the two clerks assigned to the voting place, Forrest Tate and R. W. Worthy, said they voted for him also, and were at a loss to explain the vote count.

Lamberth said his three brothers, Edwin J. Lamberth Jr., Dr. Wade C. Lamberth and O. Walls Lamberth and their wives, were upset because their votes for him were not counted.

Lamberth, a former state welfare director, has served as Senate floor leader for Gov. James E. Folsom during both of his administrations.

Looking For The Civil Rights Board?

Sweeping constitutional changes intended to bar Negroes from registering as voters have been approved and enacted into law by the legislatures of a number of Southern states. This is especially true in Alabama, Georgia, and Mississippi where the officials have renewed their efforts to oppose the 1957 Civil Rights Act.

Alabama's cumulative poll tax law which was repudiated and set aside by the voters in 1953, has been revived by the legislature under the guise of preserving segregation. A Circuit Judge has urged local law-enforcement officers to refuse to cooperate with Federal authorities in any investigations of civil rights infractions.

Gov. J. P. Coleman of Mississippi has told many a mass meeting of segregationists throughout Dixie that the South "can nullify the Civil Rights legislation." Acting upon his counsel, some Southern communities have proceeded to do just that.

In order to check growing Negro political strength, the Alabama legislature last June, gerrymandered Tuskegee's city limits. It cut the town's area in half, redrew its boundaies, and in the process thrust out the town about 410 of the community's 420 Negro voters.

Before the gerrymander, Tuskegee had 1,315 whites and 5,397 Negroes, but the registered white voters outnumbered their Negro counterparts by about 200. The legislature's idea, of course, was to prevent Tuskegee's Negroes from registering enough voters to gain control of the local government.

These developments provide a broad field of investigations for the Civil Rights Commission. But the Commission has been put in a deep freeze, and by the time it thaws out much irreparable damage will have been done. Money appropriated for its operation will not be available until after July1. Though an executive director to run the Commission has been selected and confirmed, he has no staff and at present receives no salary. He needs field investigators, research workers, analysts and a corps of legal experts on state and Federal laws. The staff should be at work now if Southern Negroes are to be protected in the exercise of their voting rights in the fall elections.

Elmore Vote Fraud Case Dropped; Recount Today

WETUMPKA (Special) — A hearing on the contested election for Elmore County's Place No. 1 in the Legislature ended Wednesday after the contestant withdrew vote fraud charges and the two candidates agreed to an official recount of the ballots.

Subcommittee of the state Democratic Executive Committee found at the conclusion of its hearing Wednesday that "there was no fraud or misconduct on the part of anyone in connection with the runoff primary" in Elmore.

The hearing resulted from a contest of the election and charges of irregularities by candidate Leonard Johnston who trailed by one vote the declared winner, John Alfred Howle; the official tally was 3,494-3,495.

The subcommittee, headed by Floyd Ansley of Birmingham, announced that "by agreement of all parties...the committee will recount all votes cast" for the legislative post. Counting of the votes is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Thursday in the Elmore County Courthouse where the hearing was held.

The group, in its written statement, declared that all ballots in the election boxes would be counted as valid "except that any ballot shown to be void on its face will not be counted." The committee "shall be the sole judge as to the validity of the..... individual ballots," the statement said.

Upon completion of the count, the subcommittee will announce the results and declare the candidate with the most votes as the "legal nominee of the Democratic Party."

Before the subcommittee announced its findings in the case, a written statement by Johnston was read at the hearing. Johnston said he "publicly withdraws ... and all charges made in connection with the contest and does withdraw all insinuations and accusations" which may have reflected on the integrity and honesty of Carol Jack Law and Tarvis Law.

Johnston had charged in his contest papers filed with state democratic chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper that vote-buying, intimidation or "other misconduct" prevented a fair election. He had charged that Jack Law, incumbent Place No. 1 legislator, and his brother Tarvis Law served illegally as election officials.

LEGAL ACTION WITHHELD

In his statement Wednesday Johnston withdrew "all grounds for contest" except the demand for a vote recount.

Chairman Ansley said the Law brothers has entered an agreement with Johnston, pledging they would take no legal action in regard to possible libel charges.

The hearing had been stalled most of the day by conferences between the opposing sides on proposals for agreement. The final snag was removed when the Laws agreed not to file libel charges against Johnston for his accusations, it was reported.

FOUR CHOSEN

The candidates were allowed to choose two men each to represent them in the recount. Johnston selected the Rev. Hugh McClure and Mayor Mac W. Freeman Jr. Howle named Joe Kelly and Max Austin to represent him.

Freeman had testified earlier Wednesday that results of the courthouse box were generally known before the box was turned in to him. Freeman, also chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, said he heard "some time before the box was turned in," that Howle would receive 35 more votes than his opponent.

D. L. Conley, a radio station engineer, testified he heard the results of the voting in the courthouse box "about 45 minutes to an hour before the box was turned in."

Marshall Rounding Up 11 Indicted In Vote Probe

GUNTERSVILLE, June 20 (UPI)—Marshall County authorities today launched a roundup of 11 persons indicted by the grand jury which investigated alleged voting irregularities in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Charged with "altering or changing ballots" were John Sorter, 67; his son, Frank, 42, D. Witworth, 74; Walter A. Parker, 51; and Herman Hyatt, 48.

Parker and R. B. Johnson, 27, were charged with allegedly being intoxicated at the polls.

The Sorters, Witworth and Hyatt were released under $3500 bonds; Parker under $4000 bond, and Johnson under $500 bond.

The men were election officials at the Crossroads Box in the May 6 primary and the June 3 runoff election. However, the indictments pertain only to the primary.

The Marshall County grand jury returned the indictments after being called into session by Circuit Judge J. S. Stone upon the request of Solicitor John Brown.

Grand Jury Foreman R. T. Williams, who announced the indictments yesterday, said the jury found evidence of "serious irregularities occurred in practically every voting box" in the county.

The grand jury recessed yesterday until Aug. 5 when it will renew its investigation. Williams said the jury interrupted its probe so a trained investigator could be obtained to aid in the investigation.

Democratic subcommittee completed one phase of its probe today.

The witnesses gave substantially the same testimony as approximately 115 others in sessions last week and this week. That was that numerous absentee ballots were cast by persons not qualified, and that there had been some vote selling in the May 6 party primary.

THE THREE-MAN subcommittee appointed by State Democratic Chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper is scheduled to start taking testimony at Mobile Monday concerning absentee voting by former Choctaw County residents now living in that area.

The hearing is on an appeal to the state committee of a county committee ruling which voided the primary nomination for probate judge.

The county committee had declared Richard E. McPhearson of Silas the winner over incumbent Probate Judge Hunter Phillips on the basis of the canvass which gave McPhearson 2140 votes to 2078 for Phillips.

PHILLIPS contested and charged fraud in the handling of the absentee box. McPhearson then filed a cross-contest in which he contended there was fraud and misconduct in handling of the county's other 35 boxes.

The county committee voted May 28 to vacate the nomination and call a new primary. McPhearson appealed that decision, and Mayhall named the subcommittee, headed by John Petree Jr. of Jasper, to hear the appeal.

Vote Probe Ends In 11 Indictments

Many Irregularities Found In Marshall

Special to The Post-Herald

GUNTERSVILLE, June 19 — Eleven secret indictments were returned this after noon and the Marshall County Grand Jury reported that it had found "serious irregularities" occurring in practically every voting box in the county at the May 6 Democratic primary.

The jury was convened June 2 the day before the Democratic runoff election, to look into allegations of voting irregularities. It had been in session most of the time since, hearing dozens of witnesses.

Grand Jury Foreman R. T. Williams said the jury had requested the assistance of trained investigators from every department of the state known to have such help, but had been consistently refused assistance.

Earlier the attorney general's office was known to have declined to send an investigator to Marshall, on the policy of staying out of local situations.

Apparently the jury now plans to obtain help from some other source.

Circuit Judge Stuart Stone allowed the jury to recess today until Aug. 5, to resume its probe then with the help of trained investigators.

Names of the persons mentioned in the 11 true bills were not made public imediately.

The jury had examined some 97 witnesses before making its report today.

Foreman Williams said the jurymen believe "from evidence presented to us that serious irregularities occurred in practically every voting box in the county in the May 6, 1958, election."

Judge Stone, who was defeated in the May 6 Democratic voting, called the grand jury to session at the request of Solicitor John W. Brown, after all ballot boxes used in the election were impounded.

The solicitor said 153 challenged votes were cast during the May 6 election, the highest number ever recorded in the county.

The investigation stems from a contest of the nomination for probate judge of Choctaw. The county committee later voided the nomination and its decision was appealed to the state Democratic Executive Committee.

The subcommittee presently is seeking to determine if a large number of Mobile area residents who formerly lived in Choctaw are qualified to vote in the latter county. About 150 witnesses have been supoenaed for this phase of the investigation.

The subcommittee had questioned about 130 witnesses at Butler, Choctaw County seat, before moving its hearing to Mobile Monday.

Chairman John Petree Jr., a Jasper attorney, said it was easier for the subcommittee to come to Mobile to question the absentee voters than to have them come to Butler, 100 miles north of Mobile.

The group expects to return to Butler for a resumption of the hearing there after completing its questioning of Mobile area witnesses.

The Choctaw County Democratic Committee originally named Richard E. McPhearson of Silas as winner over incumbent Probate Judge Hunter Phillips by a 2,140-2,078 margin in the May 6 party primary.

Phillips contested and charged fraud in handling of the absentee box. McPhearson filed a cross-contest in which he claimed there was fraud and misconduct in handling of the county's other 35 boxes.

The county committee voted to void the nomination and call a new primary. McPhearson appealed the ruling to the state committee.

Federal commission blasted by Patterson

BY TRUDY CARGILE
News staff writer

SELMA, Ala., Oct. 2—A member of the federal Civil Rights Commission "came to Montgomery to get information from the white people" he questioned while in Montgomery, Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Democratic nominee for governor, told an audience of [illegible] here last night at a meeting of the Dallas County White Citizens Council.

"AS FAR AS I know, he got no information out of the white people. The last I heard, he left for Macon. I don't know whether he got any information out of the white people over there or not," he said. Then spotting a Macon Countian in the audience, added, "I see Sen. Sam Englehardt smiling."

Englehardt, for a long time chairman of the state Citizen's Council group, was one of some [illegible] state lawmakers in the crowd at Memorial Coliseum.

Patterson blasted the Civil Rights Commission as a "Gestapo" of the federal government whose job it is to "peep over the shoulders" of registrars, in a frontal attack against local government and state rights in an effort to get votes for the Republican party in the South.

Patterson urged the white people of Alabama go to the polls in overwhelming numbers to offset recent moves by the NAACP to register all eligible Negroes.

Patterson pointed out that the NAACP has concentrated more on registration recently than on its earlier tactics of litigation. This they are doing with the help of the federal government and the Civil Rights Commission, he said.

The Democratic governor-nominee expressed concern over the large number of white persons in the state who are not registered voters.

"We've got to turn out and show the Republicans how we feel about their sending troops to Little Rock. We've got to stick together and back public officials to the man all the way," he declared.

State Drops Vote Charge At Fayette

FAYETTE, Aug. 28 (UPI) — The state nol prossed vote fraud charges against five of 10 defendants after the first one to be tried won acquittal, Circuit Solicitor Lewis P. Moore said today.

Four had pleaded guilty to counts returned as the result of a grand jury investigation of Democratic Primary voting but Rural Mail Carrier Earl Cannon of Berry was found innocent yesterday after a Fayette County Circuit Court deliberated only 20 minutes.

Moore then asked that the cases against Mrs. Nell Earnest, Winfield; Mrs. Mamie Holt, Winfield; James Black, Fayette, Rt. 3; William Edgar Gray, Berry, and Glenn Ballard, Winfield, be dismissed. Judge Cecil Strawbridge complied.

The 10 persons were indicted on a total of 37 counts after the grand jury conducted an intensive investigation of reporting voting irregularities, particularly in the absentee box.

Cannon was tried on a charge that he illegally helped a Negro to cast his ballot during the May 6 primary.

Those pleading guilty to the charges included Mrs. Betty Barnes, wife of Mayor Garland Barnes of Berry; Riley Sparks, Mrs. Loyal Collins and Mrs. Mildred Simpson, all of Berry. They were fined $100 each.

Civil Rights Inquiry Opens In Alabama

Washington Confirms Report Negroes Questioned

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 12. (UPI)—A Negro leader entrusted with aiding members of his race to become registered voters reported Friday Federal investigators have questioned "two or three" Negroes denied registration here.

Sources in Washington confirmed the report.

Rufus Lewis, chairman of the voting committee of the Negro Montgomery Improvement Association, said Federal agents questioned the Negroes "about three weeks ago."

Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Democratic nominee for Governor, broadly indicated he might arrest any Federal authorities investigating alleged infringement of Negro voting rights in Alabama. The attorney general made it clear he would consider any probes of Negro vote registration "interference with state laws."

Reliable sources in Washington confirmed investigators for the Civil Rights Commission are conducting an investigation in Alabama.

Youths In Tuskegee Learn Of Voting Requirements

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE— Sixteen young college people of Tuskegee, home from school for their vacations, took time out to become acquainted with the Alabama voter registration laws during the month of August. Most of these young people, all in their very early 20s, are graduates. Many of them are resuming their education this fall.

While the young people themselves provided the initiative, the Voter Franchise Committee of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. made available its personnel, facilities and materials in order that these youths may become better informed of their civic duties and responsibilities. The Zeta Sigma Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, through its Social Action Committee, assisted the Voter Franchise Committee in the counselling of these youths.

All of the young people were eager and anxious to demonstrate their interest in the civic improvement of Macon County, by first becoming a voter, appeared before the Macon County Board of Registrars and made application for registration during the month of August.

C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn., expressed his pleasure with the demonstration of initiative by the young people of Tuskegee and Macon County in their desire to implement their college-obtained education by becoming registered voters.

Balloting may shatter all previous records

BY FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

Heavy voting was reported from virtually all sections of the state as well as in Jefferson County today as Alabamians went to the polls to choose nominees for governor, lieutenant governor, a new Legislature and decide other races for state and county offices.

Drippy skies and wet fields from widespread heavy rains freed farmers to turn out in unusualy large numbers to increase the ballot total predicted to reach 700,000.

SOME THOUGHT it might go as high as 750,000, as compared with the previous record of 595,000 voted in the governor's race four years ago.

Early reports showed a huge outpouring of voters in Marshall County and other ballot-rich Sand Mountain and North Alabama areas. And heavy voting also was reported in downstate sections.

Gus Thompson, county election committee clerk, said 100 votes were cast at the Jefferson Courthouse box (Precinct 21, Box 9) the first hour after polls opened at 7 a.m. in this county.

THIS TENDED to indicate a record vote inn this particular box, with balloting brisk in other city and county boxes in Jefferson.

Sheriff Holt McDowell said reports to his office showed a big voter turnout in suburban and outlying regions, as well as in Birmingham.

It was the first time in history that boxes in Jefferson or any other county in Alabama had opened at 7 a.m.—one hour earlier than the usual time.

BOXES WILL REMAIN open until 7 p.m. throughout the county, with 523 voting machines—almost twice the number in use here four years ago—in operation.

Voting booths did not open until 8 a.m. in other sections of Alabama. They will close in rural areas at 5 p.m., but will remain open in most other cities and towns until 6 p.m.

Also at stake was control of the 72-member State Democratic Executive Committee, with opposing slates of candidates lined up in most of the nine congressional districts. At issue was the controversial Democratic loyalty oath for candidates. Eight committee members are to be elected form each district.

MOST OF THE 14 gubernatorial candidates wound up final night campaigning with TV speeches and "open house" receptions in their headquarters offices, with Judge George Wallace addressing a rally in Montgomery City Auditorium.

Laurie Battle, former Ninth District congressman, and Mrs. Battle voted early at the Shades Valley High School box. And the other candidates, several of whom were in Birmingham last night, fanned out to their respective home bailiwicks to vast their ballots.

Delivering final vote appeals on television here were Jack Owen, Karl Harrison, John Patterson, A. W. Todd, Jimmy Faulkner, George Hawkins and Battle, with Wallace's Montgomery speech carried over a statewide TV network.

THE OTHER gubernatorial aspirants who busied themselves elsewhere in the final hours of vote-seeking were Shearen Elebash, John Crommelin, the Rev. Billy Wilkes, Winston Gullatte, Ralph Price and W. E. Dodd.

All 14 candidates for governor stood solidly for maintaining segregation, with some more forceful than others in stressing this issue.

The races for lieutenant governor, attorney general and state superintendent of education also drew much public attention during the long, noisy campaigns leading up to today's Democratic primary election.

And special attention was centered in the hotly-fought race between former State Rep. Larry Dumas and John A. Jenkins, both Birmingham attorneys, for state senator from Jefferson County.

Aspirants in the five-man lieutenant governor's race were State Sens. Albert Boutwell of Jefferson, E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa and Sam Engelhardt of Macon, former State Rep. Robert T. Butler of Clay and Asa E. Carter of Birmingham.

RUNOFFS WERE expected between the two candidates polling most votes in both the race for governor and lieutenant governor. A runoff primary will be held June 3.

Runoffs will be necessary in any race in which no candidate receives a majority.

In the race for attorney general were former Chief Asst. Atty. Gen. MacDonald Gallion of Montgomery, State Rep. Charles W. McKay Jr. of Sylacauga and State Sen. Richmond Flowers of Dothan.

Three candidates for state school superintendent were I. J. Browder of Gadsden, Frank R. Stewart of Centre and Floyd D. Dotson of Montgomery.

OTHER STATEWIDE RACES:

State auditor—John Brandon, present state treasurer, and Mrs. Mary Texas Hurt Garner, now secretary of state.

Secretary of state—Mrs. Anne L. Conway and Mrs. Bettye Frink, both of Birmingham; State Rep. Pete Mathews of Clay, Mrs. Eloise Stuart, Mrs. Ruby Folsom Ellis and Roy T. King, all of Montgomery.

State treasurer—Mrs. Agnes Baggett, present state auditor; R. A. Davison and Carl Griffin, all of Montgomery.

State commissioner of agriculture and industries—R. C. Bamberg of Uniontown; J. C. Gentle of Birmingham, and Crawford Roquemore of Montgomery.

ONLY TWO of Alabama's nine congressmen were opposed for renomination.

Rep. Albert Rains of Gadsden, a veteran congressman, had R. H. Hardin, Gadsden industrialist running against him in the Fifth District.

And Rep. George Grant of Troy, likewise a veteran House member, was opposed by State Rep. Wilbur Nolen of Montgomery.

Aside from the two-man State Senate race in Jefferson, 36 candidates were seeking nomination to the seven House seats from this county.

If none polls a majority, the 14 getting most votes today will run it off four weeks later.

VOTERS STATEWIDE also balloted today on two constitutional amendments.

No. 1 would rearrange criminal appeals procedure to make the present Alabama Court of Appeals the Court of Criminal Appeals, thus taking over jurisdiction of criminal cases from the Alabama Supreme Court. All seven justices of the Supreme Court oppose this, with the three Court of Appeals judges favoring it.

No. 2 is a local amendment affecting only Marion County.

Amendments not omitted on machines

The two Constitutional Amendments were NOT omitted from the face of voting machines.

A number of persons called The News to say they couldn't find the amendments.

They will be found at the upper right section of the machine.

Judge To Decide On Legality Of Coosa Redistricting Law

ROCKFORD, Ala., Jan. 29—Circuit Judge A. L. Hardegree will be called on tomorrow to decide the constitutionality of a bill passed by the Legislature in 1957 which proposed to re-district Coosa County.

Two residents of Coosa — Tal MacGrady and Luther Ferguson—are contesting the measure, claiming it was not advertised before being passed as is required by state law of all local bills.

The controversy has been enlivened by the projection of the racial issue into the local fight.

State Sen. Staten Tate of Goodwater said today the commissioners in redistricting the county had drawn up one district which was predominantly Negro.

He said the intent of the bill was merely to change the manner in which commissioners are elected. They now run from the four districts, but are elected by countywide votes. Under the new bill commissioners would be elected by the voters of the district they represent.

But Tate said the commissioners went further, and also rearranged the districts. He now favors having the bill tossed out.

"I passed the bill in the Senate when it came to me, but since the commissioners have changed the districts I admit my mistake and am proud to have a chance to apologize to the county for my mistake," Tate said.

He said he had requested an advisory ruling from the attorney general on the bill in which the measure was held invalid.

"I am hoping Judge Hardegree will also rule the measure illegal, just as the attorney general did," Tate added.

Rep. Charles Franklin of Goodwater, the original sponsor of the bill, disagreed with Tate on the racial effect of the bill.

"We just wanted to change the system of electing our commissioners. There are 65 counties in the state which elect them by district, so it must be a good thing."

Franklin also belittled the controversy which Tate insinuated had erupted over the bill.

"Nobody is much interested in it, just a couple of folks," Franklin said. "All we can do is wait and see what the judge decides."

Three Montgomery Negroes Fined $25 For Violation Of Election Laws

Three Montgomery Negroes charged with violation of a state election statute were fined $25 and costs each in Recorder's Court Friday.

Negro attorney Fred Gray, who represented the two men and one woman, said he would appeal the decision of the recorder, Judge D. Eugene Loe.

Appeal bonds were set in the amount of $100 each.

The defendants, held in violation of Title 17, Section 144, of the state code were Rufus A. Lewis, 801 Bolivia Ave.; Fannie Allen Neal, 2662 Rutland St., and A. H. Huffman, 801 Union St.

LOITERING

They were arrested Tuesday during voting in the state Democratic primary.

A fourth Negro, Herman Powell, was also arrested Tuesday near a polling place and charged with loitering. His case was nol prossed by Judge Loe after it was established that Powell had not been warned to move on by a police officer prior to his arrest.

The section of the code the Negroes are charged with violating forbids all persons, except election officials and those engaged in voting, from being within 30 feet of a polling place.

CHECKING NAMES

Lewis was arrested near the courthouse precinct, Huffman at City Hall and the Neil woman at Hamner Hall.

Each said they were checking off the names of Negro voters from a list of all qualified Negro voters in the particular precincts.

They said they did not hand the voters any marked ballots or suggest to them how they should vote.

Gray raised the question of what the law means by a "polling place." None of the defendants were within 30 feet of a voting machine, he said.

If the building itself is legally the polling place, he said, all officials at City Hall and the courthouse were in violation of the law.

But Judge Loe held that this would not be the case unless the officials were engaged in some sort of election activity, such as the defendants admittedly were.

Primary vote turns many out of office

MONTGOMERY, May 16—(AP)—The May 6 Democratic primary apparently found Alabama voters in another of those "throw out the rascals" moods.

Winston Stewart, executive secretary of the Assn. of County Commissioners, says casualties among the heads of county governing bodies were unusually heavy.

He said it seems to run in cycles and this was one of those years.

STEWART'S RECORDS based on returns from the primary show 21 of the 67 counties will have new heads of their governing bodies next year.

Among the probable judges ousted, Stewart said, were such well-known figures as Chester E. Walker of Tuscaloosa; D. Hardy Riddle of Talladega; Hunter Phillips of Choctaw; M. J. Williams of Barbour; J. Albert Logue of Houston; Herman K. Longshore of Lauderdale; Howard Weldon Sr., of Elmore; J. C Griffin of Perry.

Coma Garrett Jr., of Clarke; M. D. Tingle of Chilton, are in runoffs.

AMONG THOSE renominated were James T. Beeland of Butler; James A. Rice of Autauga; G. H. Stacy of Bibb; J. O. English of Coffee; James H. Tompkins of Colbert; Reo Kirkland of Escambia; R. K. Greene of Hale; T. R. Ward of Henry; Clyde C Cargile of Fayette; Isaac Johnson Jr., of Lawrence; Frank Peace of Marion; Stell Benefield of Randolph.

One incumbent, G. D. Seale of Greene, filling an unexpired term by appointment of Gov. James E. Folsom, is in a runoff with Mrs. Eleanor M. Coleman, wife of State Supreme Court Justice James S. Coleman Jr.

She led in the first primary, 666 to 622.

Elmore Asks State To Aid Voter Probe

WETUMPKA — The state attorney general has been asked to join in the probe of Elmore County vote irregularities.

Circuit Solicitor Glen Curlee of Wetumpka said Tuesday he had conferred with Atty. Gen. John Patterson by telephone in regard to alleged irregularities in the June 3 Elmore County Democratic primary election.

"I requested that a special investigator from his office be assigned to the investigation," Curlee said. "He was very much concerned over the state of affairs and said he would take the request under consideration. He said I would hear from him in the near future."

Circuit Judge Oakley Melton Tuesday ordered ballot boxes from the primary impounded as a preliminary to the investigation requested by Curlee. His order directed that the ballot boxes be held in custody of the chairman of the county Democratic executive committee.

MORE THAN ONCE

In his petition to Judge Melton, Curlee pointed out "I had reason to believe that certain persons voted more than once in the June 3 primary election. I had cause and reason to believe that there had been other violation of the election statutes."

Curlee also asked the circuit judge to move up the date for the next county grand jury to meet. The next grand jury nor-

Judge Melton said Tuesday night that he had made no decision in regard to calling a grand jury.

"I have the matter of our grand jury under consideration, keeping my court calender in mind. In all probability we will just call our regular grand jury. At this time we have under consideration just letting the regular grand jury handle this matter," Judge Melton said.

NOMINATION REVERSED

Curlee recommended a grand jury investigation Monday after a recount of the ballots reversed the nomination for Place No. 1 in the State House of Representatives from Elmore County in a contest between Leonard Johnston and John Alfred Howle.

In the official canvass Johnston received 3,404 votes, one less than his opponent.

Johnston contested the election, charging fraud. A hearing was opened to investigate the charges, but the probe ended when both candidates agreed to a recount, and all charges were dropped.

A recount by a subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee determined that Johnston received 3,425 votes to 3,489 for Howle. Johnston was declared the nominee then.

The recount total of all votes cast was eight more than the first count, with Johnston receiving 59 more than Howle.

The circuit solicitor said from conversation with various persons during the past three days he was convinced that irregularities exist in the ballot boxes of the June 3 primary.

"I am further convinced," he said in a prepared statement, "that these irregularities are of sufficient severity to warrant a complete investigation of all voting irregularities in that election."

Curlee told The Advertiser Tuesday night that in his request for the investigation, "I pointed out the 31-vote discrepancy in the official count by the election officials in Beat 9 Box 2 and the recount by the sub-committee."

"I pointed out from information received I had reason to believe—and did believe—that certain ballots cast by certain electors were removed and others substituted for them.

"I further pointed out that I had reason to believe that certain persons voted more than once in the June 3 primary election. I had cause and reason to believe that there had been other violations of the election statutes."

10 Fayette Countians Face Charges In Election Probe

FAYETTE, Ala. (AP)—A mayor's wife and a county official were among 10 Fayette countians charged with vote fraud in the May 6 primary.

All 10 of those indicted Tuesday by the Grand Jury were freed on bond to await their trials beginning Aug. 25.

Fayette County, although no particular race was contested, was the ninth county in which grand juries probed voting irregularities. Sol. Louis P. Moore requested the investigation after receiving widespread reports of misconduct.

Among those arrested were Mrs. Mildred Simpson of Berry, a member of the county board of registrars and the widow of a member of the county commission. Freed under $900 bond, she was charged with one count of buying votes and two counts of aiding a person to vote illegally.

Mrs. Betty Barnes, wife of Mayor Gerland Barnes of Berry, also was arrested. She was released on $1,200 bond on two charges of bribery and four charges of aiding an unauthorized person to vote.

Others arrested were:

Mrs. Loyal Collins of Berry, who posted $1,500 bond on 10 counts of aiding a person to vote unlawfully and five charges of vote-buying.

James Black of Fayette, who was indicted on three counts of bribery. His bond was $900.

Riley Sparks and Earl Cannon, both of Berry. They were released on $900 bonds each and three charges each of aiding a person to cast an illegal absentee ballot.

Charged with one count each of aiding a person to vote illegally and released under $300 bonds were William E. Gray, Berry; Mrs. Mary Nell Ernest, Glenn Ballard and Mrs. Mamie Holt, all of Winfield.

ALABAMA VOTE FRAUD CHARGED

Two Election Inspectors Are Indicted

WETUMPKA, Ala. (AP)—Two election officials have been indicted on vote fraud charges growing out of the Democratic runoff primary in Elmore county June 3.

They are A. Ruffin and Herman A. Evans, who live near Holtville. They were inspectors at beat 9, box 2.

The indictments charge both Ruffin, a farmer, and Evans, an electrician and plumber, with a miscount of ballots which resulted in a false return of the votes in that box.

Evans also was accused of marking a voter's ballot for the opposing candidate after the voter asked him to help her. The indictment alleges that Mrs. Bessie Culpepper expressed a desire to vote for Leonard Johnston for the House of Representatives but that Evans marked the ballot for Johnson's opponent, John Alfred Howle.

Circuit Solicitor Glen Curlee said that under Alabama law, an inspector can help a voter at the voter's request.

The charges grew out of the Johnston-Howle runoff contest. The official canvass of returns at first gave Howle the nomination by one vote, but a recount by a subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee showed Johnston nominated by 59 votes.

The grand jury also disclosed that county officials have made plans to replace the old paper ballots with voting machines in future elections.

The jury also criticized absentee voting practices and recommended passage of a state law abolishing the absentee ballot except for members of the Armed Forces.

Negro Group May Press Vote Probe

Registrar Chairman Denies MIA Charges Of Discrimination

Disclosure that Negro leaders are considering asking the new federal Civil Rights Commission to investigate voting registration procedures in Montgomery brought a denial of discrimination from the chairman of the local Board of Registrators yesterday.

Allegations made by Rufus A. Lewis, who heads the registration for voting committee of he Montgomery Improvement Assn., "are not so," Mrs. C. B. Willis said.

Charging discrimination, Lewis said last night the possibility of calling for a federal probe has been discussed within his committee because of difficulties in getting Negroes registered.

NO FINAL DECISION

He said it seemed to be "the only thing left to do."

However, no final decision has been reached, Lewis said.

Asked if the MIA is now conducting a drive to get Negroes registered, he said that while the MIA is "interested" in this, the main impetus comes from Negroes themselves who he said "re concerned" about their citizenship rights.

Lewis said about 2,200 Negroes are registered to vote in Montgomery County whereas the "Congressional Record indicates about 24,000 are eligible to vote."

Speaking for his committee, Lewis charged that the Board of Registrar shas used "many tactics to slow up registration." He said these are delays to which white people are not subjected.

HALF DOZEN TIMES

Many Negroes have had to apply for registration "as many as half dozen times." He said many of them are told by registrars that their applications cannot be taken that day and that they have to make repeated trips.

Lewis said that some Negroes do not receive their voting certificate for as long as a month after application. There are cases, he said, in which Negroes who believe they have answered the qualification questions correctly "receive no reply whatsever."

Others report that in answering Question No. 20, in which they are asked to name some of the duties and obligations of citizenship, they give such answers as "to vote, to pay taxes and to abide by the law," but are told that these answers have been used by someone else that that they must give different answers.

In addition, he said, registration officials take as few applicants at a time as possible, sometimes only one when they could take four.

In denying discrimination, Chairman Willis said all applicants white and Negro, are notified by mail if their applications are accepted and that it takes from 10 days to three weeks, depending on the number of applicants.

TREATED ALIKE

White and Negro applicants are treated alike in the waiting lines, he said, and "lots of times we have white people waiting."

The MIA is the organization which was formed to support the Negro bus boycott here shortly before buses were ordered desegregated by a federal court ruling.

Since the end of the boycott, the MIA has been emphasizing voter registration.

At a recent MIA institute on "non-violence and social change," Negroes were told that gaining the vote is the key to further desegregation.

County Voter Registration Validity Ruled

Advertiser Montgomery Ala Wed. 1-15-58

Atty. Gen. John Patterson ruled yesterday that a voter did not necessarily have to reside in the county where he is registered to vote.

Patterson's advisory decision, prepared by Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert Bradley, was made on a request from Probate Judge H. H. Weldon Sr. of Elmore County.

Under a 1955 act passed by the Legislature, Elmore County voters must now appear before the Board of Registrars for re-indentification. And one of the clauses in the act authorized the board to purge from voter list those persons who did not "legally reside" in Elmore.

ASKED OFPURGE

Judge Weldon asked the attorney general if this meant that former Elmore voters who had moved elsewhere but continued to vote in Elmore had to be purged.

Patterson, in his ruling, held that they should not be purged.

The attorney general noted that the Supreme Court had held that "once legal domicile is established it continues until a new one is acquired."

As such, he continued, persons who had moved out of Elmore but continued to vote there were in fact still legal residents of that county.

COUNT ROAD

In another ruling announced yesterday the attorney general's office held that county road funds could not be used in maintaining a portion of a county road which extended through a part of a municipality.

The ruling was requested by Clarence Rhea of Gadsden, attorney for the Etowah County Board of Revenue.

He sought the legality of expending county road funds on portions of a county road which cut across a corner of a municipality.

Patterson ruled that such an expenditure would not be legal, in that any road within the limits of a municipality is a "street" as distinguished from public county roads, and as such, no money earmarked for county roads can be used.

Vote Officials Deny Negro Race Bias

Post Herald Thurs. 1-9-58

U. S. Agency May Be Asked To Probe Alabama Situation

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 8 (AP)—Disclosure that Negroes may ask the Civil Rights Commission to investigate conditions here brought a denial of discrimination today from voter registration officials.

A Negro leader, Rufus Lewis, said that while no final decision has been made, "we certainly have it in mind" to ask the new federal agency to look into complaints that Negroes have difficulty getting registered.

Lewis, chairman of the eRgistration for Voting Committee of the Montgomery Improvement Assn., has accused the Montgomery County Board of Registrars of using "many tactics to slow up" Negro registration.

Mrs. C. B. Willis, board chairman, denied it emphatically. She said white and Negro applicants are treated alike.

Lewis said Negroes have to wait at least 10 days, sometimes a month to learn whether they have been accepted as voters. He said the board could just as easily notify them the same day they apply.

Mrs. Willis countered with the statement that all applicants, white and Negro, are notified by mail and that it takes from 10 days to three weeks, depending on how many there are.

The Negro leader also complained that registration officials take as few Negro applicants at a time as possible to slow the procedure.

But the board chairman said, "Lots of times we have white people waiting in line, too."

The Improvement Association is the organization formed here two years ago to support the long mass Negro boycott of segregated city buses. Since city and state bus segregation laws have been knocked down, the MIA has devoted its efforts to other matters, including voting.

Wallace says books closed to 'rightists'

CLAYTON, Ala., Jan. 20 — (AP) — Circuit Judge George Wallace, who once threatened to jail FBI agents sent to check Alabama's jury list, now says he will close records of his court to civil rights investigators.

Wallace, 39, said he also is "studying" the possibility of including voting records in his order.

County boards which register voters in Alabama are vested with judicial powers under an amendment added to the state Constitution in 1951.

Wallace, considered a likely candidate for governor in the May Democratic primary, said yesterday he considered his action appropriate because of activity of "anti-South politicians" in Washington.

IN A PREPARE statement, Wallace said his plans to keep federal civil rights investigators from having access to records of his court.

Wallace's circuit is composed of Barbour Bullock and Dale Counties, each having a heavy Negro population.

The new Civil Rights Commission has no constitutional right to "review or condemn" the actions of state courts, Wallace said.

"Only a higher court has such authority under our separation of powers theory of government," his statement added.

ANY SUBPOENA issued by the Civil Rights Commission to see the records of his court, Wallace said, will be refused and "the legality of such subpoenas shall be tested in the courts."

He said any federal agent who persists in trying to get information in violation of his order "will be treated as . . . having committed contempt in the presence of the court." This could bring a fine or jail sentence.

WALLACE SAID that court records are public documents but only when they are to be used "for a lawful purpose."

Wallace said his refusal to let federal agents see court records "is not defiance, but legal resistance within the law."

He said his action is designed solely for "preserving the system of government which has made it possible for all citizens regardless of race, creed or color to enjoy freedom and peace."

Negroes To Open Drive For Vote

Birmingham News 1-30-58

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 29 (AP)—With a goal of two million new voters by 1960, Southern Negroes are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration campaign in 11 Dixie states.

The drive will start with Lincoln Day rallies on 20 or more Southern cities Feb. 12. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) is among the Negro leaders scheduled to speak.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery, treasurer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is sponsoring the campaign, said his people will be urged to use the new Federal civil rights law "wherever necessary to point out discrimination."

Abernathy and other members of the conference executive committee will discuss detailed plans for the voter registration effort at a meeting in Atlanta tomorrow.

Abernathy said an estimated 1,238,000 Negro voters were registered in the 11 Southern states in 1956, only about one-fourth of the 4,980,000 Negroes of voting age.

By contrast, he said 60 per cent of the white residents in those states are registered voters

Would bar Negroes—

State Demos to consider segregation pledge Jan. 25

News P.C. & P. Ham Ala Sun 1-19-58

BY REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 18 (AP)—Party leaders will be asked in effect next week to bar Negro candidates for the Democratic primaries in Alabama this Spring unless they agreed to abandon their fight for racial integration.

The State Democratic Executive Committee, meeting here Saturday, also will decide on re-adoption of the controversial party loyalty oath which disqualifies Eisenhower Democrats as candidates.

National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr. of Sylacauga said he still intends to seek approval of a segregation pledge binding candidates to "support the principle of segregation upon which the Democratic Party was founded."

Asked if the effect of that would be to bar Negroes as candidates, McKay replied, "Not at all. Any of them who wanted to run could do so by signing the pledge along with everyone else."

But if they refused to take the oath, the Talladega County legislator said, they would be disqualified. McKay is a member of the Alabama House of Representatives.

McKAY DISAGREED with Committee Chairman Roy Mayhall's expressed fear that adoption of the proposed segregation pledge might invite the courts to nullify the party elections.

Mayhall, a circuit judge from Jasper, said earlier this week that he doubted the wisdom of such an oath. He reasoned that the courts might intervene on the same theory that the supreme court outlawed the Texas white primary several years ago. Texas Democrats refused to allow Negroes to vote in the party elections before the court held the restriction unconstitutional.

The Alabama party chairman apparently was thinking of what might happen if a Negro sought to qualify as a candidate, refused to sign the segregation pledge and then went into court.

McKay said he is not worried because, he explained, "the courts have held that a party can fix its own rules and regulations." He recalled that the loyalty oath itself, disqualifying Democrats who voted Republican in the presidential election, was upheld by the U. S. Supreme Court.

"If the Democratic Party has a right to impose the loyalty oath," he continued, "it has the right to impose other conditions as it sees fit."

McKay argued that the state committee could refuse to call a primary and nominate candidates instead by convention. "And then it could ask them any questions it wanted to," he added.

MAYHALL SAID he was not opposing the segregation oath but that he was concerned about its advisability. Whether a fight will develop at next Saturday's meeting remains to be seen.

One committee member predicted, however, that a compromise might be drawn up Friday night at a caucus of party officials.

Meanwhile, Mayhall and McKay both are advocating renewal of the party loyalty oath which grew out of the revolt in 1948 when Alabama's 11 presidential electors, all Democrats, refused to vote for Harry Truman and supported the State Rights ticket.

Since then, all candidates running for presidential elector as well as all others have been compelled to sign a pledge to support the national party's presidential ticket.

That is not too significant at this time because there is no presidential election this year.

But the pledge also goes back to the 1956 election and requires candidates to swear they did not oppose or vote against the Democratic slate of Adlai Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver.

That is important because it disqualifies any Democrat who voted for President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard Nixon in the election 14 months ago.

Along with settling those two issues, the committee next Saturday will adopt rules and regulations for the May 6 primary and the June 3 runoff.

Voters casting ballots in the party election will nominate candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, the Legislature, all nine places in Congress, and scores of lesser state and district offices.

They will elect a new 72-member State Democratic Committee.

Shocking Disclosure

Some 30,000 poll tax citizens this week in Jefferson County had not paid the voter-qualifying toll on the ballot. With only six days left to pay the poll tax, this is a shocking disclosure. Only 7,000 had paid the ballot tax at the time these figures were released from the local courthouse.

News P. & P. Ham Ala 1-18

Twenty neighborhood poll tax offices have been established in the various sections of the city. But what is disturbing is the obvious fact that our civic leaders failed to secure poll tax collection spots in the group's neighborhoods. Even the Masonic Temple area of the down town is without this convenient service. Could it be that our civic leadership is either ineffective or without alertness?

Sat 1-25-58

It is estimated that 5,000 members of our group neglected to pay their poll tax last year. That awful failure should not be allowed to repeat itself in 1958. Much depends upon the work of our community leadership. Never before in Alabama has the challenge to strengthen political suffrage been more acute than today. February 1 is the deadline for paying the poll tax.

There is still time to rally the poll-tax owers to pay up so that they will have an Alabama voice in political affairs. Those who neglect to pay their poll tax become self-disfranchised. Such is the worst form of second-class citizenship. Pay your poll tax and carry the urgent message to others who owe it. This is the hour of hope for those who owe the poll tax and decided to pay it. The ballot is freedom's sharpest tool.

Action For New Voters

Sights should not be lost during the summer months on the need for increasing the voting strength. A number of civic organizations have shut down or curtailed their activities for the summer. Voter-registration, already behind, cannot afford to take either a holiday or a vacation.

Facing the reality of the situation, a direct appeal must be made to non-voters to get their names on the registry list. Every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday are days for registration in Jefferson County. Rejected voters who believed they have been wrongfully refused votership because of their race should file signed complaints with the Civil Rights Commission.

There are persistent reports that despite the rumored boswelling in Jefferson County no formal complaints have been placed either with the Department of Justice or the Civil Rights Commission. If these boswelling reports are true, then why have not our civic leaders processed them and sent them to the Civil Rights Commission and demanded action.

The right-to-vote act, the Congress-created Civil Rights Commission, and the newly-created Section on Civil Rights were estabilised to assist Negro citizens in obtaining and using the ballot. Failure to call for help from them when you are refused registration is nobody's fault but the boswelled.

In Wilcox and in Lowndes counties where a majority of the population is of the Negro group, there are still no Negro voters in these two counties. No complaints from them either. Our civic leaders need to teach the masses their rights and help them to achieve them. In so doing there must be no neglect in calling to their attention their corresponding responsibilities.

Elmore Grand Jury Indicts Two In Election Fraud Case

WETUMPKA, Ala. (AP) — An Elmore County grand jury yesterday indicted two election officials on vote fraud charges growing out of the June 3 Democratic runoff primary.

The two were identified, following their arrest, as J. A. Ruffin and Herman R. Evans, who were inspectors at Beat 11, Box 4. Both live near Holtville.

Both Ruffin, a farmer, and Evans, an electrician and plumber, are charged in the indictments with a miscount of ballots which resulted in that box's vote returns being false.

In addition, Evans was accused of marking a voter's ballot for the opposing candidate after she had requested his help. Mrs. Bessie Culpepper expressed a desire to vote for Leonard Johnston for the House of Representatives, the indictment alleges, but Evans marked the ballot for John Alfred Howle, Johnston's opponent.

Under Alabama law, an inspector can help a voter at the voter's request, said Circuit Solicitor Glen Curlee.

All the charges involved the runoff contest between Johnston and Howle. Howle had a one-vote margin for the nomination in the official canvass. However, an investigation subcommittee of the state Democratic executive committee recounted the ballots and showed Johnston the winner by 59 votes.

Beside returning the indictments, the grand jury also said county officials have made plans to install voting machines in future elections.

The use of voting machines in the county has been recommended by grand juries many times in the past. Absentee voting practices were also criticized by the jury.

It recommended that, except for members in the Armed forces, absentee ballots should be abolished.

Pending Grand Jury probe—

Elmore ballot boxes are ordered seized

WETUMPKA, Ala., July 8— (AP)—Ballot boxes from the June 3 Democratic runoff primary in Elmore County were ordered impounded today as a preliminary step to a Grand Jury investigation.

Circuit Judge Oakley Melton signed the order directing the boxes held in custody of the chairman of the county Democratic executive committee until further orders of the court.

Solicitor Glen Curlee also asked Melton to move up the scheduled date for the next Elmore County Grand Jury to meet, but the judge withheld an immediate decision. Normally the jury would meet Sept. 16. Wetumpka 3495 votes to 3494 for his opponent, Leonard Johnston of Wetumpka. Johnston contested the election.

In a prepared statement issued yesterday, the solicitor said, "after conferring with various persons for the past three days, I am convinced that irregularities exist in the ballot boxes of the June 3 primary in Elmore County.

"I am further convinced that these irregularities are of sufficient severity to warrant a complete investigation of all voting irregularities of that election."

CURLEE SAID his office will submit a petition asking for the Grand Jury investigation to Circuit Judge Oakley W. Melton. The petition also asks that all ballot boxes be impounded, he added.

He said information he has received so far concerning the alleged irregularities has been in connection with the race for state House of Representatives Place No. 1 from Elmore County. An investigating subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee which recounted the ballots, he continued, revealed a 31-vote difference in favor of one of the candidates in one box. Information on other irregularities in other boxes also has been received, he added. He declined to amplify on the information or specify which boxes.

The official canvass last month in the runoff primary for the legislative race gave John Alfred Howle of We-

ALL PARTIES concerned with the contest, the investigating subcommittee said — agreed the nominee would be decided by a recount of the votes. Johnston received 3528 votes to 3469 for Howle in the recount. The committee gave no explanation for the eight additional votes shown in the recount.

No charges have been filed in connection with the election, Curlee said.

The next regular session of the Elmore County Grand Jury is set for Sept. 16. However, Judge Melton can call the Grand Jury together at any time if he agrees with the solicitor's petition.

CIVIL RIGHTS PROBE TO USE SUBPENAS AT MONTGOMERY QUIZ

Washington, Nov. 12 (AP)— The Civil Rights commission decided Wednesday to use the power of subpena to obtain witnesses and records for a hearing in Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 8, on alleged denial of voting rights to Alabama Negroes.

The commission said the hearing will be open to the public.

In another action at a closed door session, the commission decided that a national conference should be held in Nashville, Tenn., next February, on "problems involved in transition from segregated to non-segregated public schools."

Public school system officials are being asked to the conference in an effort to get from them and other interested persons all available information on the subject.

The commission disclosed too, that New York City is the scene for an investigation now under way of complaints that some citizens who are literate in Spanish "were being denied the right to vote because they cannot read or speak the English language."

State Voting Age Population Rises

WASHINGTON, Oct. — Alabama's voting age population has increased about 54,000 to a total of 1,796,000 since the November, 1956 general election.

This is an estimate of the Census Bureau. It does not include those of voting age who are in military service.

The civilian population of voting age includes a great many persons who, though old enough to vote, cannot do so because of requirements as to citizenship, residence, registration or payment of poll taxes.

About 104,600,000 civilians will be old enough to vote in the general election next month.

JOHNSTON WINNER

Elmore Vote Reversed

Leonard Johnston, Wetumpka's singing barber who first lost his race for the legislature by one vote, was declared the winner Friday on a recount of the ballots.

A three-man subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee announced a recheck of the votes in the June 3 primary showed Johnston rather than insurance man John Alfred Howle won the nomination.

The official canvass by the Elmore County Democratic Committee following the election gave Howle the decision by a one-vote margin — 3,495 to 3,494.

They were the runoff candidates for House Place No. 1 from Elmore.

Floyd Ansley, chairman of the subcommittee which investigated Johnston's charges of election fraud, said the recount gave the barber and beauty shop owner 3,528 votes and Howle 3,469.

The results were announced in prepared statement which gave no explanation for the fact that the recount showed eight more total votes than the original canvass. The statement also was signed by the other two subcommittee members, William B. Fite of Hamilton and Jack Bridges of Headland.

Johnston's charges of irregularities were dismissed by the subcommittee under an agreement by both candidates to let the recount determine the winner without going into the allegations of fraud.

In a victory statement Friday night Johnston told The Advertiser, "I know one thing. I am awfully happy about the results. I didn't mean to hurt anyone's feelings, and I hope I haven't. I feel like I only did what the people of Elmore County wanted me to do. I hope that I can make Elmore County a good representative. I am going to try to do the best I can. I hope that those who voted against me will feel free to call on me at any time. I have no ill feeling against anyone."

Howle said, "I have no statement to make. The results speak for themselves."

Solicitor To Seek Jury Probe Of Elmore Votes

WETUMPKA — A full scale grand jury investigation of irregularities in the June 3 primary election of Elmore County's Place No. 1 in the House of Representatives will be sought by Circuit Solicitor Glen Curlee, The Advertiser learned Monday.

In a prepared statement, Curlee said, "After conferring with various persons for the past three days, I am convinced that these irregularities [illegible] the ballot boxes of the June 3 primary in Elmore County.

"I [illegible] convinced that these irregularities are of sufficient severity to warrant a complete investigation of all voting irregularities of that election.

"In view of the above facts," he said, "the solicitor's office is preparing a petition to submit to Circuit Judge Oakley W. Melton requesting that all of the ballot boxes of the June 3 primary be impounded for a complete and thorough investigation by the grand jury of this county. This petition will be presented to Judge Melton either Monday night or Tuesday morning."

Curlee's action resulted from conferences during the weekend with the four "watchers" who viewed last week's recount of ballots by a subcommittee of the State Democratic Executive Committee. The subcommittee was appointed by State Democratic Chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper to investigate charges of irregularities by Leonard Johnston, defeated candidate for the House seat in the June 3 election's first vote canvass.

John A. Howle defeated Johnston in the June 3 runoff by one vote, the official vote canvass showed. Johnston protested to the State Democratic Executive Committee and an investigation was begun last week.

The subcommittee, composed of Floyd Ansley, Jack M. Bridges and W. B. Fite, heard charges of irregularities through last Wednesday, when an agreement was reached between the candidates. All charges were dropped and the official recount by the committee was to have been final.

Johnston and Howle were each represented by two watchers at the recount. One of the "watchers" requested the subcommittee to throw out the entire election in view of the "state of confusion" that the first few boxes were found in, it was reported.

Ansley overruled the "watcher," noting that the man had "no official standing" and advised attorneys for Howle and Johnston once again of their agreement that all charges were dropped and the recount would be final.

However, Solicitor Curlee said that the four "watchers" conferred with him Saturday night and his investigation ensued.

Unofficial results of the recount showed a 31-vote change in Beat 9, Box 2, in favor of Johnston. The election officers of this box issued a statement to The Advertiser Sunday.

A number of other boxes showed vote changes from one to six, but the Beat 9, Box 2, total was the only one to show a significant change.

J. B. Ruffin, acting as spokesman for Box 2 officials, said "we are ready to go before any grand jury or before our solicitor to be effected that there were votes switched in our box between the time [illegible] returning officer turned that box in at the courthouse and the time of the recount and to the best of our knowledge there was 31 votes so switched at that time."

Of the solicitor's plan to go before Judge Melton with petition, Ruffin said, "I think Mr. Curlee is doing what he can and the very thing we would like for him to do. We hope to get to the bottom of it, to clear up this entire controversy. All we want is justice. We're not in it to defeat or elect anybody, we only want an honest election for the people of Elmore County."

Former Mayor Bruce Airey said Monday, "this investigation has turned the light on the situation here and has revealed considerable confusion in the recent runoff primary. It calls attention to a need for voting machines in the county which would bring about more efficiency and accuracy."

A Wetumpka merchant said, "We ought to dig to the bottom of the thing and not have a half-way investigation but a thorough one."

A courthouse official said Monday when told of the investigation by Curlee, "It is high time that something is done and I'm very glad that the investigation is going to take place."

Mrs. W. E. Lacy, past president of the League of Women Voters in Wetumpka said "I feel like commending the watchers who met with our solicitor. Regardless of where the chips fall I think we will get voting machines as a result."

Demo Official Takes Stand In Elmore Vote Fraud Trial

WETUMPKA — The chairman of a state Democratic subcommittee testified Wednesday that a vote recount in an Elmore County election June 3 showed one candidate received 31 more votes than he had been credited with in the original canvass.

Floyd Ansley of Birmingham gave testimony in the opening day of the trial of two Box 2 election officials charged with falsifying returns in a House contest in the Democratic primary runoff.

On trial are J. B. Ruffin and Herman Evans. Both served as election officials in Beat 9, Box 2, in the runoff.

Ansley testified that his subcommittee, called in after the election was contested, recounted the votes and found that candidate Leonard Johnston had 83 ballots in Box 2. In the original count Johnston's total was 52 in Box 2. After the original tally, Johnston's opponent, John Alfred Howle, was declared winner. Johnston contested the election and he was declared the victor after the recount.

Circuit Solicitor Glenn Curlee opened his case with some 25 witnesses taking the stand Wednesday. They included all other election officials of Box 2 and 15 voters.

The voters all testified they had cast their ballots for Johnston and the ballots were introduced in evidence.

Curlee said he will continue Thursday with testimony of persons who voted for Johnston until all 83 voters have given testimony and their ballots have been introduced in evidence.

CHOCTAWS ASK RIGHT TO VOTE ON OWN CHIEF

Third Request of U. S. in Six Years

New York, Dec. 9 [Special] —The Choctaw Indian nation of Oklahoma has again appealed to Washington for the privilege of electing a chief, the Association of American Indian Affairs reports.

Under a 1906 act of Congress, the secretary of the interior has the authority, delegated by the President, to appoint the principal chief of the Choctaw nation, without the consent of the Choctaw people.

This was the third time in six years that the Choctaws had approached Washington for the right to elect their own chief. The present appeal has not been acted upon.

The Choctaws, in a letter to the interior department, explained their desire for a democratic election at no cost to the taxpayers.

Election Held Costly

Harry W. Belvin of Durant, Okla., the present chief,, said he had been informed in a letter from Roger Ernst, assistant secretary of the interior, that the department considered the balloting process too costly, altho this cost would be paid out of Choctaw nation funds.

Ernst said an election was impractical because of the difficulty of finding the mailing addresses of some Choctaws.

Oliver La Farge, president of the Association of American Indian Affairs, said:

"If democracy can be ruled out for the Choctaws on the ground it is expensive and inefficient, a frightening thing will have happened in America. Of course, democracy is expensive. The glory of our people, including the Choctaws, is their insistence upon paying the cost. Of course democracy is inefficient. It is the system of government of free, unregimented men."

Mail Vote Unnecessary

Belvin asserted that a mail vote to fill the office was not necessary. His term expires Dec. 18.

He suggested an alternative method that worked successfully in 1934. It would make use of a convention in Choctaw country thru which instructed delegates could nominate and elect.

Another alternative, he said, would be the setting up of ballot boxes in the counties most heavily populated by Choctaws, the balloting to be supervised by interior department officials.

"Nowhere else in the United States," Belvin said, "is the electoral process dispensed with because 100 per cent of the voters cannot be reached by mail. The privilege and responsibility of voting is thought to rest upon the voters."

VOTING IN PINE BLUFF CHALLENGED BY NEGRO

Attorney Says Election On April 8 Is Illegal

PINE BLUFF, Ark., March 27. (AP)—A Negro attorney, who unsuccessfully petitioned for a special election on Pine Bluff's Bennett ordinance," Thursday sought to block the vote scheduled April 8.

Wiley Branton challenged the validity of the pending vote on the ground that the proposal had not been published in a newspaper in accordance with a city ordinance.

The "Bennett ordinance" passed last Nov. 18 would require certain organizations such as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to file with the city membership and financial information. Similar ordinances were adopted by several Arkansas cities. They were modeled after one drawn up by Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett.

Branton, in a letter to Mayor Offie Lites and City Atty. Wilton Steed, said a Pine Bluff ordinance, if still in effect, requires that referral issues be published in a newspaper in the county 30 days prior to a popular vote.

"Am I in error in thinking that there has been no publication of the Bennett ordinance?" Branton asked.

Steed and City Clerk Heister declined comment. The mayor and city attorney, however, indicated they were preparing a statement.

The Bennett ordinance has been held in abeyance here since adoption.

COURT ACTION FAILS TO HALT REFERENDUM

Vote To Stop Bennett Law Vote Is Dismissed

PINE BLUFF, Ark., April 4.—A legal attempt to halt a referendum on the proposed Bennett ordinance here was dismissed Friday by Circuit Judge Henry Smith.

He based the dismissal of the suit on lack of jurisdiction.

Wiley Branton, Negro attorney, who petitioned for the referendum and then represented a group seeking to stop it, said he would appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court.

Judge Smith's action means that the vote on the ordinance, requiring the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and other groups to reveal organizational information, will be held. But an adverse ruling by the Supreme Court could invalidate the outcome of the balloting.

The judge said he could find no law under which the court could legally order Mayor Offie Lites to recall his proclamation for the special election or one under which the Jefferson County Election Commission could be enjoined from counting the ballots.

Branton contended that the referral measure was not published in a newspaper 30 days prior to the election as required by law, and that the ordinance number was not printed on the ballot.

Regarding the publication issue, the judge noted that Branton himself had petitioned for the vote and that Branton had had ample time and legal machinery to insure publication. The publication requirement is contained in a Pine Bluff city ordinance.

Branton's suit in Circuit Court would not have affected other proposals which will be on the special election ballot. They include a controversial subdivision development ordinance and a proposed $100,000 bond issue to finance purchase of fire fighting equipment.

Enforcement of the Bennett ordinance was stymied first by failure of an attached emergency clause to pass the City Council last November, then by the referral petitions.

The measure was similar to a proposal drafted by Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett and adopted by a number of other Arkansas cities. Bennett had said disclosure of membership and financial information which would be required by the ordinance, would limit NAACP activites in Arkansas.

11 Per Cent Of Voters Are Negroes

LITTLE ROCK — (ANP) — Approximately 11 percent of the total eligible voters in Arkansas this year are Negroes, according to a report issued last week by the state auditor.

The report, marking the first survey of Negro poll tax holders, shows that out 563,978 eligible voters, 64,023 are Negroes. It lists a table of eligible voters by county and race, and the number of persons over 21 by county and race.

The total of Negro votes is an approximation, because poll tax numbers of Negroes in 16 counties were estimated. In the other 59 counties, the figure was taken either from official certification or from lists in county poll books. The population figures were obtained from the 1950 census reports.

Out of 232,182 adult Negroes, 28 per cent of 64,023 bought poll taxes.

Voters To Discuss Merger Of Towns

Jonesboro, Nettleton Plan Mass Meeting

From The Commercial Appeal Jonesboro, Ark., Bureau

JONESBORO, Ark., May 3.—A mass meeting on the proposed merger of Jonesboro and Nettleton will be held at 7:30 Tuesday night at the Nettleton High School auditorium.

The merger is up for vote in both Jonesboro and Nettleton on May 27.

Mayors, members of city councils and city attorneys of both cities, along with members of the city water and light plant of Jonesboro will be extended invitations to attend and will participate in the open forum discussions.

The election was set by County Judge Paul D. Hanshaw after petitions were filed with him by citizens of both municipalities, and the Jonesboro City Council.

A majority of voters in each municipality must approve the merger before it can take place.

Vote To Decide Cities' Merger

Jonesboro And Nettleton May Be Joined

BALLOTING SET TODAY

From The Commercial Appeal Jonesboro, Ark., Bureau

JONESBORO, Ark., May 26.—Voters in Jonesboro and Nettleton will go to the polls Tuesday to cast ballots on the proposed merger of the two municipalities.

If voters approve the merger, Jonesboro will become the largest city in eastern Arkansas with more than 20,000 population.

Good For Business

Business and civic leaders said the merger would have a "good effect on business climate and would greatly enhance the city's possibilities of attracting more major industries."

The city limits of Jonesboro and Nettleton already join.

Nettleton not only would benefit from industrial growth, supporters of the measure say, but would receive better police and fire protection, lower electric rates, lower fire insurance rates, increased welfare payments to some clients, city mail delivery service and other benefits.

In Jonesboro no opposition to the merger has been voiced. The Jonesboro Chamber of Commerce board of directors voted unanimously Friday in favor of the merger after studying a report by a committee from the two communities. Mayor T. J. Powell of Nettleton has openly opposed the merger.

Would Become Ward

In case of merger, according to state law, the council of the larger city forms the small city into a ward (or wards) by ordinance. The Jonesboro City Council members have said that Nettleton will become the city's sixth ward and just like any other ward.

The school districts are not involved in the proposed merger. The attorney general has ruled that the merger would not affect either the Jonesboro or the Nettleton-Phillips district, since they are separate with their own boundary lines.

ARKANSAS

DR. DALE ALFORD
REPRESENTATIVE BROOKS HAYS

Alford Denies Tie-Up With Faubus for Votes

Washington, Dec. 15 (UP) — Segregationalist Dale Alford denied Monday that he and Arkansas Governor Orval E. Faubus engaged in a conspiracy that led to Alford's write-in victory over veteran Democratic Representative Brooks Hays in the November 4 election.

Alford told a House elections subcommittee looking into allegations of "irregularities and violations of law" in the upset of Hays that he was "legally, honestly, and in every proper way elected."

The subcommittee called Alford to testify after hearing charges by John F. Wells, publisher of the weekly Arkansas Recorder at Little Rock.

Wells charged that pro-Faubus forces permitted hundreds of votes to be cast by persons who were not registered. He said these improper practices stemmed from an anti-Hays conspiracy in which Faubus was the main figure.

Implications Resented

Alford said he resented "very much" the implication that he was involved in such a conspiracy. He said the decision to run against Hays was made solely by himself and his wife. He said:

"If there was any conspiracy it happened in the breakfast room of my home."

He did not reply specifically to the detailed charges listed by Wells, saying: "I don't know all these things that were done."

As the hearing ended, chairman Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.) announced the committee would decide at a closed session Tuesday "just how far we shall go" in exploring the Arkansas election case and others brought before it.

By special group—

House urged to refuse seat to Dale Alford

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 — (AP) — A special House committee reported today decided to recommend the House refuse to seat Dr. Dale Alford, segregationist who beat Rep. Brooks Hays (D., Ark.)

An informant said the vote was 8-2.

The House committee investigating campaign expenditures has been considering charges there were irregularities in the election.

Alford defeated Hays in a write-in campaign that pivoted around the school integration issue.

THE PRINCIPAL witness heard by the committee was John F. Wells, Little Rock, Ark. weekly publisher who contended there were irregularities in some of the precincts.

Hays told the committee in a brief appearance today "if Mr. Wells' allegations are correct there were irregularities and not a legal election."

Hays reiterated to the committee he personally does not plan to contest Alford's election. He said he feels it would be better not to inject personalities into the situation.

Keating Sees Move Against Dale Alford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R- N.Y.) predicted today the special House Elections Committee would "take vigorous action" on complaints against segregationist Dale Alford's write-in defeat of Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.).

Keating declined to elaborate. But other sources speculated the committee might go so far as to recommend that the new Congress refuse to seat Alford until a thorough investigation of his election has been conducted.

The committee called a closed meeting to decide on what action to take as House Democrats at least tentatively excluded the Little Rock segregationist from their ranks. They did not invite him to the Democratic Party caucus Jan. 6, paving the way for an almost certain showdown vote on whether to admit him at all to the majority party.

FRAUD SUSPECTED

The committee planned to decide whether to conduct a formal investigation of charges that fraud and conspiracy figured in Alford's last minute campaign against Hays, the veteran congressman who assumed the role of a moderate mediator in Little Rock's segregation troubles. Several committee members said there was no doubt the committee would decide to go ahead with the investigation.

However, any decision to recommend that Congress temporarily refuse to seat Alford was expected to come on a split vote. The committee is made up of two Northern Republicans, one Northern Democrat and two Southern Democrats.

Meantime, Alford left the capital for Little Rock, shrugging off the troubles that appeared to be House.

Open Testimony In Hays Inquiry Will Be Sought

Special House Committee To Meet Today, Take Up Arkansas Election

FULL HEARING WANTED

Keating Declares Public Is Entitled To Be Apprised Of Facts — Publisher To Offer More Data

By United Press International

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14. — Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N.Y.) said Sunday he will propose the Special House Elections Committee hear in open session Monday testimony relating to defeat of Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) by a write-in segregationist candidate.

The committee will consider Monday whether to investigate charges that Dr. Dale Alford defeated Mr. Hays through irregularities, violations of law and a conspiracy involving Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus.

John F. Wells, Little Rock weekly newspaper publisher, who filed the complaint, has asked and been granted permission to appear before the panel Monday to present additional material in support of his charges. A closed hearing has been scheduled.

Wants Thorough Inquiry

But Representative Keating said he will request that the hearing be opened to "the public and press."

"The petition Wells submitted indicates a prima facie case which should be investigated and I favor a thorough investigation of the alleged incidents," Mr. Keating said. "I hope the entire committee will feel the way I do."

The committee's other Republican member, Representative David S. Dennison Jr. (Ohio), said last week Mr. Wells' charges "appear to require an investigation."

The committee's three Democrats so far have taken no stand on the issue.

"I think the public is entitled to be apprised of any testimony we hear relating to the case," Mr. Keating said. "That applies not only to Wells' testimony but to any that might be given by Hays or any other witness, including Alford."

The committee Monday will be confronted by problems relating to complaints of irregularities in half a dozen House races.

Long Road Ahead

Even if the committee should decide to order a full-scale investigation of the complaints in the Hays election, it will not necessarily lead to anything. The committee, which was set up to police House elections, is required to make its final report before noon on Jan. 3 when it goes out of business.

Another legislative route must be followed by anyone who wishes to contest a House election. The House Administration Committee of the new Congress has jurisdiction over such challenges.

At Little Rock, attorney Amis Guthridge, a segregation leader, said if the House committee decides to investigate the Hays-Alford race, he will demand an investigation of the July 29 Democratic primary he lost to Hays.

Mr. Guthridge said the cost has been "prohibitive" for him to ask an investigation of the July 29 race but such a probe "would reveal wholesale stealing by the now-pious Hays machine."

Alford Snubbed In Caucus Plans

House Democrats Fail To Ask Him To Attend

VOTE ALMOST CERTAIN

By United Press International

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. — House Democrats failed to invite Arkansas segregationist Dr. Dale Alford to their party caucus Jan. 6, it was disclosed Tuesday. This paves the way for a decision on whether he will be considered a member of the Democratic majority in the new Congress.

Dr. Alford insists he is a Democrat. But he defeated the party's regular nominee, Representative Brooks Hays, on a last-minute write-in campaign in the Little Rock congressional election.

Privileges At Stake

His exclusion means an almost certain vote in the caucus on whether he should be entitled to privileges of a member of the majority. Such privileges include patronage and accumulation of seniority toward committee assignments.

Dr. Alford's membership in the House was not at stake. But it could be challenged as a result of a complaint lodged with the Special House Elections Committee that fraud and conspiracy figured in his election.

Dr. Alford's omission from the caucus came as a surprise. The House clerk already had counted Mr. Alford as one of 283 House Democrats in the new Congress.

Presumably the decision was not taken lightly. But a poll of key Democrats failed to produce anyone ready to take responsibility for the snub to Dr. Alford.

House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) said that "I know nothing about it."

Mailed To Democrats

The caucus invitations, dated Dec. 6, were mailed out to other Democratic members last week. The printed "Dear Colleague" messages were signed by Representative Melvin Price (D., Ill.), chairman of the caucus, and Representative Leonard K. Sullivan (D., Mo.), caucus secretary.

Mr. Price said from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., that he issued the "usual routine instructions" to party functionaries to send invitations "to all those who were elected on the Democratic ballot in November."

Dr. Alford ran as an independent, describing himself as the Democratic write-in candidate.

Representative Thomas P. O'Neill (D., Mass.) said he anticipated that soon after the caucus convenes a motion would be made by Southerners to invite Dr. Alford to join the meeting. Mr. O'Neill said he and a good many other Northern Democrats would vote against the motion.

Charges Hurled

Alford Denies Conspiracy Claim, Defends Victory In Hot Congress Race

By MORRIS CUNNINGHAM
From The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The Special House Committee to Investigate Campaign Expenditures is expected to vote Tuesday to make a thorough inquiry into the Arkansas congressional race in which Dr. Dale Alford defeated Representative Brooks Hays.

John F. Wells, a Little Rock weekly newspaper publisher and Hays supporter, called for a sweeping investigation in testimony Monday. He charged numerous irregularities in the Nov. 4 contest in which the segregationist upset the veteran Democrat by write-in vote tactics.

Chairman Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.) announced the committee will meet at 10 Tuesday morning to decide the course it will take.

Keating Wants Facts

Representative Kenneth Keating (R., N. Y.), a member of the five-man body, said "Mr. Wells' testimony, if not contradicted, shows a prima facie case which should be investigated."

Representatives Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. (D., Mass.) and Davis S. Dennison (R., Ohio) indicated their agreement with Mr. Keating. Chairman Davis and Representative Robert E. Jones Jr. (D., Ala.) were noncommittal.

Mr. Wells, who testified for an hour and a half, cited a number of Pulaski County precincts in which he charged more persons voted than were listed as having voted.

In Precinct B, North Little Rock Ward 4, he said Mr. Alford received 243 votes and Mr. Hays 184, for a total of 427 votes cast. But he said precinct records show only 368 names on the list of persons who voted.

Dr. Alford, who followed Mr. Wells and testified for 25 minutes, said he was not prepared to answer Mr. Wells' charges in detail because he had not been informed about them in advance and has had no chance to study them.

Denies Scheme With Faubus

He flatly denied, however, his race against Mr. Hays was the result of a "conspiracy" with Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus. He said that only he and his attractive, blond wife, who sat beside him, participated in his decision to enter the race.

He said that like any other candidate he welcomed all the support he could get, but he said he cautioned his supporters throughout that his campaign must be honest and honorable.

Mr. Wells charged the use of printed stickers, which supporters of Dr. Alford's write-in campaign affixed to their ballots, was illegal because the stickers contained a printed "X."

But Dr. Alford refuted this and read an opinion from Arkansas Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett in support of his views.

Submits Documents

Mr. Wells presented detailed graphs, tallies, and other documents in support of his charges of irregularities. He said much of the work had been done by the Service Bureau Corp., an affiliate of International Business Machines.

Dr. Alford questioned whether Mr. Wells, who had described himself as a citizen interested in honest elections, was paying for the work. "I believe someone else is financing this study," he said.

UNIT TO DECIDE ON VOTE PROBES

Defeat of Demos May Be Investigated

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP)—A special House Campaign Committee decides Monday whether to investigate elections which cost the Democrats the only two House seats they lost in the Nov. 4 voting.

The seats are those of Rep. Brooks Hays of Arkansas and Rep. Coya Knutson of Minnesota.

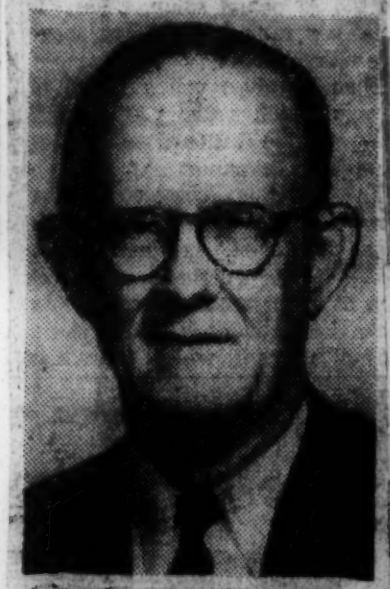
Hays, a veteran of 16 years in the House, was defeated by Dale Alford, a Democrat who ran as an independent and won in a write-in campaign reportedly backed by Gov. Orval E. Faubus.

FORMAL COMPLAINT

Mrs. Knutson, a two-termer, lost to Republican Odin Langen after a campaign in which her husband, Andy, pleaded with her to return to her domestic duties in Minnesota.

Hays has not challenged the election which ousted him from Congress, but a formal complaint has been made by John F. Wells, Little Rock publisher, who may testify at Monday's closed session.

Wells charged that state election laws were violated and that in some precincts the number of votes exceeded the number of registered voters.



REP. BROOKS HAYS

Mrs. Knutson personally challenged Langen's election. She charged there was a conspiracy backed by Langen's supporters which included falsification of a letter written to her by her husband.

Both the Hays and Knutson contests were filed since the last meeting of the committee, headed by Rep. Clifford Davis (D-Tenn).

BALLOT BURNING

The committee also may decide Monday whether to proceed further in contests involving the defeat of Rep. Noble Gregory (D-Ky.) and Robert H. Mollohan, West Virginia Democrat. Gregory lost his primary election to Frank A. Stubblefield, Democrat elected in November. Mollohan, a former member, was defeated by Arch A. Moore, incumbent Republican.

Involved in the Gregory and Mollohan contests are alleged irregularities including ballot burning and publication of unsigned campaign material.

At its last meeting, the committee sent investigators into Kentucky and West Virginia with instructions to report their findings Monday.

WAITING TO BE HEARD—John F. Wells, Little Rock publisher, rests on some steps yesterday as he waited to testify before the special House Elections Subcommittee investigating the defeat of Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.).

Bias laid to Registrar of Voters

Charge of a wholesale firing of Negroes from the Registrar of Voters office, made by some of those let off, were denied to the Tribune yesterday by Register of Voters Ben S. Hite, even though he finally admitted that 90 percent of 180 people laid off on Tuesday were Negroes.

Most of those fired seniority and "establisher rating" over white personnel who were kept on, the Tribune was told. Some of those fired had worked in the office as "recurrent clerks", since 1950 and 1952; while some of the whites who were retained did not even have the 10 employment required to qualify for the "established rating", the Tribune was told.

This was not denied by Hite.

However, he claimed that provisions in Civil Serviec regulations governing personnel of the office governing personnel of the office, allow the administration to let off people with seniority and retain people without seniority who are more competent, Hite said.

He said the people laid off were not as competent as the people retained.

The mass firing created a near panic in the office. According to reports, several whites who were told they were being kept on in preference to Negroes with more seniority, refused the jobs on those terms. Whites were freely told, according to reports, that they would be taken care of."

The workers involved are the seasonal personnel hired in election years to check names signed to petitions.

Four million likely to vote in primary

BY MORRIE LANDSBERG

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3—(AP)—A primary election testing Sen. William F. Knowland's bid for the governorship is expected to draw four million Californians to the polls today.

The balloting settled party nominations as well for U. S. senator, all elective state officers, 100 of the state's 120 legislators and all 30 congressmen.

But it served, too, as a giant sounding board for the voting trends bound up in these key questions:

1. WHETHER KNOWLAND can outdraw his Democratic opponent, Atty. Gen. Edmund G. Brown, in what amounts to a two-party popularity contest. Each filed on the other's ticket—common practice in California.

Voter registration favors Brown with a 7 to 5 Democratic bulge. Party leaders steadfastly predicted he would pull away from the senate minority leader by up to half a million votes in the total tally.

2. Whether, and how many, Republicans will shun Knowland in protest against his decision to oppose GOP Gov. Goodwin J. Knight for reelection. Knight's stormy big switch to the Senate race last Fall shattered party harmony.

Knight's supporters declared the governor, bucking Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco for the Republican senatorial nomination, would surge past Knowland in total vote.

3. WHETHER, as confident-talking Democrats say, there is a pronounced Democratic trend in a state with a record of registering Democratic but voting Republication in state elections.

For many years, Republican incumbent regularly knocked off most of their Democratic opposition in the primaries.

Cleared in L. A. Case

Louis J. Jones 'Not Guilty' of Election Fraud

Louis J. Jones

LOS ANGELES—Louis J. Jones, former Pittsburgher, and the first of his group to be elected to the Republican County Central Committee, was found not guilty Thursday of alleged "trumped up" charges involving his election.

Jones was cleared of two counts by Superior Judge Thomas L. Ambrose, the first charging a violation of the election code by registering at an illegal address and the second, perjury of a public document.

The court's decision exonerating Jones makes his election valid and clears the way for the committee to act upon his seating, which had been held up pending the District Attorney's prosecution of the case.

JONES, WHO has been an active figure in local political circles for many years, was represented by Attys. Gerald D. Lenoir and Claude V. Wardell, with Attys. Martha Jefferson and Herman T. Smith joining as co-counselors.

Among those testifying for Mr. Jones was Atty. Crispus Wright, a candidate for a Congressional seat in the 26th District under the Republican banner.

Mr. Jones was formerly married to Broadway star Lena Horne and is the brother Pittsburgh City Councilman Paul Jones.

ennings ould Post ote Rights

Washington, D.C.

Thomas C. Hennings (D-Mo.) called yesterday the posting in public buildings of voting rights guaranteed out in last year's civil rights law.

He said he was prompted to the suggestion to Attorney General William P. Rogers by reports of recent anonymous and notices by the government advising when, where and how

"It seems to me," he said, that our Government could the very least employ simi- means of notifying (American citizens) . . . about the measures available to protect their sacred Federal voting rights and what Federal are open to them if rights are violated."

Hennings said in a statement that he suggested in a to Rogers that the following be posted in post offices other buildings:

A summary of the provisions of Section 131 of the civil rights law. (Section 131 says that "no person . . . shall intimidate, threaten, coerce, attempt to intimidate, threaten, or coerce any other person for the purpose of interfering with the right of such other person to vote or vote as he may choose . . ." 2 Suits Contest Berwyn Heights Ballot Ruling

Two suits have been filed in Prince Georges Circuit Court contesting a ruling that Berwyn Heights town election ballots were invalid if they contained write-in votes.

The ruling in the May 6 election was made by the town commissioners, and the current two incumbents to office, John Winkelmoyer and Roscoe Bwiggins.

The two candidates ousted by the write-in decision, Kenneth F. Aurich and Clinton Walker, filed suit yesterday through their attorney, Robert Hoyert. The writ of mandamus asked for a reversal of the commissioners' action.

If not sustained, the suit then asked the court to order another election.

A day earlier a taxpayer's suit was field by Edward J. Waters, a Berwyn Heights resident, through attorney Alden Courtenant. This writ also asks for a reversal of the commissioners' decision. Mr. Hoyer said he will try to have his suit set for a hearing June 2, the same day Mr. Waters' suit is to be heard.

John F. Cushman gets U.S. post

WASHINGTON

Attorney General William P. Rogers announced Tuesday that John F. Cushman of Falls Church, Va. has been named director of the Office of Administrative Procedure in the Department of Justice.

The 35 - year - old native of Minneapolis, Minn., succeeds J. Smith Henley, recently appointed judge of the Federal District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

Mr. Cushman was an attorney in the Department of Justice from 1951 to 1957. In the Department he served in the Appellate Section of the Office of Alien Property and in the Office of Legal Counsel.

He resigned from the latter position in 1957 to become an associate general counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Florida Vote Shows Mixing Issue Import

Negro Courier 8-30

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Sen. Spessard L. Holland's majority over Claude Pepper mounted to 91,000 votes Wednesday as returns from the U.S. Senate race and other Democratic primary contests in Florida pointed up the growing impact of the segregation issue.

Pepper, who had forecast hopefully that Florida would follow the lead of Tennessee and Texas in electing senators of the liberal side, acknowledged this state had lined up rather solidly with the conservatives.

Returns from all of the state's 1,880 precincts gave Holland 411,245 votes to Pepper's 320,085.

Pepper laid his loss to the integration issue. He said it was unfortunate that the extremes had taken over in the South.

Pepper, a liberal of the Roosevelt New Deal era, was attempting a political comeback. He was defeated by Sen. George Smathers in 1950 after 14 years service in the Senate.

While Pepper, like Holland, came out for segregation, his approach was a little vague. Holland, a conservative, urged the firm approach to retaining segregation. He stressed the Senate filibuster as the South's best weapon in the fight against compulsory civil rights and pledged to work for legislation to curb powers of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Holland will go through the formality of a November contest in this traditionally Democratic state with Republican nominee Leland Hyzer, Miami lawyer. Hyzer had no primary opponent.

Sharing interest with the Holland landslide was the setback of State Rep. John B. Orr Jr., an advocate of school integration, at the hands of political newcomer David Eldredge. The Miami area had not been considered a very active battleground of the segregation-integration controversy.

Orr, a former member of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, who espoused the cause of integration on the House floor, trailed Eldredge by 9,165 votes. They will fight it out in the Sept. 30 runoff.

Orr, a former member of Pepper's law firm, forecast he would win on Sept. 30.

"We're going to prove to the people of the United States that there is an island of tolerance in the South," he said. "We've got to demonstrate to the people of the United States that this isn't Faubus' territory."

Voters Number 133,001

Duval County's list of eligible voters was pegged at 133,001 yesterday as the official count was completed by County Supervisor of Registration Fleming H. Bowden.

Despite the growing population of the county, the number of voters is 20 less than on the last off-year primary election in 1954, when a record high was set.

More Before Purge

Before the registration books were purged of 24,277 names at the beginning of the year, there were 144,261 voters on the rolls.

The current registration figures show that there are 124,996 Democrats eligible to vote in their party primary. Of these 100,370 are white and 24,626 Negro. There are 62 Democratic candidates for state and county offices and four Republican candidates on the Duval ballot.

There are 52,856 white Democrats in the 62 precincts outside the city limits and 47,514 white Democrats in the 67 precincts within the city limits. Negro Democratic registration is 3,481 in the county areas and 21,146 in the city precincts.

Precinct Registration

Total county precinct registration for all parties is 60,919 and total city precinct registration is 72,082.

Total Republican party registration in the two precincts in both city and county is 7,109. Of this number, white Republicans total 3,712 in the county and 1,570 in the city. Negro Republican registration is 281 in the county and 1,546 in the city.

Independent registration, which is listed under "other parties," totals 896, including both city and county. Voters not registered with the Democratic or Republican parties cannot vote in the party primaries Sept. 9 and Sept. 30, but can vote only in the Nov. 4 general election.

Raiford Box Seal Upheld In Vote Suit

By Staff Writer

LAKE BUTLER, June 16—Circuit Judge John A. H. Murphree ruled here today that a ballot box figuring in a Union County liquor election contest had been sealed after a tabulation of returns that kept the county wet by a one-vote margin.

This action amounted to a partial victory for dry forces, who contend that a recount of ballots in this Raiford precinct would change the Jan. 21 election results. Their suit against the county commission challenging the election outcome, the drys also charge errors were made in counting ballots cast in the Raiford box.

In answering testimony of election officials that the ballot box was locked after votes were counted, counsel for liquor dealers who have joined in defense of the suit, cited other testimony that the box was not sealed until after canvassing the day following the election.

The wets, pointing out that testimony was vague concerning what happened between the time the box left Raiford and reached Lake Butler, said they had been unable to locate a key witness who could provide this information. The witness was identified as Hubert Johnson, a clerk at the Raiford precinct during the election.

Only witness to testify today was W. W. Carter, a poll watcher for the drys. He said he saw several dry votes thrown out as invalid, a ruling he said he challenged.

Judge Murphree recessed the trial until June 23 to hear other cases previously docketed for this week.

Registration Is Expected To Reach Only 126,000

There were strong indications yesterday that only about 126,000 Duval County residents will be eligible to vote in the coming elections.

There were 144,000 voters on the rolls in December just before the biennial purge of the registration books.

Citizens who have been in the state a year and the county for six months and who are not properly registered still have three days to register before the books close. Anyone not properly registered cannot vote in the party primaries on Sept. 9 and 30 or in the general election Nov. 4.

Office Open Tonight

The supervisor of registration's office will be open tonight from 7 to 9 p.m. for the last evening session before the books close at 5 p.m. Saturday. The office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. today, tomorrow and Saturday, in addition to tonight's session.

Registration supervisor Fleming H. Bowden reported that of the 810 voters who registered Tuesday, 325 took advantage of the evening hours.

After the biennial purge of the voter rolls in January, the eligible voter listed dropped to 120,000. This was roughly the number of voters on the books when they were closed April 27 prior to the special school election.

Since the books opened again June 2 only about 6,700 have registered. This figure is expected to be reduced by the deletion of the names of deceased persons and persons who have registered in other counties from the list.

A spokesman in the registration office indicated that when the final count is made after the books close Saturday there will be about 126,000 eligible voters in the county. The actual figures will not be known for about another week.

Figures showed last night that of the approximately 6,700 voters who registered since June 2, about 1,900 were Negroes.

There are 62 Democratic candidates for the state and county offices that will be on the Duval County ballot in the first primary and four Republican candidates.

Dade Has Fifth Of Florida Vote

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
Herald Political Writer

A whopping 360,973 registered voters were recorded officially Wednesday for Dade County, giving this South Florida metropolis approximately one-fifth of the state's total voting strength.

Democrats outnumber Republicans 301,739 to 46,884, a sharp upward rise for the Democratic party over the 1956 general election, Claude R. Brown, supervisor of registration, reported.

Most of these were independents, Brown said.

Negro registration was up only slightly over 1956 with 1,737 new colored voters.

The significance of the new Dade total is sure to dominate the final weeks of campaign planning by both Sen. Spessard L. Holland and his challenger, Claude Pepper.

With such a concentration of voters here — and most of them Democrats — the two candidates are certain to double their efforts for the final big push in the Greater Miami area.

Now Holland and Pepper are campaigning in the smaller counties in hopes of bolstering their Dade vote.

Brown said the new all-time high registration here exceeds the 1956 record by more than 31,000. That was a Preidential year when President Eisenhower was opposed by Adlai Stevenson.

Registration books are now closed all over the state until after the November general elections.

Despite reports that interest in the local political races has been lagging due to midsummer heat and vacations, Brown said 14,623 new registrants had been recorded since July 1.

Besides Democrats and Republicans, 2,350 persons registered either as independents or for other parties such as Progressive or State's Rights.

Record Florida Turnout

New Vote Spurts by 153,922

TALLAHASSEE — (UPI) — Florida picked up 153,922 new voters in the last two years for a record total of 1,593,353 electors eligible to ballot in the Sept. 9 primary, official figures tabulated in the secretary of state's office showed Monday.

The Republicans got almost as many of the new votes as the Democrats. But the Democratic Party maintained its strong lead with 1,359,610 of the total registration, compared to 233,743 Republicans.

Voters must stick strictly to party lines in the primary, but can cross the line in the November general election. This was done in the presidential elections of 1952 and '56 when the state, though strongly Democratic in registration, gave its vote to President Eisenhower.

Negroes — pushed by an NAACP voter registration drive — increased their voting strength by 7,275 over two years ago for a record total for Florida of 144,810.

Only three counties, Lafayette, Union and Liberty, reported no Negroes registered. Duval has the largest Negro vote — 26,453 — followed by Dade's 20,785.

Republicans, strongest in Pinellas, registered 71,334 of the new vote while Democrats added 82,588 voters to their ranks since the 1956 primaries.

Actually, the 1958 registration totals 1,607,214, but 13,861 are members of minor political groups which cannot participate in the party primaries. They will be able to vote in the Nov

This compares with a 1956 primary total of 1,447,274 and the 1,606,750 registered for the November 1956, general election.

The 1956 primary total included 1,277,022 Democrats and 162,409 Republicans for a grand total of 1,439,431. It also included 7,843 in minor parties.

Dade County led in the new tabulation with a total vote of 360,973, including 311,739 Democrats, 46,884 Republicans and 2,350 others. Its voter strength jumped by 57,000 over 1956.

Duval tallied the next largest vote this year of 124,996 Democrats and 7,109 Republicans; Hillsborough, 105,049 Democrats and 9,880 Republicans; Pinellas, 76,268 Democrats and 62,565 Republicans; and Broward, 66,006 Democrats and 26,598 Republicans.

Walton County was the last to report, filing its official count based on its first permanent registration. Polk County filed a revised total showing an increase of 339 over its original report.

Walton reported 6,091 Democrats, 98 Republicans and 11 others. This total of 6,200 voters represents a loss of 4,191 under its 1956 primary registration.

Polk's new figures show 55,271 Democrats, 6,089 Republicans and 370 others.

DEMOCRATS STILL DOMINATE

GOP, Negro Registration Climbs Steadily in State

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 16 (AP)—Republican and Negro registration is climbing, but Florida must still be ranked as predominantly a one-party state, controlled by white Democrats.

A check of registration figures of 49 counties which have reported to the secretary of state's office shows more Republicans than were registered in all 67 counties for the 1956 primaries.

Negro registrants in these 49 counties have increased nearly 8,000 over 1956.

But the white Democrats have gained, too. On the basis of the 49 counties on which figures now are available the Democrats outnumber the Republicans by a margin of 5½ to one. And there are nine white Democrats for every Negro Democrat.

It is doubtful that the Republicans will close the gap any tighter when the other 18 counties report. Only one of them, Broward, had a substantial GOP registration two years ago. But Democrats outnumbered Republican registrants in Broward better than three to one in 1956.

The Republican registration in the 49 counties on which reports are available totals 175,651, of which 166,311 are white and 9,340 Negroes.

Totals Rise

The total Negro registration in these 49 counties in 1958 was 101,894, of which 94,678 were listed as Democrats and 7,216 as Republicans. The Negro registration in these same counties today is 109,559. The Democrats have 100,219 Negro registrants, the Republicans 9,340.

However, the white Democrats in these same 49 counties have increased from 857,176 eligible to vote in the May, 1956, party primaries to 925,025 who are qualified electors for their party's September primaries.

Altogether, the Democrats have 1,025,244 registered in the 49 counties.

In 1956, there were no Negroes registered in two counties, Union and Lafayette. Union County has reported no Negro registrants this year. Lafayette still has not reported.

Liberty County had one Negro registered as a Democrat two years ago. First reports were that no Negroes were registered in Liberty County this year. However, the secretary of state's list now shows five Negroes eligible to vote in Liberty County, all as Democrats.

GOP Gains in Dade

Republican registration climbed in Dade County from 35,873 in 1956 to 46,884 this year and in Pinellas County rocketed from 39,801 to 62,565.

But Dade County's Democratic registration went up from 266,404 two years ago to 311,739 today. Pinellas County had 61,309 registered Democrats in May, 1956. Today, the Democratic registration is 76,718.

The 18 counties still to report to the secretary of state include Hillsborough, Broward, Volusia, Brevard, Jackson, Lee, Manatee, Okaloosa, Calhoun, Collier, Glades, Hardee, Hendry, Holmes, Lafayette, Nassau, St. Lucie and Walton.

It can be anticipated that total Republican registration will exceed 200,000. And a total Negro registration of 150,000 appears likely. But if the trend shown in 49 counties continues through the 67, the white Democrats, who numbered 1,148,585 two years ago, will total 1,250,000 or more this year.

Some Vote Differently

However Florida's recent political history proves that party affiliation doesn't always count when the voter casts his ballot.

Democratic registrants outnumbered Republicans in the first congressional district of Hillsborough, Pinellas and Pasco counties in 1954 and 1956. But William C. Cramer, a Republican, was elected to Congress in 1954 and reelected in 1956.

Registered Democrats did, and still do, outnumber Republicans in Pinellas County, but the Republicans hold virtually all county offices and the complete legislative delegation. The Democrats also have a margin in registration in Sarasota County, but Republicans hold the county's two seats in the State House of Representatives.

Similarly, there were more Democrats than Republicans registered in Broward and Brevard counties. But Broward has some Republican county office holders and Brevard has a Republican member in the Florida House.

60 COUNTIES REPORT

1,143,533 Eligible To Vote in State

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 18 (AP)—The number of voters eligible to vote in the Democratic primaries next month climbed to 1,143,533 today as 11 more counties submitted their registration figures to Secretary of State R. A. Gray.

With 60 counties now reported, the Republican registration totals 190,522. Among the seven counties still to report are Hillsborough and Broward, both heavy population centers.

Volusia County reported a total registration of 48,451 this year, about 5,000 more than were registered for the 1956 primaries but 435 fewer than for the 1956 general election. Brevard showed an increase of about 2,500 and Okaloosa about 2,000 more than were registered two years ago.

Jackson and Hardee counties reported sharp losses in voter strength since 1956. Hendry, Glades, Collier and Calhoun reported slight losses.

Holmes and St. Lucie counties showed gains.

Volusia has 36,195 white and 4,525 Negro Democrats, 7,158 white and 331 Negro Republicans and 245 others.

Brevard has 14,780 white and 676 Negro Democrats and 4,491 white and 20 Negro Republicans. Okaloosa reported 14,984 white and 676 Negro Democrats and 337 white and eight Negro Republicans.

Jackson County listed 9,381 white and 1,982 Negro Democrats and 59 white and 108 Negro Republicans. In 1956, Jackson had 15,627 white and 3,117 Negro Democrats and 118 white and 125 Negro Republicans.

Hardee County reported 4,181 white and 279 Negro Democrats and 122 white and 13 Negro Republicans. Two years ago there were 7,033 registered white and 245 Negro Democrats and 136 white and 32 Negro Republicans.

Glades County listed 69 Indians among a total Democratic registration of 862.

The secretary of state's office reported that Liberty County, as originally reported has no Negro registrants. Through a clerical error, five Liberty County Republicans were listed in the Negro registrants column in an unofficial tally sheet of statewide registration totals. Union County also has no Negroes registered.

NAMES TO BE POSTED

24,277 Voters Purged From Rolls by County

The names of 24,277 voters have been dropped from the rolls upervisor of Registration Fleming H. Bowden reported yesterday The action is the biennial purge of the voting lists required by law.

Bowden said many of the voters whose names have been purged have changed their address and failed to notify the registration office [illegible] happy.

The list of purged names is being prepared and will be posted in the main lobby [illegible] courthouse on a special bulletin board about the first of next month, Bowden said.

Books Now Open

The books are open now for registrations.

Most of the names purged were those of city voters. The names of 15,964 persons were stricken from the city rolls, while 8,313 names from the county were removed.

Bowden said the large number of purged names from the city indicates moving of city residents to homes in the county areas.

The total of registered voters in the county is now 120,007; contrasted with the 144,284 voters on the rolls as of last Nov. 1.

Total Is Listed

The number of voters in the city is [illegible] and in the county 54,604.

Bowden reminded that because the primary elections will be held in September this year, the registration books will not be open between Aug. 9, the date for closing the books for the primaries, and the general election on Nov. 4.

In previous years, when the primaries were in May, many voters registered between the primaries and the general election. They won't have the chance this year. The Legislature moved the primaries back to September to shorten the gap between these elections and the general election.

Quit Evading Will Of Voters

THE LATEST ATTEMPT to "compromise" Metropolitan Home Rule is turning out as expected.

It centers around a group of 14 hand-picked by Miami City Attorney William A. Pallot.

The account of their first meeting includes this statement:

"Those present agreed they all favor Metropolitan government and preservation of Dade's cities unless their citizens vote abolition of the cities."

That's exactly what the Home Rule Charter says, in these words:

"The municipalities in the county shall remain in existence so long as their electors desire. No municipality in the county shall be abolished without approval of a majority of its electors voting in an election called for that purpose."

So what is there to compromise?

All that can possibly come out of the activities of Pallot's group is some attempt to weaken the charter adopted by the voters.

The people have a right to get what they voted for.

Let's stop this foolishness, and give Metro a chance to show how much it can do for efficiency and economy.

'No-Party' Voters Organizing

Independent Group Strong in St. Pete

A non-partisan Independent Voters League, already strong in St. Petersburg, is being organized in South Florida and will keynote its drive by moves to fight the nation's recession.

Nicholas Papalos of St. Petersburg, former aide to the late Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, is urging the group to push for the resignation of William McChesney Martin, Jr., chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Papalos blames Martin for the recession because of the board's stringent policies which sent interest rates to record highs last year and caused industry to curtail building and expansion programs.

The St. Petersburg man and Broward County Commissioner J. Herbert Burke are leading in the organizational drive.

Burke, a Republican, criticized Florida election laws which make impossible crossfiling such as is done in California primary elections.

The commissioner said the people should be allowed to vote for whatever candidate they want, both in the primaries and the general election, and not be restricted to party lines.

As for the "loyalty oath" advocated by Democratic leaders to the Florida legislature—but rejected by them—Burke said public officials owed their first allegiance to the people and second to the party.

Papalos said the Independent Voters League plans to take an active part in state politics and will support what it considers the best candidates in the major races regardless of party affiliation.

A public meeting of the South Florida group will be sometime next month when officers will be selected and a platform outlined, he said.

Negroes Plan Vote Drive

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 6 (AP).—A mass meeting of more than 400 Jacksonville Negroes—called in the aftermath of dynamite explosions at a Negro school and a Jewish synagogue—decided Sunday to make their voices heard through united action.

Representatives of all Negro political, social, fraternal and religious groups were invited to attend a meeting tomorrow to form a central organization that can speak for the 94,000 Negroes among the Jacksonville area's 400,000 population.

Several speakers urged the importance of Negro registration to vote. Glenn B. Washington, president of the Jacksonville branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, announced that a door-to-door campaign is planned to register voters.

Integration Fight Urged

Robert W. Saunders of Tampa, field secretary of the NAACP, urged the Negroes to reaffirm their purpose of fighting for complete desegregation through peaceful and legal means.

He praised the actions of Mayor Haydon Burns of Jacksonville and Gov. Leroy Collins in moving to apprehend the persons responsible for the dynamiting of James Weldon Johnson Junior High School and the Jewish Community Center early last Monday.

By a standing vote the group approved seven resolutions which will be referred to the new united organization.

The group declared [illegible] two weeks of prayer in all churches starting today, reaffirmed confidence in law enforcement agencies and pledged a christian attitude of non-violence and love toward all problems.

One of the resolutions also encouraged Negroes to register and vote.

Meanwhile, a man arrested Saturday and accused of stealing dynamite from a construction project where he worked apparently was cleared of connection with last Monday's blasts.

Chief of Detectives H. V. Branch said James David Lilley, 29, admitted taking the dynamite and all of it has been accounted for. Chief Branch also said Lilley's fingerprints did not match those found on a bomb placed at a Birmingham, Ala., synagogue which failed to explode.

Vote Ruling Is Sought In Hurry

Metro commissioners were urged Thursday to push for speedy Supreme Court clarification of the scheduled county elections this summer.

Failure of the commission to act "may be interpreted as an effort to create confusion and accomplish the result apparently sought by Commissioner John McLeod," said Robert M. Haverfield, an announced candidate, in a letter to the commission.

McLeod had claimed that six additional commissioners, as called for in the Metro charter, would lead to "chaos and confusion."

But Haverfield and a score of other would-be commissioners feel the provisions of the charter must be observed.

Haverfield's letter asked the commission to instruct County Attorney Darrey A. Davis to seek an early Supreme Court hearing of an appeal to reverse a ruling by Circuit Court.

Judge Grady Crawford had held that the non-partisan election section of the charter is invalid—that candidates should be nominated under state law in Democratic and Republican primaries and elected at the general election in November.

Haverfield pointed out that should the high court upset Crawford's ruling, it might invalidate the elections as they are now planned.

Because it will take the Supreme Court many days to decide, it is imperative the case be presented to them as soon as possible, he said. The court vacations during August.

As for McLeod's claim that adding six new commissioners will mean high costs in remodeling courthouse office space and providing county cars for each, Haverfield countered with this:

"It should cost less. The Metro commissioners are supposed to be legislative, not administrative. Therefore, they need neither courthouse offices nor county cars."

NAACP Drive Adds 1,000 Voters to List In St. Petersburg, Fla.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—The NAACP - sponsored registration drive in this city has already succeeded in adding the names of 1,000 Negroes to the voters' roll, Mrs. Bettye Wimbish, chairman of the association's county-wide voter-registration campaign committee, reported today.

When the campaign was launched on April 23 there were only 2,704 registered Negro voters in St. Petersburg. By the end of May, there were 3,732. Registration will continue through August 10, Mrs. Wimbish said. The report, she pointed out, does not include other cities and towns of Pinellas county in which campaigns will be initiated by mid-June.

Chairman of the drive in St Petersburg is the Rev. J. L. Fennell, pastor of the New Hope Baptist church.

Early Registration Urged for Voters

By JOHN R. BARRY
Times-Union Staff Writer

The Nov. 4 general election and the party primaries of Sept. 9 and 30 may seem a long way off to prospective voters, but in terms of voter qualification they are only 43 days away.

Any new prospective voters or any of the 24,000 voters whose names were taken off the rolls in the first-of-the-year biennial purge have only 43 days to register.

The registration books will close Aug. 9, which is 30 days before the first party primary and they will not open again until after the Nov. 4 general election.

Anyone not properly registered by Aug. 9 will not be able to vote either in the party primaries or the general election.

Open in Evenings

Supervisor of Registration Fleming H. Bowden announced that his office in the courthouse at Bay and Market streets will be open two evenings this month, eight evenings in July and two in August. In addition the office will be open on Saturday, July 26, and Aug. 2 and 9. The three Saturdays that the office will be open, voters may register between the regular hours of 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The weekday night openings will be from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Regular office hours are 8:30 to 5 p.m.

Bowden said the night openings will be as follows:

June 18, 19; July 1, 3, 15, 17, 22, 24, 29 and 31, and Aug. 5 and 7.

Since the books opened on June 2, approximately 1,000 voters have registered. This brings the up-to-date total to roughly 121,000. Bowden's office reported this figure is a long way from the record 144,286 names that were on the books at the beginning of the year.

It is expected that close to 150,000 voters will be eligible by the time the books close at 5 p.m. Aug. 9, but Bowden said if this anticipated figure is to be reached many more voters will have to register.

He added that if voters do not take advantage of registering early, they may find themselves inconvenienced by having to stand in line during the last-minute rush.

Another thing Bowden stressed is the fact that there will be no registrations between the primaries and the general election. In past years, because the primaries were held in May, there was always an upsurge in registrations between the primaries and the November election.

This year, for the first time, the new law moving the primaries to September will come into effect. The statutory 30-day period for closing the books before an election this year will cause the November election closing period to overlap the September primary closing period.

Several important posts will be up for consideration of the voters this year. They include U.S. senator, U. S. House of Representatives, state senator, three state House seats, two state Supreme Court posts, one First District Court of Appeals post, as well as local offices.

The local offices include two Circuit Court judgeships, one Criminal Court of Record judgeship, two County Commission seats, two Board of Public Instruction seats, four Civil Service Board posts, three Budget Commission seats, Juvenile Court Judge and Small Claims Court Judge.

1,000 Voters Added to St. Petersburg's Lists

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The NAACP - sponsored registration drive in this city has already succeeded in adding the names of 1,000 Negroes to the voters' roll, Mrs. Bettye Wimbish, chairman of the Association's county - wide voter-registration campaign committee, reported last week.

When the campaign was started on April 13 there were only 2,704 registered Negro voters in St. Petersburg. By the end of May, there were 3,732. Registration will continue through August 10, Mrs. Wimbish said. The report, she pointed out, does not include other cities and towns of Pinellas county in which campaigns will be initiated by mid-June.

Chairman of the drive in St. Petersburg is the Rev. J. L. Fennell, pastor of the New Hope Baptist church.

SIMPLE, EASY

Vote Registration Takes 3 Minutes

By JAYNE BRUMLEY
Times-Union Staff Writer

It takes only three minutes to register to vote.

Registration could hardly be made easier than it is in the new air-conditioned Duval County Courthouse.

The building plan placed the office of the supervisor of registration on the ground floor of the new building. It couldn't be handier, as it's the first door on the left inside the main entrance on Bay street.

The population of Duval County as of July 1, 1957, was estimated at 438,600. The last federal census taken in 1950 estimated that 65 per cent of the total population is over 21.

This would indicate that in Duval County, where one must be 21 to vote, there are at least 285,090 who could exercise this right, if they would register.

150,000 Expected

Only 150,000 are expected to be registered in time to vote in fall elections here this year. Granted this is a great increase over the 90,667 registered voters in November 1948, when only two-thirds of those registered voted, but there's still a long way to go.

Citizens here can't complain of poor service when they go to register. For those who are impatient there's even a bell to ring to command the attention of the staff.

There's nothing to take, no papers, no pictures and no affadavits, unless you are a naturalized citizen.

The spacious office has a staff of eight. Hours are from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Later in the registration period the office will be open some evenings to accommodate persons who cannot get downtown during the day, according to Mrs. Tommie R. Bell, assistant chief deputy. Arrangements are still tentative, she said.

Registration books opened June 2 and will continue open through Aug. 9. This past week 700 residents of Duval County registered, averaging more than 100 a day.

Questions Simple

Registrants must be citizens of the United States, have lived in the State of Florida for a year and have lived in Duval County for the past six months.

Registration is permanent, but the office must be notified of changes in address. That can be done in person or by mail.

Registrants are asked very few questions. Here they are:

Have you ever registered in Duval County before?

Have you lived in the State of Florida for one year?

Have you lived the last six months in Duval County?

Are you over 21 years of age?

Do you own or are you buying any property in Duval County?

There's no expenditure of the registrant's strength involved beyond signing his name once, writing his address once and writing the first initial of the political party to which he wishes to be affiliated.

And then comes the "I do" as the registrant swears that the information he has given is true. The wallet-size registration card is mailed to the address given and that's it.

No parking problems either. The city parking lot is less than two blocks away from the courthouse.

"I Do" (And Everyone Should Register)

200,000 votes will cure Florida's ills, Wilkins says

MIAMI, Fla. — "There isn't anything wrong with race relations in Florida that 200,000 more registered colored voters couldn't cure."

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, made this statement to 1,500 Miamians at a rally.

"You've got to do more than sue," he said, "and you've got to register and vote."

However, while the commission received no valid complaints alleging the denial of the right to vote during the first 11 months of its existence, the director explained, its staff has been making "depth studies" in the fields of voting, education and housing.

These are the three areas of civil rights on which the commission has decided to concentrate in studying and gathering information concerning legal developments constituting a denial of equal protection of the laws.

The commission is also required to appraise the laws and policies of the Federal Government with respect to equal protection of the laws under the Constitution.

BALLOTING BY U.S. MAY SCORE RECORD

Vote Widely Expected to Bolster Demos

34e

(The Associated Press)

The great American electorate, perhaps in record millions, swarmed to voting booths across the nation Tuesday and Republicans in an election verdict widely expected to reinforce Democratic margins of control in Congress.

On the outcome, they rested in one degree or another the political fortunes of 1960 presidential hopefuls.

The New York race for governor alone, a showdown between a pair of Ivy League millionaires, was one of those make and break affairs. A loss for Democratic Gov. Averell Harriman would wipe him out of contention in 1960. A win for Republican Nelson A. Rockefeller would tap him as a possible GOP rival for Vice-President Nixon.

Party control of state administrations in New York and 31 other states was at stake, along with seats of 33 United States senators and 432 House members.

EARLY RETURNS

Hot races, if not hot national issues, and beautiful Indian summer weather over most of the country drew the voters out in record or near record numbers in state after state.

The first sprinkling of returns was inconclusive as usual, but did nothing to dampen Democratic hopes. Tiny New England villages were going Republican, but in some instances by smaller margins than two years ago.

PRESIDENT VOTES

Point aux Barques, Mich., gave the GOP a margin of 13-3 compared with 12-3 two years ago. Predominantly Republican Mt. Washington, Mass., cast a 15-12 tally for Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) in his re-election bid.

President Eisenhower flew to Gettysburg, Pa., by helicopter, voted in 24 seconds and then returned to Washington. Mrs. Eisenhower, arriving later by car, voted in 18 seconds.

Eisenhower planned to receive election returns at the White House. His press secretary, James C. Hagerty, said that if the President had any comment on the voting, it would come at a news conference scheduled for Wednesday morning.

48 MILLION POSSIBLE

Vice President Nixon, winding up a strenuous campaign in behalf of the Republican cause, returned to the capital from Alaska pleading he was too tired to comment on the election. Nixon cast a California absentee ballot last week.

Early voting tended to bear out predictions that as many as 48 million Americans would take part in the election. The highest previous total for a non-presidential year was about 44½ million in 1954.

Record or near-record balloting was reported in New York. The early turnout in Maryland was heavy; that in Pennsylvania average or above. Outstate Michigan, much of it traditionally Republican, reported heavy voting. In Democratic Detroit the balloting was running behind 1954 and 1956.

STUDY SHOWINGS

Sen. William F. Knowland's hopes as a GOP contender could hardly survive a defeat in his race with Atty. Gen. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown for the California governorship.

Knowland voluntarily chose not to run for re-election to the Senate in what was regarded as a possible bid for the presidency in 1960.

The Democrats, for their part, could be expected to study carefully the showings made by such men as Sen. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, both seeking re-election, Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, seeking a sixth term, and Gov. George M. Leader of Pennsylvania, running for the Senate.

Maine already had held its election, and Alaska will vote later this month. Across the nation this year is choosing 36 senators, 435 House members and 34 governors.

Going into the voting, this was the breakdown:

Senate: Controlled by the Democrats 49-47. The Democrats picked up one seat in Maine. Needed to control the new Senate, 50.

House: Controlled by the Democrats, 235-200, crediting eight vacancies to the party which last held the seats. The Democrats held one in Maine and took another from the GOP there. Needed to control the House, 219.

Governors: The breakdown now is 29 Democrats and 19 Republicans. Up for decision were 19 governorships held by Democrats and 13 held by Republicans.

UPSETS PREDICTED

Chairman Meade Alcorn of the Republican National Committee predicted over the weekend there would be some startling upsets of Democrats. Without being specific as to numbers, he insisted the GOP had a good chance to win back control of the House. But he conceded, as he had done before, that it would be difficult for the Republicans to take the Senate.

Paul M. Butler, the Democratic national chairman, said his party would pick up 11 or 12 Senate seats, 3 or 4 governorships and 47 House seats.

Vice President Nixon, plugging in Alaska for the GOP cause, made no forecast of the congressional election results. But he maintained the Republicans had a good chance of taking five statehouses away from the Democrats, while conceding a couple of GOP governors might fall.

Democratic hopes were buoyed by the results in Maine, voting for the last time this year in advance of the rest of the country.

The Down East state elected Democrat Clinton A. Clauson governor, and Gov. Edmund S. Muskie defeated Republican Sen. Frederick G. Payne for the Senate. The Democrats also held one House seat and took another of the state's three away from the GOP.

ALASKA STATES VOTE

Alaska will wind up the elections on Nov. 25. The soon-to-be 49th state will choose a governor, two U.S. senators and one House member.

While the Republicans never matched the Democrats' show of optimism, Nixon and Alcorn began saying 10 days ago that the whole picture had changed. Nixon said there was a brand new campaign. Alcorn said the GOP campaign reached a crest and the Democratic one stalled in the final two weeks.

The GOP chairman credited this to the campaign exertions of Eisenhower and Nixon.

The President, although he traveled less extensively than in the last off-year campaign of 1954, employed some of his strongest language in speeches in California, the Midwest and the East.

CHARGES EXCHANGED

He termed the Democrats political radicals and gloomdoggers, said they sponsor hare-brained spending schemes. He said the opposition is hopelessly split on its sues ranging from civil rights to missile development, and could offer the nation only frustrated government.

Democrats retorted hotly that the record of the last Congress, which they controlled, hardly bore out Eisenhower's claim that they are radicals. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, Democratic Senate leader, challenged Eisenhower to say which "radical" Democratic measures he would repeal.

Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee who twice lost to Eisenhower, accused the administration of bungling.

Former President Harry S. Truman said the GOP had achieved the "remarkable accomplishment of a recession and inflation at the same time—genius in reverse."

WITHOUT OPPOSITION

Nixon accused Democratic opponents of the administration's Formosa policy of being appeasers. He said that by spreading the idea that the nation was divided and militarily weak they were guilty of "rotgut thinking."

The Democratic South provided the usual number of sure winners.

Without opposition were one Democratic senator, John C. Stennis of Mississippi, and two governors, Ernest Vandiver of Georgia and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

Other Southern governors and senators had at least token opposition, but the Republicans were not claiming they would elect any of their nominees.

Unopposed for re-election were 30 members of the House — 89 Democrats, mostly in the South; and one Republican, William H. Bates of Massachusetts.

NEW FACES

Whatever the complexion of the new Congress which will meet next January, there are certain to be a goodly number of new faces. A bigger than average number of senators and House members chose to retire or to seek other office this year.

Thirty-three House members, 27 of them Republicans and 6 Democrats, did not seek re-election. Several ran for the Senate instead.

Six senators, all of them Republicans, chose not to run again. They are Ralph E. Flanders (Vt), Edward Martin (Pa), H. Alexander Smith (NJ), Irving M. Ives (NY), William E. Jenner (Ind) and William F. Knowland (Calif). Knowland ran for the California governorship.

Among the veteran House members retiring are Karl M. LeCompte (R-Iowa), John W. Heselton (R-Mass), Richard B. Wigglesworth (R-Mass), Joseph B. O'Hara (R-Minn), Ralph W. Gwinn (R-NY), Bernard W. Kearney (R-NY), Usher L. Burdick (R-ND), Thomas A. Jenkins (R-Ohio), John M. Vorys (R-Ohio) and Martin Dies (D-Tex).

Burdick chose not to seek re-election for an unusual reason. His son, Quentin Burdick, was the Democratic nominee for his seat and the congressman didn't want to run against him.

Smathers Issues Victory Statement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without waiting for the polls to close in Tuesday's election, Sen. George A. Smathers of Florida, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee, issued a statement thanking the voters for an overwhelming Democratic victory.

The statement, delivered to the Senate press gallery at 5:40 p. m. said: "We Democrats are deeply grateful to the American people for the overwhelming victories which we have won in today's election."

"I think most of us recognize that the enormity of this victory presents a considerable challenge to us Democrats for the next two years."

In a new appeal to his party to display "a minimum of partisanship and a maximum of statesmanship" in its dealings with the White House from Capitol Hill, he also warned Democrats against bickering among themselves.

Negroes Urged To Cast Ballots

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The director of the NAACP's Washington bureau believes the "time is running out on segregationists in the Democratic Party."

Clarence Mitchell predicted to about 300 members attending the annual state NAACP conference Sunday that "increased political awareness in the North will make it necessary for them to get some new ideas or get a new party."

Mitchell urged all Negroes to cast ballots in Tuesday's general election although "in most southern states colored voters will have to close their eyes and hold their nose" while choosing a candidate.

Mitchell said segregationists "have gotten so desperate they have resorted to dynamite in an effort to win, but this has aroused the country against them as never before."

Federal courts have made it clear, he said, that "neither Sen. Eastland nor Gov. Faubus will decide what rights our citizens may enjoy."

Mitchell called on white citizens "to join in a great crusade to end racial segregation in the Legislature" of Mississippi. He warned that the Civil Rights Commission will soon be conducting hearings in Mississippi.

"Federal action, now under way in Georgia and Alabama, is a preview of what will happen soon in Mississippi on the problem of registration and voting," Mitchell said.

Prior to Mitchell's address, the Clarksdale NAACP youth council presented a panel discussion entitled "Mississippi Must Change."

Survey Shows Negro Vote To Equal Whites

ATLANTA (AP)—The number of Southern Negro voters has remained constant since 1956 but the trend is upward and the long-range prospects for Negro registration comparable with whites, the Southern Regional Council reports.

There are an estimated 1,266,488 Negroes on voting rolls—25 per cent of the eligibles—in 11 Southern states, compared with 1,238,000 two years ago, the council said in a survey.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own and even showed a slight increase, is an achievement in view of racial controversy and disinterest in an off-year election, the council said.

It noted a drop in the number of eligible voters in the country as a whole.

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first federal civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, a long list of federal court decisions to speed the Negro toward full legal equality and new state laws to delay change in racial patterns," it said.

In Louisiana, the white registration increased while Negro registration fell from 161,410 to 130,000 "due in large measure to widespread purges in several parishes."

Figures from Florida, Georgia and South Carolina show a decline in both Negro and white registration. Both registered gains in North Carolina and Virginia.

In certain areas, the report continues, it undoubtedly has become more difficult for Negroes to register, but in many parts of the South, lack of political consciousness remains the greatest barrier.

The apparent flimsy results of the big drive were right in line with earlier experiences of the Civil Rights Division, which was set up last year mainly in response to anguished pleas of Northern liberals that Southern Negroes were being denied voting and other rights throughout the South.

Rights Unit Probing 5 Voting Complaints

By ROULHAC HAMILTON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — What was billed by the Justice Department as a "big drive" to turn up evidence of denial of voting rights to Negroes in Southern states last Tuesday appears to have been instead a big flop.

The new Civil Rights Division of the department stayed open all day Tuesday, from the time the first polls were opened anywhere in the country, and all of election night, waiting for a flood of complaints of voting laws violations.

The complaints came, too—a total of exactly five. And, an official admitted grudgingly, all five were of a "minor nature."

The department would not say whence came the complaints. All are still under investigation, it was pointed out, and "the department does not discuss cases under investigation."

A department source also said there might have been other complaints made to individual U.S. attorneys in federal judicial districts throughout the South. These officials were alerted to keep their offices open throughout the day for immediate handling of any voting complaint.

But if they received any, or took the division had a grand total of 16 complaints of all kinds, involving less than 150 persons. And 10 of the complaints were dismissed for lack of substantiating evidence.

Both Parties Courting Negro, Liberal Votes

By MARSHALL McNEIL,
Scripps-Howard Newspaper.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Both parties are doing their best to court the Negro vote in these last three weeks of the Congressional election campaign.

But old pros of the two national committees here say privately it is much less vital now than in a Presidential year. They concede it may be the balance of power in some districts.

Similarly, both parties are seeking "liberal" white votes by claiming to be the foremost champions of civil rights.

Republican national chairman, Meade Alcorn played this tune at a GOP dinner in Dayton, Ohio, last night. And Democrats have tried from the beginning, in their "1958 Fact Book," to paint Republicans as laggard in the field, even unwilling to enforce to the hilt the compromise civil rights bill enacted by bi-partisan vote in 1957.

And yet, even if the Negro vote and the civil rights issue aren't crucial in this campaign, its results might drastically affect future Congressional action concerning both. For sitting Senate "liberals" are looking for election of more men of like views. They have started lining up support for their January battle against the anti-filibuster rule.

"We like to think that, every time Gov. Orval Faubus gets in the news or a school closes in Virginia, it helps us," said one GOP official here.

"If Faubus is hurting us in any crucial way, we don't know about it," said a Democratic official. "We believe the recession has hurt a lot of Negroes, and that this turns them to us."

Democratic Landslide

November Voting Set New Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of 47,875,315 Americans voted in the Nov. 4 elections, a mid-term record. Democrats outpolled Republicans in House races by more than 6 million to underscore their congressional sweep.

The total turnout as shown by Associated Press tabulations of final official figures was 3,427,819 above the previous off-year top in 1954. The highest presidential vote on record was more than 62 million in 1956.

Highest Vote.

The 47,875,315 figure represents the highest vote in each state, whether for senator, governor, combined House vote, or referenda issues. In one state, Washington, the vote on the right-to-work initiative exceeded the vote for senator by 50,000. The anti-union shop proposal lost in Washington and four other states and carried in Kansas.

The total vote for House candidates, the only one comparable by parties with the last mid-term election, strikingly demonstrated the extent of the Democratic gains in Congress.

The total House vote was 45,677,502, with Democrats polling 25,773,910 or 56.4 per cent, Republicans 19,722,906 or 43.2 per cent, and others 180,686 or 0.4 per cent.

The Democratic margin over the Republicans in the House vote for the entire country was 6,051,004, compared with 2,349,577 in 1954. Outside the 11 Southern states, the Democratic edge was a whopping 3,672,914 against a Republican margin of a few hundred votes in 1954.

Democrats increased their 1954 House vote by 3,807,524. The GOP vote dropped 293,303. Democratic House vote totals exceeded the Republican in all except states — Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

The Democratic House vote declined below 1954 in only 8 states while the Republicans were falling behind in 31.

Report Holds Negro Voting Rolls Upward

ATLANTA (AP)—The number of Southern Negro voters has remained constant since 1956 but the trend is upward and the long-range prospect is for Negro registration comparable with whites, the Southern Regional Council reports.

There are an estimated 1,266,488 Negroes on voting rolls—25 per cent of the eligibles in 11 Southern states, compared with 1,238,000 two years ago, the council said in a survey.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own and even showed a slight increase, is an achievement in view of racial controversy and disinterest in an off-year election, the council said.

ELIGIBLE VOTERS

It noted a drop in the number of eligible voters in the country as a whole.

Rise sharp in some states—

Number of Negro voters in Dixie same but trend up

ATLANTA, Nov. 1—(AP)—The number of Southern Negro voters had remained constant since 1956 but the trend is upward and the long range prospect is for Negro registration comparable with the states, the Southern Regional Council reports.

Currently there are an estimated 1,266,488 Negroes on voting rolls—25 per cent of the eligibles—in 11 Southern States, compared to 1,238,000 two years ago, the council said in a survey.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own and even showed a slight increase, is an achievement in view of racial controversy and disinterest in an off-year election, the council said.

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first Federal Civil Rights legislation since reconstruction, a long list of Federal Court decisions to speed the Negro toward full legal equality and new state laws to delay change in racial patterns."

IN SOME STATES the number of Negro registrants rose appreciably during the period, but these gains were largely offset by sharp drops in other states due to purges and statewide re-registration, said the SRC, an interracial organization of religious, educational, labor, business and professional men.

The report said if all bars to Negro voting were removed tomorrow, there still would not be a great rush to the polls.

"This is not expected until Negroes have been able to raise their economic levels, their leadership has been broadened and they have reached a position where their political participation promises more tangible results. Neither the new Civil Rights legislation nor the Federal agencies created by it promise any quick or dramatic improvement in Negro suffrage..."

But the council emphasized "all this should not obscure the fact that the trend is upward and that the long range prospect in the South is for a Negro registration comparable to the White."

FIGURES FROM Florida, Georgia and South Carolina show a decline in both Negro and white regisration. Both registered gains in North Carolina and Virginia.

In Louisiana, the white registration increased while Negro registration fell from 161,410 to 130,000 "due in large measure to widespread purges in several parishes."

THE NEED FOR CHANGING:

A New Legal Answer?

By JOHN H. McCRAY

"If you (colored) people really want to settle the integration, or de-segregation case, why don't you begin working on tax structures and operations in those states where you're being opposed?"

Speaking was a veteran white Southern lawyer whose name is out of the question, but who pursued and unfolded a long and involved line of reasoning he sees as the "quickest device" of ending Southern rebellion to the Supreme Court's rulings on the public school and other public services.

RIGHTS OF taxpayers, he says, are the base for public government, a fact so well established that lawyers and courts no longer argue the question.

The taxes of a citizen — the entire huge armful of them — are alloted in advance of collection to certain public services. This is the legal base or excuse for every tax, be it in California, New York or Virginia and Arkansas.

At the same time, however, no state nor subdivision of the Federal Government can, legally, compel payment of taxes for illegal uses, such as the operation of segregated public schools, parks, playgrounds, etc.

Too, once collected, taxes must be spent as has been outlined in state budgets. Often, this is ducked by legislative diversions, but even these diversions are subject to review by courts and also to being overturned.

"THE GOVERNMENTS in Virginia and Arkansas have been pretty lucky," the lawyer was saying. "But from what I hear they are scared lest somebody begins hitting them where they are really vulnerable."

He went on: Recent elections in Arkansas and Virginia, while appearing to be mainly propaganda support to Govs. Faubus and Almond, were underneath and basically protection against taxpayers' attacks on the respective states' tax handlings.

In other words, both states have collected, and are collecting taxes for services they are not providing. Hence, both are perpetuating fraud upon taxpayers, an offense in every court.

LEGISLATURES IN both of these states, as well as in the several others which have adopted anti-integration measures, left themselves wide open when they didn't wipe out school taxes at the time they ordered schools closed where integration took place, or takes place. And this elicits a chuckle again. "Who's ever seen a politician who'd vote off a tax once it gets on the book?"

"I hold that it wasn't the principle of democracy which led to the founding of America so much as it was an escape from unfair taxation, both back the Boston Tea Party," the in England and in the wake of lawer continued, "And the same principle controls us today.

"You can achieve your objectives much quicker by working on a man's money or with your money. And it is your money—which you've entrusted into the care of the man—that's keeping the South resisting."

A NETWORK of court suits across resisting states, all brought by taxpayers, and aimed at cutting off collection and enforcement of the taxes that no longer exist, or which are illegally operated, he contends, would force a showdown quicker than prsent procedures.

Most lawyers, of course, and particularly in the South, are reluctant to engage as counsel in such lawsuits. This type of court action is involved, and it is loaded with technicalities.

Local judges, who for the most part derive offices from legislatures or political cliques tied in with public administrations, would be recalcitrant as a matter of self preservation.

THERE DOES seem to be something wrong about paying taxes in support of illegal services, and in support of officeholders who use these taxes to place the taxpayer in opposition to what is clearly law and order.

In some cases, it could be held., taxpayers are actually in contempt of Federal court orders where they continue support to districts under order to integrate, but which are in defiance.

"Take a petal from a rose, and the rose weeps..." are words from a fairly well known tune of a few years ago. What this lawyer was saying was: "Take your tax money from Faubus and Almond, from Patterson, Griffin and Timmerman, and they'll weep, too."

VOTERS IN FOUR STATES CAST BALLOTS TUESDAY

By RICHARD C. SIZEMORE

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Voters in four states cast ballots Tuesday in primary elections that held an important bearing on the future of Senator William F. Knowland, R., Calif., the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Democratic Party in Alabama.

BULLETIN — With more than half of the votes counted from Alabama's 3,150 boxes Attorney General John Patterson was leading Judge George Wallace by 35,000 votes.

At stake were gubernatorial nominations in Alabama, South Dakota, and California. In Montana, incumbent Sen. Mike Mansfield sought the Democratic Senatorial nomination against two lightly-regarded opponents.

KNOWLAND RUNS

In California, Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, was pitted against Democratic Atty. Gen. Edmund G. Pat Brown in both primaries under the state's unique cross-filing system. The two were expected to win their party's nomination handily.

But the size of the vote for each was regarded as a barometer of the outcome of their "winner take all" race next November.

REFERENDUM ON STADIUM

The Knowland-Brown race, important as it was to national politics, was almost overshadowed by the Los Angeles referendum to determine whether the erstwhile Brooklyn "Bums" would get their site in Chavez Ravine for their proposed new stadium.

Opponents of the stadium plan have charged that the donation of the land to the Dodgers would amount to a vast giveaway of valuable city-owned property.

ALABAMA ELECTION

In the Alabama election, Atty. Gen. John Patterson was pitted against Circuit Judge George C. Wallace in a run-off of their May 3 race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, in which neither obtained a majority vote.

The Democratic nomination is tantamount to election in Alabama. Patterson's father was attorney general at the time he was slain during his crackdown on criminals in Phenix City.

COMMITTEE SEATS AT STAKE

Also at stake in Alabama were nine of 72 seats on the state Democratic committee. One of the rival slates was pledged to support the party's 1960 presidential nominee. The other reserved the right to support a possible third party "states' rights" candidate.

In the South Dakota primary, Lt. Gov. Houck and Atty. General Phil Saunders were the top candidates for the GOP gubernatorial nomination to succeed Gov. Joe Foss, who is ineligible to succeed himself.

Foss, a World War II Marine flying hero, sought the Republican nomination for the House seat that was won by Democratic Rep. Geo. McGovern two years ago.

Gallop Poll Says Democrats Hold Most Negro Votes

Princeton, N. J. (ANP) — A perennial survey of the Gallup Poll disclosed that the Democrats have lost little of their hold on the Negroes' votes. As a matter of fact, the poll finds that GOP efforts to woo Negroes to the party on the civil rights issue has been a failure.

This "failure" is attributed to a belief that Negroes both of the North and South, feel the Democrats have their economic interests at heart — or a case of Detroit's unemployment lines having more political significance than Little Rock's picket cordons.

Asked "which party would you like to see win in this state," Northern Negroes are said to have voted 27 per cent GOP against 73 per cent Democratic, against a 1954 percentage of 23 and 77, respectively. In the South, the present figures were quoted as being 36 GOP, 74 Democrats, against 1954's 27 and 73 respectively.

In other aspects of the poll, samplings of Negro opinions were:

1. 2-1, More people would be out of work in the months ahead.

2. 2-1, Business slump will not disappear in time and the government will have to help cure it.

3. 3-1, Democrats can do a better job of keeping the country prosperous.

SOUTH MAPS MOVE FOR 1960 VICTORY

Seeks a Decisive Role in Presidental Outcome by Controlling Electoral Vote

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 4—A movement to gain for the South a possibly decisive voice in the 1960 Presidential election is taking shape. It won popular endorsement in Alabama's primary election yesterday.

Southern Senators confirmed that the aim may be to forestall popular election of either the Democratic or Republican Presidential nominee and throw the selection into the House of Representatives.

This would be accomplished by withholding enough electoral votes from the major party nominees so that neither would have the required 267-vote majority in the Electoral College.

Southerners contend that they would have great bargaining power in the selection of a President by the House where each state delegation, regardless of size, would have a single vote. In the Electoral College, the state vote is determined by population, with New York having forty-five votes for example, and Vermont only three votes.

Influential Senators said that the project was not confined to Alabama, but was under discussion in several states. It poses a greater threat to the Democratic nominee than the Republican candidate because these states normally vote the straight Democratic ticket.

'Democratic Electors

The strategy would be to name as "Democratic" electors persons who were not pledged to support the nominee of their party but who would be free to vote in the Electoral College for any person. The Constitution imposes no binding obligation on an elector, but the Electoral College proceedings since the development of the modern two-party system have been mere formalities, with electors, as a matter of conscience, voting for the candidates of the party that elected them.

The plan would become effective if Southern leaders decided that both the Democratic and Republican Presidential nominees were unacceptable to them because of their strong views on enforcement of public school integration.

It is a refinement of the 1948 Southern party bolt, which narrowly missed denying election to Harry S. Truman. Southerners argue it may have wider popular support and a greater chance of success two years hence in the wake of enforcement actions certain to take place in the future toward racial desegregation of the public schools.

The current plan is not to name an independent ticket for President and Vice President as was done in 1948, but to cast the electoral votes of some Southern states for "favorite sons" or regional candidates.

Movement in 1948

The States' Rights party in 1948 nominated Strom Thurmond, then Governor and now Senator from South Carolina, for President. He carried four states and received 39 electoral votes. Mr. Truman was elected with 303 electoral votes, just 36 votes more than the required majority.

The issue of national party loyalty was clear-cut in Alabama. The voters gave to leaders of the old States' Rights faction majority control of the elected 'seventy-two-member Democratic State Executive Committee, which establishes qualifications for Democratic candidates.

Bishop Sees Group Putting "Vote" Ahead Of Education

WASHINGTON, (ANP)—Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the white Methodist church stated last week that Negroes are beginning to put the right to vote ahead of school integration. The statement was made before delegates of the Baltimore annual conference meeting on the Western Maryland College campus recently.

Colored people of America, he said, are beginning to understand that the right to vote is "even more fundamental" than integration. "When the vote is there, the politicians are going to think in terms of proper treatment of Negroes."

The Washington bishop pointed to the transportation system in New Orleans which was recently integrated. Segregation was abolished on the streetcars and buses with "nothing happening" due to the fact that Negroes in that city have the right to vote and the "politicians know it."

Negroes are now realizing that politicians will accept integration more gracefully when the power of the Negro vote is sensed, concluded the Methodist bishop. He expressed great disappointment that "no strong Methodist voice" has been heard in the South on this issue.

Vote Right Violations In South Being Investigated

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON. —(UPI)— The head of the government's Civil Rights Commission announced Thursday the commission has authorized investigations of alleged violations of Negro voting rights in [illegible], Mississippi and Alabama.

Commission Chairman John A. Hannah held a news conference one of the investigations already has begun. He declined to say which. He said [illegible] They were asked to make reports which will be analyzed by the commission.

Charges already have been filed in Georgia's Terrell County, in the first specific action since establishment of the commission. The action alleges that the Terrell County board of registrars violated the voting rights of five Negroes.

Hannah said that if the laws were being violated he believed the reports would be turned over "to someone who can do something about it." He presumably meant the Justice Department.

TO MAKE BROAD INQUIRY

The chairman stressed, however, that the commission's main aim was not to correct individual violations but to make a broad inquiry into the pattern of denial of voting rights for reason of race throughout the country.

Gordon M. Tiffany, commission staff director, said the group's field investigators had encountered no trouble with local authorities so far.

"But I'm not saying they won't have trouble," he added. Tiffany said the complaints to be investigated in Florida, Mississippi and Alabama will be submitted by individuals who charged "in writing and under oath that they have been denied the right to vote because of race."

Hannah met with reporters following a two-day meeting of the commission. He said members had been briefed on the school integration situation in Arkansas and on the eight school integration cases in Virginia. He said the school integration issue was outside the scope of the commission. But he said "we have a real interest in it." In response to a question Hannah said no observers have been sent to Little Rock, Ark., and there was no plan now to do so.

Negro Vote Probe Slated for Florida

Ballot Denials Claimed

'Rights' Officials Also to Act in Alabama, Mississippi

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (AP)—The Civil Rights Commission today ordered investigations of complaints that Negroes have been denied voting rights in Florida, Mississippi and Alabama.

Chairman John A. Hannah told newsmen that investigators already are at work in one of the states.

Saying, "We don't want to make their work more difficult," he declined to say which of the states is the scene of the first actual investigations. He provided more than sketchy information about any of the complaints.

He wouldn't say where in each state the alleged violations occurred.

Collins Not Informed

(In Tallahassee, Florida Gov. LeRoy Collins said he knew nothing about the voting rights investigation. He said he had received no complaints that Negro voting rights had been violated.

(Atty. Gen. Richard Ervin and Secretary of State R. A. Gray also said they had no word of the investigation and had received no complaints.

(Negro leaders have pointed to Gadsden County voter registration as evidence that Negroes cannot vote freely. Current registration shows 6,310 white Democrats and Republicans, only seven Negroes listed for the two parties. Negroes comprise 60 per cent of the population.

(Gadsden officials denied there is coercion. They said Negroes simply don't register.)

Multiple Complaint

Hannah described one of the complaints as a compendium of a number of individual complaints. He indicated that each of the others involved more than one person. But he would not say in which state the multiple complaint originated.

Hannah said he hopes there will be some reports from the field by the time the commission meets again, Oct. 22. The commission has been meeting here for two days.

Staff Director Gordon M. Tiffany said that so far there has been no refusal of cooperation by state authorities — "But I have to say that it is pretty early to say whether there is going to be any."

This is the first time the commission has announced the ordering of any specific investigations within its field of looking into alleged infringements on civil rights in voting, education and housing.

Report Back

Hannah said that if the investigators find the complaints are substantiated they will report back to the commission with as much information as they can obtain.

The civil rights law enacted last year gave the commission the right of subpoena to obtain information.

The commission might decide, on the basis of its investigators' reports, to hold public hearings on the scene, Hannah said.

As for turning over information to the Justice Department, Hannah said this is something the commission will have to decide in each case.

But he said that so far as he is concerned, he would assume that any information or violations of law which might be turned up would certainly be referred to the proper federal authorities.

School Briefings

Hannah, who is president of Michigan State University, said that the commission has its staff brief it extensively on the current court cases on racial integration of schools, specifically including the Little Rock case, to be argued in the Supreme Court to-

Race Registration Remains Constant Despite Pressure

The number of Negro voters in the South remained constant in the past two years despite increased racial controversy, the Southern Regional Council reported Saturday.

Currently, there are an estimated 1,238,433 Negroes on voting rolls in eleven Southern states, compared to 1,238,000 reported by the SRC in 1956. The latest figures, representing 25 per cent of Negroes of voting age, are contained in a preliminary report of a continuing survey following up its study of 1956.

Figures from six states came from official sources; in the others, the totals are estimates of veteran capitol news correspondents, who consulted with state officials and political workers.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own, and even showed a slight increase came in the wake of newspaper surveys which show that in the country as a whole the number of eligible voters has dropped in the past two years.

This figure represents "something of an achievement" in the face of the disinterest prevalent nationwide at the time of off-year elections and in view of recent trends in the region, the SRC said.

TENSION INCREASE

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first federal civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, a long list of federal court decisions to speed the Negro toward full legal equality and new statee laws to delay change in racial patterns."

In some states the number of Negro registrants rose appreciably between 1956 and 1958 but these gains were largely offset by sharp drops in other states due to purges and statewide re-registration.

In Arkansas, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, where official figures show a decline in Negro registration, the number of qualified white voters also dropped. The lower registration of both races in South Carolina was attributable mainly to the total re-registration this year, as is required every 10 years in the state.

Registration increased among both white and Negro citizens in North Carolina and Virginia.

In Louisiana, the white registration increased while Negro registration fell from 161,410 to 130,000 in the past two years, due in large measure o widespread purges in several parishes. Pro-segregation groups in that state have made a concerted effort to strike Negro voters from the rolls.

DIFFICULTY NOTED

"In certain areas," the SRC said, "it undoubtly has become more difficult for Negroes to register, because of new voting restrictions and stricter applications of the old requirements. In some sections where political leaders have fanned racial prejudices, Negroes are even more hesitant about attempting to register than they were two years ago. But, in many parts of the South, lack of political consciousness remains the greatest barrier.

"Leaders of both races long have contended that if all bars to Negro voting were removed tomorrow, there still would not be a great rush to the polls. This is not expected until Negroes have been able to rise their economic and educational levels, their leadership has been broadened and they have reached a position where their political participation promises more tangible results. Neither the new civil rights legislation nor the federal agencies created by it promise any quick or dramatic improvement in Negro suffrage. Even where registration boards are cooperative, a gradual process of political education obviously will be required."

But, the Council emphasized, "all this should not obscure the fact that the trend is upward and that the longrange prospect in the South is for a Negro registration comparable to the white."

Apathy Grips Negro Vote Drive in South

34e general

ATLANTA, Ga. (ANP)—Apathy among Negroes is hampering a concerted drive to up the Negro voters' registration strength in the South, it was disclosed last week.

Courier P.I. Sat. 3-29-58

The drive was launched last month by the Southern Christian Leadership Committee, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala. Its campaign of mass meetings in 11 Southern states, is aimed at doubling the present Negro voting strength by 1960. To do this, it must persuade more than 1,000,000 Negroes to qualify as voters.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

It is estimated that Negro voter registration in the 11 states totaled 1,200,000 in 1956, less than 20 per cent of the total registration.

However, in the first month of the drive, only a handful reportedly responded to the call. The drive was launched by a series of Lincoln Day rallies.

Reports from the various cities have been discouraging. In Montgomery, the County Board of Registrars reported a drop in Negro voter applicants. Birmingham reported "less since the rallies than before." In other areas, either there was a drop off, or no increase.

Said Dr. George W. C. Brown, president of the Virginia Voters League, Norfolk:

"Our big problem is to find out how to awaken the Negroes. We will just have to meet and work out some methods and techniques of overcoming the apathy, indifference, complacency and unconcern among Negroes."

ATLANTA, Ga. —(ANP) — Apathy among Negroes is hampering a concerted drive to up the Negro voter registration strength in the South, it was disclosed last week.

Power In "Big" Cities

Negro Voters Hold Key To Presidential Election

By Conrad Clark for ANP

Munich, Germany — The country's "second-class citizens" of the cities of New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit, jointly hold the key that will unlock the door to The White House in 1960 — for the Presidential candidate of the party that is able to line-up these citizens."

34e General

Cleveland, Ohio 4-5-58

I have just read "The Power of the Negro Vote. . . it can elect any President and the story reveals facts that are already known to both major political parties, and many top Negro politicians. . . but too often kept hidden from the voters themselves, who are too often unaware of their true strength and value in wielding, not a rifle, but the Negro's strongest and most powerful weapon — his ballot.

Louisville, Ky. 3-31-58

Moon's Remarks

A remark made by Henry Lee Moon, press representative of the NAACP soon after the election of the last Democratic Presidental candidate, Harry S. Truman, in discussing the power of the Negro voter definitely showed his power.

Mr. Moon said, "This vote was certainly a vital factor in the election of the President (Harry S. Truman) to the White House in 1948. Negro districts in Ohio, Illinois and California provided majorities for the Democratic candidate in excess of the slim majorities by which he carried these pivotal states."

Louisville, Ky.

Without belittling Mr. Moon's summarizing of the Negro vote, it can well be added, that the absentee ballots coming from Negroes in the service scattered throughout the Nation and the world in general, played a role in the final tabulations, and that "absentee' ballot will also come in for its share of counting, in 1960.

A total of 266 votes will put Mr. Candidate over the barrier, and adding up the votes these six cities can cast, putting their respective states in the winning column — New York, 45; Pennsylvania. 32; California, 32; Illinois, 27; Ohio, 25; and Michigan, 20, will give that candidate 181 electoral votes.

For concrete examples, a little reviewing of past winners within the period of six to eight years will bear out the strength of these figures.

In Philadelphia a Democratic Mayor was elected to office, a feat that took more than a score of years to accomplish, and much credit was given to the Negro voters of the City of Brotherly Love.

New York

In 1954 New York returned a Democratic governor in Albany, and as former election years, Up-State New York was automatically placed in the GOP's winning column. . . but thanks to the predominantly Negro voters of Manhattan (Harlem) Governor Harriman's winning margin was brought to 11,125 over his opponent. The difference between winning and losing could well have been the 18,621 majority handed to the Governor in the 12th District of Harlem.

(Editor's Note: The writer feels very personal about this particular district in Harlem, as for many years he was a District Captain, and chairman of publicity of the Democratic Club of the 12th.

Thanks to the Ghettoes of Harlem, New York's millionaire Governor was swept into office, and not merely by the voters of Park Avenue.

Dixie Ban On Negro Voting Harming Nation

Pittsburgh, Pa.

BOSTON.—Because of the disfranchisement of Negroes a single "Mississippi vote is roughly equal to five-plus Massachusetts votes," Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, said here in an address delivered in observance of the 50th anniversary of the famous Ford Hall Forum.

Atlanta, Ga.

The vote of a Massachusetts citizen in discounted and his influence in his government curtailed" as the result of the denial of the vote to southern Negroes, the NAACP leader said in his address on March 2.

Chi. 3-14-58

"Both the fifth Massachusetts congressional district and the first Mississippi district have a population of 350,000 (1950)," he pointed out. "But in 1956, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of your state was elected in a total vote of 206,003; and Representative Thomas G. Abernathy of Mississippi was elected in a total of 38,021 . . . Similarly, Senator Leverett Saltonstall was elected in 1954 in a total vote of 1,884,500, but Senator James O. Eastland was elected in Mississippi the same year in a total vote of 105,526 Three-fourths of the eligibles voted in Massachusetts, but only one-tenth in Mississippi. Yet Senator Eastland, elected through disfranchisement, picks your federal judges, your U. S. attorneys, and handles as he pleases the civil rights legislation which Massachusetts supports."

34e General

Further, Wilkins pointed out "the widespread disfranchisement of Negro citizens is a national scandal and particularly so at this time, in world history when our country is calling for free elections in captive Iron Curtain countries and for self-determination in colonial territories. France, for example, may well point to the voteless Negro citizens in the South when our country urges it to do what we think is right in Algeria."

Meeting Set For April 27

WASHINGTON — Leaders in the effort to wipe out voting restrictions maintained against Negroes in southern states will report on their respective states at a one-day conference to be held here at the Asbury Methodist church Sunday, April 27.

Keynote speaker for the conference will be Aubrey W. Williams, long-time advocate of human rights and editor of the Southern Farm and Home, Montgomery, Ala.

Heading the list of those scheduled to report is Charles G. Gomillion, faculty member at Tuskegee Institute and president of the Tuskegee Civic Association. Gomillion will give highlights of the development that focused national attention there earlier this year.

Others reporting will be:

The Rev. Ben F. Wyland, Tla., executive secretary of Florida Council for Racial Cooperation and former executive secretary of the St. Petersburg Council of Churches; Austin W. Walden, Ga., an Atlanta attorney who has figured in many civil rights and voting rights legal cases; Kenneth J. Walker, La., whose factual reporting of efforts to purge Negroes from voting rolls won an award for his Colfax, La. weekly newspapers, The Chronicle; Aaron Henry, Miss., executive secretary of the Mississippi Regional Council of Negro Leadership, a statewide organization campaigning to gain voting privileges for Negroes;

Also, Mrs. Wilson Whitman, N.C. writer and editor who lives in Southern Pines, N.C.; Mrs. Andrew W. Simkins, S. C. long-time secretary of the S. C. State Conference of NAACP Branches; and W. Hale Thompson, Va., an attorney who lives in Newport News.

James Nabrit, secretary of Howard University, will summarize and lead a discussion after the reports. Rabbi A. Balfour Brickner of Temple Sinai will deliver the invocation.

In addition to their verbal statements, all participants will also file more comprehensive written reports, to be published for nation-wide distribution. The published document will also have reports from all the other southern and border states, including one on Maryland by Cliff McKay, managing editor of the Afro-American Newspapers, Baltimore.

Arranged and sponsored by a group of distinguished local citizens, the "Report From The South" Conference is being coordinated by the Southern Conference Educational Fund of New Orleans, La. Aubrey W. Williams is SCEF president. An outgrowth of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, SCEF has been operating since 1946 as an independent agency concerned specifically with the elimination of segregation with emphasis on interracial activity in pursuit of its goal.

General Chairman of the Washington conference is Bishop Edgar A. Love, of the Baltimore area of the Methodist church. He made the following comment on the project.

". . .We know that segregation is degrading both to those who suffer it and those who impose it. By bringing people of good will of both races together, so that they may understand each other and establish 'well-organized lines of communication,' they can present a united front against this tragic evil which bedevils our country. We want the public to know all the facts involved, see the hurts imposed, and come to their own conclusion. We believe in the common man — that when without emotional outburst he can calmly view the facts, he will come to a sane conclusion. We are an educational — not a lobbying organization."

Heading the Committee on Local Arrangements for the conference is Francis A. Gregory, an assistant superintendent of D. C. public schools. Other officers and subcommittee chairmen are: Mrs. A. J. E. Davis, Mrs. Selma Samols, Mrs. Muriel Alexander, Dr. Walter E. Hager, Hon. James A. Cobb, Dr. Charles H. Thompson, Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, Hubert Leckie, Harry B. Merican, and Mrs. Alice Hunter.

300 voting violations are listed

IN A NUTSHELL

- J. Edgar Hoover reports 1,289 Civil Rights investigations made by FBI in year.
- More than 300 violations found in right to vote.
- Five convictions made under the law.
- Justice Deparment has given 553 lectures on rights.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA) — In the fiscal year ended last June 30, the Federal Bureau of Investigation instituted 1,289 preliminary investigations of Civil rights allegations, according to the annual report of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI.

Federal prosecutions resulted in five convictions, the report states.

In addition, Mr. Hoover reported, FBI investigations of acts to deprive citizens of the free exercise of their right to vote in a congressional or general election and the right to have their votes counted as cast resulted also in five convictions.

MORE THAN 300 alleged violations charging interference with the right to vote were reported during the fiscal year, the report states.

Pursuant to legislation enacted by Congress and instructions issued by the Attorney General Mr. Hoover explained, the FBI is charged with investigating violations of rights and privileges guaranteed by the United States Constitution and Federal laws with respect to election laws, peonage and slavery.

By order of the Attorney General, he said, the FBI conducts a preliminary investigation immediately upon the receipt of a complaint alleging Federal civil rights violation.

THE FACTS gathered are promptly reported to the Civil Rights Section (now Division) of the Justice Department for its review, prosecutive opinion and instructions as to further investigation, Mr. Hoover said.

In accordance with instructions of the Attorney General, he added, full investigations are not conducted in civil rights cases unless the Justice Department or a United States District Attorney so directs.

In cases involving alleged civil rights violations by law enforcement officers (police) or personnel of other public agencies, Mr. Hoover stated, the FBI carefully avoids interfering with the orderly operation of the agency concerned.

HE SAID the FBI's first step is to contact the head of the agency — and the governor if a state institution is involved — and inform him of the complaint received and the FBI's responsibility to investigate.

"In these cases, as in all matters handled by the FBI," Mr. Hoover said, "the investigations are conducted in a thorough, factual and impartial manner."

Occasionally, the FBI director asserted, "an atmosphere of misinformation and local controversy arises in connection with civil rights allegations.

"THIS FACT, coupled with the increased awareness of and interest in civil rights matters, has placed additional emphasis upon the law enforcement officer's role as a guardian of individual rights and privileges."

To assist in better equipping police to meet this critical obligation, Mr. Hoover said, the FBI inaugurated a series of special civil rights schools in the 1954 calendar year.

Before they ended in November, 1956, he said, a total of 553 had been held at the specific request of police agencies.

In addition, Mr. Hoover said, hundreds of individual lectures on the topic of civil rights have been delivered before police schools by special agents in recent years, including 87 during the 12 months ended last June 30.

'The Rascals' come into their own

(An Editorial)

Now that the ballots have been counted and the sound and fury has died away, both sides in the off-year election contest are sitting down trying to figure out just what caused the electorate to vote as it did.

Since it is an established fact that people generally are inclined to vote the rascals out more than vote the angels in, it is a reasonable assumption that the Democratic landslide is more a reflection of deep seated dissatisfaction with Republican inaction than with enthusiastic approval of the Democratic leadership which has been none too inspiring.

Ever since the passing of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal philosophy the two parties have drifted closer together in the economic concept and even President Eisenhower's cry that the Democrats were "socialists and radicals" hardly rang true.

The socialists and radicals among the present crop of Democrats are few and far between, but the very fact that they are even a wee bit left of the diehard Republican Old Guard held forth sufficient hope to swing the election.

This means that what the Republicans attempted to brush off as a slight "recession" affected a lot more people than the party in power was willing to believe.

The campaign oratory in which the GOP spokesmen prated over the fact, or the alleged fact, that they were able to ride out the recession without resorting to pump priming and emergency spending programs, had an adverse effect on the electorate.

What the GOP seemed to be saying was "In spite of your fears you really didn't starve after all, so you should be grateful to us for refusing to give you a crust of bread."

This was a negative approach to a positive problem to millions of people.

The millions who lost long months of employment with its attendant suffering to themselves and their loved ones refused to forget this even after they went back to work.

The wounds were too deep to risk entrusting the next two years to people of that frame of mind.

The next recession may be worse and last longer, they concluded.

The voters saw to it on Tuesday that when this day comes they will have in high places the type of people who, by policy at least, are dedicated to the proposition of placing human needs ahead of a balanced budget.

They want in office people who think it just as important to defend American homes and families from economic want as it is to protect Formosa and Lebanon from external aggression.

They wanted to remove from office those dangerous conservatives who believe that any money spent to protect the welfare of American workers is wasteful, but spending billions abroad is a necessity.

The most important lesson of this election is that Americans have become sufficiently of age not to be frightened by labels and name calling.

Branding candidates as "socialists and radicals" is no longer enough to scare the voters. People want to know what kind of radicals they are.

If they are radical enough to want to see the blessings of American economy spread to the many instead of the few then apparently America likes that ind.

GENERAL

Rise sharp in some states—

Number of Negro voters in Dixie same but trend up

ATLANTA, Nov. 1 (AP)—The number of Southern Negro voters has remained constant since 1956 but the trend is upward and the long range prospect is for Negro registration comparable with Whites, the Southern Regional Council reports.

Currently there are an estimated 1,238,488 Negroes on voting rolls—25 per cent of the eligibles—in 11 Southern States compared to 1,238,000 two years ago, the council said in a survey.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own and even showed a slight increase, is an achievement in view of racial controversy and disinterest in an off-year election, the council said.

It noted a drop in the number of eligible voters in the country as a whole.

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first Federal Civil Rights legislation since reconstruction, a long list of Federal Court decisions to speed the Negro toward full legal equality and new state laws to delay change in racial patterns."

IN SOME STATES the number of Negro registrants rose appreciably during the period, but these gains were largely offset by sharp drops in other states due to purges and statewide re-registration, said the SRC, an interracial organization of religious, educational, labor, business and professional men.

The report said if all bars to Negro voting were removed tomorrow, there still would not be a great rush to the polls.

"This is not expected until Negroes have been able to raise their economic levels, their leadership has been broadened and they have reached a position where their political participation promises more tangible results. Neither the new Civil Rights legislation nor the Federal agencies created by it promise any quick or dramatic improvement in Negro suffrage. . ."

But the council emphasized "all this should not obscure the fact that the trend is upward and that the long range prospect in the South is for a Negro registration comparable to the White."

FIGURES FROM Florida, Georgia and South Carolina show a decline in both Negro and white regisration. Both registered gains in North Carolina and Virginia.

In Louisiana, the white registration increased while Negro registration fell from 161,410 to 130,000 "due in large measure to widespread purges in several parishes."

In certain areas, the report continues, it undoubtedly has become more difficult for Negroes to register, but in many parts of the South, lack of political consciousness remains the greatest barrier.

The Negro registration by states and the Negro percentage of total regisration:

Alabama, 60,000, 6.9 per cent; Arkansas, 64,023, 11.4; Florida 144,810, 9.1; Georgia 158,051, 12.4; Louisiana, 130,000, 13.7; Mississippi, 35,000, 6.8; North Carolina 150,000, 7.5; South Carolina, 57,978, 10.8; Tennessee, 185,000, 13.2; Texas, 150,000, 6.8 and Virginia 131,626, 14.1. Total 1,266,488, 10.9 per cent.

Butler Wooing Negro Vote 'In The North'

Political Gimmick Laid To Demos Boss By Hoosier

By Scripps-Howard Newspapers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—Rep. Charles B. Brownson (R., Indianapolis) charged today that the strong stand for civil rights now being taken by Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler, is "just a political gimmick to snare the Negro vote in the Northern states."

Chairman Butler has had Southern senators fuming, since his Sunday TV invitation for those who disagree with a strong civil rights plank in the Democratic platform for 1960 to "walk out." Mr. Butler failed to back-track, however, when he addressed the National Press Club here.

As Club President John Horner said at the kick-off of the luncheon yesterday:

"Mr. Butler is a man who believes in equal rights for everyone—except Southern Democrats."

The Democratic chairman, who also is the Indiana National committeeman from South Bend, fielded the ball as soon as he got to his feet. He quipped that, before the luncheon, he had been offered every kind of drink "except Southern Comfort."

And certainly his speech contained none. For he not only declared that the Democratic Party will draft a strong civil rights plank in the 1960 platform, but again repeated that those who don't like it can walk out. The Democratic Party is a national party and must stand firm for the rights of all people, he said.

"Racism is not a political issue, it is a moral one," Mr. Butler declared. "The Democratic Party can do nothing on a moral issue, but take a firm stand for what is right."

It was on this point, in the speech, that Mr. Brownson commented. He advanced the theory that this was a "political gimmick," cooked up here at the last meeting of the Democratic Advisory Committee.

After that meeting ex-President Truman and Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) began advancing the same strong stand for civil rights, upon which Chairman Butler has elaborated.

"Southern senators and congressmen, up for election this year, have won their primary and have no contest now," Mr. Brownson pointed out. "This makes it easy for Mr. Butler to talk [illegible]

...ing to save Gov. Averell Harriman and the Democratic ticket in New York, to cite a state where the Harlem vote may be controlling.

"After the Democrats are in again, nothing will be done about civil rights. Southerners will be back in control of all the important congressional committees. It is a perfect political gimmick a 'heads I win, tails you lose proposition.' It is easy to see why Paul Butler is bearing down on it."

Mr. Butler, in his Press Club speech, also bore down on other assets of Southern congressional control, under Democratic leadership. He said he would like to see the committee chairmanship based on something better than the seniority system. He cited the late Vice President Barkley of Kentucky as taking the same position. He also cited Mr. Barkley's saying "nothing better yet has been found to replace the seniority system!"

Mr. Butler said he could be replaced at any time as national chairman, "whenever there was a majority of the national committee members ready to vote to do so." He didn't seem afraid they would, however.

State Voting Age Population Rises

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 (AP)—Alabama's voting age population has increased about 54,000 to a total of [illegible] for the November, 1958 general election.

This is an estimate of the Census Bureau. It does not include those of voting age who are in military service.

The civilian population of voting age includes a great many persons who, though old enough to vote, cannot do so because of requirements as to citizenship, residence, registration or payment of poll taxes.

About 104,600,000 civilians will be old enough to vote in the general election next month.

Views Negro Vote As Key In Race Integration Issues

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Not just around the corner but far down the road there appears to be one decisive home-grown answer to the South's problem of racial integration of its schools.

That answer would be a resounding "aye" in favor of integration. It could and may come from increased political activity by southern Negroes. The Negro vote already is a political powerhouse in the U.S.

James A. Farley always was easy in his mind during FDR's campaign when he could figure that he had the Negro vote going for his candidate. Farley estimated that the Negro vote was the balance of power between parties in 17 substantially industrial states outside the South.

Southern Negroes are more numerous actually and proportionately than are Negroes in the North. Disinterest, disenfranchisement and one thing and another, however, so diminished voting activity by Southern Negroes that they had practically no political impact.

CHANGING

That situation began to change some time ago and the change continues at an accelerating pace. The Federal Civil Rights Bill of 1957 was intended to speed the movement already under way.

The NAACP is campaigning to register three million Southern Negroes for the 1960 Presidential election. That registration in 1956 was about 1,300,000.

It is calculated that in 10 Southern states plus Texas there are about 9,100,000 Negroes and 27,500,000 white persons, 75 per cent of the aggregate population being white and 25 per cent Negro. The percentage of Negroes in these states is calculated as follows:

Virginia 22 per cent; Tennessee 16; Arkansas 22; North Carolina 26; South Carolina 39; Georgia 31; Florida 22; Alabama 32; Mississippi 45; Louisiana 33, and Texas 13.

It is obvious that if Negroes in any of those states other than Texas and Tennessee voted their potential strength and voted together, they would become a political power of tremendous possibilities.

REAL PRESSURES

That is what may come about and with it, perhaps, pressures on the southern political structure so severe as to bring about a real two party system.

Moreover, in local elections voting Negroes might put into state capitols and county court houses officials as enthusiastically in favor of intermingling the races as some of the present office holders are opposed.

News stories occasionally come out of the South indicating that southern political leaders are beginning to give serious thought to the likely coming role of the Negro in Southern politics.

The left wing or liberal wing of the Democratic party in the North is firmly tied to the Negro Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit Negro districts.

A majority supported the Democratic presidential ticket, but a larger proportion in 1956 than in 1952 went to Eisenhower.

Political stature of the Negro voter is increasing in the north as well as in the south. It was estimated a year ago that the non white (mostly Negro) population of metropolitan New York City had increased 42.5 per cent since 1950. The Negro increase was more than 36000.

Out of 76 million eligible—

Record 48 million are expected to vote

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—(AP)—Official and unofficial estimates today placed the nation's eligible voters for the Nov. 4 elections at 76,145,600. This is a record for a mid-term election.

And despite scattered reports of voter apathy, the same sources estimated the probable total vote in the 48 states at 48,131,226, including the 284,226 already officially recorded for Senate candidates in Maine Sept. 8 and also would be the highest for any nonpresidential year.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS tabulation is based on estimates gathered from state officials, party chairmen and in a few instances from veteran political writers.

It showed a gain of 1,268,454 qualified voters over the record established in the last mid-term election in 1954. However, it is about four million under the total of eligibles for the 1956 presidential election.

The estimated vote represents an increase of 3,683,730 over the previous mid-term highest vote in 1954. That total of 44,447,496 was reached by adding the top vote in each state whether for senator, governor or combined House vote.

The 1954 official vote for representatives was 42,582,927, including 22,366,386 for Democratic candidates and 20,016,809 for Republicans. The remainder went to independent and small party candidates. The largest presidential vote was more than 62 million in 1956.

THE ESTIMATE of 76,145,600 eligibles for this year compares with a Census Bureau estimate of 104,600,000 "potential" voters for the coming election (civilians 21 and over, 18 and over in Georgia and Kentucky). The potential vote has gained 4,377,000 over 1954.

Twenty-seven states show gains over 1954 in the estimated number of persons who have registered, paid poll taxes or otherwise met state voting requirements for the elections Nov. 4. The biggest gains are in California, 867,000, and Iowa and North Carolina, 200,000 each.

NINE STATES have qualified fewer voters than in 1954, although in some instances election officials said their estimates four years ago were too high. The nine states: Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, New Mexico, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Estimated registrations for 12 states remained about the same as 1954.

States showing gains of 200,000 or more in estimated vote, over 1954's combined House vote, are California, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio and Texas.

Only a handful of states gather official statewide registration figures. This necessitates getting estimates in most states.

CALIFORNIA'S official registration of 6,752,421 is an all-time high. It includes 3,875,630 Democrats and 2,676,565 Republicans This is a Democratic plurality of 1,199,065 compared with a Democratic margin of 851,582 in 1954. Hot Senate-governor races, plus a controversial right-to-work amendment on the ballot, have helped enroll 867,000 more voters than four years ago.

In Pennsylvania, almost complete official registrations show a total of 5,396,481, including 2,772,350 Republicans and 2,552,707 Democrats. The totals show the Democrats enrolled almost twice as many new voters as Republicans since the primary. Democrats gained 101,293 new voters, Republicans 54,171.

The Keystone state figures cut the GOP's traditional registration lead over the Democrats to 219,643, compared with 266,765 for the May primary and 907,114 in 1954 before the election of Democratic Gov. George Leader.

New York's estimate of 6,350,000 registrants—official totals are not available yet—is about 135,000 above 1954.

In Maryland, another state where registrants enroll by parties, the unofficial estimate is 1,227,473, with Democrats outnumbering Republicans by 504,620.

Report Only 25 Out of 100 Negroes In Deep South are Registered

NEW YORK, (ANP) — "You can complain all day and weep all night but public officials will not pay much attention to you. Local, state and federal governments listen to voters."

This is a warning given to non-voters in a little folder published by the NAACP under the title "Is your Name Written There?" on the voters lists. Readers are told:

"If you want to have a say about how you are treated as a citizen, you mus register and vote."

The apathy of the Negro is a problem of great concern to the NAACP and other civic organizations. The report that only 25 out of every 100 Negroes in the South of voting age are actually registered, is startling to some leaders. The folder says "Sixty out of every 100 white citizens of voting age" in the South "are registered."

In some localities fewer than 25 out of 100 Negro citizens are registered.

Henry Lee Moon, NAACP public relationist, is in charge of all regions in the current drive to get some more Negroes to qualify to vote.

Negro Vote Shift Seen By Alcorn

Predicts Gains By Republicans

By Walter Lister Jr.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Meade Alcorn, Republican National Chairman, predicted today that Little Rock's integration troubles will produce a lot of Republican votes eventually, but probably not in time for the Congressional elections this fall.

Mr. Alcorn, on the eve of the National Committee's two-day strategy meeting here at the Sheraton-Blackstone, said:

"As a long range proposition the average Negro voter is going to realize that the New and Fair Deals had twenty-one years to redeem their promises and didn't do anything."

Based partly on studies of vote shifts in Negro districts in New Jersey, Mr. Alcorn predicted a Republican trend among Negro voters would "improve in 1958 and show a very marked change in 1960."

Hopes to Win House

The national chairman winced as he was reminded of a remark he made last April, indicating his belief then that Republicans would not regain control of Congress this fall. His position today:

"I think we're going to win the House. I try to be realistic about these things. I think the Senate picture is tough, but much better than it looked in April."

Pressed to be specific, Mr. Alcorn would name only two places where Republicans might pick up Snate seats. He predicted that William Proxmire, D., Wis., would be beaten by Roland Steinle, sixty-two former Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice.

Symington, D., Mo., "is going to have the race of his life" against Miss Hazel Palmer, fifty-four, Sedalia, Mo., lawyer and retiring president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Mr. Alcorn claimed that Republicans would win back four governorships in November, but would name only one—New York.

Voters Go To Polls In 10 States Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ten states hold primary elections Tuesday, deciding on nominees for 8 U.S. Senate seats, 59 places in the House and 7 governorships.

has done much to end GOP domination of the Pine Tree State, was especially critical of Eisenhower on foreign policy.

Tuesday's primaries were in Florida, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, Utah, Arizona, Washington and Colorado.

One of the most interesting races was a bitter contest in Florida for the Democratic nomination to the Senate seat now held by Spessard Holland.

Holland, a conservative, fought it out with former Sen. Claude Pepper, who was a red hot New Dealer back in the Franklin D. Roosevelt days. Pepper lost his Senate seat to George Smathers in 1950.

Holland called Pepper a deserter from the white South on racial issues and also termed him a one-time advocate of softness toward communism.

Pepper said Holland was more of a Republican than a Democrat. He also accused him of trying to stir up racial bitterness. Both said they favor segregation.

Most newspapers supported Holland and he was favored to win.

Another former Democratic senator, Ernest McFarland, tried for a comeback in Arizona. McFarland, now governor, was opposed for the Senate nomination by Stephen W. Langmade, Democratic national committeeman.

The winner will face Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater, who had no primary opposition. It was Goldwater who retired McFarland from the Senate in 1952.

In Massachusetts, there was no opposition in top races. Thus it was decided months in advance that Sen. John F. Kennedy (D) who may run for president in 1960, will be opposed for re-election this November by Republican Vincent J. Celeste, a young Boston lawyer.

New England did offer one hot contest, in Vermont. There, Rep. Winston L. Prouty battled with former Gov. Lee E. Emerson for the Republican nomination to the Senate seat being vacated by Ralph E. Flanders.

ADA AID

Emerson accused Prouty of getting aid from the Americans for Democratic Action, a political organization that generally favors Democratic philosophies. Prouty denied it and accused Emerson of taking campaign money from out-of-state interests.

One House race attracting interest beyond district borders was the renomination campaign of Rep. Coya Knutson, Minnesota Democrat.

Mrs. Knutson's husband, Andrew, called on her publicly to quit Congress and come home. Campaigning in their hometown of Oklee Sunday, she didn't bother to call on him. He didn't look her up, either.

PROXMIRE FAVORED

In neighboring Wisconsin, the experts predicted an easy renomination victory for Sen. William Proxmire, Democrat who won a special election last year to fill the seat of the late Joseph R. McCarthy, Republican.

Five candidates tried in New Hampshire for the Republican nomination for governor to succeed Lane Dwinell, retiring Republican. Top contestants here were former Gov. Hugh Gregg and a former Gregg ally, Wesley Powell.

In Utah, Republican Sen. Arthur V. Watkins was favored for renomination. Frank E. Moss, Salt Lake City lawyer, was given an edge in his contest for the Democratic nomination to run against Watkins.

Colorado primaries supplied no opposition for Gov. Stephen L. R. McNichols, seeking Democratic renomination, or for State Rep. Palmer L. Burch, who will run against McNichols.

In the State of Washington, little trouble was forecast for Sen. Henry M. Jackson, trying for Democratic renomination. The only candidate for the GOP Senate nomination was William Bantz, Seattle attorney.

Civil Rights Voting Probe Draws Varying Comments

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Reactions varying from mild acceptance to outright indignation came Thursday from three Southern states named as targets of a federal Civil Rights Commission investigation of complaints that Negro voting rights have been impaired.

Gov. Leroy Collins of Florida said he had no objections to the probe provided it was carried out in a sound manner. Atty. Gen. John Patterson of Alabama, the Democratic nominee for governor, however, termed the investigation an "unwarranted invasion of states rights."

In Mississippi, authorities pointed out that federal investigations of possible violations of Negro civil rights have turned up nothing so far.

In Georgia last week, Gov. Marvin Griffin pledged the entire resources of the state to fight a federal civil rights suit filed against voting registrars in Terrell County.

Collins pointed out that the presence of a Florida resident, former Gov. Doyle E. Carlton Sr. of Tampa, on the commission would help assure its soundness.

The Florida governor said he had no idea what the federal agency would look into and that as far as he knew no complaints had been received about alleged interference with Negro voting rights.

But, he said, it was only reasonable to wonder why there are no Negroes registered in three Florida counties and only a few in some others.

The Alabama attorney general said in a statement that there is "ample procedure to protect the voting rights under Alabama law." He added that he has received no such complaints during his 3½ years as attorney general.

State statutes provide that anyone denied registration as a voter can appeal to circuit court and, if necessary, can go on to the state supreme court, he said.

The attorney general added there was no justification for the Civil Rights Commission's action in view of the absence of complaints filed with the state courts or his office.

In Mississippi, the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People has charged that Jefferson Davis County officials purged more than 1,000 Negro registered voters from the voting lists in 1956.

One result was Mississippi's first civil rights voting suit filed in federal district court. The Rev. H. D. Darby of Prentiss charged he was purged and he filed suit to be re-registered. The case has been taken under advisement.

Alabama, Sister States Face U.S. Vote Probe

Inquiry Set In Florida, Mississippi

The federal Civil Rights Commission Wednesday ordered investigations of complaints that Negroes have been denied voting rights in Alabama, Mississippi and Florida.

Commission chairman John A. Hannah said investigators already are at work in one of the states, the Associated Press reported from Washington.

Hannah declined to say which of the states is the scene of the first actual investigation or to provide more than sketchy information about any of the complaints. "We don't want to make their (the investigators) work more difficult," he told newsmen.

However, apparently no federal investigators are at work on voting complaints, in Alabama, reports indicated Wednesday night.

COLLINS UNAWARE

And in Florida, Gov. LeRoy Collins said he knew nothing about the commission's investigation; no complaints of voting rights violations had reached him, he said. Atty. Gen. Richard Ervin and Secretary of State R. A. Gray also said they had not heard of either the investigation or of any complaints.

The Alabama secretary of state's office reported that no reports of federal investigation had been received from boards of registrars in the state. Should federal officers begin probing local boards of registrars, the boards most likely would report the action to the secretary of state.

Circuit judges and other officials throughout central and south Alabama, where the Negro population is concentrated in the state, reported they knew of no civil rights investigators in their circuits and counties.

Officials said they felt such an investigation in Alabama was entirely unwarranted, declaring that Negroes are not being discriminated against.

In Macon County, where Tuskegee Institute is located and where Negroes outnumber whites 7-1, Probate Judge William Varner said he knew of no investigation by federal agents into vote registration methods.

Macon very likely would be included in any such investigation in Alabama because of numerous complaints by Negroes to the Justice Department during the past 10 years and because of a suit, unsuccessful though it was, brought against the board of registrars several years ago.

But. C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. (Negro), said he did not know of any civil rights investigators in the county Wednesday. "We've been filing complaints for the past 10 years," Gomillion said. He said the complaints went to the Justice Department before formation of the Civil Rights Commission.

TCA CONDUCTING REVIEW

Gomillion said the TCA is conducting a review of the Macon County Board of Registrars' record for the past year, the review to cover the period from Sept. 1, 1957 through Aug. 31 1958. The committee will report at a Sunday meeting. Gomillion said the survey is "for information" which will be used to determine if any other complaints will be filed now.

Chairman Hannah of the Civil Rights Commission would not say where in each state the alleged violations occurred.

He described one of the complaints. Hannah indicated that each of the others involved more than one person. But he would not say in which state the multiple complaint originated.

In Georgia, the civil rights division of the Justice Department has filed suit against five election registrars and deputy registrars accusing them of discriminating against prospective Negro voters in Terrel County, Ga.

Alabama Atty. Gen. John Patterson has sent two Alabama representatives to Georgia to observe the proceedings. Patterson, Democratic nominee for governor could not be reached Wednesday night, but he said Monday, in announcing the dispatch of the Georgia observers, that, his administration would offer "strong opposition" to any such federal interference in Alabama.

"We will battle them every step of the way," Patterson said. He termed the Georgia suit, first under the 1957 Civil Rights Act, an obvious attempt by Republican leaders to pick up votes for their party in the 1960 presidential race. He called the action "illegal and unwarranted."

Hannah said he hopes there will be some reports from the field by the time the commission meets again, Oct. 22. The commission has been meeting in Washington for two days.

Staff Director Gordon M. Tiffany said that so far there has been no refusal of cooperation by state authorities—"but I have to say that it is pretty early to say whether there is going to be any," the AP reported.

This is the first time the commission has announced the ordering of any specific investigations within its field of looking into alleged infringements on civil rights in voting, education and housing. The civil rights law enacted last year gave the commission the right of subpoena to obtain information.

Circuit judges in central, south and west Alabama, including the Black Belt area which is heavily populated by Negroes, chorused the opinion that there is no necessity for a federal investigation of voting rights in the state.

Said Circuit Judge Werth Thagard whose — Second Circuit includes Butler, Crenshaw and Lowndes counties:

"I don't think there's any occasion for it. I believe voting registration is carried on legally and with full regard to the 'civil rights' of everyone. The registrars have the whites and Negroes take the same tests and a good many Negroes have been registered."

PURELY POLITICAL

Judge George C. Wallace, fiery Clayton jurist who last year said he would jail FBI agents who sought to look into the jury lists in his circuit, said, "I don't think any investigation is warranted at all. Any such investigation would be a purely political maneuver, designed to harrass the officialdom of this state and another attempt to break down local government."

"The various departments of government in this state have always protected the rights of the people," said Wallace, unsuccessful candidate for governor in the June Democratic Primary.

Saying he had heard of no investigators in his circuit (Barbour, Bullock, Dale), Wallace observed "you can't tell where that bunch of sneaks are."

Judge Eris F. Paul of the 12th Judical Circuit (Coffee, Pike) said his counties would be "the last place in the world" the investigators should go. He said he had heard of no "trouble or complaints" about voter registration.

Judge L. S. Moore of the Fourth Circuit (Bibb, Dallas, Hale, Perry, Wilcox) also said no investigation had been reported in his circuit. But, the judge said that "as far as I'm concerned, if they want to send somebody in here to investigate—then our laws are all right, as far as I know."

In Montgomery, Tom Jones, chairman of the county Board of Revenue, said of the investigation report: It is my feeling that all people in Montgomery County who are qualified may register to vote."

Gov. James E. Folsom and Atty. Gen. Patterson could not be reached for comment Wednesday night.

SURVEY SHOWS

Northern Negroes Want To Vote For U. S. Supreme Court

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times said today that more and more Negroes in key Northern states are becoming dissatisfied with civil rights attitudes of both Republican and Democratic parties.

The Times said that indicates that more Negro voters will split tickets in the election next month and in the future.

But the newspaper said political observers believe that the Democratic party in the North, where most Negro voters live, still will get the majority of Negro ballots.

"In some states, such as Michigan and Pennsylvania, the party will increase its strength," said The Times.

In publishing the results of a wide survey, The Times said an unnamed Negro mechanic in Cleveland was asked how he would vote.

"I'd like to vote for the whole United States Supreme Court . . ." he said. "When it comes to this integration and civil rights stuff, neither party is worth a damn."

"In a survey of Negro voter sentiment in six key Northern and border states and California, The Times found that an increasing number of Negroes shared the mechanic's conviction that 'Neither party is worth a damn' on civil rights on the national level—and, in some cases, on the local level," the paper added.

Other states included in the survey are New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan. Illinois also has a heavy Negro vote, the paper said, but has no major offices to fill this year other than congressional seats.

"Many Negroes were quick to criticize 'the Democrats' for failing to 'whip the crackers in line in the South' on school integration," The Times said.

"They were just as quick to criticize President Eisenhower and 'the Republicans' for failing to take a strong position in favor of the Supreme Court's 1954 integration ruling and the 'moral right' of Negro children to attend integrated schools."

Negro Vote Drive Is Moving Slowly

Workers Often Find Their Relatives Unregistered

CENTERS ON PREACHERS

The Commercial Appeal-Chicago Daily News Special Service. Copyright 1958.

WASHINGTON, April 16. — The widely heralded drive to build Negro voting strength in the South is still struggling to get off the ground.

The first small results show how far it has to go.

The very families of politically conscious "build-up-the-vote" workers were often found to be among the unregistered.

In one Alabama town, a Republican worker with 27 brothers, sisters and cousins of voting age discovered that only four of them were registered. His drive started in his backyard. All of them are now on the books.

Preachers Cautioned

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which is building perhaps the biggest Southern Negro effort, centers its drives around preachers.

It has felt it necessary to caution the preachers to make sure they are registered themselves as a starter.

Only about one in every four Southern Negroes of voting age is registered, according to a Southern Regional Council study. In contrast, about 60 per cent of eligible white Southerners are registered.

As passed by Congress, the new Civil Rights Act was aimed at bolstering the right of Negroes to vote.

The NAACP announced after the bill passed that it hoped to at least double Negro voting in the South by 1960.

Clarence Mitchell, Washington bureau chief of the NAACP, has made trips to Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi to help set up vote drive organizations.

GOP Seeks Negro Vote

A Republican drive to register Negroes in the South started early this year.

The Republicans are heartened by a 1956 swing of Southern Negroes to the GOP.

GOP workers aren't objecting to having Southern Negroes register Democratic in the South, so they can throw their weight in the crucial Democratic primaries.

The new voters rounded up by the Republicans are generally expected to vote Republican in general elections, however.

Democratic headquarters here reports no co-ordinated drive to enlist Southern Negro voters. Most rural-dominated Democratic state organizations in the South however, are not eager to enlist more Negroes as voters.

The NAACP has referred to the Justice Department new troubles in registering Negroes in areas of Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama.

The NAACP hopes eventually to see Negro representatives elected from "Black Belt" districts, some of which have more than 50 per cent Negro populations.

In the short run the strategy is to hurl new Negro strength against senior Southern congressmen, many of whom use powerful positions as committee chairmen in Congress to block anti-segregation legislation.

U.S. ready to act on vote denials

By EDWARD PEEKS

AFRO Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON

"We hope to get started right away. Our job is very largely a legal job . . ." p. 1

Gordon M. Tiffany, staff director of the President's Commission on Civil Rights, declared as he pushed plans to investigate complaints of vote denials in the South.

Named director of the Commission last year by President Eisenhower, Tiffany's appointment has not yet been confirmed by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

However, informed Capitol Hill observers said he will probably be confirmed Monday. Southern opposition to the confirmation has subsided in recent weeks.

ONCE CONFIRMED, Tiffany will lead his 71-member staff in a probe of 100 complaints already on hand.

Last minute plans were made at the Commission's regular monthly meeting Saturday.

An organizational chart shows that the commission's staff will include four divisions with combined personnel of some 70 workers.

"We have people in line already for each of these divisions," Mr. Tiffany told the AFRO.

He was invited to attend the Conference on Voting Restrictions in the South, held in Washington Sunday, but declined on grounds that it "would be premature" to attend such a meeting before being confirmed in office.

On Saturday plans were made for commission representatives to appear Monday before the Senate Appropriations Committee to speak for approval of $750,000 already okayed by the House group.

That amount is requested to operate the commission for fiscal 1959. The sum of $200,000 is on hand from the President's emergency funds for operation through June 30.

The following commissioners were appointed by the President as a result of the civil rights bill passed by Congress last year:

Chairman, John A. Hannah, president, Michigan State University; Vice chairman, Robert G. Storey, dean of Southern Methodist Law School;

John S. Battle, former governor of Virginia; Doyle E. Carlton, former Florida governor; Dr. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, and J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of labor.

King Says He's 'Fired'

ALCORN, Miss. (AP) — Prof. Clennon King, controversial history professor whose pro-segregation writings set off a student boycott which almost closed Alcorn A&M College for Negroes last year, said today he has been dismissed.

"My stand has been for freedom," King said in a statement. "I stand for academic freedom. I stand for freedom of speech . ."

He displayed a copy of a letter from J. D. Boyd, president of the land grant college, dated May 1 and saying: "This is to inform you that your contract will not be renewed at the end of the 1957-58 school term. You are free to leave the campus at any time you wish."

Fear Apathy Blamed For Lack Of Negro Voters

Meeting Is Held In Washington

Washington, D. C. April 28 — Ignorance, apathy and intimidation are given as reasons why many Negroes do not register to vote in Louisiana and Mississippi.

These views were expressed Saturday in a Negro - white Conference on voting rights for Negroes in nine states. The conference was held under the auspices of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. The fund is headed by Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala., publisher and former head of the National Youth Administration in the Roosevelt administration.

Saturday's reports are to be turned over to the Civil Rights commission when it gets down to business.

Kenneth Walker, editor of The Colfax Chronicle, told the conference "I think the shortage of Negro registrants in Louisiana stems from essentially two things. One is lack of concern on the part of the Negro—a don't want to cause no trouble attitude. The other is plain lack of ability to read and write well."

Political Racials

Walker said voting restrictions do exist in Louisiana, with political as well as racial overtones.

Albert L. Powell, president of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, said the Negro registers and votes freely in only six of the 82 counties. The counties were given as Harrison, Hinds, Warren, Washington, Lauderdale and Coahoma.

In 42 counties of Mississippi, Powell said, every now and then a favored Negro is permitted to register. In the other 33 counties, he said, there is "gross intimidation that creates a fear complex to such an extent that the Negroes in these counties are in most instances afraid to try to register."

In most elections in Mississippi, Powell added, "The candidate that can yell 'Nigger, Nigger" loudest will be elected."

Power of Negro Vote Discussed

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Michigan State university professor said he thinks Negro voters can control the outcome of close national elections if they muster strength at the polls.

Dr. Oscar Glantz, professor of social science, told the Ohio Valley Sociological Society:

"In 1948, for example, (Harry) Truman carried Illinois, California and Ohio by 33,000, 17,000 and 7000 votes respectively. One writer notes that 'less than a 15 per cent switch in the Negro vote would have delivered all three of those states to Dewey, enough to have slipped him into the White House and made Korea a Republican war.'

Dr. Glantz said, "This is not to say that the Negro vote is sufficient in itself to assure political success (witness 1952 and 1956) but in the event of a close election in which differentials among white voters are largely self-canceling (and such an election may materialize in 1960, as in 1948), the numerical balance of power is clearly in the hands of the Negro body politic."

OXNAM CALLS DENIAL OF VOTE SUBVERSION

WASHINGTON, July 3 (AP)— Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam said today that a politician who swore to uphold the United States Constitution and then "cooperates with the forces that seek to deny the Negro the vote is a subversive."

Bishop Oxnam, president of the Methodist Church Council of Bishops, assailed racial discrimination in a prepared address to the opening session of a four-day Methodist Convocation on Evangelism.

"Once again the Ku Klux Klan burns crosses and masquerades in white," the Bishop said. "It proclaims its message of vicious racialism, anti-Semitism and religious bigotry. Many church members, who proudly declare they are 'saved,' belong to this un-American and un-Christian body. When the Ku Klux Klan burns the cross, it desecrates a sacred symbol."

Calling for Methodism to "turn the tide in the race issue," Bishop Oxnam said:

"The preacher who pledges himself to follow Christ and then stands silent in the presence of segregation betrays his Lord.

"The silence of Christians when the vote is denied Negroes, and segregation is enforced, speaks so loud the black men overseas cannot hear what our missionaries say."

Urges Negro in North to Ignore Party Line in Voting

Pittsfield, Mass. The northern Negro can and should use his vote to help fight the battle against southern segregation, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, asserted here last week.

The Association's top executive addressed a banquet on April 26. The affair was part of a regional meeting of the New England NAACP. He maintained that a small clique of Dixiecrats in Congress could not successfully block civil rights in Congress if they were not joined by northern Democrats and Republicans.

Negro Rights

"It is up to you whether you want to help make history," Mr. Wilkins told the audience. "Vote. Vote for good men no matter what party they are in."

"Oil men don't vote for candidates who are not for the oil interests," he continued. "You shouldn't find Negroes who vote for men who don't favor Negroes' rights."

The NAACP official cautioned his listeners not to condemn all white persons for the actions of a few.

"Most white people are ashamed of what's going on," he declared.

Southern Whites

"When you talk about southern white people, don't try and sweep them all in the same trash like they do you," he said. "If the southern politicians would take off the pressure, the southern white people want to do the right thing, and I'm confident they'd do it."

Mr. Wilkins criticized some northern Negro politicians and two Massachusetts senators, as well as southern white politicians. He said some Chicago Negro politicians have tried to block housing integration in that city because they fear it would put an end to their political power.

Sen. Kennedy

The civil rights leader had strong criticism for Sen. John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.) and Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.). They both voted wrong during debates on the Civil Rights Act passed in 1957, he charged. In addition, Sen. Kennedy has been friendly with various southern segregationists, including Herman Talmadge and Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia, the NAACP official said.

Mr. Wilkins blows hot and cold on this issue. When the civil Rights bill was before the senate last year, he took an entirely different position with reference to the majority party in that body stating that it would be held responsible for emasculating the bill as originally introduced. Editor.

Priest tells of fight for vote

WASHINGTON

"They are asking for a fight. They will get a legal fight and they will get a Christian fight."

Thus spoke a young Catholic priest from Mississippi on Sunday at the Conference on Voting Restrictions in Southern states at Asbury Methodist Church 11th and K Sts., NW.

He was Father John LaBauve of Mount Bayou, who visibly moved the interracial audience of more than 700 that overflowed into the church balcony.

Father LaBauve presented a copy of the resolutions passed by the conference to the President's Civil Rights Commission on Monday at 726 Jackson Pl., NW.

A DELEGATION called at offices of the commission in keeping with a resolution to "present the findings of this conference to the Commission on Civil Rights at the earliest possible moment."

Father LaBauve told of the determination of colored citizens in Mississippi after he finished a prepared report at the Sunday meeting on the struggle for the ballot.

"We ask for your help, for the help of the Federal government and for the help of Christians everywhere in this struggle," he said.

He presented the report of the Mississippi Progressive Voters League, Albert Powell, president.

This report was prepared jointly with Aaron Henry, executive secretary of the Mississippi Regional Council of Leadership.

COLORED CITIZENS vote in only six of the state's 82 counties, Father LaBauve said.

Many of these voters are on the list because they stand in favor with the whites, he said. "They are suffering from U. T. — uncle tomism."

Father LaBauve said a hostile registrar to colored voters died after denying a persistent citizen the right to register.

"Maybe that just goes to show that 'He Got the Whole World in His Hand,'" the priest said, taking off on the popular song.

The audience laughed and applauded, as it had applauded during serious moments of Father LaBauve's appeal to the heart of America for social justice.

HOLDS DENYING VOTE TO NEGRO IS SUBVERSIVE

Washington, July 3 (AP)—Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam said today a politician who swears to uphold the United States Constitution and then "coöperates with the forces that seek to deny the Negro the vote is a subversive."

Bishop Oxnam, president of the Methodist church Council of Bishops, assailed racial discrimination in a prepared address to the opening session of a four-day Methodist convocation on evangelism.

Warns Against Klan

"Once again the Ku Klux Klan burns crosses and masquerades in white," the bishop said. "It proclaims its message of vicious racialism, anti-Semitism and deligious bigotry. Many church members, who proudly declare they are 'saved,' belong to this un-American and un-Christian body. When the Ku Klux Klan burns the cross, it desecrates a sacred symbol. . . ."

Calling for Methodism to "turn the tide in the race issue," Bishop Oxnam said:

"The preacher who pledges himself to follow Christ and then stands silent in the presence of segregation betrays his lord.

Hits Denial of Vote

"The silence of Christians when the vote is denied Negroes, and segregation is enforced, speaks so loud that black men overseas cannot hear what our missionaries say."

Bishop Oxnam said reasonable progress toward racial integration "will take time and sensible men know it." But he asked "by what argument, Christian or democratic, can any American plead for delay in granting the franchise to a fellow American. . . . Surely the blood stream is not polluted when a Negro votes."

Urges More Evangelism

In the keynote address to the convocation, Bishop W. Angie Smith of Oklahoma City urged greater emphasis on Evangelism.

"The time has arrived," he said in a prepared address, "for Methodism to know that any other than an evangelistic church will be a failure. . . . The only possibility of saving our civilization from decay and ruin is in the message from the evangelistic church."

The South Will Lose Some Votes

A report by the office of the Department of Commerce gives a fresh breakdown on the possible shifts in proportional representation in the House of Representatives in 1960. The South fares somewhat poorly.

The Department breaks this region down into the South Atlantic, East South Central and West South Central sections.

In the South Atlantic, Maryland by 1962—when such representation would become effective—would gain a seat. West Virginia would lose one, so would North Carolina and Georgia. Florida would gain three. Net, one seat. The gain in Maryland might or might not be significant from the Southern legislative point of view.

In the East South Central States, Alabama and Mississippi would each lose one.

In the West South Central, Arkansas would lose two, but Texas would gain two.

As can be seen, from one point of view the shifts might not affect the Southern position very greatly. But the gains in such states as Maryland and Florida might not be equivalent to holding such seats in Arkansas, Alabama and Mississippi.

We have no explanation for the Maryland gain except continued steady Seaboard state growth. But the losses in other Southern states are much to be regretted.

They point up anew the need of efforts to keep our people at home through more and more jobs, better opportunities, and still better prospects of happy living.

"Confidential" Magazine Cites "Power Of Negro Vote" In Stirring April Issue

In "CONFIDENTIAL," the monthly magazine, which has been much in the news in recent months because of a lawsuit is a "confidential" political prognostication, beginning on page 18. Its title is "The Power of the Negro Vote." Its author is listed as a person named Richard Wilson.

The final paragraph on page 54 reads as follows:

"Which way will the Negro vote go? The answer won't be known for sure, until some time after the polls close on election day in November, 1960. But one thing is sure right now—Mr. Potential Candidate had better turn his thoughts to those 181 big electoral votes and start to figuring how he can get the Negroes of America into his corner—or at least the millions of Negro voters of New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit.

"Because they, the country's second class citizens are the constituents who may chart his political future for him. They are the ones who may very well decide whether he (the candidate) winds up in the White House or in the doghouse."

Of course the "Confidential" article is quite readable but Negro leaders who profess to be able to forecast the behavior of Negroes in national elections have already made prediction of what will be the Negro voter's behavior in the [illegible] presidential election.

It is that Negroes in the Northern area of the country will vote overwhelmingly for the Republican presidential candidate, who at present is looked upon as sure to be young Richard M. Nixon, the vice president.

The "Confidential" magazine records one of those "read 'em and weep" paragraphs in its article. It deals with the prediction about Negroes being able to assure the victorious party 181 electorial votes. It says these will come from the big cities in states with electoral votes as follows: New York 45; Pennsylvania, 32; California 62; Illinois 27; Ohio 25; and Michigan, 20.

As to the reason which will prompt the voting due to swing these states into the Republican column in 1960, "Confidential points to the big vote Negroes cast in New York City, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit and then says:

"The sending of Federal troops to Little Rock undoubtedly cost the Republicans whatever gains the party may have won in the Solid South in recent years, but this setback could be balanced by the ballots of millions of big city Negroes who have soured on the Democratic Party because of the South's segregationist stand.

"Too many embittered Negroes, all Democrats are Governor Faubus, and vice verse. They have a vivid, burning recollection of press and television pictures showing Negro children heckled and spat upon, Negro clergymen kicked and beaten."

Once upon a time it was a favorite prediction of Republican spellbinders, in estimating their chances of overwhelming the Democrats in elections was: "Remember we can depend upon the Democrats to act a fool at the right time."

Of course it is unfair to hold all Democrats, even those in the South as being blood relatives of Faubus of Arkansas. But at present Northern Democrats have become just as harsh toward Faubus and other Southern Democrats who are segregationists as any Republicans. It is now well known in political circles, that Democrat leaders have about by-passed their National Committee and have created a Northern "Policy" contingent of their party they mean to use as the "front" element slated to make the appeal to Negroes.

Northern leaders are bitter not only because of the Little Rock tragedy, but also because of the number of attempts to outlaw the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in their states.

Many white Northerners are not only paying members of the NAACP, but are on its board of directors; some are life members, which cost them a joining fee of $500.00.

Democrats very naturally fear the loss of control of Congress—the House and Senate. This could come as a result of the defeat of Northerners for the Senate and House in the congressional elections in 1960—and may come in 1958, all because of the desertion of the big Negro following that was built up during the Roosevelt regime.

FDR was shrewd enough to "play down" mention of his party as Democrats and stressed it was the "New Deal" party. He was followed by Harry S. Truman, who stressed the fact that his followers were the "Fair Deal" party. Both were "copy-cats" of Theodore Roosevelt who made the "Square Deal" the shibboleth of his brand of Republicans.

In the year of 1904, with Theodore Roosevelt the presidential candidate of the Republicans and Alton B. Parker of New York the candidate of the Democrats, Roosevelt not only was overwhelmingly elected but in that election young Franklin D. Roosevelt supported [illegible] Roosevelt.

FDR in later years was bold enough to tell the world that he had not always voted the Democrat ticket. He was referring particularly to the way he voted in 1904. Franklin D. also told the Democrats to their teeth that they did not have enough votes to elect a president of the United States

It will be remembered that in 1958, Harry S. Truman wanted to bypass the nomination for president if he could get Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to announce as a Democrat candidate. "Ike" refused with the well known results that followed in 1952 and 1956.

At present the brightest prospects for the Democrats is that they may again mobilize their forces in all states of the South for a Democrat victory.

But confronting them is the fact that whereas the South is loosing its numerical strength, the North is gaining increased strength and Negro voters are not only gaining voting strength "Up North" but giving Democrats Down South much worry because Republicans and those white leaders called "fuzzy liberals" are uniting to cast Democrats of the current variety into "outer darkness."

Unless the Southern contingent changes its "interpositionist" mood, stops attacking the Supreme Court because of the 7954 decision that was based uopn the 14th Amendment, and unanimously promulgated by the Court—the "bad" Southern Democrats like Faubus will surely get their party "all dressed up with nowhere to go."

Yes, it is just like "Confidential Magazine" has indicated in its April article: Orvall Faubus, Goveronr of Arkansas has done more to unite the Negro citizens of this country than anybody since Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863. That was 95 years ago.

Georgia and Virginia said alike in voting matters

RICHMOND

John Brooks, director of political action for the Virginia State Conference of NAACP Branches, returned last week from Savannah, Ga. where he made a survey of the voting picture.

He told the AFRO: "Georgia and Virginia are very much alike in voting matters. In Georgia — just like this state —legislators are trying to find some way to keep colored persons from voting in large numbers.

"Georgia is presently moving toward the enactment of a poll tax law — similar to the one here.

"Naturally, therefore, registration among colored persons is progressing.

"In Savannah, the Chatham County Voters Council was recently formed and has as its goal the registration of every eligible citizen.

"AS YOU KNOW, in Georgia the voting age starts at 18. There was an unsuccessful effort to get the 18 - year - old vote here.

"Georgians seem to think that it's a good thing to get voters started early."

Turning his attention to the progress of voter registration on the local front, Mr. Brooks said:

"Because of the repeated attacks, insults and threats being made in Virginia today—the voting picture among colored persons is brighter than it has been for some time.

"Instead of discouraging them, these attacks etc. have had the effect of a challenge which colored Virginians are accepting.

"I expect that in the coming months, we will see overwhelming evidence that these bullying tactics by legislators and newspapers are going to bounce back and explode in the faces of the originators.

"SO DESPERATE are the bigots now that no secret is being made of the fact that much of the suggested legislation in this session of the Assembly is directly aimed at crippling the colored citizen's fight for full freedom.

"Virginia will learn — just as Georgia will learn, that colored citizens feel that they have a stake in their state's affairs too — and they are going to be heard."

In the South: Federal Watchdogs . . .

The Justice Department intends to keep a quiet but close eye on primary elections in the South this spring and summer.

The target: Any instance of Negroes being deprived of the right to vote.

The Civil Rights Act passed last year provided stiff penalties against election officials who disenfranchise qualified Negroes.

Justice Department officials and Negro leaders as well believe that a swift crackdown and vigorous prosecution of the first violation will go far to discourage others.

Primaries to watch: Alabama, May 6, and North Carolina, May 31.

NEGRO VOTERS—Any new civil-rights legislation probably will never get out of committee. The Republicans are disillusioned at the failure of many Negro voters in recent local elections to shift allegiance to them. Democrats don't want to risk more party wounds like those opened by Little Rock.

Ike and the Negro Vote

Republican Party workers were dismayed at Ike's recent speech to newspaper publishers urging a go-slow policy on integration.

Some 350 Negro publishers and civic leaders, most of them militant integrationists, were in the audience. They reacted to Ike's comments immediately and unfavorably.

The GOP workers, who had been working to hold the big Negro vote the President got in 1956, fear the effect this may have on their labors.

Lincoln Day rally fails—

Southern Negroes apathetic over voter registration

By The Associated Press

Negro voter registration continues to lag in the South despite Lincoln Day rallies last month that triggered a drive aimed at doubling their strength in Dixie elections by 1960.

In a few of the 20 cities where Feb. 12 kickoff rallies were held, Negro registrations were below normals an Associated Press survey indicated today.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala., began its campaign with mass meetings in 11 Southern states. To achieve its goal, the SCLC must persuade more than a million Negroes to qualify as voters. In the first month of the drive only a handful responded.

AT MONTGOMERY, where King gained national attention as leader of a Negro boycott of buses in 1956, the chairman of the County Board of Registrars reported a drop in Negro voter applicants below normal. And at Birmingham, Chairman W. D. Gwin of the Jefferson County board said Negro registrations "have been less since the Lincoln Day rallies than before."

Elsewhere, the story from county and state officials was much the same: if no dropoff occurred, no increase resulted.

The SCLC drive covers Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Negro voter registration in the 11 states totaled roughly 1,200,000 in 1956—less than 20 per cent of the total registration—but the estimate is very rough. Many counties do not classify voters by race and many that do make no separate totals but merely mark each registration card "W" or "N." Mississippi, surprisingly, has no law providing for a breakdown by color.

SOME NEGRO leaders said the drive hasn't really begun. Generally, SCLC spokesmen declined to comment on their progress.

"Preparations are being made to increase Negro registration considerably," said Z. Alexander Looby, president of the Nashville, Tenn., branch of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People and a city councilman. But the drive "hasn't started," he added.

Lethargy among Negroes is a stumbling block, said Dr. George W. C. Brown of Norfolk, president of the Virginia Voters League, Inc.

"Our big problem is to find out how to awaken the Negroes," the Negro leader declared. "We will just have to meet and work out some methods and techniques of overcoming the apathy, indifference, complacency and unconcern among Negroes on this whole matter of registration and voting."

HERE IS THE picture by states:

Alabama—No registration upsurge in Mobile, a slight dropoff at Birmingham and Montgomery. Estimated 58,000 Negro registration, 750,000 white. Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia have a poll tax. The other states do not.

ARKANSAS — No date or firm guesses available on whether Negro applicants up or down since Lincoln Day. State auditor says 64,023 eligible Negro voters of state's 563,978 total. No Negroes registered in 14 of state's counties. Negroes lag most in eastern Arkansas where their population is heaviest.

FLORIDA—Little Negro registration since Feb. 12, only 32 new applicants in Duval County (Jacksonville). SCLC spokesman at Tallahassee said campaign "not really under way yet."

GEORGIA—About one million white registered voters and 150,000 Negroes, no upsurge since Feb. 12. A new law aimed at Negro applicants poses tougher questions for voter qualification.

LOUISIANA — No statewide registration figures available. Only 20 Negroes qualified at Baton Rouge since Feb. 12 compared with 163 white persons. New Orleans official noted no change at all in the flow of registrants, white or Negro. No comment from Negro leaders.

22,000 of state's 900,000 Negroes vote. Regional council of Negro leadership is sponsoring classes teaching state constitution in effort to boost voter enrollment to 100,000. Prospective voters must answer questions about constitution to qualify.

NORTH CAROLINA — Only four counties have continuous registration. Of these, three reported no increase in Negro registrations since Feb. 12. Guilford (Greensboro) had an increase, partly due to better facilities. Figures for other counties not available until May. Kelly Alexander of Charlotte, state NAACP president, says about 135,000 Negroes now registered. Goal is 250,000 more by 1960. Drive, not yet begun, will be aimed at nine Eastern counties called "Black Belt."

SOUTH CAROLINA—No upsurge in Charleston, Spartanburg or Florence, but increase reported at Columbia where books re-opened March 3 after being closed 30 days for city election. Negroes appeared in equal numbers with white persons on first day after reopening.

TENNESSEE—Some increase at Memphis, none at Nashville or Chattanooga. Qualified Negro voters comprise about one-third of Memphis voting population. No separate figures kept at Chattanooga or Nashville.

TEXAS — Has no registration; poll tax receipts qualify. NAACP drive, active in some places, half-hearted in others, had as goal 500,000 qualified voters. Has made no claims since deadline passed. Estimated 1956 eligibles ranged from 170,000 to 214,000. NAACP made no estimate. Dallas and Houston Negro leaders say increase in Negroes paying poll tax this year but won't estimate whether big or small.

VIRGINIA—No statewide registration figures available. Moderate increase in Negro registration at Warwick, but running about same for white and Negro applicants at Richmond, Norfolk, Newport News, Roanoke. None registered at Danville since February 12.

THREE JUDGES SOUGHT

Mayor's Move In Georgia County Unit Suit Sidelined

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan Tuesday refused to order a three-judge court to hear Atlanta Mayor William B. Hartsfield's suit attacking Georgia's county unit system.

The ruling was a rebuff to Hartsfield's effort to get a quick decision from the U.S. Supreme Court, which has thrice previously refused to upset the Georgia law requiring use of the unit system in primaries.

But Morris Abram of Atlanta, leading counsel for Hartsfield, said an attempt will be made to get the issue directly to the Supreme Court by asking the high court for a writ of mandamus to force Sloan to convene a three-judge court.

Sloan, after a hearing here Monday on Hartsfield's plea for a panel court, issued an order Tuesday denying the plea on the ground that the mayor's suit raised no substantial federal question. He said "previous decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States foreclose the subject and leave no inference that the question sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy."

Under the unit system, counties are assigned from two to six units according to size, with two unit counties predominating. Hartsfield filed suit seeking to have the unit system invalidated, charging that under it a resident of Fulton County has only 1-155th the voting strength of a resident of the state's smallest county.

He alleged that is a deprivation of his voting rights.

The mayor sought a three-judge court because appeals from such a panel can be appealed directly to the Supreme Court. Otherwise, a final decision probably could not be reached before the Sept. 10 state Democratic primary. Also, only a three-judge court can enjoin a state statute.

Which Way The Negro Vote?

(Daily Defender)

Now that the political pot has begun to boil, the perennial question about the Negro vote is being made the subject of major inquiries. Recent nation-wide studies by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate a slight shift of the Negro vote to the Republicans.

The survey shows, however, that Negroes of the North and South are still heavily Democratic in their Congressional preferences — chiefly because they feel the Democrats have their economic interest at heart. There has been a small shift to the Republicans since the last off-year Congressional election in 1954. But that shift has not cut too sharply into the overwhelming support among Negroes that the Democrats have enjoyed in past years.

Basic to the Negroes' continued allegiance to the Democratic party is their feeling that the Democrats — "the party of Roosevelt" — helped them most in the depression years of the 1930's and will continue to do the best job of looking out for them today.

The poll reveals that "economically, the northern Negro feels most secure as a Democrat. Historically, Roosevelt is a lot fresher in his mind than Lincoln."

A majority of Negro homes reported that the recession had already left its mark — chiefly in the form of unemployment. With a general tone of optimism reported for all voters across the country about the employment outlook in the next 6 months, the vote among Negroes interviewed was 2-to-1 that more people would be out of work in the months ahead.

By a ratio of 3-to-1, Negroes said that "they believed the Democrats could do the better job of keeping the country prosperous."

Demo Chief S

Plan Liberal Plank, Slate

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The Democrats cannot win in 1960 without the Negro vote. This fact was conceded recently by Chairman Paul Butler of the Democratic National Committee.

His opinion was expressed as a reply to a question raised by a member of the Capitol Press Club. The chairman hedged, however, on the question of whether he thought the party could win without the South.

"Well," said Butler, "we never feel that we would loose all of the southern votes, but the party has won without the majority of the south."

NOT TAKEN FOR GRANTED

Butler denied that the Democratic party has taken the Negro vote for granted. "There is no complacency in the minds of anybody on the staff of the Democratic Committee about the vote of the Negro or anybody else," said Butler. The Democrats expect to win the support of the Negro by advancing a "platform in 1960 that will be more liberal and forward looking than any the party has ever adopted and by offering the most liberal candidates ever nominated."

He believes that his party can win votes if it carries out an intensive campaign and educate the public and inform them of the issues and the facts and make an all-out effort to get out the vote.

HITS EASTLAND

When questioned on his party's stand on such men as Senator Eastland, Butler said Eastland does not represent the views of 75 or 80 percent of the Democratic party.

The Democrats disapprove of Faubus' actions at Little Rock, said Butler. His action does not constitute or reflect the policy of the Democratic party, he added.

The chairman blamed the Administration for the Little Rock situation. "The Administration did nothing to prepare the way for wider, deeper acceptance of the Supreme Court decision," declared Butler.

"The President could have called a committee of Negro and white leaders, or possibly a committee of educators to discuss and consider this problem. But the President dillied and dallied until it became necessary to take more drastic action.

"When he did act, he did the right thing," concluded Butler, "But he was so long acting."

In his prepared statement before the Capitol Press Club dinner, Butler predicted that the Administration will in the next session of Congress turn its back on all social and domestic legislation with the excuse that attention must be focused on armament.

The Democratic party believes that the program of progress in human welfare should be continued, he declared. "The fight must be continued for advancement in the fields of better housing, better schools, better medical care, and for the ultimate end of discrimination and denial of human right to some of our citizens.

"The fight for human rights—the fight against ignorance and prejudice and bigotry — is not a part-time program. . .it is a continued struggle. . .it calls for leadership by example and deed. . .It requires never-ending moral pressure against discrimination and injustice wherever they may exist."

NEGROES' VOTING DRIVE CHARTED

Goal of 2 Million New Registrations Set

By REX THOMAS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 2 (AP)—With a goal of two million new voters by 1960, Southern Negroes are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration campaign in 11 Dixie states.

The massive drive which would more than double the estimated number of Negroes now eligible to vote in the Deep South will start with a series of Lincoln Day rallies in 20 or more Southern cities Feb. 12. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) is among the Negro leaders scheduled to speak.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery, treasurer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is sponsoring the campaign, said his people will be urged to use the new federal civil rights law "wherever necessary to point out discrimination."

Meeting in Atlanta

Abernathy and other members of the conference executive committee will discuss detailed plans for the voter registration effort at a meeting in Atlanta tomorrow.

The Baptist minister said no state-by-state allocations have been announced but that the "long-range goal" of the campaign is two million new Negro voters within the next two years. He said the conference has adopted a budget of $200,000 to spend on the vote drive this year.

Abernathy said an estimated 1,238,000 Negro voters were registered in the 11 Southern states in 1956, only about one-fourth of the 4,980,000 Negroes of voting age.

By contrast, he said 60 per cent of the white residents in those states are registered voters.

Mississippi Low

The conference leader said Texas, with 214,000, led the Southern states in the number of eligible Negro voters while Mississippi, with only 20,000 estimated Negro voters in 1955 was at the bottom of the list.

Alabama had 53,366 last year, he said; Arkansas had 69,677, Florida 148,703, Georgia 163,389, Louisiana 161,410, North Carolina 135,000, South Carolina 99,890, Tennessee 90,000 and Virginia 82,693.

Abernathy said Lincoln Day rallies will launch the campaign in Atlanta; Montgomery, Birmingham, Mobile and Tuskee, Ala.; New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Shreveport, La.; Tallahassee, Chattanooga, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Dallas and Houston, Tex.; Clarksdale, Miss.; Durham and Greensboro, N.C., Columbia, S.C., and possibly others in Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia.

Powell is scheduled to address the Houston rally and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., of Montgomery, the conference president, will speak in Miami. King led the bus boycott which preceded the Supreme Court decision outlawing bus segregation in Montgomery.

Vote Rallies Set For 21 Cities In South

ATLANTA — Dr. John H. Hannah, chairman, and members of the recently constituted Civil Rights Commission, have been urged to attend and participate in the public mass meetings being held simultaneously in 21 cities in nine southern states on Wednesday evening, February 12 to launch the "Crusade for Citizenship" of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The invitations were extended by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the conference, following an all day meeting of the executive board held at the Ebenezer Baptist Church here.

THE "CRUSADE for Citizenship" meetings emphasizing the theme, "The Franchise is a Citizen's Right — not a Privilege", will spearhead a year - round South - wide registration and voting effort to double the number of qualified [illegible] leaders in attendance, [illegible]orida governor failed to [illegible] the usual blasts at the [illegible] tion and action," according to the conference announcements.

Cities holding meetings on February 12 are: Birmingham, Mobile, Montgomery and Tuskegee, Alabama; Jacksonville, Miami and Tallahassee, Florida; Atlanta, Georgia; Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Shreveport, La.; Clarksdale and Hattiesburg, Miss.; Durham and Greensboro, N. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Chattanooga, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Dallas and Houston, Texas.

Dr. Hannah has been invited to participate in the Miami meeting, at which Dr. King, Jr. will speak. The letter of invitation notes that "investigation of infringement of voting rights" would be first on the Commission's agenda, and expresses the hope that Negroes in the South "can depend upon its salutary influence on (their) registration and voting efforts."

145 Racial Laws Voted In South Since 1954

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 5—Enactment of 145 new segregation laws in eleven states during the past four years was reported today in the Southern School News. It said nine have been held unconstitutional.

The publication, which records developments in the school integration controversy, summarized legal actions since the United States Supreme Court's May 1954 segregation decision.

The report said that legislatures in five states are now considering bills or proposals for so-called "Little Rock" legislation.

20 cities in ten Dixie states set Feb. 12 meetings

ATLANTA, Ga. — Twenty cities in ten southern states will hold simultaneous public meetings on Wednesday evening, February 12, in cooperation with the registration and voting drive of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the conference, made the announcement Saturday.

Staged under the general banner of "Crusade for Citizenship" and emphasizing the theme: "The Franchise is a Citizen's Right — Not a Privilege," meetings have been scheduled in the following cities:

Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Mobile, Montgomery, Tuskegee, Ala.; Tallahassee, Fla.; Baton Rouge, New Orleans, Shreveport, La.; Chattanooga, Nashville, Memphis, Tenn.; Dallas, and Houston, Texas; Jacksonville and Miami, Fla.; Columbia, S.C., and Clarksdale, Miss.

THESE MEETINGS will implement the plans announced by the Leadership Conference at its last Nov. 5 session in Memphis, and will mark the initial step in its intensive year round program aimed at doubling the number of qualified colored voters in the South.

The Crusade for Citizenship will provide both "education and action" to assist colored persons in every southern state to register and to vote in the 1958 and 1960 elections.

Voting clinics to teach thousands to read and write and how to register will be set up in co-operation with local civic committees.

AS STATED by Dr. King, "The Southern Christian Leadership Conference will function as a service agency to help further registration and voting in communities where such efforts are already under way, and to stimulate other communities into action."

"Our major objective," Dr. King emphasized, "is to see that the colored masses give meaning to the recently enacted Civil Rights Bill by using it to the fullest possible extent. We will cooperate with any and all bona fide efforts to accomplish this result."

Dr. King also announced that the Southern Christian Leadership Conference has established its central office at 208 Auburn Ave., NE, Atlanta, and that the permanent staff will be completed in the near future.

Negroes Map Campaign To Gain Voters

ATLANTA (AP) — Negro leaders will launch a southwide campaign in two weeks to increase voter registration among Negroes in 11 states. The goal is to double the present number by 1960.

The "crusade for citizenship" begins Feb. 12 with Lincoln Day rallies in 21 cities.

"The main function of the campaign is to educate our people on their basic rights," the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., said yesterday.

"This movement is not simply a medium of protest."

States in which the drive will be carried on are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas.

The conference, King said, intends "to see that the Negro masses give meaning to the recently enacted civil rights bill by using it to the fullest possible extent."

Those planning the drive "expect to encounter some resistance in all of the states—mostly at the county level," King said.

The estimated number of Negroes registered to vote in the 11 states was 1,238,000 in 1956. That is about 25 per cent of the Negro population of voting age. About 60 per cent of white persons of voting age are registered in the area.

Lincoln Day Rallies Held Over South

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lincoln Day rallies throughout the South last night launched the "Crusade for Citizenship," a drive to double by 1960 the number of Negroes registered to vote in 11 Dixie states.

"We do not want freedom fed to us from teaspoons," the Rev. Marvin Luther King Jr. told a rally at Miami. "We want the right to vote now."

King, a Baptist minister at Montgomery, Ala., is head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is sponsoring the crusade.

Adam Clayton Powell, Democratic congressman from New York, addressed a rally of 2,000 Negroes at Houston. He said, "Any Negro who doesn't vote in Houston is politically lynching himself. In Houston no one stops you from voting."

Earlier, in an interview, Powell said the entire South will be desegregated within 20 years. "Integration should be started in kindergartens," he said. "In this manner the problem could be eliminated in 12 years."

The sponsoring organization estimated that about 15,000 attended the rallies in 17 cities.

Meetings were held at Tallahassee, Miami and Jacksonville, Fla.; Tuskegee, Montgomery, Mobile nd Birmingham, Ala.; Clarksdale and Hattiesburg, Miss.; Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Shreveport, La.; Durham, N.C.; Memphis and Nashville, Tenn.; Houston and Atlanta.

Houston and Memphis, with crowds estimated at 2,000 had the largest attendance. Forty attended the Baton Rouge meeting.

Rallies Designed To Register Voters

ATLANTA — Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York Dr. Martin Luther King, jr., celebrated Montgomery, Ala., boycott leader and Dr. C. L. Pettaway of Little Rock, Ark., and president of the National Baptist Convention of America, headed the list of outstanding ministers and civic leaders who spoke at the 21 "Crusade for Citizenship" meetings held in nine southern states last week under the sponsorship of the Conference.

Congressman Powell addessed the Houston gathering, Dr. King, jr., was featured in Miami, Fla., and Dr. Pettaway spoke in New Orleans.

Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee and Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, two of the embattled heroes of the south, spoke in Atlanta, Ga., and Shreveport, La., respectively.

Other meetings and speakers were as follows:

Birmingham — Rev. T. J. Jemison of Baton Rouge; Mobile — Rev. D. D. Chestang, of Mobile; Tuskegee — Rev. M. W. Wilson of Montgomery; Tallahassee — Rev. B. D. Lambert of Montgomery;

Baton Rouge — Rev. A. D. Scott of Shreveport; Hattiesburg, Miss. — Rev. B. D. Lowery of Mobile; Clarksdale, Miss. — Father La Beau, a local priest; Burham, N. C. Dr. Edwin Edmons of Greensboro; Chattanooga — Rev, J. L. Ware of Birmingham; Nashville — Rev. M. L. King, sr., of Atlanta; Dallas — Rev. R. K. Young of Little Rock.

Rev. Matthew McCollom of Orangeburg represented the Leadership Conference at the Columbia, S. C., meeting and Memphis presented an original pagent to emphasize the registration and voting theme.

2 million voters by 1960 urged

ATLANTA, Ga. — Southern colored people, setting a goal of two million new voters by 1960, are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration drive in 11 Dixie states.

The massive campaign which would more than double the estimated number of colored persons now eligible to vote in the Deep South will start with rallies in 20 or more southern cities on Lincoln Day, Feb. 12.

He said that the conference has adopted a budget of $200,000 to spend on the vote drive this year. An estimated 1,238,000 colored voters are registered in the 11 states at this time.

NAACP Calls On All Register To Vote

One of the ways all proponents of freedom may best help themselves and their fellow citizens locally and throughout the country," said Theodore R. Jones, president, and Gerald D. Bullock, chairman Legislation committee of the Chicago Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, "is for every eligible citizen to register to vote, and to vote in the coming elections.

"The right to vote is likened unto the two sides of a coin to the extent that one cannot recognize this right without undertaking to carry out the duties and obligations persuant thereto."

In the NAACP appeal for all citizens to register to vote, if they are not now registered, the NAAC leaders pointed out that these are "crucial times for all who support the fight for civil rights and equality of opportunity for all citizens regardless of race, color, national origin or religion."

"With the coming of Lenten season this year — we are reminded not only of the sacrifices one makes in the spirit of the Season, but also of the advantages and blessings that have been bestowed over the years. It is necessary to distinguish between our religious rights, duties, obligations and privileges and those which come to us as a result of man-made laws of government.

"While the NAACP is non-partisan, it is not non-political and the legislative goals of the Association can only be obtained by active participation of all citizens in the political life of the country," they stated.

"A large registration and a large vote in the coming April 8 Primary Elections will give all candidates for public office cause to think about the issue of civil rights," said Jones and Bullock. They added, "a large registration of now non-registered voters will serve to make political leaders aware that the people will no longer support them if they remain silent on vital civil and human rights questions."

They noted that "the act of voting is not only a right, but it is a duty. One which we hope will be taken as seriously by our citizens, as the Golden Rule."

The NAACP pointed out that those who should register are all citizens who are 21 years of age and have never registered; if your name has been changed (by marriage or otherwise) since you last registered; if you have moved since the last election or you have not voted for four years.

The polling place in each precinct will be open for registration on Tuesday, March 11. Prior to that date any one may register at the City Hall, Washington and Clark Sts., from 9 a.m. to 4:45 pimi, Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. until 12 noon on Saturday.

Drive Lags For Negro Registration

Associated Press

Negro voter registration continues to lag in the South despite Lincoln Day rallies last month that triggered a drive aimed at doubling their strength in Dixie elections by 1960.

In a few of the 21 cities where Feb. 12 kickoff rallies were held, Negro registrations were below normal, an Associated Press survey indicated yesterday.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala., began its campaign with mass meetings in 11 Southern states. To achieve its goal, the SCLC must persuade more than a million Negroes to qualify as voters. In the first month of the drive only a handful responded.

At Montgomery, where Mr. King gained national attention as leader of a Negro boycott of buses in 1956, the chairman of the county board of registrars reported a drop below normal, in Negro voter applicants. And at Birmingham, chairman W. D. Gwin of the Jefferson County board said Negro registrations "have been less since the Lincoln Day rallies than before."

Same Story Elsewhere

Elsewhere, the story from county and state officials was much the same: If no drop-off occurred, no increase resulted.

The SCLC drive covers Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia have a poll tax. The other states do not.

Negro voter registration in the 11 states totaled roughly 1.2 million in 1956—less than 20 per cent of the total registration—but the estimate is very rough. Many counties do not classify voters by race and many that do make no separate totals but merely mark each registration card "W" or "N." Mississippi has no law providing for a breakdown by color.

Some Negro leaders said the drive hasn't really begun. Generally, SCLC spokesmen declined to comment on their progress.

Drive "Hasn't Started"

"Preparations are being made to increase Negro registration considerably," said Z. Alexander Looby, president of the Nashville, Tenn., branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and a city councilman. But the drive "hasn't started," he added.

Lethargy among Negroes is a stumbling block, said Dr. George W. C. Brown of Norfolk, president of the Virginia Voters League, Inc.

"Our big problem is to find out how to awaken the Negroes," the Negro leader declared. "We will just have to meet and work out some methods and techniques of overcoming the apathy, indifference, complacency and unconcern among Negroes on this whole matter of registration and voting."

No statewide registration figures were available for Virginia. There was a moderate increase in Negro registration at Warwick, but registration was running about the same for white and Negro applicants at Richmond, Norfolk, Newport News and Roanoke. None registered at Danville since Feb. 12.

Negroes Plan Voter Drive In The South

Hope To Register 2,000,000 by 1960

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 30 (AP)—With a goal of 2,000,000 new voters by 1960, Southern Negroes are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration campaign in 11 Dixie states.

The massive drive, which would more than double the estimated number of Negroes now eligible to vote in the Deep South, will start with a series of Lincoln Day rallies in 20 or more Southern cities February 12.

The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery, treasurer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is sponsoring the campaign, said his people would be urged to use the new federal civil-rights law "wherever necessary to point out discrimination."

$200,000 Budget Adopted

The Baptist minister said no state-by-state allocations had been announced, but that the "long-range goal" of the campaign is 2,000,000 new Negro voters within the next two years. He said the conference had adopted a budget of $200,000 to spend on the vote drive this year.

By contrast, he said, 60 per cent of the white residents in those states are registered voters.

Last Month Of Winter

This is February, the last month of winter.

The almanac predicts 10 days which are to be unsettled with rain or snow, including a blizzard on the 9th. There will be 14 days of sunshine.

But many oldtimers will still rely on what happens Feb. 2, ground hog day, to determine whether six more weeks of wintry winds are to blow.

The first week in the month is Scout Week, the second has been treated as History week, the third as Brotherhood week and the fourth as Book Week.

We'll celebrate birthdays of the poet, Langston Hughes (Feb. 1) and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois (Feb. 23), who are living.

And those of Carter G. Woodson (Feb. 10), the historian; Thomas Edison (Feb. 11); Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln (Feb. 12); Richard Allen (Feb. 14), founder of the AME Church;

Also Hiram Revells (Feb. 20), first colored U. S. Senator; George Washington (Feb. 22); Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (Feb. 27); and Phyllis Wheatley (Feb. 28).

Wednesday, Feb. 19 will mark the first day of Lent.

A big registration-to-vote campaign for 20 Southern cities will be launched by the Rev. M. L. King on Feb. 12, Frederick Douglass' birthday.

The goal is one million new voters by the November elections.

This may be a movement of equal or greater importance than the integration of schools or the right to ride buses and trains without segregation.

Baltimore is way ahead of Dr. King. It started its registration campaign last April 1. It's total now is 66,187 of which 8,814 are new voters just registered.

The goal is 100,000 qualified voters and when that has been accomplished, there would still be 40,000 eligibles in [illegible] not registered.

Virginian Named to Direct NAACP Registration Drive

NEW YORK.—Appointment of John M. Brooks of Richmond, Va., as NAACP registration director, was announced here Feb. 20 by Roy Wilkins, the Association's executive secretary.

In making the announcement, Mr. Wilkins said that Mr. Brooks would head the Association's Southwide drive to reach a goal of 3,000,000 registered Negro voters in the region by 1960. He will be assisted by existing NAACP personnel in the region and such additional personnel as may be needed.

Mr. Brooks comes to his new post from the Virginia State Conference of NAACP branches where he was employed as political action director and assistant to the executive secretary of the conference, W. Lester Banks. Previously he had been executive secretary of the Crusade for Voters of Richmond, a non-partisan organization set up to increase the Negro vote.

A veteran of World War II, Mr. Brooks was trained at Virginia Union university in Richmond and West Vriginia State college in Charleston. Following his honorable discharge as a first lieutenant after three years, including 18 months of combat service, he became manager of Troy's Department Store in Richmond.

In addition to his effective work in increasing the Negro vote in Virginia, Mr. Brooks has engaged in a number of other civic activities for which he has been cited by the Afro-American Newspapers, Omega Psi Phi fraternity, Astoria Beneficial club and Sigma Phi Beta fraternity.

Mr. Brooks lives in Richmond with his school teacher wife, the former Miss Helen Sampson, and their 7-year-old son, Milton. He will continue to work out of Richmond under the direction of Mr. Wilkins.

Ga. Voters Will Meet In Atlanta, Macon Today

Delegations from counties over the State of Georgia will assemble today at 12:30 p.m. in Stewart Chapel AME Church on Cotton Avenue in Macon, Ga. for the Semi-Annual meeting of the Georgia Voters League.

Prime mover Grand Master John Wesley Dobbs, president of the League will head a delegation of Atlantans who will attend the session which will be featured by the appearance of John Brooks of Richmond, Va., Director of the Southwide Voter Registration Campaign.

Other officers from Atlanta include: Jesse O. Thomas, [illegible] president; Dr. C. A. Bacote, district vice president; A. T. Walden, secretary and C. A. Scott, treasurer. According to Mr. Dobbs, voter-registration will form the chief interest of the delegates most of whose counties are working in the state-wide registration campaign.

Mr. Brooks will return tonight for a meeting with Atlanta registration campaign leaders, headed by Dr. C. A. Bacote, at 7:00 p.m. in the Butler Street YMCA. This meeting, sponsored by the All-Citizens Registration Committee, will be followed Sunday with a meeting of the entire committee at 4:00 p.m. in the YMCA, who will discuss plans with Mr. Brooks.

Monday at 2:00 p.m. in the Religious Education Building of Ebenezer Baptist Church, Mr. Brooks will conduct a workshop for ministers. He will be assisted by several ministers and Dr. Bacote.

PROSPECTIVE VOTERS FACE TOUGHER BILL

Georgia prospective voters will qualify under a tougher registration bill passed by the 1958 legislature with the intent of discouraging Negroes from going to the polls.

Gov. Marvin Griffin signed the measure into law this week although the General Assembly rejected a drastic voter proposal requiring biennial re-registration and payment of a $1 poll tax and payment of all taxes before being eligible to vote.

The voter registration bill was recommended by a joint legislative Election Laws Study Committee after nearly a year of work. Frankly intended by sponsors to discourage Negro registrants, its principal provisions require two trips to the courthouse to register and a longer and tougher set of questions which illiterates must answer.

Opponents of the bill frankly warned that Negro vote organizations would rally their people to qualify while many whites would not take advantage of the requirements.

The bill was opposed by the League of Women Voters and many other organizations.

Georgians have traditionally shown deep-seated resentment of re-registration and as a result the measure signed into law had eliminated from it many objectionable features. Except for the two trip provisions, Negro leaders believe that their intensified campaign for new voters will move along unchecked.

When the original proposals by the Griffin administration was rejected the governor lashed out at the Legislature, accusing it of failing to meet the challenge of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The next day, Lt. Gov. Vandiver's house supporters forced the Election Laws Study Committee bill out of the House State of the Public Committee and passed it over opposition of Griffin's administration leaders.

Whether or not the voter re-registration is aimed at curbing Negro vote strength or at elevating the voters of Georgia, it leaves the date of registering voters almost entirely up to examiners, thereby creating possibly roadblocks to citizenship.

The bill will allow quizzing of those who can read or write, with 30 questions on government.

The NAACP and the Southern Christian Leadership Council headed by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., are presently conducting a southwide campaign for 100,000 new voters.

Unit System Has No Logical Defense

Discussions in the state press about Mayor Hartsfield's suit against the county unit system, many of which have been reprinted in The Constitution, show a surprising amount of favorable and sympathetic comment. Also present are the die-hard attitudes which are all too familiar.

Anguished cries from certain politicians about the suit are quite revealing and also follow the familiar pattern.

Action by Gov. Griffin in vetoing a measure which would have had the effect of strengthening the system in electing the lieutenant governor—putting it on the same plane as that of governor—demonstrates the essential hypocrisy of politicians' attitude. Why, except for political reasons, should there be a difference?

In any event, if there's no fear that this unjust disfranchisement of thousands of Georgia voters and rule by geography is illegal, why the sound and fury? Why the shouts that the disfranchised who oppose the system are all radicals out to do away with segregation and to turn the state over to machine politics?

The truth is that the unit system invites machine politics and control of the state by the very few. It is a ready-made tool for political manipulation of every county in Georgia and for minority rule. It leads to waste, extravagance and corruption. It helps to make the executive all-powerful.

As for the argument about segregation, the unit system was set up in the days of the white primary, which denied Negroes the right to vote. Today they have that right. And as Negro registration increases in the smaller counties, each of their votes will outweigh the votes in the larger counties in the same proportion of from 5 to 1 to as high as 150 to 1. In other words, both colored and white voters in the smaller counties have like advantage.

This argument is as spurious as all the others used to justify this discrimination against so many Georgia citizens.

The Constitution consistently has been opposed to the system and cannot find any moral or reasonable political excuse for it except as a useful tool for politicians to delude the voters.

Knowing that candidates for state office have been forced in the past to consider the system as sacrosanct, we have supported many able politicians who have defended and upheld it. That still does not make it right nor change our basic attitude toward a grave injustice.

The county unit system with its inequities which grow larger each year is wrong and is bound in the long run to be consumed by its own weaknesses.

Senator Seeks Public Notices On Voting Rights

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—Sen. Hennings (D-Mo) proposed today that the Justice Department post public notices to "alert" all citizens to federal law enforcement services available to protect their voting rights under the new civil rights law.

He suggested that such notices could be placed on bulletin boards in post offices and other federal buildings.

In a statement, Hennings observed that such notices are posted to remind aliens that they must register annually and to inform them of the procedures to follow.

He said he thought the government could "at the very least" employ similar means to notify American citizens "about the procedures available to protect their sacred federal voting rights and what federal offices are open to them if these rights are violated."

Hennings also suggested the notices should give the addresses and telephone numbers of the nearest offices of the U.S. Attorney and the FBI.

Solon Asks Government To Aid Own Citizens' Voting Rights

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Senator Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. of Missouri, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Constitutional Rights subcommittee, Friday called upon the Federal Government to do as much about voting rights of American citizens as it was doing about registration of aliens.

In the past several weeks, Senator Hennings said, he has noted the various notices by the Government to aliens to register their addresses informing them of the procedure to be followed and the federal offices to which they should go.

"Regarding American citizens," Senator Hennings stated, "it seems to me that our Government could at the very least employ similar means of notifying them about the procedures available to protect their sacred federal voting rights and what federal offices are open to them if these rights are violated.

He said he has written the Attorney General suggesting that the Justice Department prepare and have posted on bulletin boards in post offices and other federal buildings throughout the country, "easy-to-read" notices, giving:

1. A summary of the provision of the Civil Rights Act stating that it is unlawful for a private individual as well as an officer of the law to interfere with the right to vote at any Federal election & authorizing the Attorney General to bring civil suits for injunctions to prevent threatened deprivations of the right to vote.

The address and telephone numbers of the nearest offices of the United States Attorney and the FBI, where a citizen may file a complaint if he believes his federal voting rights are being denied.

Debate during congressional consideration of the civil rights bill last year convinced him, Senator Hennings said, "that practically everyone is agreed that there should be no unlawful interference with a citizen's right to participate in the elective process which is the surest means of preserving democracy and insuring a truly representative character in our national governments."

Atty Gen'l Aid Sought In Request

Washington - Sen. Thomas C. Hennings, Jr. (D.-Mo.), today issued the following statement concerning federal voting rights:

"During the past several weeks, I have been aware, as have most people I think, of the various announcements and notices by the Government to aliens telling them that they should register their addresses, the procedure to follow, and the federal offices to which they should go.

"Regarding American citizens, it seems to me that our Government could at the very least employ similar means of notifying them about the procedures available to protect their sacred federal voting rights and what federal offices are open to them if these rights are violated.

"Therefore, I have written to the Attorney General of the United States, suggesting that the Department of Justice prepare and have posted on bulletin boards in post offices and other federal buildings throughout the country, easy-to-read notices containing the following information:

1. A summary of the provisions of section 131 of the Act of Sept. 9, 1957 (71 Stat. 634), which Congress enacted to provide means of further securing and protecting the right to vote; and

2. The addresses and telephone numbers of the nearest offices of (a) the United States Attorney, and (b) the Federal Bureau of Investigation, where a citizen may file a complaint if he believes his federal voting rights are being denied.

"Debate during congressional consideration of this legislation last year convinced me that practically everyone is agreed that there should be no unlawful interference with a citizen's right to participate in the elective process which is the surest means of preserving democracy and insuring a truly representative character in our national government."

ALCORN APPEALS FOR NEGRO VOTE

Urges Replacement of Congress Demos

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP)—Meade Alcorn, chairman of the Republican national committee, said Northern Negroes must help to replace Senate and House Democrats with Republicans next November "if further civil rights legislation is to be made possible."

This must be done even where the civil rights voting records of incumbent Democrats are good, Alcorn said. He added that a vote for any Democrat is a vote to continue control of powerful congressional committees in the hands of Southerners opposed to civil rights bills.

"It just is not possible to push stronger (civil rights) legislation through the present Democrat-controlled Congress," said the GOP leader in a speech prepared for the Capital Press Club, a Negro organization.

Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler addressed the same group Dec. 19. He said the Eisenhower-Nixon record on human rights was a "sorry one indeed" compared to what he called the deep devotion to this cause of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman.

Alcorn suggested Butler must have been reading a "special edition of the Congressional record—one in which up is down, yes is no, good is evil and north is south."

He contended there has been more "solid progress" in the field of civil rights in the five years of the Eisenhower administration than in all the years between the emancipation proclamation of 1863, and 1953.

100,000 Voters Not Impossible Task

On practically the eve of the February 4 Mayoralty and citywide election the Registrar of Voters office here announced that there are close to 31,000 Negroes registered to vote. This figure represents a round number loss of about some 2 or 3 thousand voters from the Negro vote. When considered in the light that some 15,000 Orleanians have been scratched from the rolls for failing to vote in the past two years, for failing to give proper change of address, etc. a praiseworthy job has been accomplished by the various registration schools (ILA, IMA, OPPVL, PDL, UVL) of the community to keep the loss from being greater. The apathy of the people as reflected in the figures is quite apparent in that so many have lost their precious right to vote through just plain indifference. There was a time when we liked to do a lot of talking about what we didn't like, but not a lot of voting against what we didn't like. That picture has definitely got to change now and with the continued unrelentless efforts of the above mentioned registration schools it will. The recent insulting utterances of a political demagogue should stir many, many of us out of our tragic complacency to our potential voting strength of about 100,000 before 1960.

The task is not impossible, especially if we want to open a lot of doors that are now closed. Since the last election we have made a lot of progress in that a few doors to new jobs have opened. These doors will open in proportion to the number of voters we get on the registration rolls.

For the information of all present candidates for political office and future prospective candidates there can be no real happiness, no real opportunity, no real peace if we are not treated like any other American citizen.

We are not interested in any special schools, any special (porter) jobs, any special parks, etc. We are American citizens and want to be treated as such.

We want to serve on public boards, (School Board) as municipal officers (Councilmen) and at other policy making spots in our city government. We aim to use our vote and intelligence to assist us in being recognized simply as American citizens and law abiding human beings.

We do not propose to continue letting ill mannered, arrogant, white supremacy political opportunists make the Negro a perennial political football and "issue" to confuse to the sincere, well intentioned people of good will in this community.

It is quite pleasant to note that the issue of segregation has no part in the present campaign by the seriously considered candidates for public office. One lone 'goofburg', a Johnny-come-lately political opportunist has injected it as the political campaign comes to a close, possibly just to show his ignorance or that a 'hatchet man' can always be bought if the price is right.

In the not too distant past gubernatorial election this tactic seemed to have been employed.One loudmouth dummy candidate fouled up the race by getting all the candidates to make fools of themselves on the issue of segregation while the "slick one" was out shaking hands with Negroes all over the state lining up there votes and promising he would 'act right by them'.

In our fairly progressive and intelligent community it is hardly likely the variation of the same political trick employed possibly by the same people will work. Further, those "in the know" really don't appreciate the move and will hardly forget it soon.

As the Rev. and Brother Dr. Martin Luther King says 'We've come a long, long, long, way but we have a long, long, long, way to go.'

With the ballot in our hand, the dollar in our pocket and faith in God, christian and democratic principles, we are moving brother, really moving. Let's not stop now.

Drive Set to Register Negro Voters in South

ATLANTA, Jan. 31 (AP)—Negro leaders will launch a Southwide campaign in two weeks to increase voter registration among Negroes in 11 States. The goal is to double the present number by 1960.

The "crusade for citizenship" begins February 12 with Lincoln Day rallies in 21 cities.

"The main function of the campaign is to educate our people on their basic rights," the Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., of Montgomery, Ala., said here yesterday.

Mr. King is president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is sponsoring the campaign.

States in which the drive will be carried on are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas.

The conference, Mr. King said, intends "to see that the Negro masses give meaning to the recently enacted Civil Rights bill by using it to the fullest possible extent."

A request for participation in the campaign by the Civil Rights Commission was sent to its chairman, Dr. John A. Hannah.

Mr. King's letter specifically invited Dr. Hannah to take part in a Lincoln Day rally at Miami, Fla. Mr. King will speak at the Miami meeting.

The estimated number of Negroes registered in the 11 States was 1,238,000 in 1956. That is about 25 per cent of the Negro population of voting age. About 60 per cent of white persons of voting age are registered in the area.

every member "within the next 12 months to register and vote regularly."

"The brotherhood urges every AME minister to assist in his community leadership in this drive, working toward a first class citizenship and dynamic race relations," the resolution said.

The resolution was presented by the Rev. Fred C. James of Sumpter, S. C.

The meeting, attended by some 1,000 delegates, condemned the use of Negro spirituals by secular artists and agencies.

"One of the unnecessary and most shameful acts which has ever been perpetrated by the music world is the misuse of the Negro spiritual for commercial jazz purposes," the denouncement said.

"The commercialization of such songs as 'Over My Head,' and 'When the Saints go Marching In' for purely secular entertainment is both blasphemous and sacreligious. . . ."

Yesterday, the meeting heard reports from chairmen of 33 study commissions on church reform and redevelopment and an address by the Rt. Rev. R. R. Wright Jr., presiding bishop of the 5th Episcopal District.

Negro Group Boasts Drive Urging Voting

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 21 (AP)—A Negro religious group representing some 800,000 members, today called for an accelerated drive to register Negro voters in every state.

The Brotherhood of the African Methodist Episcopal Church adopted a resolution calling upon

Southern Negroes Planning 11-State Vote Campaign

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 29 (AP)—With a goal of two million new voters by 1960, Southern Negroes are getting ready for a sharply intensified registration campaign in 11 Dixie states.

The massive drive which would more than double the estimated number of Negroes now eligible to vote in the Deep South will start with a series of Lincoln Day rallies in 20 or more Southern cities Feb. 12. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) is among the Negro leaders scheduled to speak.

Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy of Montgomery, treasurer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which is sponsoring the campaign, said his people will be urged to use the new federal civil rights law "wherever necessary to point out discrimination."

Abernathy and other members of the conference executive committee will discuss detailed plans for the voter registration effort at a meeting in Atlanta tomorrow.

The Baptist minister said no state-by-state allocations have been announced but that the "long-range goal" of the campaign is two million new Negro voters within the next two years. He said the conference has adopted a budget of $200,000 to spend on the vote drive this year.

Abernathy said an estimated 1,238,000 Negro voters were registered in the 11 Southern states in 1956, only about one-fourth of the 4,980,000 Negroes of voting age.

By contrast, he said 60 per cent of the white residents in those states are registered voters.

The conference leader said Texas, with 214,000, led the Southern states in the number of eligible Negro voters while Mississippi, with only 20,000 estimated Negro voters in 1955 was at the bottom of the list.

Alabama had 53,366 last year, he said; Arkansas had 69,677, Florida 148,703, Georgia 163,389, Louisiana 161,410, North Carolina 136,000, South Carolina 99,890, Tennessee 90,000 and Virginia 82,693.

Let's Not Be Discouraged

The new voter registration law is now going into effect in Georgia counties. It is an unwieldly and cumbersome measure which will slow down qualifying all applicants regardless of race. It leaves quite a broad avenue to registrars for determining literacy, illiteracy and what constitutes good character.

It is estimated that only 50 voters will be able to qualify daily in Fulton County which had in the past processed 800 applicants in a single day.

The slow down will no doubt be apparent in neighboring Cobb, DeKalb, Gwinnett and Clayton counties.

It has been predicted that only 1,000 voters will be able to qualify during the four-week period before the books are closed May 3, when registration ends for the September primary and the general elections.

The grim aspects of the new law offers a challenge to all voters. That is endure it for full citizenship and in order to build an electorate which would reverse the antiquated procedures.

That is the task for the potential voter. Qualify! Do it Now! Get Your Ballot. You can qualify by reading, understanding and explaining a section of the Constitution. This is under the literacy section.

The test for illiterates consists of 30 questions. Even this hurdle can be surmounted.

Good character is an ingredient, as difficult as it is to determine, which is a trait of all men of understanding and tolerance. Most people possess it.

The important thing is that Georgians should qualify and vote. Any person of average intelligence can qualify. With fortitude, determination and full knowledge of the value of the ballot in a democracy, let us qualify under the law.

Citizenship is too vital a privilege for us to take refuge in the bad aspects of the law, which was based on a rural rather than urban population basis. A large, enlightened and determined electorate can remedy its defects at the polls.

Ga. Passes Anti-Negro Voting Bill

Atlanta (ANP) — A tougher voter registration bill, frankly aimed at discouraging Negro registration was signed into law by Gov. Marvin Griffin last week. The measure was passed by the state legislature after it had defeated still tougher vote registration proposals made by the governor.

The bill was recommended by a joint legislation election laws study committee after a year's study. Its principal provisions require two trips to the courthouse to register and more and tougher set of questions designed to weed out the illiterates or near-illiterates.

Bulloch Herald

State's Registration Laws Bamboozle Georgia Voters

If you did not vote in any election in the last two years or if you are eligible to register for the first time to vote in the forthcoming primary, then you have a rocky road ahead which may prove discouraging to those with only a casual interest in their privilege and right to vote.

We met with the Bulloch County registrars, Bruce A. Akins, Z. F. Tyson and Mrs. Eva Simmons, recently when they got together with Judge Renfroe and Winfield Lee, tax commissioner, and Miss Hattie Powell, clerk of the Superior Court, to study the new Georgia Voter's Registration Act passed during the 1958 session of the General Assembly and signed into law by Gov. Griffin on March 25.

With the registration deadline set at a date six months before the general election, prospective voters must be registered by May 3.

Members of the board agreed with Judge Renfroe that the new act is most confusing.

Members of the board stated in the meeting that they intend to carry out the letter of the law as well as they can under the confused state of affairs. They want the citizens of Bulloch County to know that every prospective voter who comes in to register will get every consideration possible. They add that if any person should not be allowed to vote it will be because of the time and the confusion over the new act and not because anyone is trying deliberately to keep him or her from voting.

A multitude of problems have come up because of the new act and the limited time between its becoming law and the deadline for registration.

"Please be patient with us," is the plea of the board.

League Attempts To Clear Up Confusion On Voter Registration

Mrs. G. R. Mitchell, vice president of the League of Women Voters of Atlanta, Saturday issued the following statement on the new Voters Registration Law:

"The Board of the Atlanta League of Women Voters feels that much confusion exists in the registration under the new Voters Registration Bill. It is NOT difficult to become a registered voter. You do NOT have to take the long test if you are able to read and write. The procedure, which takes about 10 minutes, is as follows:

The applicant is met by a clerk at the counter who shows him to a desk. He is asked his name, address and other such pertinent information, which is typed on a permanent record card. This card is taken to two registrars seated nearby, who ask the applicant to write and then read a short paragraph from the Constitution. From the applicant is asked to swear that the information he has given is truthful and that he has not been convicted of a

If the applicant is illiterate, he must take a test consisting of 30 questions, 20 of which must be answered correctly for him to pass. The League office at 415 Henry Grady Building has copies of this questionnaire, with the answers.

The League feels that since the Voters Registration Bill is now law it must be lived with, like an unwelcome guest. Our registrars are doing their best to operate under existing hardships. They ask that

Attack on Unit System Offers 3 Judicial Paths

Mayor Hartsfield's attorneys in his legal attack on the county unit system Monday suggested three choices for a federal judge in deciding whether or not a tribunal should hear the case.

The lawyers opposed calling a hearing which U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan's office said he has set for April 16 to settle the question of whether the suit will be heard by a tribunal.

They said no order has been filed setting an April 16 hearing and further declared such a hearing would delay action on the case and would have a "grave, adverse effect upon his (Mayor Hartsfield's) opportunity to obtain a final determination of his cause"

There are but three possible views of the mayor's petition, they said:

1. It obviously raises a constitutional question, in which event a three-judge court should be summoned for a hearing at the earliest practicable date;

2. There is doubt that the petition raises a substantial question, in which case the panel court should be summoned as soon as practical, or

3. The petition obviously raises no substantial constitutional question and therefore should be dismissed.

that appeals action might be needed.

Judge Sloan announced in Gainesville, where he heard arguments on the issue:

"The coutr is under the opinion that the federal question is unsubstantial for reasons that previous decisions of the Supreme Court of the U. S. foreclose the subject and leave no room for inference that the question sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy."

How Registration Is Going Under New Voter Law

terpretations as different as night and day.

The check brought out these points:

1. REGISTRATION is slow, maybe discouraged by the new law, maybe by the present slump in interest in the governor's race.

• • •

2. COUNTY BOARDS of registrars are improvising procedures, some of highly questionable legality, because of confusion about provisions of the new law.

• • •

3. IN SOME COUNTIES registration was halted when Gov. Griffin signed the registration bill March 25, and it hasn't been resumed and, furthermore, won't be before the deadline.

• • •

4. FEW, IF ANY, illiterates have qualified as voters by taking and passing the 30-question test on government. Most registrars don't expect many to try.

• • •

5. THE "RETURN TRIP" necessary to complete registration in most counties seems likely to result in a noticeable drop-out rate among applicants—meaning that they won't actually get registered.

Saturday is the deadline for registering to vote in this September's Democratic primary and in the November general election. Citizens previously registered under the old law do not have to reregister under the new one.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution checked a representative cross-section of Georgia counties to find out how things are going under the law passed by the 1958 General Assembly. Chief registrars in the counties were consulted.

A crazy-quilt pattern emerged.

IN SUMTER COUNTY (population 24,300; four county unit votes), the registrars will stay in constant session the last three days before the deadline to give everybody who wants to a chance to register.

"We're trying to carry out the law to the letter," says chief registrar Eugene Horne.

IN WARREN COUNTY (population 8,000; two unit votes), chief registrar Smith Johnson reported, "We haven't started that thing."

Maybe they'll get registration going before Saturday and maybe they won't. Ten days before the deadline, this was Mr. Johnson's comment: "We'll try to be started in the next five to 10 days."

The new law requires the board of registrars to examine each applicant, either the reading-and-writing test for literates or under the 30 questions for illiterates.

Boards have varying ideas of how to handle this:

In Meriwether County (population 20,700; four unit votes), the registrars have qualified applicants without tests.

"We've got the county attorney looking into this thing to explain all the details," chief registrar W. P. Hill said. "We've told all these new voters we might have to call them back to give them the tests. The question in our minds is whether it's optional for the registrars as to giving the tests."

IN GILMER COUNTY (population 10,600; two unit votes), the deputy registrar has continued to process applicants and qualify them, as under the old law, according to chief registrar L. E. Scharlach. The tax commissioner is the deputy registrar.

The applications are subject to a final OK by the board of registrars, Mr. Scharlach said. Up to Thursday, it hadn't met.

WILKINSON COUNTY (population 9,100; two units) is trying a "one-trip" registration plan.

Chief registrar N. H. Bacon said the board scheduled three meetings before the registration deadline. The first was held Friday; others will be Tuesday and Saturday. The dates were advertised in the county weekly newspaper.

The arrangement means hat a citizen can apply for registration and be examined and accepted or rejected with only one trip to the courthouse, Mr. Bacon said.

There are no arragements for applications or examinations on any other days.

IN ELBERT COUNTY (population 18,200; two units), registrars are working on the premise that it is all right for one of the three-member board to examine and qualify applicants. So they've arranged for one member to be in the office all the time, registrar Guy W. Wilson says.

Registrars in Bibb County (population 139,200; six units) have there regular periods weekly in the office. People who come when they're there can finish the process; others have to make a second trip.

"We wonder why the deputy registrars, who are sworn in, can't judge whether a person can read and write," chief registrar Cecil F. Whitaker said.

JOHN W. (JACK) SOGNIER, chief registrar for Chatham County (population 186,700; six units), said the big counties need the law changed so county employes can handle registration. Fulton was the only county so provided for in the new act.

"We have a board composed of business people," he said. "If they have to test all applicants, it means taking off from their own jobs. The amount of time required makes that a burden in a heavily populated county."

Mr. Sognier said Chatham will seek an amendment to the law at the next session of the Legislature.

The survey shows that the smaller counties apparently have felt less urgency about getting the new law into operation.

EVANS COUNTY (pouplation 6,300; two units) was without registration machinery as of last week.

"We haven't even had a meeting," chief registrar E. W. Daniel said. He added that the registrars hoped to get the new law functioning before the deadline, but he was not optimistic of their chances.

In numerous counties, no voters actually have been registered under the new law though applications have been taken.

IN COFFEE COUNTY (population 25,300; four units), the deputy registrar continued to take applications, but the board of registrars up to the middle of last week hadn't met to examine the applicants.

But "everything's running smoothly," chief registrar Archie Purvis said. He estimated the board has received 50 to 100 applications and said it will process them before the registration deadline.

Registration seems to be quite light throughout the state.

Chatham registrar Sognier says flatly that the new law has discouraged registration.

Up to the middle of last week the board in Georgia's second largest county had received 130 to 150 applications under the new law, he said.

• • •

BIBB COUNTY reported registration is slow. It didn't get set up to operate under the new law until April 16, leaving only two and a half weeks for registration before the deadline.

• • •

ELBERT COUNTY is getting four or five applications a day—a rate considered slow for a year of a governor's race.

WORTH COUNTY has "qualified three or four" and has seven or eight more applications, chief registrar W. B. Holton said.

O. R. Hendricks, chief registrar in Washington County (population 19,300; two units), says "very few" have registered under the new law. The voter list picked up, though, because of a bond election earlier in the year, he said.

The general opinion of the registrars, however, is that governor's races don't cause the biggest spurt in registration. That comes in years of county office elections, and this isn't such a year in most counties.

3 Judge Court Is Refused

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (INS) Federal Judge Boyd Sloan refused Tuesday to convene a three-judge court to hear a request for an injunction to stop the use of the County Unit System in Georgia's September primary.

Judge Sloan's decision thus upheld a motion by the defendant, the Georgia Democratic Party Executive Committee.

Atlanta Mayor William Hartsfield, who brought the suit, wanted the three-judge panel in order

Georgia to Lose Seat in 1960

A CONGRESSMAN HAS TO GO

Atlanta Journal Bureau
1424 G Street, NW

By HAROLD DAVIS
Special Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 31—One of Georgia representatives who will be elected in [illegible] will be going to Congress [illegible] term.

Population shifts are catching up with Georgia, and all [illegible] will lose a congressman as a result of the 1960 census.

Between 1950 and 1960, the nation's population will have increased an estimated 13 per cent. Georgia will have gained [illegible] per cent barring the unexpected, and the result is that some other lucky state will [illegible] one of Georgia's 10 representatives.

[illegible] BE Florida, which [illegible] a fantastic rise in population (far above the 13 per cent). Georgia's neighbor [illegible] pick up three congressmen. It could be [illegible] People are going at such a rate that that will gain seven.

[illegible] of 1960 will have political implications for Georgians interested in [illegible] politics. It will [illegible] some congressman's [illegible] going to get cut.

[illegible] in this case will be the State Legislature. In [illegible] body will have to take [illegible] pie, now sliced [illegible] and reslice it nine. [illegible] going to get elected in the 1962 elec-

[illegible] mathematics of [illegible] will dump two sitting congressmen into one congressional district, and the two [illegible] slug it out for [illegible] one of them can [illegible] retire.

[illegible] is not without precedent in Georgia. In 1910, [illegible] had 12 congressmen and it kept them for 20 years for the simple reason that none of the states redistricted after the census of 1920.

By the time 1930 rolled around, the census showed Georgia was entitled to only 10 congressmen. The congressional pie, then in 12 pieces, had to be recut into 10.

THE LEGISLATURE of 1931 must have been a tense place. With two congressional heads to lop off, the political pressures must have been terrible.

After study, the Legislature saw a way to do it all at a blow. In central Georgia, three congressional districts came together—the old Sixth, the old Twelfth and the old Tenth. The representatives in each district lived near the point of juncture, so that three congressmen lived within a comparatively short distance of each other.

The Legislature merely drew a new district around them and called it the new Sixth. Three sitting congressmen were left standing within its boundaries and two of them had to go.

* * *

THE TRIO WAS Carlton Mobley of Forsyth (Monroe County), William W. Larsen of Dublin (Laurens County), and Carl Vinson of Milledgeville (Baldwin).

Even in those by-gone days, Carl Vinson had been in Congress longer than any of the other men. Vinson arrived in Washington in 1914, Congressman Larsen in 1917.

Rep. Mobley, now an associate justice of the Georgia Supreme Court, was then 25 years old and had been a congressman only a few months. He had succeeded Rep. Samuel Rutherford of Forsyth on that solon's death a few months before.

CONGRESSMEN Larsen and Mobley decided not to offer for re-election and a bitter three-way battle was avoided. Ironically, Mr. Mobley retired from Congress on March 3, 1933, at the age of 26, after serving a year and a day. Congressman Vinson is still here, now a 44-year veteran. Mr. Larsen is deceased.

The U.S. Bureau of the Census is sensitive to the political implications of what it will find in Georgia in 1960. It has done a study which reportedly says Georgia will definitely lose a representative after the next population check. But, in the tradition of government organizations, the study is "top secret."

Other sources are less hesitant. Congressional quarterly lists Georgia as one of 15 states that will lose seats.

* * *

THE PROGNOSIS is further confirmed by a private study done by Congressman John R. Pillion of New York. Mr. Pillion, a mathematical wizard by avocation, arrived at his conclusions independently from congressional quarterly.

The Georgians in the House of Representatives at present and the districts they represent are:

First, Prince Preston of Statesboro; Second, John Pilcher of Meigs; Third, E. L. (Tic) Forrester of Leesburg; Fourth, John Flynt Jr. of Griffin; Fifth, James C. Davis of Stone Mountain; Sixth, Carl Vinson of Milledgeville; Seventh, Erwin Mitchell of Dalton; Eighth, Iris Blitch of Homerville; Ninth, Phil Landrum of Jasper, and Tenth, Paul Brown of Elberton.

Judge Scores 'Rights' Suit

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Georgia judge threatened to jail Federal Civil Rights Investigators yesterday in a labyrinth of Southern racial developments.

A government suit filed at Columbus, Ga., the first under the 1957 Civil Rights Act, aroused the ire of Superior Court Judge Walter I. Geer of Colquitt, Ga.

The jurist, in keeping with Georgia law, had appointed five Terrell County election registrars whom the suit charged with discriminating against prospective Negro voters.

In a statement, Geer called the suit an "arrogant, unwarranted, high-handed" attempt of "radical Republican leaders to intimidate the people of Terrell County."

If the FBI, in prosecuting the suit, makes any "high-handed, menacing" investigations of his court, he declared, "I will not hesitate to put them in the common jail of the county."

In the meantime there were pointed if relatively minor school integration developments in Virginia, Arkansas and Tennessee.

At Harrisonburg, Va., U. S. Judge John Paul advised the Warren County School Board it could not bar Negroes from the county's white high school. He did not order immediate admission but said that since the county lacks a Negro high school it must admit Negroes to the white school. School board officials countered by showing him blueprints for a half-million-dollar Negro high school.

At Van Buren, Ark., about 50 segregationist white students apparently succeeded in keeping Negroes out of the high school for the day but their boast that others would join them in a boycott fell flat. None of the 13 Negro students was seen to enter the school. But only a few recruits joined the striking students who demonstrated across the street with a placard reading, "only chicken whites go to school with jigs."

Stairstep integration, inaugurated last year, continued without incident at Nashville, Tenn. Nine or more second grade Negro children registered routinely for another year of integrated classes. Earlier 15 first graders had registered for mixed classes under a court-directed plan of integrating one grade a year.

Supports South Vote Crusade

ATLANTA — Christian Action, a national body of lay and professional church leaders concerned with social problems, has given endorsement and financial support to the "Crusade for Citizenship," the southwide register and vote drive sponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, is president.

A check for $2,004.50 was recently presented to Dr. King at a special meeting of Christian Action at the Judson Memorial church, Washington, sq., New York City.

Dr. John A. Hutchinson, professor of religion at Columbia university and chairman of the New York Chapter of Christian Action made the presentation.

The check represents individual contributions received in response to an appeal to members and friends of the organization after the executive board had adopted the vote crusade as its project for 1958.

Prominent in the leadership of Christian Action are such outstanding churchmen as Dr. Rheinhold Nehbur, vice president of the Union Theological seminary, New York City; Dr. John C. Bennett, dean of Union Theological Semiary and Dr. Liston Pope, dean of the Yale Divinity school.

Ask House Call Off Hearings

MACON, Ga. — The Georgia Voters League resolved not to support any candidate for governor of Georgia in the Sept. 10 statewide Democratic primary.

In a special call meeting at Macon, Ga., the organization of Negroes in some 100 counties, also called upon the U. S. House of Representatives to cancel hearings of its Un-American Activities Committee set to open in Atlanta this week.

Both resolutions won the unanimouse approval of the 200 delegates from 33 Georgia counties. The League is the strongest and most active political organization in the state and is non-partisan. Its objectives include registration and citizenship training.

The meeting emphasized political action in getting out the vote and campaigning, with special attention to youth activities.

The group approved the recommendation of the statewide registration committee to award Citizenship Certificates to all organizations which help with voter-registration and Gold Honor Certificates to those which can prove 100 per cent voter-registration of their respective memberships. These awards will be made at the annual meeting, Oct. 25, when officers for the year will be elected.

There was considerable discussion of statewide candidates, but the resolution not to endorse applied to all of them; the delegates pledged themselves to return to their respective counties and work with the best leadership in both races for the election of those office-seekers who would do most for the people.

The president, Grand Master John Wesley Dobbs, was urged to act as the sub-committee on Un-American Activities to investigate recent bombings and killings in Columbus, Dawson and other places, if the group insists upon holding the hearing in Atlanta.

Frank Hutchings, of Macon, Thomas Harris, Atlanta, and J. H. Colhoun, secretary, of Atlanta, presented a political action discussion, which led to a move to establish a Youth Division of the League at the annual meeting. The move was pointed up by a canvass of those present, which showed that 75 per cent of them are above the age of 40 and 50 per cent are over 50, while only 14 per cent are under 30, although 27 per cent are under 40 years of age. It was also shown that 25 per cent of the delegates were women. Bibb County (Macon), of course had the largest representation, followed by Chatham (Savannah) Peach (Fort Valley), Laurens (Dublin), and Fulton (Atlt. eoin shrdluu cmfwy (Atlanta).

Other persons who addressed the meeting were: C. A. Scott, editor of the Atlanta Daily World and treasurer of the League! Rev. L. H. Pitts, executive secretary of the Georgia Teachers and Education Association; Rev. R. W. T. B. Hooper, Macon insurance man; Rev. George Walker, recent candidate for the Savannah, Ga. City Council, and William Thompson, manager of Radio Station WCRY, Macon.

Ga. gubernatorial hopefuls under fire

ATLANTA — The Georgia Voters League resolved not to support any candidate for governor in the September Democratic primary. At a special meeting in Macon, the organization also asked the U.S. to call off hearings of its Un-American Activities Committee in Atlanta.

The two hundred delegates from 33 counties unanimously approved both resolutions. The group also approved recommendation of the statewide registration committee to give awards to organizations participating in voter registration. The awards will be made at the annual meeting in October.

* * *

THE DELEGATES pledged themselves to return to their counties and work with leadership in both races for the election of office-seekers who will do the most for all.

John W. Dobbs, president of the League, was urged to ask the investigating Un-American Activities Committee to look into recent bombing and killings in Columbus, Dawson and other places.

The League also moved to set up a youth division, which will be taken up at the annual meeting. It was pointed out that 70 per cent of the members are over 40.

Frank Hutchings, Macon, and Thomas Harris and J. H. Calhoun, Atlanta, took part in a political action discussion which led to the establishment of the youth division.

THE MEETING was also addressed by C. A. Scott, editor of the Atlanta Daily World and treasurer of the League; the Rev. S. H. Pitts, executive secretary of the Georgia Teachers and Education Association;

Other speakers were:

Breathing Spell For Talmadges

The lint-head Democratic dictatorship which has kept the Talmadges and their ilk in control of Georgia for generations to the detriment of progress in that benighted state, received another breathing spell last week when the U.S. Supreme Court turned down, 5 to 4, a powerful challenge to the Georgia County Unit system by the Mayor of Atlanta.

As almost everybody knows, the Georgia County Unit system enables one rural vote to equal nine urban votes, which results in the backward, sparsely populated, low-intellect counties out-voting the higher-I.Q., more thickly populated and richer urban counties around such outposts of civilization as Atlanta, Savannah, etc.

It is this system which puts a premium on ignorance and backwardness that has enabled demagogues of the Talmadge ilk to control Georgia in season and out since Reconstruction days with little fear of effective opposition.

The lint-heads have won again, but considering the narrowness of the Supreme Court vote, their breathing spell may, we hope, be short.

3 Dynamite Blasts Fail To Halt Vote Drive in Ga.

Courier Sat. 1-4-58

NEWTON, Ga. — Dynamite blasts damaged cars belonging to two Negroes and a house belonging to a third man, while a fourth Negro was arrested and later released in a reign of terror brought on because of their efforts to register in Baker County, where no Negroes were registered.

Despite efforts at intimidation, the Negroes stood firm and refused to back down on their desires to register, and on the day after Christmas, "Bubber" Hall was registered by the Baker County Board of Registrars, the first Negro registered since 1950.

Carl Broadway and John King, both large farm-owners and well-known citizens, had their autos dynamited. The home of Joshua Williams, also a big farm owner, was damaged by a dynamite blast.

J. Kerney, who owns an exceptionally choice farm area, was arrested on charges of illegally possessing whiskey, but the charge was later dropped. Mr. Kerney said he had no idea who put the whiskey on his land when officers apparently discovered it.

Each of the prosperous farmers had signed a letter to the Board of Registrarrs asking that the books be opened to Negroes. Negroes in Baker did vote up to 1948, but in 1950 their names were dropped from the books. The state-wide register and vote drive had been in full swing in neighboring Dougherty County and its county seat, Albany.

Questions for Voters Too Hard, Griffin Tells Legislative Forum

Constitution Atlanta Ga. p. 16

Wed. 1-29-58

By BETTY CARROLLTON

The proposed test for qualifying voters in Georgia was hit by Gov. Griffin Tuesday as being "much too hard."

"I'm definitely not in favor of a long list of questions," declared the chief executive in an early morning session of the Governor's Legislative Forum for Women.

"While the uniformity is good, and there is a lot to be said for the educated voter," he continued, "I would never advocate making it impossible for all illiterates to vote.

"The questions are much too hard," he asserted. "I had to look up some of the answers myself!"

The governor's remarks were in answer to a question put to him by Mrs. Paul Pfuetze of the Athens YWCA, who was among some 100 women attending the forum at the Capitol.

Representatives of 12 of the state's leading organizations, including the League of Women Voters, sponsor of the conclave, hurled a battery of questions at the chief executive, following his address to the group.

While Gov. Griffin's earlier remarks were mostly confined to the field of education, and comparative figures for 1955-56 and 1957-58, his answers to questions posed by the women covered a wide range of topics.

Mrs. Harry Pfiffner observed that in his budget message to the General Assembly Monday, Gov. Griffin did not advocate enactment of a new appropriations act, and she wanted to know "what about the highway department?"

The governor repeated his remarks of Monday, pointing out that under the Georgia Constitution, a new appropriations act would allocate some $13 or $14 million more to the highway department than it needs.

He added that "some provision will have to be made in the future for an appropriations bill. A day of reckoning is coming."

Mrs. Edward Vinson, president of the League of Women Voters of Georgia, brought up the question of revenues.

"It's true we're getting in some $316 to $316.5 million this year," Gov. Griffin admitted. "But expenses the first seven months have been approximately $880,000 more than last year. It's a matter of estimating expenses the rest of the year."

He pointed out that 53 per cent of all revenue went to schools.

Mrs. Weldon Shows of the Georgia PTA Congress asked Gov. Griffin about the compulsory school law:

"Some constitutional authorities," he replied, "question the legality of the General Assembly to delegate to the governor the power to set aside criminal statutes which carry a penalty. If these lawyers are right, then the law which now makes it possible for Georgia to close the schools if a court order comes to desegregate, would be unconstitutional. So there is a proposal to remove the penalty from the compulsory school bill."

Other PTA representatives asked if this would not present a problem of more students missing school.

"That is a debatable question," Gov. Griffin declared.

Mrs. Sheffield Owen, president of the United Church Women of Georgia, was particularly interested in establishment of district detention homes and the probation bill.

"Certainly teen-agers should not be held in prison with hardened criminals," Gov. Griffin asserted. "I am in favor of establishing district detention homes. It seems to me, with all the brickmasons and skilled laborers in the state prisons, Georgia could build a $150,000 home at a cost of $65,000. By using this labor, five homes can be built for around $300,000."

Negro Push To Double Vote Starts

Plans for a "Crusade for Citizenship" with a target of doubling Negro voter registration in the South by 1960 were formulated in Atlanta Thursday.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference's executive committee met in closed session at the Ebenezer Baptist Church to plan the drive.

After the meeting, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., president of the conference, said letters were being mailed asking Dr. John A. Hannah, Civil Rights Commission chairman, and other members to attend opening rallies on Lincoln Day, Feb. 12. One of the 21 meetings would be held in Atlanta.

The above is a photostatic copy of a letter over the signature of Governor Griffin which is being widely circulated throughout the state of Georgia. The insulting letter advocates the re-establishment of a poll tax in the state as a means of holding down the growing Negro voters' list.

The brave Governor of Georgia expresses fear of the NAACP and "those fuzzy-headed liberals who are out to completely destroy the Georgia way of life."

Ga. Governor Attacks Negroes

Dear Fellow Georgian:

There are 160,000 Negroes registered to vote in Georgia today. The Rev. Martin Luther King, Negro preacher from Montgomery, has set up headquarters for the purpose of putting 500,000 Negroes on the voters lists in Georgia.

Courier p.6

Such action, if successful, would place our State of Georgia under complete domination of the N.A.A.C.P. and those fuzzy-headed liberals who are out to completely destroy the Georgia way of life.

The General Assembly has been in session four weeks and no legislation to prevent this kind of thing has been introduced. In keeping with my pledge to you to keep the races segregated in Georgia, I must take immediate action with a proposal to prevent this.

Sat 2-15-58

We must wipe the registration slate clean every two years to keep from adding thousands of ineligible Negroes each year. At the same time, we must require some small registration fee of say $1.00 for two years, this money to remain in the counties and be used to defray the expenses of keeping an accurate voters list.

This proposal might cause some slight inconvenience to you and to members of your family, however I know that you would much prefer this slight inconvenience to turning our state over to Negro domination. This is the only way to protect ourselves.

This proposal will be assailed by the Atlanta newspapers because they are soft on segregation.

This proposal will stand up in the U. S. Supreme Court. It applies without discrimination to white, black, tangerine, piebalds and mulattoes.

I want your help and want you to take this message to your friends and neighbors and to members of the General Assembly.

Please let me know immediately how you feel about this. It is of vital importance.

Dixie vote drive spurs Griffin to seek action

ATLANTA — Georgia's Gov. Marvin Griffin, until recently comparatively quiet in the South's battle to maintain racial segregation, sounded off last week.

Alarmed and spurred into action by the Southern Leadership Crusade to place 500,000 colored voters on the state's books by 1960, Griffin declared:

"Such action, if successful, would place our state of Georgia under complete domination of the NAACP and those fuzzy-headed liberals who are to completely destroy the Georgia way of life."

His proposal, contained in a letter mailed throughout the state, urged wiping "the registration slate clean every two years" to keep from adding thousands of "ineligible" colored voters and imposition of a poll tax.

Elect Officers At Annual Meeting

34e 9ar

ATLANTA — Registration and voting in Georgia will come in for discussion during the annual meeting of the Georgia Voters League, Oct. 25, in Steward Chapel AME church, Macon, Ga.

John Wesley Dobbs, president and organizer of the League, announced in letters to 1200 leaders throughout the state, that officers for the year will also be elected.

An analysis of registration figures will be presented explaining how Negro registration increased by 4,232 during the past two years to 161,122, while registration for the state at large dropped by 24,986 from 1,310,586 in 1956 to 1,288,600 as of Sept. 5, 1958.

These figures include 1958 reports to the secretary of state, Ben Fortson, from 155 to the 159 counties, a special report from the Board of Registrars of Spaulding County and 1956 totals for Long County.

Two counties, Towns and Treutlen, with total registrations of 2,123 and 3,559, respectively, for 1956, had not reported this year and are not included.

State law provides that persons who fail to vote in two years should be dropped from the rolls, which indicates that registration lists are now being purged by many counties.

Certificates of Merit and Gold Certificates for 100 percent registration will be presented by officials of the Statewide Registration Committee to organizations which have reported significant achievements in voter - registration during the past year.

This committee, composed of 67 leaders from over the state and organized in 1956, has conducted two annual voter-registration campaigns and a Statewide Registration Clinic this year.

Southern Hopefuls Untested

Atlanta Journal

BY WILLIAM TUCKER
United Press International

Southerners elected a slate of Democratic congressmen Tuesday without opposition. They also found a handful of close bouts for House seats and scattered opportunities to express themselves on the issue of integrated schools or no schools at all.

In the general Atlanta area two independents opposed incumbents for the DeKalb County Commissioners race, but were defeated although endorsed by the county Republican committee.

In Miami, Florida Senator S. L. Holland won a third term over Republican Leland Hyser.

The six Republican congressmen in the Old South all faced Democratic opposition and all expected to win new terms despite the emergence of such issues as troops in Little Rock and more sweeping anti-segregation rulings by the Supreme Court.

The GOP incumbents were Reps. Richard H. Poff and Joel T. Broyhill in Virginia, Charles Raper Jonas in North Carolina, Howard Baker and B. Carroll Reece in Tennessee and William C Cramer in Florida.

55 INCUMBENTS

In other Dixie districts, 55 Democratic House incumbents were unopposed and others were confronted with only token opposition with a lone exception. This was in the 12th District of North Carolina where a local Democratic falling-out was believed to have enhanced the chances of W. Harold Sams, Republican, to succeed retiring Democratic Rep. George Shuford.

Southerners voted in generally mild weather but it was cloudy in many places and drizzling in some. The balloting was very light in most areas. Local issues, such as a liquor referendum in a Tennessee County, brought out a heavy volume here and there.

Heavy voting also was noted in the 10th District of North Carolina where Representative Jonas was opposed by Democrat David Clark, a "life-long" friend from the GOP incumbent's home town.

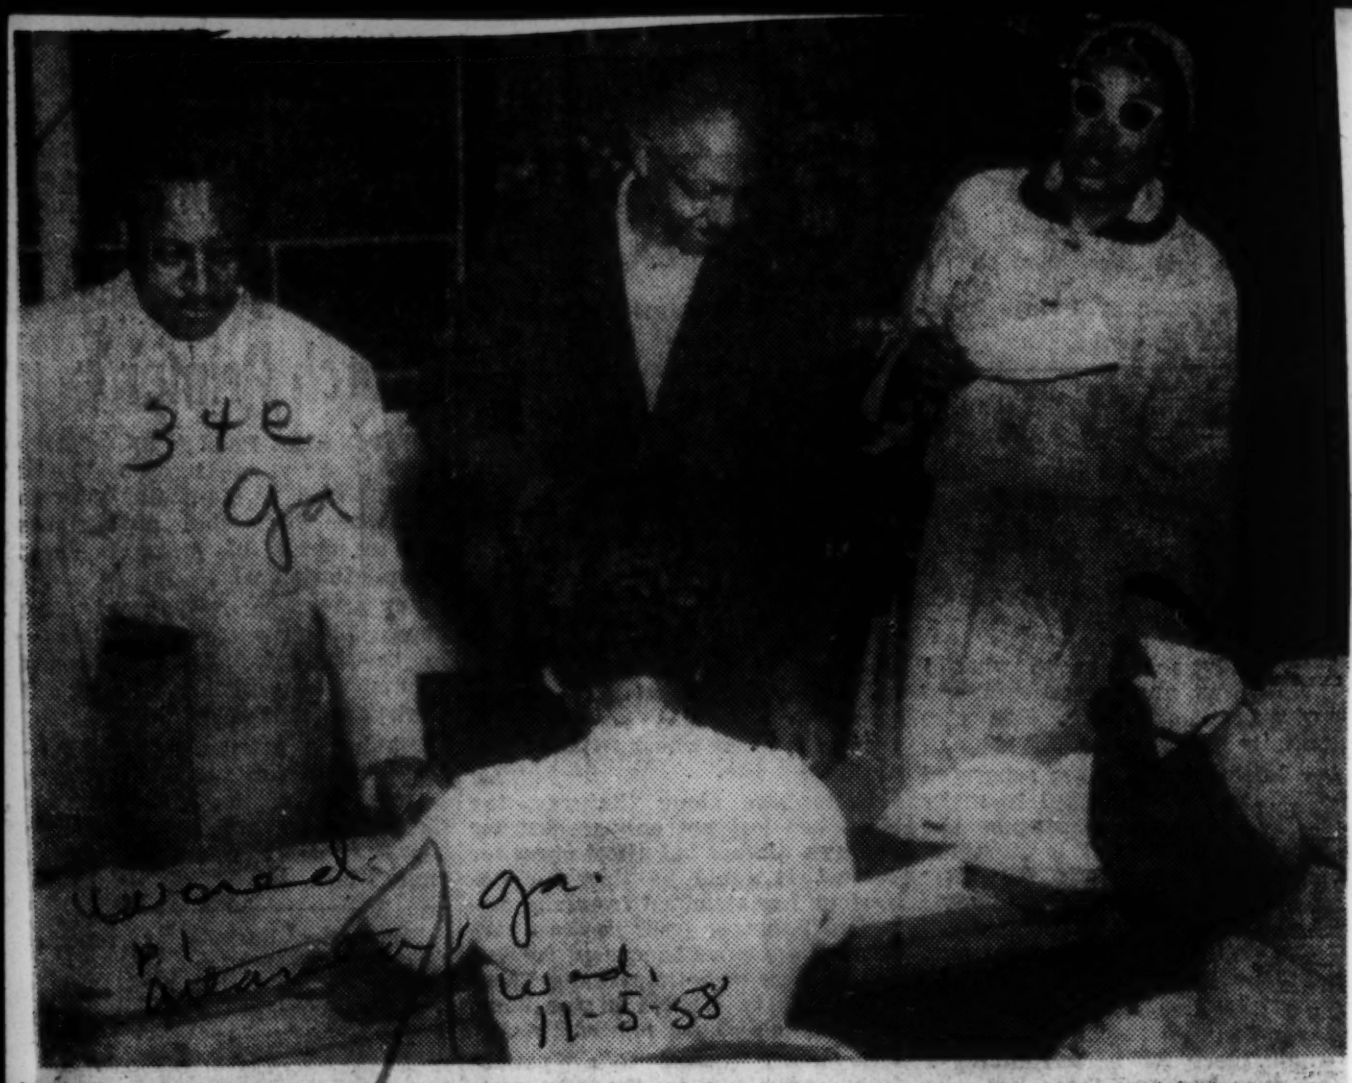
UNUSUAL RACES

One of the most unusual races was the spirited challenge put up by a woman doctor, Louise Wensel, against powerful Democratic Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. Running as an independent, Dr. Wensel aligned herself squarely against the "massive resistance" program in Virginia to combat integration.

This program was put into effect by Gov. J. Lindsay Admond who was believed to have the backing of Byrd, the leading figure of his party in the state.

No one conceded Dr. Wensel a chance but a vote for her was interpreted as a vote to save the public school system, already crippled by the closing of a few schools facing court-orderd integration.

In Arkansas Rep. Brooks Hays, who has sought to mediate the Little Rock integration impasse between Gov. Orval Faubus and the goverment, was opposed by Dr. Dale Alford, segregationist member of the Little Rock school board as a "write-in" candidate. Here, also, was an indirect chance for expression on the school closing issue.



LIGHT VOTE TURNOUT HERE — John T. Brown, Homer Scretchings, and Mrs. Neffie Evans, were among the early arrivals at the E. R. Carter School precinct, as a light vote turnout was recorded here. Due to Georgia's one party system, there were no Democratic and Republican senatorial and gubernatorial candidates to be decided upon, and local voters were limited to mainly state constitutional amendments.—(Perry's Photo)

TOUGH ON REGISTRARS AND APPLICANTS

State Law Paves Rough, Rugged Road To Ballot Box

By MARGARET SHANNON

There's a strange new road ahead to the ballot box for Georgians who want to vote this year, but who hadn't registered by last Tuesday.

That's the day Gov. Griffin signed into law the voter registration bill passed in the closing days of the 1958 General Assembly.

With that stroke of his pen, he scrapped existing registration procedure and fouled up—at least temporarily—the machinery for qualifying to vote.

All persons registered by last Tuesday are registered. Although some sources placed a contrary interpretation on the act, the attorney general's office has said that one already on the list has to reregister.

* * *

SINCE THIS is the year a governor and other statehouse officers are elected, as well as a whole General Assembly, it's a big political year and a time when voter registration usually picks up.

It looks as if it's going to be tough on registrars and applicants alike for the next few weeks.

The new registration measure, as passed by the Legislature, provided no future effective date and therefore automatically became effective when Gov. Griffin signed it.

So there was no changeover period provided for, and the registration deadline for this year's election was only six weeks away. It is May 3.

The attorney general's office has been advising county board of registrars just to shut up shop until they can get new registration cards and otherwise prepare to administer the new law.

THAT SEEMED LIKELY to cut 10 days or two weeks off the remaining registration time and make for more than a jam than usual at the last minute, particularly in urban areas.

Nobody exactly plotted the squeeze that developed. A spokesman for the Legislature-created Election Laws Study Committee, which proposed the legislation, said the group expected its proposals to pass early in the session and be signed promptly by Gov. Griffin.

Instead, Griffin forces came up with new proposals of their own, which failed.

Then Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver's team pulled out the committee proposals and put them through. This all happened right at the close of the session.

Then Gov. Griffin didn't get around to signing the bill for over a month after the the Legislature adjourned. Nobody made a move because there was a chance he might veto it—a chance that speculation had was pretty good because the measure bore the Vandiver stamp.

* * *

THUS, WITH ONE THING and another, the new law is six weeks to two months later getting going than the study committee figured on.

Nowhere in its approximately 9,000 words does the act mention Negroes, but it has been plain all along that the intent is to discourage Negro registration.

Some voter groups like the Metropolitan Voting Council of Atlanta and the Georgia League of Women Voters take a dim view of the new law. They say it will discourage anybody, white or Negro, from registering.

Once the law does get into operation, this is how registration will go:

BASIC QUALIFICATIONS: They're the same—18 years old, one year of residence in Georgia with six months in the county in which registering.

* * *

APPLICATION: Go to the office of the county board of registrars—it may be the same as the tax collector's office—and fill out a registration.

It asks name, address, date and place of birth, color of hair and eyes, weight, height, race, occupation, mother's maiden name and father's name.

It also contains an oath about length of residence and another about crimes convicted of that would bar you from voting. These are the same as in the state constitution and are unchanged, though there was talk in the Legislature of lengthening the list.

There's also this question to be answered: "Under what constitutional classification do you desire to make application for registration?" That brings on more talk.

CLASSIFICATIONS for Application: There are two—(1) literacy; (2) good character and understanding of the duties and obligations of citizenship.

These are provided in the state constitution. The law spells out the tests for both classifications.

* * *

LITERACY TEST: The county board of registrars gives the applicant a section of the state or U.S. constitution—any one it wants to—to read aloud and write "in the English language."

If, in the board's judgment, the reading is intelligible and the writing legible, the applicant passes the test.

This is about the same as past procedure.

CITIZENSHIP TEST: This is the only way an illiterate can qualify, and it involves the much-discussed list of 30 questions.

The new law sets forth 30 questions about government—and no answers—to be propounded to the applicant orally by the registrars. The applicant must answer 20 of them correctly to pass.

This is real toughening-up of the law. There was a question-and-answer provision in the former law, but the questions were easier and the applicant had to get only 10 out of 20 right.

* * *

TWO TRIPS TO REGISTER: It will take two trips to register unless a county board of registrars makes special arrangements to accommodate the applicant.

The first trip will be to apply—to fill out the registration card.

The second trip will come after the board of registrars notifies the applicant to report to take the test he has chosen—either the reading-and-writing test or the question-and-answer test.

No longer can a deputy qualify an applicant. The board of registrars itself must do so.

Fulton County already is planning to have the board of registrars in constant session to prevent the necessity of two trips. Under the new law, the tax commissioner and two deputies are to constitute the county board of registrars in Fulton. But this provision does not apply to any other county.

* * *

CHALLENGES: As in the past, any registered voter can challenge the right of any other registered voter to be on the list.

But something new has been added—any registered voter may challenge the qualifications of any applicant.

REGISTRARS: Existing county boards of registrars will continue to serve until July 1, 1961. However, right away—by Tuesday, April 1—the Superior Court judge in each county must designate one member of the board as chief registrar.

The 1961 appointments will be made as in the past. The Superior Court judge in each county will appoint three citizens as registrars from a list of six names submitted by the grand jury.

* * *

STATE BOARD: The act creates an entirely new agency, the State Registration and Election Information Board. The members are the governor, the attorney general and the secretary of state.

It's supposed to prepare and distribute material to registrars to "enable them to more efficiently perform their duties" and to conduct "seminars and meetings at such times and places deemed advisable."

The board is authorized to employ an executive director and other personnel to do whatever the board assigns for them to do.

* * *

REQUALIFYING: If for any reason a voter's name is cut off the list, he must start from scratch and register under the new procedure.

Under the old law a voter dropped from the list could be placed back on by requesting reinstatement, without the necessity for going thorugh the whole rigmarole.

PURGE: The new act provides for the first purge of the voter list for nonvoting to take place in 1959. But there's a conflict in the section of the act providing this, so the 1959 Legislature will have to straighten it out.

The original bill provided for persons who hadn't voted within two years to be dropped from the list. A House amendment changed that to five years, but neglected to make the rest of the section conform. So the 1959 Legislature will have to determine whether it will be five years or two years.

Hartsfield To Appeal to High Court

Federal Judge Boyd Sloan Tuesday refused to let a three-judge court hear Atlanta Mayor Hartsfield's suit against Georgia's county-unit system of voting, saying in his decision that no substantial federal question was raised.

However, the county-unit suit may yet reach the U.S. Supreme Court before the court recesses for the summer, Mayor Hartsfield's attorneys said following Judge Sloan's decision.

Morris Abram, speaking for the attorneys, said that a writ of mandamus was being prepared and would be filed "right away" asking the Supreme Court to grant a three-judge tribunal to hear Hartsfield's case attacking the unit vote system.

LOSES DECISION

The mandamus action came after Hartsfield lost the first-round decision in the battle against the county-unit system.

Judge Sloan, holding court

Gainesville, did not mention, in his decision for a one-judge hearing the Civil Rights Bill passed last year by Congress.

However, legal observers in Atlanta Tuesday night said that the seemingly adverse decision might work to the advantage of Hartsfield in that the whole question can now be appealed directly to the Supreme Court in the mandamus action.

CIVIL RIGHTS

The lawyers said that if the Supreme Court decides that the question should be heard by a three-judge tribunal, it would be admitting that there was a question of civil rights involved and therefore federal responsibility in the case.

Abram said that Hartsfield's case was based largely on provisions made in the new bill, and that the appeal to the Supreme Court would also be based on the new law. Judge Sloan mentioned the new law from the bench as he heard arguments Monday, but did not include any mention in his decision.

The decision stated, in part, "The court is of the opinion that the federal question sought to be raised here is unsubstantial for the reason that the previous decisions of the Supreme Court . . . foreclosed the subject and leave no room for inference that the question sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy."

The judge told newsmen the ruling had the effect of leaving the suit to him for further proceedings. He added that it has not been placed on the court calendar for trial.

B. D. (Buck) Murphy, attorney for defendants, was asked Tuesday if the defense would file a motion for dismissal.

"I will have to confer with Mr. Cook (Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook) and the other attorneys before I know what further action we will take," Murphy said. "I expect we'll have a conference Wednesday."

Murphy and Charles Bloch, Macon attorney, argued the case Monday before Judge Sloan. Defendants in the case are Democratic Executive Committee Chairman John Sammons Bell, Committee Secretary George Stewart, and Secretary of State Ben Fortson.

Judge Sloan hinted in his decision that persons seeking to change Georgia's voting system might have a better chance before the Georgia Legislature than in federal courts. He quoted a prior decision of Judge Sam Sibley that "the judgment and conscience of the Legislature must afford relief if it is to be had."

Gov. Griffin, who supports the county-unit system strongly, commented Tuesday that he was "delighted to hear that Judge Boyd Sloan has denied the petition . . . and has given recognition to the three previous decision of the U.S. Supreme Court which upheld Georgia's county-unit system."

Mayor Hartsfield contended in his suit against the county-unit system that his vote in heavily populated Fulton County counted for much less in state elections than any vote cast in any less populated county. He figured that his vote was outweighed by as much as 155 to 1.

The hearing Monday was to determine if a three-judge tribunal would hear the case. If such had been granted, any decision of the three-judge court could have been carried directly to the Supreme Court for action, possibly in time to affect the coming September primary.

A judgment by a single judge in such a case would have to be appealed through the Court of Appeals.

U.S. Court Asked To Void Mayor's County Unit Suit

By GENE BRITTON

Opponents of Mayor Hartsfield's legal attack against the county unit system Wednesday moved for a quick death of the action.

Macon attorney Charles Bloch quickly followed up a federal judge's ruling of Tuesday against the mayor's request for a three-judge court to hear the case by filing a motion in U.S. District Court here Wednesday asking that the suit be booted out of court altogether.

But Mayor Hartsfield's forces earlier had indicated they would ask for a writ of mandamus to the U.S. Supreme Court to force the convening of a three-judge tribunal.

Filing his motion for dismissal in behalf of the defendants, Bloch added a memorandum supporting the motion with legal citations. The memorandum denied Mayor Hartsfield has a "right" to vote in the Democratic primary.

One of the grounds the mayor based his suit on was that the county unit system served to deprive him of his "right of franchise" and the "right to vote."

Bloch's memorandum to the court charged the mayor "has no such (rights) until the State Democratic Executive Committee chooses to grant them. . . ."

Georgia law does not require a primary to be held for the nomination of candidates to office, Bloch pointed out.

"When and if any Georgia citizen gets the privilege of voting in a primary, he gets it as a matter of grace, not as a matter of right. . . ."

The Executive Committee could nominate Democratic candidates itself, or could permit them to be nominated by convention, he continued.

"Of what constitutional right would Mayor Hartsfield be deprived" in such cases, Bloch asked.

The memorandum concluded:

"Mr Hartsfield had no 'right' before the Civil Rights Act of 1957. . . . The Civil Rights Act of 1957 conferred none upon him."

Democratic primaries in Georgia are traditionally tantamount to election.

U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan ruled Tuesday against a three-judge court requested by Hartsfield, but stopped short of throwing the suit out of court.

The Mayor had asked for a tribunal so that the county unit system could be taken to the U.S. Supreme Court quicker than it had to go the more customary route from a one-judge district court to the circuit court of appeals and from there to the high court.

His counsel Thursday said the question could come before the Supreme Court next week if a writ of mandamus is granted. If the action succeeds, the suit would go before a three-judge court. As it now stands, a single judge will hear it.

Bloch based his motion to dismiss on six grounds. He charged:

1. The mayor's petition fails to state a complaint upon which relief can be granted;

2. The mayor has no legal rights which are adversely affected by the statutes sought to be declared invalid (Georgia's county unit laws);

3. The action was prematurely brought;

4. The complaint fails to allege that Mayor Hartsfield is qualified to vote in a primary under the provisions of Georgia laws;

5. Questions of constitutionality sought to be raised in the complaints are "plainly unsubstantial" and therefore the action should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction;

6. The complaint merely seeks a declaration as to an abstract question of public law, there being no present justiciable controversy existing between the parties.

Ga. Voters League To Study Registration

Only 6 of Georgia's 159 counties have no Negro regis voters and only 24 have less than one hundred, but 19 o 30 have none are only a few Negro residents.

These and other significant facts will be presented in an analysis of registration to the Georgia Voters League when it meets in Macon, Ga., Saturday, October 25, at 1:00 p.m. in Steward Chapel A.M.E. Church.

The Statewide Registration Committee, under direction of John Wesley Dobbs, who is also president of the League, has conducted two annual registration campaigns throughout most of the state. The committee will present citations to organizations which have reported significant achievements in the campaigns to increase the number of registered voters from 168,051 to some 162,000, in spite of heavy purges, in the two-year period.

ANNUAL SESSION

Next Saturday's meeting will be the annual session of the Georgia Voters League, which meets in March and October of each year. The annual election will be held in Macon and statewide officers will be selected for the year. Being a non-partisan organization and there being no statewide contests for the November General Election, it is not expected that any political issues will be presented.

Members of the Thomasville Civic Club in Precinct 4-J, will hear reports on general community matters Monday night, and citizens of the Collier Heights- Crestwood-Woodlawn (Precinct 3-L) will take up proposals for bus transportation Tuesday night, both meetings beginning at 8:00 p.m.

Monday night's meeting will be held at the Bible Way Church of Forrest Park Road. The Tuesday meeting will be held at Fairhill Baptist Church, on Hightower Road at Rockford Street. These, and other meetings to be announced later, are being sponsored by the Atlanta Negro Voters League in cooperation with community leaders.

3-K CLUB

Friday night a group of citizens in the Sunset - Griffin - Magnolia-Vine area met at Second Mt. Olive Baptist Church and organized the Precinct 3-K Community Club. An Executive Committee, composed of the following officers will meet Monday night at 8:00 o'clock at 600 Rock Street to map out plans: James Gardner, precinct leader; Willie Billings, assistant precinct leader; Miss Charlie Mae Smith, secretary; Mrs. Matilda Amos, treasurer; C. E. Calloway, chaplain. Miss Gladys Middlebrooks as temporary secretary.

Friday night for the meeting, with Miss Gladys Middlebrooks as temporary secretary.

Women Voters "Disappointed" Over New Registration Act

The Board of the League of Women Voters of Atlanta went on record Tuesday as being disappointed and shocked at the pasage of House Bill 718, a New State Registration Act.

Said the League: "At first glance, this legislation only tightens already existing registration procedures. This, however, is not the case. The implication and requirements of this bill are so vague and uncertain that the law easily becomes a political tool."

"The League of Women Voters of Atlanta wishes to commend Charlie Brown, Senator from Fulton County, for his courage in voting against this bill in the face of such great odds -- only one other Senator voted against it. The Fulton County Delegation in the House of Representatives was also against the measure and the League is grateful that they did not support it."

"In the early days of this session of the Legislature, the League of Women Voters urged that this bill not be pas[sed]. The public was promised a p[ublic hear]ing on the bill. Instead, [the] bill was brought to the floor [of the House] at a last minute ef[fort] put it through along with a[ny] other legislation. Co[nsequently] that [There] are those who voted for this bill because they did not have time to study and understand its full import?

"There are those who would have us believe that this legislation is not bad. The League of Women Voters asks that the public look closer at this legislation which affects the most basic rights a citizen possesses ..... the right to vote. It does not affect those already registered, but what of the discouraging effect on our people who, as they come of voting age, are to take on their duties and rights as voting citizens?"

Atlanta House Passes Bill Aimed At Curbing Negro Voting In Georgia

ATLANTA. — (NNPA) — The House Wednesday passed and sent to the Senate a bill backed by Lieutenant Governor Ernest Vandiver, aimed at curbing voting by colored people in Georgia.

The action of the House was the second slap given Governor Marvin Griffin in two days. The day before it killed his voter qualification proposal.

The chief provision of the bill passed by the House is a 30-question examination test to be required of persons attempting to register, who cannot qualify by reading and writing a section of the Constitution.

The test would replace one now required of illiterate voters. But the proposed new test is made up of difficult questions and an applicant must get 20 of the 30 to qualify to register.

The new bill does not apply to the 1,200,000 persons already qualified to vote and does not call for a re-registration.

Representative Frank S. Twitty of Mitchell urged passage of the bill to give local registrars the "weapon" they need to combat "insidious organizations" such as the NAACP by keeping off the registration rolls those "who ought not to be there."

Representative Raymond M. Reed of Cobb county warned that the NAACP would "school" colored persons to enable them to pass the test.

"But who is going to school the poor white people who can't pass the test?" Reed asked.

Representative William M. Campbell of Walker county warned that measures such as the voting bill would drive colored people into the NAACP.

Voter Curb Is Assailed By Council

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The president of the Atlanta Metropolitan Voting Council asserted Friday that a recently passed voter registration bill would bar persons who were not registered in 1956 from voting in the 1958 primary.

Sources on the committee which drew the bill, however, said it would not remove names of those who may have registered between 1956 and time it is signed.

Gov. Griffin has not yet acted on the bill.

Sidney Haskins, president of the AMVC, cited section 2 of the bill which reads: ". . . any person who was qualified and registered to vote in the 1956 general election shall not be required under the terms of this law . . ."

He said that means persons who have registered since 1956 would have to re-register.

But a committee source who did not wished to be named cited in rebuttal section 1: "Any person who, after the effective date of this law, desires to register . . . must do so under the provisions of this law . . .

The source said that at least by implication this means any person who has registered since is qualified. "It probably would have been better if he had spelled it out," he conceded.

Haskins also contended that another section changes the deadline for qualification from six months before the Nov. 11 general election to six months before the Sept. 10 primary.

But the committee source said the bill reads: "The registrars shall, in each year in which there is a general election for members of the General Assembly, cease their operations . . . six months before the date of such election."

Another section which may have given Haskins his impression about the cutt-off date, the source said, is a section dealing with special elections held after next fall's general election.

The source maintained that the new bill does not alter the deadline.

Griffin said Friday he is still considering what to do about the bill. "It isn't everything exactly that I desired . . . (but) not to meet the challenge is rather without vision or wisdom either."

Griffin may ask for a ruling by the attorney general on the matter.

The governor had requested the legislature to pass a much tougher bill which included a camplete reregistration and a $1 poll tax but the forces of Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver successfully backed the bill drawn by the Election Laws Study Committee.

Unit System Test Will Be Welcomed

Mayor Hartsfield of Atlanta has filed suit in U.S. District Court as a citizen against the county unit system in Georgia's Democratic Party primary.

He gave as his reasons the rapid changes and shifts in the population of Georgia since the last court test of the system which have further heightened the disparity in voting power between counties.

The mayor has every right, as does every citizen, to bring such a suit and it is certainly in order that another test be held. As we said editorially Saturday, to test the system by putting independent candidates into the general election would serve no good purpose.

The Constitution for years has consistently pointed out the growing inequities which the system has brought about. We have done this as a matter of principle, being unable to defend the fact, for example, that a vote in Chattahoochee County is equal to almost 160 in Fulton County.

But Fulton is not the only county affected by the injustices of the system. Voters in dozens of counties have lost much of their political voice and representation. It actually amounts to taxation without representation and becomes even more inequitable when one considers that the larger counties provide the bulk of the state's revenue.

We cannot buy the argument either that this is a rural-urban matter. Georgia citizens are entitled to equal representation at the ballot box no matter where they may have to live in order to earn a living.

Neither can we accept the argument that the unit system is necessary to preserve segregation. There are no unit systems in Alabama, South Carolina or other Southern states. It has been retained in Georgia by politicians who find it a convenient tool to maintain their power. But at the same time it has led to grave abuses, a weakened Legislature and wasteful government.

The Constitution cannot accept the premise that any qualified Georgia voter cannot be trusted at the ballot box nor that he is less qualified to express his views on election day than any other voter.

Whether or not the courts accept jurisdiction in this case, the mayor has moved properly in questioning the system's legality. We canot find any line of reasoning to justify this unjust restriction on the people's right to vote and to have their vote count equally with all others.

Atlanta drive on to register 57,000 voters

ATLANTA — The Atlanta All-Citizens Registration Committee last week re-organized for an all-out registration campaign at a meeting at Butler Street YMCA. The group set a goal of 57,000 voters.

Jesse Hill Jr. was elected chairman to succeed Dr. C. A. Bacote, who voluntarily retired but accepted a place on the executive committee.

Griffin, Cook Pledge All-Out Fight On Mayor's Suit To Kill Unit Vote

Gov. Griffin and Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook Monday vowed an all-out fight against a federal court suit filed by Atlanta Mayor Hartsfield seeking to outlaw the county unit system.

They said every resource of the state would be thrown into the court battle.

State Democratic Chairman John Sammons Bell, one of two party officials named in the suit, said "the case will be defended with vigor and with every resource at our command."

Hartsfield, long a critic of the unit system, filed his suit in Federal District Court here Saturday. It seeks to have the unit system declared unconstitutional and prevent its use in the September Democratic primary.

Named as defendants were Bell, Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson and state Democratic Secretary George D. Stewart.

Griffin issued a statement sharply attacking the Atlanta mayor as a "renegade and a traitor to our Georgia way of life."

"The man who has kept his job as mayor of Georgia's biggest city for so many years by groveling before the Negro bloc voters of this city is now seeking to carry out this craven policy throughout the whole state," Griffin said.

"In comparison, Rufus Bulloch, carpetbag governor of Georgia, was a paragon of virtue and loyalty," he added.

Griffin said the state, which enters the suit because Fortson was named a defendant, would "hire the best lawyers we can get and as many as we need" to defend the unit system.

"As governor of Georgia, I want to assure the masses of our people that the full resources of the state of Georgia will be available at any and all times to preserve the county unit system—both now and forever," the governor said.

The state will probably employ the legal services of Atlanta attorney B. D. (Buck) Murphy who has helped in the fight against previously unsuccessful attacks on the unit system.

Cook, who directed the defense of the unit system in the three previous attacks upon it, said: "I promise the people of Georgia that I shall defend this new suit with all the resources at my command."

"It is unfortunate that the same radical forces who so quickly ridicule others for not accepting Supreme Court decisions as 'the law of the land,' have seen fit to reject three such decisions within the past 12 years upholding Georgia's county unit system," Cook said.

"Representing this element, Atlanta's mayor has initiated the fourth court test of the voting system which is patterned on the national plan for electing the president and vice president," he added.

The unit system, which is based on the representation in the state House of Representatives, gives Georgia's small rural counties the balance of political power in statewide primary elections.

Under the system, the eight most populous counties have six unit votes each, the next 30 have four unit votes each and the remaining 121 have two votes each for a state unit total of 410.

Hartsfield, who brought his action as a taxpayer from the state's largest county — Fulton, said the county has 14.5 per cent of the state's population but only 1.46 per cent of unit vote strength.

The mayor's petition said Echols, the state's least populous county, has only .05 per cent of the state's population but .48 per cent of the total unit vote.

Hartsfield contends the unit system as now constituted is "arbitrary, discriminatory and unconstitutional" and represent a "deprivation of his constitutional rights and a denial to him of equal protection of the laws."

Hartsfield declared the unit system, giving a preponderance of political power to small rural counties, is arbitrary, discriminatory and unconstitutional.

He charged that under the system a vote of a resident of Echols, the state's least populous county, carries 85 times the weight of a resident of Fulton, the largest county, in a primary.

The U.S. Supreme Court has four times refused to rule out Georgia's unique primary election system, in which none of the 159 counties, no matter how small, has less than two unit votes, and none, no matter how large, more than six. The candidate polling a plurality of popular votes in a county gets all the county's unit votes. The unit votes decide the election.

The Georgia County Unit Is Brought To Book Again

On last Saturday, Atlanta's Mayor William B. Hartsfield filed injunction proceedings in Federal Court seeking the outlawing of the Georgia county unit system. Twice, Georgia's antiquated county unit has been sent up to the Supreme Court to be dropped back into the laps of those who sent it up, as a piece of local election machinery where redress was within the province of local adjustment. The court did not say the county unit was right, or upheld it as some would aver; neither did it say that it was patterned after the electoral college. The electoral college apportions its units in accordance with the last census taken of the states. The county unit does no such thing. It merely represents a patchwork of geography holding the balance of power instead of the voice of the people.

The county unit as we have known it, has been that exponent of minority government; that glorified process, which, in order to do the biddings of its masters, would make one vote in Chattahoochee county worth 140 votes in Fulton. In other words, a citizen in Fulton county, for instance would represent in the face of this hypothesis, about one-one hundred and fortieth of a citizen.

So, in order for representative government to appertain, it is earnestly hoped that the mayor's suit will be resolved by the court; that such an advisement be taken before the September primary, in order that the people might be permitted to make free and unlimited expressions as to who would govern and represent them.

The system is manifestly unjust. It gives the right-of-way to those who would, by the fiat of enough rural counties, come through by a minority to held office and legislate. It places a damper on our voting enterprise, causing a voter to consider neglecting voting on the grounds his vote would count in a ratio of 140 to one.

Success would naturally be hoped for those who would make a thrust at this county unit debacle, that Georgians may further be encouraged to participate in the franchise of their state by having their votes valued and counted.

The bid will be taken more readily by good men to run for office. The state, beyond the shadow of a doubt, will have a new day and a new deal in her bargain for industries.

Atlanta Mayor Asks Ruling

Georgian Wars On Unit System

ATLANTA — (AP) — Atlanta's Mayor William B. Hartsfield asked the federal courts Saturday to rule out Georgia's county unit system in Democratic primaries.

The chief executive of the state's largest city filed a suit for a declaratory judgment in U.S. District Court. He asked that a three-judge court enjoin party officials and Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson Jr. from using the unit system to determine the winners in the September state party primary.

NEGRO VOTE LIST STEADY IN SOUTH

Small Rise Reported Since 1956 Despite Tensions Over Desegregation

By CLAUDE SITTON
Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA, Nov. 1—Negro voter registration has held steady in eleven Southern states since 1956, the Southern Regional Council reported today.

Harold C. Fleming, executive director of the council, said a just-completed survey showed [illegible] 1,266,488 qualified Negro voters. This was a gain of 28,488 from the 1,238,000 of two years ago.

The percentage of those registered out of the total number of Negroes of voting age edged upward from 25 to 25.4.

The council estimated white registration at 11,577,083. No figures were available for the percentage of whites of voting age on the election rolls.

Up in Some States

The report disclosed that Negro registrants had increased markedly in some states during the two-year period. But these gains were offset by sharp drops in others because of purges and state-wide registration.

Louisiana was singled out as one state where many Negroes had been stricken from the voting list. White registration there increased while Negro registration "fell sharply from 181,410 to 130,000 in large part due to purges," it said.

The council, an interracial organization of civic, religious, business and labor leaders in twelve Southern states, conducted the current study as a follow-up to a full-scale survey in 1956.

"The fact that Negro voters held their own was, in itself, something of an achievement in

Report Holds Negro Voting Rolls Upward

ATLANTA (AP)—The number of Southern Negro voters has remained constant since 1956 but the trend is upward and the long-range prospect is for Negro registration comparable with whites, the Southern Regional Council reports.

There are an estimated 1,266,488 Negroes on voting rolls, 25 per cent of the [illegible] in 11 Southern states, compared with 1,238,000 two years ago, the council said in a survey.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own and [illegible] showed slight increase, is encouragement in view of racial controversy and disinterest in an off-year election, the council said.

ELIGIBLE VOTERS

It noted a drop in the number of eligible voters in the country as a whole.

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first federal civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, a long list of federal court decisions to speed the Negro toward full legal equality and new state laws to delay change in racial patterns," it said.

Ga. voters hold meet in Macon

ATLANTA — Some 200 delegates from 34 counties in 9 of the 10 Congressional Districts attended the meeting of the Georgia Voters League in Macon last Saturday.

John Wesley Dobbs, president, highlighted the session, telling delegates that the free ballot is "the most powerful instrument to ever be placed in the hands of any free people anywhere."

During the elections at the annual meeting in Stewart Chapel AME Church, an opposition movement succeeded in electing the Rev. J. F. Mann of Brunswick and C. R. Yates of Atlanta.

The Rev. Mr. Mann and Mr. Yates defeated the incumbents J. O. Thomas and C. A. Scott, both of Atlanta, for the first vice presidency and treasurership respectively.

MR. DOBBS was re-elected as president and the Rev. G.D. Walker, second vice president.

Other officers are W. C. Wimberly of Savannah, H. D. Thomas of Thomasville, G. T. Rivers of Columbus, A. C. Touchstone of Griffin, Dr. C. Clayton Powell of Atlanta, Frank J. Hutchings of Macon, Paul Kelley of Smyrna, E. E. Moore Sr. of Waycross, A. C. Brown of Gainesville and Daniel W. Young of Monroe, district vice presidents;

Also J. H. Calhoun, Atlanta, secretary; V. W. Hodges, Atlanta, parliamentarian; the Rev. G. G. McCarter, Buena Vista, chaplain; J. C. Burke, Dublin, sergeant-at-arms; H. E. Bryant, Fort Valley, and Mrs. L. S. Stell, youth work directors, and Thomas Harris, Atlanta, youth chairman.

IN OTHER action, a resolution was adopted deploring vote discrimination in Tuskegee, Macon County, Ala., and Terrell County, Ga.;

Also the killing of Joseph Jeter by a policeman at Perry Homes in Atlanta, the denial of clemency to Rosa Ingram.

The resolution further expressed concern for those offended and commended those who are interceding and supporting these causes in the interest of full citizenship for all.

IN A REPORT by members of the Statewide Registration Committee, delegates were urged to get out the vote to prevent purging.

The report also urged cooperation with local public officials, continuous registration, more training programs, adequate economical financing, use of paid staff workers and more extensive teenage and young adult activities.

Another report noted that four Congressional Districts and 60 counties have lost a total of 8,309 registered voters, while six districts and 68 counties made up for the loss with a net increase of 10,249 colored voters since 1956.

Georgia has a total of 168,959 colored voters.

Of the 159 counties, 6 have no colored voters, 24 have fewer than 100 and 19 have only a few colored voters.

view of the trends of the past two years," he declared.

It was noted that the period had brought increased racial tension, passage of the first Federal civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, Federal Court decisions aimed at speeding the Negro toward full, legal equality and new state laws designed to delay change in racial patterns.

"For one thing," the report said, "this period has been marked by disinterest prevalent nationwide at the time of off-year elections, Also in certain areas it undoubtedly has become more difficult for Negroes to register because of new voting restrictions and stricter applications of the old requirement.

"In some sections where political leaders have fanned racial prejudices, Negroes are even more hesitant about attempting to register than they were two years ago."

However, the council declared that "lack of political consciousness" still remained the greatest barrier to Negro participation in many parts of the eleven-state area.

Rush Doubted

"Leaders of both races long have contended that if all bars to Negro voting were removed tomorrow," the organization said, "there still would not be a great rush to the polls."

"This is not expected until Negroes have been able to raise their economic and educational levels, their leadership has been broadened and they have reached a position where their political participation promises more tangible results."

The council foresaw no dramatic improvement in Negro suffrage as a result of the new civil rights legislation or the Federal agencies created by it.

"Even where registration boards are cooperative," it said, "a gradual process of political education obviously will be required. All this should not obscure the fact that the trend is upward and that the long-range prospect in the South is for a Negro registration comparable to the white."

Official figures disclosed drop in registration of both races in Arkansas, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, the council reported. The sharp decline in South Carolina was attributed to the total reregistration this year, as required by law every ten years.

The two races showed increases in North Carolina and Virginia.

Negro registration in Mississippi rose from 20,000 to 35,000. This reportedly was the result of a more liberal attitude on the part of registration boards in some of the heavily populated counties.

The council said its figures for sixx states had come from official sources while in the others the totals were estimates obtained from capital news correspondents, who consulted with state officials and political workers. State-by-state figures:

Vote Results Reversed In Forsyth

Constitution State News Service

FORSYTH — The City Democratic Executive Committee has recounted the votes cast in the city election on Wednesday and declared a reversal in the count.

The close race between Randolph Griffin and George H. Adams for aldermanic seats caused the recount. The committee declared Griffin the victor with 377 votes over Adams' 376. The Wednesday count showed Adams polling 375 and Griffin 374.

The frontrunner in the aldermanic race was J. E. Phinazee with 436 votes. He was followed by J. P. Ivey with 436 votes. This was a four man race for three seats on the city council.

Mayor L. M. Wright, incumbent, was reelected without opposition.

ASKED BY THREE COUNTIES

Added Troopers Are Slated During Georgia Vote Today

ATLANTA, Sept. 9 (AP)—Additional state troopers will be on duty in at least three Georgia counties during tomorrow's state Democratic primary.

Although the campaign has been the drabbest in years, Bryan, Dodge and Telfair counties have requested services of additional troopers during the voting.

Voters will nominate a new governor and lieutenant governor for four-year terms.

Also to be nominated are 15 other state officials, 10 congressmen and a number of district and local officials. A Democratic nomination is equivalent to election in this predominantly one-party state.

Polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m. Most estimates are that 600,000 of the state's approximately 1,300,000 registered voters will exercise their franchise.

The two major candidates to succeed ineligible Gov. Marvin Griffin made final appeals to voters in television appearances from Atlanta tonight.

Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver, considered the leading contender, ended with an appeal for his election to let the world know Georgia is "immovable as the Rock of Gibraltar against mixing of the races."

Rep. William T. Bodenhamer, who has devoted his campaign principally to an attack on Vandiver as weak on segregation, kept up that attack in closing speeches.

Troopers Will Cruise

Garland T. Byrd, candidate for lieutenant governor, and one of his opponents, Rep. Colbert Hawkins, made television talks.

Possibly because of hot local situations, Bryan, Dodge and Telfair counties have asked Griffin to assign them extra troopers.

Col. W. C. Dominy, head of the State Department of Public Safety, said he had arranged for extra troopers or Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents to meet the requests. "They won't be on duty at the polls," Dominy said, "but they will be cruising through the counties and available should they be needed."

As the campaign ended, the third candidate for governor, gospel singer Lee Roy Abernathy of Canton continued his usual modest campaign of handshaking.

Similarly occupied were the other candidates for lieutenant governor, Rep. C. J. Broome of Alma, Rev. John Odom of Kinga-land and Howell E. Smith Jr. of

Negro Registration Stands Pat in Dixie

ATLANTA, Ga.—The number of Negro voters in the South remained constant in the past two years despite increased racial controversy, the Southern Regional Council reported.

Currently, there are an estimated 1,266,488 Negroes on voting rolls in 11 Southern states, compared to 1,238,000 reported by the SRC in 1956.

The latest figures, representing 25 per cent of Negroes of voting age, are contained in a preliminary report of a Council survey following up its study of 1956.

Figures from six states came from official sources; in the others, the totals are estimates of veteran capitol news correspondents who consulted with state officials and political workers.

In some states the number of Negro registrants rose appreciably between 1956 and 1958, but these gains were largely offset by sharp drops in other states due to purges and statewide reregistration.

Citizenship Sunday Widely Endorsed

"Citizenship Sunday" designated for Sunday, Nov. 30, by the Alabama State Conference Association on Registration and Voting gained support last week by the endorsement of several civic groups, according to W. C. Patton, president of the sponsoring organization.

Mr. Patton said the "Citizenship Sunday" observance is "for the purpose of stimulating civic consciousness on the part of Negro (citizens) throughout the state." He added that "particular emphasis will be placed on voter-registration and payment of poll tax."

"All the pastors," Mr. Patton said, "and other civic and social leaders have been called to give special emphasis to the observance in churches and other meetings that day (Sunday)".

"Poll tax is now due," warned Mr. Patton who pointed out that the tax "may be paid to the tax collector located in your county Courthouse." Mr. Patton declared that it is important that "more people become qualified voters through registration and the payment of the poll tax."

"The public is reminded that by law all boards of registrars (in the 67 Alabama counties) will be open Monday, Dec. 1 to register applicants."

However, in Jefferson County there is registration every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Jefferson has an estimated 121,000 Negro persons of voting age.

Terrell County Bias Charged

Ruling On Vote Suit Expected

34e Ga

Atlanta World

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Justice Department said Wednesday it hopes to get a quick ruling on a motion by voting registrars of Terrell County, Ga., to dismiss a civil rights suit against them.

The suit, first to be filed under the new civil rights law, accused the registrars of refusing "arbitrarily" to register qualified Negroes to vote in the Democratic primary. It was filed by the department on Sept. 4 by Assistant Attorney General W. P. Wilson White, head of the department's new Civil Rights Division.

In two memoranda filed with the Federal Court in Columbus, Ga., earlier this week, White asked that:

1. That the court throw out the motion by registrars that the government's suit be dismissed.

2. That the court move up from Jan. 19, 1959, the hearing date on arguments so the actual trial will get underway.

The government said in its original suit that the Negroes involved, four school teachers who live in Dawson in Terrell County were rejected as voters on grounds they were unable to read and write correctly.

In their motion to dismiss, three registrars and two deputies contended that the Civil Rights Act is unconstitutional and that the action was brought against the State of Georgia without its consent.

The government argued in reply that the suit is not against the state but against county voting officials.

It said the suit was brought to "enjoin their discriminatory acts in denial or abridgement of the right to vote, on the sole ground of race, to otherwise qualified persons." It said discrimination based on race violates the 18th amendment.

"The standards which are a prerequisite to registration in Georgia are not here under attack," the government said, "but only the practices of certain state officials in administering those standards."

Ward System A Backward Step

It is the right of every citizen to propose to his General Assembly delegation such legislation as he would suggest passage. On the other hand a citizen has equally the right to protest pending legislation he feels would not benefit the common weal. Such a system of checking and balancing is in keeping with the principles of free government.

Among the local bills requested for submission to the 1959 General Assembly by Fulton County legislators is a proposal to revert back to the old system of electing Atlanta aldermen on the vote of the ward they represent, rather than a city-wide vote.

In this time of more complicated government, in our opinion, the ward system of selecting the legislative body of the city government is out-moded. The ward system tends to make an elective official provincial in his outlook. He may be urged to attempt to get things for his ward constituency without giving due regard for the affect this action may have on the city as a whole.

If all the aldermen got the idea of thinking narrowly about their wards who will look out for the city in general in the legislative body?

Matters such as urban renewal, expressways, the airport and public housing can better be handled under aldermen elected on a city-wide rather than ward basis.

With people of our time thinking more in terms of the national and international relations, the ward basis is simply too small a unit for electing any legislative official.

About 20 years ago our councilmen were elected on the ward basis and it was abandoned then because it encouraged too much narrow politics and bickering. If it was ineffective then, it is certainly more so today.

We are aware that some of those who advocate going back to the ward system have used the argument that the present city-wide plan makes possible too much influence on the part of the Negro in the election of all the aldermen. But this argument is unsound because it is purely negative thinking. Furthermore, the Negro does not vote in bloc except when there is a racial issue involved and this is defensive and sensible action. In this year's election there was no bloc vote because there was no racial issue.

To go back to the ward system will be a definite step backwards and it will enable ward officials to build and control ward machines. Machines small or large inevitably lead to corrupt and inefficient government.

If we were narrow in our view we would support the change to the ward system because we could easily elect the two aldermen from the third ward where the majority of the voters are Negroes. But the narrow, short-range view is usually not the best view. In time we can elect a Negro on the city-wide basis to the aldermanic board just as has been done to the board of education.

But what we are primarily concerned with is the best system to get the best possible government. Our primary concern is not about getting anybody in office nor keeping anybody out of office.

We hope the Fulton delegation in the legislature will rethink this matter before presenting it before that body. Let's not take a backward step.

Registration Leaders Meet Monday Night

With a record turnout of group representatives and community leaders last week at the Butler Street YMCA, the Atlanta All-Citizens Registration Committee was reorganized for an all-out voter registration campaign.

Jesse Hill, Jr., was elected chairman to succeed Dr. C. A. Bacote, who voluntarily retired but accepted a place on the executive committee. The goal of the organization 50,000 Negroes registered voters. Mrs. Mae Yates and Mrs. Roberta Parks were selected as vice-chairmman. A board outline plan and a chart of organization were adopted to guide the executive committee which will meet Monday, December 15 at the YMCA to establish a detailed program.

Other officers elected are: Miss Rebecca Dickerson, secretary; Miss Daisy Dunn, assistant secretary; R. R. Yates, treasurer; Dr. S. Z. Westerfield, assistant treasurer; Rev. T. P. Dobson, Chaplain; Robert Norwood, sergeant at arms; Atty. Samuel Williams, parliamentarian; committee chairman; organization, Clarence Coleman, chairman; J. H. Calhoun, vice chairman; finance, Rev. Wm. H. Borders, and John Wesley Dobbs, co-chairman; program, Warren R. Cochrane; church work, Dr. George A. Sewell and Rev. E. R. Searcey, co-chairman; publicity, Wm. A. Wilkes; telephone, Mrs. Johnnie Yancey; speakers bureau, Whitney Young; car pool, B. F. Bullock; meetings, J. O. Thomas; refreshments, Mrs. Geneva Haugabrooks; youth work, Milton White; clubs and organizations, Roy Wolf.

Executive committee: Rev. Andrew Bell, D. L. Hollowell, Mrs. Ruby Blackburn, Mrs. Ella R. Martin, Rev. M. L. King, Sr., A. T. Walden, Rev. W. M. Jackson, T. L. Collier, Dr. C. Clayton Powell, Thomas D. Hawkins, C. A. Bacote, Walter J. Leonard, C. A. Scott, E. M. Martin, Rev. B. J. Johnson, Mrs. Cassandra M. Birnie, Rev. W. A. Mercer, Nathaniel Brooner, Bishop W. R. Wilkes, E. W. Wright, Dr. Edward Sweatt, Rev. C. S. Jackson, Rev. W. W. Stephens, L. D. Simon, Rev. T. J. C. Lightfoot, Mrs. Lottie Hall, Mrs. Bonnie McLendon, Rev. W. W. Weatherspool, Mrs. H. M. Smith, Mrs. H. M. Smith, Mrs. J. S. Downs, Mrs. R. B. Shorts, Samuel Chrisholm, Rev. P. L. Jones, Rev. J. L. Bates, R. A. Thompson, A. W. Bryan, Caterer, Mrs. L. W. Hope, W. L. Dawson, Otelius Shellman, James Gardener, Mrs. Irene Hendrix, Mrs. T. C. Hester, Emanuel Hill, F. T. Herrell, George Atkinson, Mrs. Della Reynolds. A labor committee chairman and other members of the executive will be added later.

Griffin's Leaders Give Up Drive for State Poll Taxes

Drops Plan For Renewal Of Registrations

By WILLIAM M. BATES

The Griffin administration decided Friday not to push for the poll tax and vote re-registration proposals advocated by Gov. Griffin.

House Floor Leader W. Colbert Hawkins of Screven County said he will offer amendments Monday to strike the most controversial features of Griffin's measures to curb Negro voting.

Hawkins said his amendments would remove entirely the registration features of Griffin's plan and make the $1 registration fee applicable only to future new voters.

1,200,000 UNAFFECTED

He said the 1,200,000 voters now registered would not be affected by the legislation. The present voter lists include about 150,000 Negroes.

Hawkins told a reporter that Gov. Griffin had agreed to go along with the changes in the voter qualification proposals. There had been stiff opposition to Griffin's poll tax and re-registration measures.

The voter registration measures were among the few remaining controversial issues to be settled during the remaining week of the legislative session. Hawkins' amendments were expected to ease some of the opposition to Griffin's proposals.

A CLOSE FIT

Hawkins will present his amendments at a meeting of the Rules Committee Monday when the proposals are expected to be taken up.

Even if approved by the committee on Monday, the voter measures will face a tight schedule in order to clear both houses before next Friday's adjournment. They will probably come up for a vote on Tuesday, leaving three days, the minimum time required for Senate action.

As proposed by the governor, the voter measures would require all voters to re-register every two years and the payment of a $1 poll tax each time.

In addition, the legislation would set up a state board of registrars with broad powers to set up qualifications for voting. Griffin said the proposals were aimed at preventing large-scale voting by "ineligible" Negroes.

As originally proposed, the poll tax would have to be paid by early May by voters now on the rolls in order to vote in the September gubernatorial primary.

Hawkins said his proposed changes in the governor's proposals would eliminate entirely the reregistration requirement.

But they would still require prospective new voters, or those who might become eligible, to pay a $1 poll tax and meet qualifications fixed by law and by the proposed state registrar board to get on the registration lists.

Hawkins said his amendments would make no changes in the present status of voters now registered and would not require them to re-register or pay the poll tax so long as they remain on the qualified list.

Griffin has mailed out more than 50,000 letters in an effort to drum up support for his proposals.

He said he had receiver a favorable response to his letters. But opposition in the Legislature continued, and some of the governor's supporters were decidedly cool to the re-registration and poll tax suggestions.

A general re-registration was attempted during the administration of Gov. Herman Talmadge but met with wide resistance among white voters of the state. The attempt eventually was abandoned.

A special election law study committee has proposed a general tightening of voter qualifications but did not recommend a poll tax or re-registration.

The committee's recommendations are now pending in the House State of the Republic Committee and are not expected to be acted upon at this session of the Legislature.

"Crusade For Citizenship" Started Wed.

Atlanta, Ga. — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference launched its "Crusade for Citizenship" throughout the South yesterday with public mass meetings held in 21 cities in nine southern states.

Emphasizing the theme, "The Franchise is a Citizen's Right — not a Privilege," the meeting spearheaded a year-round drive to double the number of qualified voters in the South.

The Leadership conference, which has Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., as its president, held meetings in Birmingham, Mobile and Tuskegee, Ala.; Jacksonville, Miami, and Tallahassee, Fla.; Atlanta, Ga.; Baton Rouge, New Orleans and Shreveport, La.; Clarksdale and Hattiesburg, Miss.; Durham and Greensboro, N.C.; Chattanogga, Memphis and Nashville, Tenn., and Dallas and Houston, Texas.

Griffin Rebuffed On Vote Measure

ATLANTA, Feb. 21 (AP) — The Georgia House handed Gov. Marvin Griffin another rebuff this week by passing a voter registration bill backed by supporters of Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver.

It was a clear cut and decisive test of strength between Griffin, who is ineligible to succeed himself, and Vandiver, an unannounced candidate for governor. The House yesterday killed a voter re-registration and poll tax bill sponsored by the governor.

Both houses [illegible] snapped their fingers at Griffin by voting themselves a $400 pay raise. It raised their pay from $30 to $40 a day for the 40-day session. The governor had said he was "unalterably opposed to any legislative pay increase."

Lawmakers To Face Bills To Curb Voting

When the Georgia Legislature opens Monday, it will be faced with an amendment to Gov. Griffin's proposal to curb Negro voting, a proposal to enroll in state colleges, and a bill to halt integration of schools.

The House and Senate are destined for a flurry of activity if they are to act on most of this legislation prior to adjournment on Friday. Theoretically, there is barely enough time for the measures to be reported out of the various committees, approved by the House and by the Senate.

Leaders in the Griffin camp indicated late Friday they would not push the governor's anti-Negro voting proposal which calls for re-registering and paying a $1 poll tax every two years. However, Rep. W. Colbert Hawkins promised to amend the proposal by removing the re-registration features and making the $1 poll tax applicable only to future new voters.

The Hawkins amendment would make no changes in the status of the 1,200,000 voters, 150,000 of whom are Negroes, now registered. Prospective new voters, however, would be required to pay the poll tax and meet qualifications set up by the state and by a registrar board which was proposed in Griffin's original measure.

Proposals for tighter voter qualifications are pending in a House committee. They call for a new voter qualification test for literates and for a constitutional amendment to make reading and other tests requirements for registration. They also list a number of crimes which would make a person ineligible for registration.

Griffin's Poll Tax, Voter Registration Bids Face Scuttling Move in House

A move will be made to scuttle Gov. Griffin's poll tax and voter registration proposals when [illegible] reach the House floor.

Rep. Howard T. Overby of Hall County said he will move to replace Griffin's proposals with less far-reaching voter registartion changes recommended by a special study committee.

The study committee's proposals provide tougher qualifications for voting in Georgia but do not include the governor's plan for a bi-annual re-registration and $1 poll tax.

Legislation to carry out Griffin's plan is now pending in the House Rules Committee. That group may act on the proposals Thursday.

There is considerable opposition in the Legislature to Griffin's proposals — particularly the poll tax and re-registration requirements. The governor's plan is designed to curb Negro voting but would apply to white voters also.

"I'm not in accord with the governor's proposals," Overby said. "The Election Law study Committee worked 10 months on its recommendations and they should not be abandoned without being considered by the General Assembly."

Overby is a member of the election law study group and is a principal sponsor of the bills to carry out its recommendations. The bills are pending in the House State of the Republic Committee, of which Overby is chairman.

Overby said he will not seek committee action on his proposals until the fate of the Griffin-sponsored measures become clearer.

In addition to the poll tax and re-registration provisions, Griffin's bills would create a state board of registrars to set voter qualifications.

The governor's plan would go into effect immediately and would require the 1,200,000 voters now registered to pay the $1 poll tax by about May 1 in order to vote in the September gubernatorial primary.

The Election Law Study Committee proposed that present registration laws be changed to make a number of crimes and moral offenses bases for voter ineligibility. It also proposed that literacy be made a requirement for voting and drew up a tough 30-question voter qualification test.

The committee's proposals, however, would apply primarily to persons seeking to register in the future while Griffin's poll tax and re-registration proviso would apply to voters now on the books.

Bill On Voter Registration Killed In Ga.

ATLANTA, Feb. 18 (AP) — Gov. Marvin Griffin's voter registration bill, designed to prevent registration of large numbers of Negroes, was killed by the Georgia House of Representatives yesterday.

The governor immediately declared his disappointment that the Legislature had "failed to meet the challenge of campaigns designed by the NAACP and others to destroy the county unit system of elections in this state."

The 87-68 vote by which the House indefinitely postponed action on the measure — automatically killing it for this session which ends Friday — was another stunning defeat for Griffin's administration.

The voter registration measure killed by the House was a much weaker version than originally proposed by the governor. That proposal called for all voters to re-register every two years and pay a $1 registration fee.

While administration floor leader Colbert Hawkins conceded the bill had been considerably watered-down, he said it still would be a deterrent to the mass registration of Negroes.

Georgia Bill Aimed At Negro Vote Killed By Legislature

ATLANTA, Feb. 18 (AP) — Gov. Marvin Griffin's Voter Registration Bill, designed to prevent registration of large numbers of Negroes, was killed by the Georgia House of Representatives today.

The governor immediately declared his disappointment that the legislature had failed to meet the challenge of campaigns designed by the NAACP and others to destroy the county unit system of elections in this state."

The 87-68 vote by which the House indefinitely postponed action on the measure — automatically killing it for this session which ends Friday — was another stunning defeat for Griffin's administration.

The Senate, meanwhile, passed an administration-sponsored bill to purchase Stone Mountain and set up an association to build a Confederate memorial there. The approved measure, however, is a combination of two bills already passed by the House and includes several features not in the originals.

Also approved by the Senate 29-11 was the controversial Municipal Home Rule bill which failed to pass by two votes yesterday.

The House members, by resolution, voted themselves a $10 per day pay raise for this session of the Legislature. The proposal, offered by Rep. John Odom of Camden County, was approved 112-24 by show of hands. It was immediately transmitted to the Senate where the appropriations committee gave it a favorable recommendation. House members now make $30 a day.

The voter registration measure killed by the House was a much weaker version than originally proposed by the governor. That proposal called for all voters to re-register every two years and pay a $1 registration fee.

While administration floor leader Colbert Hawkins conceded that the bill had been considerably watered-down, he said it still would be a deterrent to the mass registration of Negroes.

As finally approved, the Stone Mountain measure puts a $1½ million ceiling on the purchase price, provides for an association to develop the mountain composed of four constitutional officers and three appointees of the governor, and that all except bond matters should be handled by the state Law Department.

An Act To Make Voting A Penalty

No real lovers or believers in a cause or institution would glory in making the mediums by which these are given life, discouraging, hard to count and otherwise a discordant feature in the daily processes of life.

Everyone knows that in the streamline agenda of an atomic age; time is of greater essence; things must be reunited in orderly fashion that the day might carry on its average activities.

When a group of men, say legislators, get together and pass cumbersome and almost prohibitive laws to make harder the qualification for voting there should be serious thinking on the part of the governed to see that such does not interfere with the direct expression of the people.

So, the Atlanta League of Women Voters again goes on record as lifting a hand against the new registration bill passed in the last hours of the recent session of the General Assembly. It praised Senator Charles Brown, who with another lone colleague, had the courage to oppose the act. Likewise the Fulton delegation in the house was applauded for its forthright courage to stand out against the measure.

Those whose depth in the problems of the day, would assign that this measure was passed for the handicap of Negro voters, should go all out to defeat the measure, by gearing for its rigid terms; by cutting the red-tape between the measure and those teen-agers, et cetera who are ready to be registered.

It is hard for a friend of good government, popular government to stand in the way of direct referendum from the people. The idea that the fewer the voters the easier they might be deceived should have no place in the American way of life.

To their everlasting credit the League of Women Voters urged that this bill not be passed. The public was promised a public hearing on the bill, but instead it was tossed into the the last minute hopper along with an avalanche of other legislation sufficient to detract special attention of the voters who might vote for something they had not had the time to study through.

However, the bill has become law; those affected must do as they have done about other measures, obviously intended to stay off as such as possible Negro voting.

We have climbed many a barbed wire fence to obtain access to the ballot and at this time, we will in no wise let up in a cause whose compensation is daily paining the way.

Governor Griffin Writes A Letter

In a letter gotten out by Governor Griffin, which he is ...ding all over the state he laments as follows: "There are ...,000 Negroes registered in Georgia today. The Rev. Martin ...er King, Negro preacher of Montgomery, Ala., has set up ...quarters for the purpose of putting 500,000 more Negroes ... the voters list in Georgia."

Specifically, he would advocate before the General Assembly a law to declare all registrations cancelled and charge one dollar fee for registration every two years, with almost unlimited powers vested in registrars!

The letter also infers that the inconvenience occasioned by ... voters on account of this new measure would be offset ... preference between doing this and "turning the state over ... Negro domination." How could 160,000 people or over ...,000 voters dominate over 3 million votes?

How the governor expects to sell a bill of frustration and ...on among nearly a million and half white voters, would ...ear beyond the pale of sane reasoning. Under that score, ... could justify that Negro domination is in the offing?

While it is not thought here that any undue anxiety will ... from an apparent alarm to cover up the recent fall off ...tock of the governor around his rural roads program, it is ...ly that our readers be warned that calmness is the key; that ... is a time for the keeping of ones head when others are ... theirs; that this is no time to be swept up in a stampede ... listens to be answered by another stampede.

As said before, we would not welcome this added inconvenience; we would regret to see an old practice return that has been more than once thrown off because of its own weight, but let it be said that our people have made up their minds to vote, poll tax or no poll tax. The ballot is the most effective instrument with which to solve our problems.

Free men love freedom and often in the quest for it the time and the cost are forgotten. This is the spirit we must show forth and exercise of the right of the franchise.

Another Effort To Tamper With Voters

On Tuesday the House of Representatives of the Georgia ...slature voted down a so-called voters qualification bill which ... sponsored by Gov. Marvin Griffin, but Wednesday that ... body brought out and passed a similar bill which ...ostensibly had the support of the anti-Griffin faction in that body.

The principal difference between the bills is that the gov...'s bill would require new voters to pay a One Dollar poll ... every two years and reregistration at that time, eliminating ... permanent registration under existing law.

...the similarity of both proposed bills is the announced ... of trying to thwart the present campaign by organiza... groups to substantially increase our voting ... however, we have a suspicion that regardless of what ...slature does, the objective sought will not be achieved. ... are determined to vote and you just can't legally ... group when it is determined to do something within ... of law.

... there is no justification for tampering with the ... law which was revised as late as 1948. But we ... politicians want a small electorate because they ... the old adage about fooling some (a few) of the people all the time. Actually, there is more smoke than fire about this registration business. A lot of talk about this and that requirement is aimed at confusing the people so as to make our people think it will be too difficult to get registered to vote.

The proposed new bill is bad in fact and spirit, but it will affect principally those who are illiterate. And if we continue our program to get only those members of our race who are not illiterate and who can read or write, we can add sufficient strength to make all politicians stop picking on us and using our race as a political football.

New bill or no new bill, let us continue our new voters drive.

HOUSE HANDS GRIFFIN NEW SETBACK

Poll Tax, Vote Registration Changes for Georgia Killed

ATLANTA, Feb. 18 (UP)—Georgia's independent-minded lawmakers today handed Gov. Marvin Griffin another major setback by defeating administration proposals to re-enact a poll tax and make sweeping changes in voter registration laws.

Immediately after the vote Griffin issued a statement stating that lawmakers in the House "failed to meet the challenge of campaign designed by the NAACP and others to destroy the county unit system of elections in this state."

After a one-hour debate, the lawmakers voted 87-68 to indefinitely postpone action on the bills. Speaker pro-tem Ben Jessup took the House vote three times—by voice, by a show of hands and finally on the electric voting machine. The measures were aimed at curbing Negro vote registration.

The poll tax bill, considerably watered down by crippling amendments when it came to the floor, was launched by Griffin who called on Georgia voters in 53,000 letters mailed across the state to support the bill.

Disenfranchise Negroes

The vote to indefinitely postpone came after a fiery speech by Rep. George T. Bagby of Paulding County, who said, "Each of us knows the purpose of this bill is to disenfranchise the Negro; I am with you, but this bill won't do it, we're just telling them to go ahead and hurry and do what they are already doing."

In other action, Georgia's legislators prepared to hand taxpayers a $103,500 bill for a pay boost of $400 for each of the 259 representatives and senators effective this year's session. The resolution, authored by Rep. John Odom of Camden County, easily passed the House amidst loud cheers and was immediately sent to the Senate.

The Senate Appropriations Committee later recommended passage of the measure and it will probably be ready for the final vote in the Senate tomorrow.

In other major action, the House defeated a resolution which would have proposed a constitutional amendment to extend a legislator's term from two to four years and give the lawmakers a pay hike from $1,200 to $4,200.

Stone Mountain Bill

The Senate, adjourning more than an hour before the House, passed a bill providing for the purchase of Store Mountain for development as a state park.

The bill places a $1,500,000 ceiling on the purchase price and allocates $2,500,000 for development of the property.

The Senate also passed a House-approved bill creating an insurance code committee to recommend revisions in Georgia's code.

Also passed was a House-approved measure setting up five juvenile detention homes in the state at a cost of some $500,000

Two Meetings In Interest Of Registration Set

Two meeting in the interest of registration and voting will be held this week.

The first of such meetings will take place tonight at 8 o'clock, when Rev. C. K. Steele of Tallahassee, Florida, speaks to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference at Mount Moriah Baptist Church on Ashby Street.

Rev. Steele is one of the leaders of the Tallahassee, Florida bus protest. He is also one of the leaders in the Southern Leadership Conference.

Rev. M. L. King, Jr., is head of the Southwide movement, designed to implement a mass registration drive among Negroes in the South.

Similar meetings to the one in Atlanta will be held in 20 other cities over the South.

On Thursday evening at the Butler Street YMCA at 8 o'clock the All Citizens Committee of the Atlanta Negro Voters League will hold a meeting in the interest of registration and voting.

Bills being presented in the Georgia Legislature will be discussed at this meeting.

Dr. C. A. Bacote is chairman of this committee.

ances For Any Revision Of State Laws Believed Dead

By ROBERT SCHOENFELT
International News Service

Proposals to tighten voter qualifications as a means of checking an expected upsurge in Negro voting were killed in the Georgia House Tuesday.

The House, mainly debating the relative advantage of restraining Negro registration and in the process discouraging or limiting some white participation in elections, voted 87-68 to postpone consideration of the measures. This vote, in the final days of the legislative session, in effect killed chances for any revision in state voter laws.

Gov. Marvin Griffin had urged Georgia require all voters to register every two years. Part of his proposal was a $1 biennial poll tax. The program would also have set up county registrar boards to pass on voter qualifications.

Opposition to this program, and to more stringent voter qualification requirements proposed by a legislative committee, developed. Some lawmakers expressed fear that in attempting to keep down the number of registered Negro voters, the state would disenfranchise numbers of white voters.

In Tuesday's parliamentary procedure, the governor's proposal was first watered-down to become simply a $1 registration fee for new voters, and then abandoned entirely by the indefinite postponement vote.

Rep. W. Colbert Hawkins told the House the election law changes were needed "to eliminate this mass registration drive that has been promoted by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Hawkins, Gov. Griffin's House floor leader, warned that the state would be forced to defer "some of these mass programs of registration," or that "after a time we will be completely out-voted and dominated by this (Negro) group."

Rep. George Bagby of Paulding County, argued that the poll tax or re-registration requirements would cause some white voters to become disinterested in elections. He argued that the emphasis should be "on getting out the white vote, rather than by endangering it with the passage of this bill."

Gov. Griffin had urged revision of voter requirements as a means of preserving the state's long-standing custom of racial segregation. He said the revision was necessary to counter a campaign by the NAACP for an immediate 500,000 increase in Georgia Negro voters. The NAACP is in the midst of educational drive to increase Negro participation in Southern elections, and announced plans to appeal to the Federal Civil Rights Commission, where necessary, to halt any discrimination under existing state laws.

Those Who Voted In General Election Would Escape Ban

The pending voter registration bill, which awaits the signature of Georgia's governor, will keep those who were not able to vote in 1956 from doing so in the coming September primary, it was said Friday.

Sidney Haskins, president of the Atlanta Metropolitan Voting Council, insisted that the controversial bill specifically sets the cut off date for a voter purge.

The bill was passed during a session of the Georgia legislature which declared one of its main aims is finding ways to halt the increase of voting strength among Negroes.

Negro voting strength was pointed out as a danger to the offices of extreme segregationists, and a threat to the county unit system.

The bill proposed by the election laws committee was pushed by Atty. Gen. Ernest Vandiver. It had been opposed by Griffin who offered a stronger measure; one which would have required all citizens to re-register every two years and pay a $1 fee when they do.

The governor's bill was watered down, and finally defeated. Griffin said of the bill that passed, "I'll give it consideration at the proper time."

Haskins quoted one section of the bill as reading, "any person who was qualified and registered to vote in the 1956 general election shall not be required to re-register under the terms of this law."

Haskins declared further that "although it does not specifically say that those people registered since May of 1956 will be purged, it does say that only those who registered prior to that date are exempt."

MORE THREATS SEEN TO VOTERS IN STATE ACT

A neighborhood voter registration bill may be killed when the enactment into law of a new state registration act passed by the recent Legislature, it has been reported.

The neighborhood voter registration bill was also passed during the recent legislature, and it would amend a 1949 law to allow deputy registrars in DeKalb County to open registration books at city halls in incorporated municipalities.

The new state registration act, which is now awaiting the governor's signature, would repeal the 1949 law, and the neighborhood registration bill "won't have anything to attach to", according to Fulton Tax Commissioner Standish Thompson.

Thompson, who is also chief Fulton voter registrar, said the new state bill could require prospective registrants to make two trips to the courthouse. The first time would be to file an application, and the second would be to appear before the Board of Registrars for an examination.

The voter registration act provides for a 30-question quiz of persons who can either read or write and also strengthens existing registration laws.

Georgia County Unit System Contested By Atlanta Mayor

ATLANTA (AP)—Atlanta's Mayor William B. Hartsfield Saturday asked the federal courts to rule out Georgia's county unit system in Democratic primaries.

The mayor of the state's largest city filed a suit for a declaratory judgment in U.S. District Court. He asked that a three-judge court enjoin party officials and Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson, Jr. from using the unit system to determine the winners in the September state party primary.

Hartsfield declared the unit system, giving a preponderance of political power to small rural counties, is arbitrary, discriminatory and unconstitutional.

He charged that under the system a vote of a resident of Echols, the state's least populated county, carries 85 times the weight of a resident of Fulton, the largest county, in a primary.

The U.S. Supreme Court has four times refused to rule out Georgia's unique primary election system, in which none of the 159 counties, no matter how small, has less than two unit votes, and none, no matter how large, more than six. The candidate polling a plurality of popular votes in a county gets all the county's unit votes. The unit votes decide the election.

Hartsfield emphasized that he filed the suit strictly as an individual and that neither the City of Atlanta "nor any other organization or group has any part of the action."

One of his reasons for bringing the suit, he said, is that "changes in the population of Georgia since the last court test have heigthened the disparity in voting power between urban and rural areas."

Another, he added, is that "there have been changes in the law which I feel have a very definite bearing on the precedent of previous refusals by the courts to pass upon the constitutionality of the county unit system." He did not elaborate on these changes.

The system has been in use in Georgia for more than 60 years. It first was a party rule but was enacted into law in 1916.

County Unit System Threatens Growth, Hartsfield Says

Mayor William B. Hartsfield Thursday charged that the county unit system in Georgia "seriously threatens the healthy growth of urban areas and produces a burden under which the cities pay the bill."

His charge followed a similar attack by DeKalb County in a proposal to amend the 1917 Neill Primary Act in order to take into consideration population shifts.

Hartsfield said "one of the bitter ironies is the fact that the State of Georgia puts up only 27.4 per cent for operation of schools, whereas in Birmingham, the State of Alabama pays 52 per cent."

The DeKalb proposal would increase the unit votes of Georgia's eight largest counties from 12 per cent to 21 per cent. These counties have about 42 per cent of the total population of the state.

Voter Registration Bill Major Law Affecting Negroes

The Registration Bill Which Finally Passed

Bringing the record up to date as the Georgia General Assembly leaves its paper-littered floors for home, we would cite the status of the registration bill which finally passed. It was well that the first one, requiring a monetary consideration and the trouble of re-registering every two years, was stricken by the wayside.

Needless to say that the memories of the old Talmadge re-registration laws were too fresh to swallow the "inconveniences" which they were told would be written off in saving the state from Negro domination.

However this same legislature, when convinced that another bill aimed at the same purpose was shorn of the distasteful features which would gore all oxen alike, they passed it with two single dissenting votes. These deserve special mention Senator Charles Brown of Atlanta and the 52nd District, and Senator Glen Pelham of Cairo, the 7th Senatorial District.

While on this score be it said to the credit of the assembly, that it moved independently. It was a session that showed its teeth at times and spared no quarter for many of the governor's pet measures.

The bill that passed would require of those unable to read or write to answer questions on government. While this gives registrars some discretionary powers, there are no reasons why those who desire to register should cut this red tape.

Admittedly aimed at the Negro, it is now his turn to take his stand and defend his corner as he has in bygone days when this same attempt came by another route and under another name.

The years gone by in which subterfuges as the grandfather clause, the property clause and the white primary proviso saw service at keeping Negroes away from the polls, are indicators that even this latter barrier will be surmounted.

As we have stated before in these columns, our people recognize the importance of the ballot and are determined to vote. This new bill is more smoke than fire. It hits mainly at illiterates so if all our people who are not illiterate get registered, and there is no excuse for them not doing so, we can make a real contribution to better government in Georgia.

Would Have Authorized Poll Tax

Gov. Griffin Tried To Stop Force Of Voting Crusade

Special to Journal and Guide

ATLANTA, Ga. — Gov. Marvin Griffin's scheme to put up a barrier to Negro voter registration backfired last week when the state House of Representatives killed a bill which would have reestablished the dreaded poll tax in the state.

By an 87 - 68 vote, the House indefinitely postponed action on the measure thereby automatically killing it for this session.

IT WAS another stunning defeat for Gov. Griffin's administration.

Even the measure that was killed was much weaker than the one originally proposed by the governor. That proposal called for all voters to re-register every two years and pay a one dollar registration fee.

GOV. GRIFFIN proposed the bill in an attempt to halt a Southern - wide voter registration drive currently being conducted under the direction of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference headed by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. which ended Friday.

New Georgia Law Designed To End Negro Vote Progress

Negro Leaders Plan Special Schools To Prepare Voters 34e

Boards of registrars in Georgia's 159 counties have been provided with two new methods to keep down the registration of Negroes. Whether they are used as weapons for that purpose will depend on the fairness and intelligence of the individual boards.

The General Assembly, which adjourned Feb. 21, passed an act that amends the previous registration act in two important respects:

1. Citizens who cannot qualify as literate by reading and writing sections of the United States or Georgia Constitutions must answer 20 of 30 questions, some of which require a detailed knowledge of government and law. Previously there was a panel of 10 fairly simple questions.

2. Citizens may be barred from voting if convicted of crimes involving "moral turpitude."

It should be pointed out that so far as strict legalities are concerned, the new registration laws apply equally to white and Negro citizens. Whether they are used to raise the standard of suffrage generally or as weapons to keep down registration by Negroes will depend entirely on the fairness of local registration boards in applying the tests.

However, during discussion of the bill on the floor of the House frequent allusions were made to the "necessity" of thwarting the efforts of the NAACP to increase the registration of Negro voters.

It is understood that Negro leaders will open special "schools" to prepare intended illiterate registrants to pass the tests. Even so, persons who have not even learned to read and write may find it difficult to understand and retain information about the "writ of habeas corpus."

The modification of the original Griffin-sponsored bill represented a victory for the forces loyal to Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver, who is expected soon to formally announce his candidacy for the governorship in the November elections. The revised version generally was referred to as the "Vandiver bill."

Griffin's Control Slips

Governor Griffin's defeat on the registration bill marked a session of the Legislature in which he appeared at the start to have complete control, but which he gradually lost to the Vandiver forces. His first major setback came when the House turned down his proposal to increase the bonding limit of the highly political Rural Roads Authority from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 — a fight personally led by Mr. Vandiver. Other administration measures suffered a similar fate.

The rapid decline of the Governor's power illustrated once again the political cliche that a "lame duck" in office is that indeed. Governor Griffin's term will end on Dec. 31 and under the Georgia Constitution he is ineligible for reelection. There are widespread reports, unconfirmed by him, that he may seek the office of lieutenant governor in defiance of all political precedents.

The Governor did not take his defeat with good grace. Contrasted to the friendly and jovial type of [illegible] he has been [illegible]

Assembly on its closing day, he lambasted the members for failure to follow his leadership.

Governor Is Critical

Referring to his ill-starred legislative program, the Governor told legislators:

"The coming months will reveal the story of the damage that will result from the failure of this General Assembly to carry out these recommendations . . .

"When partisan politics becomes so bitterly partisan that the welfare of the people must be sacrificed to momentary personal advantage, Georgia is in a sad, sad situation.

"The responsibility will fall upon those who failed the people at the time that help was needed most."

One hard political fact remains in the wake of the Legislature's adjournment after one in Georgia history: Mr. Vandiver of its most tempestuous sessions is virtually certain to be the next Governor of Georgia. The extent to which he, as constitutional presiding officer of the Senate, gained political control over the House during the present session indicates clearly that members expect him to be the next Governor and were willing to follow his lead with the hope of gaining future patronage.

The only announced candidate to oppose him is Roger M. Lawson, former chairman of the State Highway Board under Governor Griffin. He has been counting on administration support.

It is expected that within the next few days Representative Charles Gowen of Brunswick, long a leader of the small liberal bloc in the House, will announce his candidacy for the post of lieutenant governor. If he should be elected, he will be in a good position to build political strength for the race for Governor in 1962.

Georgia Bill Tightens Vote Registration

ATLANTA, March 8 (AP)—The 1958 Georgia Legislature has enacted a stiff voter registration law designed to discourage registration of Negroes.

The measure is awaiting action by the Governor and will become effective immediately if he signs it.

Major features are the requirement for personal examination of all applicants by the county board of registrars and a typed set of questions which must be answered by illiterate applicants.

The provision for personal examination of applicants is one that would require the applicant to make two trips to the court house. The first trip would be to make application for registration. The second would be for the purpose of being examined by the registrars.

Under the Constitution, a person may qualify for registration by reading and writing a section of the Constitution. Persons who cannot do that—illiterates—may qualify on the basis of good character and an understanding of the duties and obligations of citizenship.

At present such persons must answer 10 out of 20 questions set up by law which shows both questions and answers. The new law sets up 30 much more difficult questions, of which the applicant must answer 20—and no answers are listed.

Citizen Urges Protection of Right to Vote; Retention of Compulsory Attendance Law

Stone Mountain — I wonder how many of George Washington's soldiers at Valley Forge could read or write? How many of our Founding Fathers never went to school? How many veterans who fought for their country's freedom never had the opportunity to become educated?

While in the Army I came in contact with many Georgia soldiers, both white and colored, whose formal education was limited but who were good soldiers and citizens and who have done much more for their country than some politicians who would like to deprive them of their right to vote.

What's wrong with our politicians? Are they so incompetent that they are afraid of the Negro vote? So they cut off their noses to spite their faces.

They are trying to pass a law that would deprive many honorable, if uneducated, citizens of all races of their right to vote and at the same time to pass legislation which would abolish the compulsory school attendance law, making it impossible for some of our children to get an education.

A WHITE VOTER.

To be Southwide

Negroes plan drive for votes

ATLANTA, Jan. 31 — (AP) — Negro leaders will launch a Southwide campaign in two weeks to increase voter registration among Negroes in 11 states. The goal is to double the present number by 1960.

The "crusade for citizenship" begins Feb. 12 with Lincoln Day rallies in 21 cities.

"The main function of the campaign is to educate our people on their basic rights," the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., of Montgomery, Ala., said yesterday.

"This movement is not simply a medium of protest."

King is president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which is sponsoring the campaign. He was in Atlanta yesterday for a meeting of the conference's executive committee.

"OUR ULTIMATE goal is to register every eligible Negro in the 11 states," King told a news conference.

States in which the drive will be carried on are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas.

A request for participation in the campaign by the Civil Rights Commission was sent to its chairman, Dr. John A. Hannah.

King's letter specifically invited Hannah to take part in a Lincoln Day rally at Miami, Fla. King will speak at the Miami meeting.

THOSE PLANNING the drive "expect to encounter some resistance in all of the states—mostly at the county level," King said.

The estimated number of Negroes registered to vote in the 11 states was 1,238,000 in 1956. That is about 25 per cent of the Negro population of voting age. About 60 per cent of white persons of voting age are registered in the area.

The campaign will be managed by an executive director and two assistants with headquarters in Atlanta. The staff has not been named.

The County Unit Takes On More Excess Luggage

The sudden springing again of the county unit dispute revives an old and unsavory practice of enlisting the Negro question in behalf of things lacking in merit. The extent that Georgia's governor would go in his castigation of Mayor Hartsfield, who brought up the suit, would suggest that the county unit is on thin ice; that it has fallen into such peril as to have only one leg upon which to prop.

The outright labeling of an official for exercising his right of free speech as a renegade, might be highly offensive in our social order.

Beyond a shadow of a doubt the county unit is losing face and probably many supporters did not realize that its sponsors would openly attempt to exploit them to the tune of offending it as a safeguard to segregation.

Long ago it used to be repugnant to the nature of Negroes for the enlistment of such fiat in those causes of questionable sanction which called for the Negro scare and for labeling those who did not go along as enemies to their people.

Today, the practice is so outmoded as to have to depend upon something which the people of the state have only to cross over into Alabama or South Carolina to find the futility of any claim that the county unit is in any wise related to the Supreme Court decision that segregation is unconstitutional.

Thusly, as the struggle goes on, the county unit gains further top-heaviness; its already overload is taking on the segregation question and as some one has said, if the court does not get it, sooner or later, its own gravity will.

Registration Conference To Be Held Here This Weekend

...Brooks, Director of the ... Voter Registration campaign will come to Georgia at the end of this week to confer with leaders on registration activities ...

...has conducted successful campaigns in his home city of state, Richmond, Virginia. He ... with leaders in other states, including two visits to Georgia, where one of successful campaigns in ... was progressing.

The outstanding event of Brooks' ... will be a workshop for ministers to be held in the Educational Building of Ebenezer Baptist Church Monday, March 31, 1958 from 2:00 p. m., to 4:00 p. m.

This session is intended to coordinate the activities of churches with the general drive for registration, recognizing the fact that organized church groups offer one of the most effective channels for achieving registration goals.

Saturday evening at 7:00 p. m., Mr. Brooks will confer with the Atlanta All Citizens Registration Committee leaders at the Butler Street YMCA. At that time he will hear a report on activities to date from Dr. C. A. Bacote and other officials and make recommendations. Ga. Voters League To Gather In Macon Mar. 29

County leaders from all over the state of Georgia, will converge upon Macon, Saturday, March 29, 1958 for the Semi-Annual Meeting of the Georgia Voters' League.

The meeting will begin at 12:30 p.m. in Steward Chapel AME Church on Cotton Avenue, Rev. J. H. Lemon, ...

Voter-registration will be the principle topic of discussion at the meeting, with special emphasis upon techniques for increasing the number of eligibles according to an announcement by John Wesley Dobbs, president of the league.

A special registration committee was established in 1957 as a non-partisan group by leaders from different parts of the state, represent religious, civic and benevolent organizations. The 1967 campaign not only made up of names removed from the lists according to law but added some 5,000 to the total registration for the previous year, according to a report issued by the Committee. The league sponsored the organization of the committee and has endorsed its program to secure 300,000 voters.

Another subject to be discussed at the semi-annual meeting is the matter of Urban Renewal. More than 60 communities in the state have made application to the Federal Government, for assistance with slum clearence and urban renewal programs. A discussion of underlying principles and safeguards will be held during the session.

High Court Has Gained New Faces Since Last Contest on Unit System

By HAROLD DAVIS

Washington

BILL HARTSFIELD'S suit against the county unit system will likely put the unit issue before the U.S. Supreme Court again for the first time in eight years.

The court that sits today is a somewhat different court than sat in 1950 when Benard South tried to knock out the unit system. South brought suit against the then chairman of the Democratic Party, James S. Peters of Manchester.

In the South case, the court ruled in the spring of 1950 for Peters and the unit system. The vote ...

The two dissenters — Justices Black and Douglas — are still on the bench in the marble palace behind the Capitol. So are three of the justices who voted for Peters and the system: Frankfurter, Burton and Clark.

Four new men are on the bench. If the old-timers hold to their past opinions, the decision will be made by the new faces.

Of the new arrivals, two are "liberals" — Warren and Brennan. Two are "moderate conservatives" — Harlan and Whittaker.

If the newcomers vote as coupled above, the ballot would be five to four — in favor of the unit system.

AID

Three Georgians are helping sponsor a national committee to create a favorable climate of opinion for foreign aid. They are Erle Cocke Jr., vice president of Delta Air Lines in Atlanta; Dr. Omer C. Aderhold, president of the University of Georgia, and Mrs. Mamie Taylor of the Georgia Power Co. in Atlanta.

The Committee for International Economic Growth has 200 members nationwide and is headed by Eric Johnston, who, with Mr. Cocke, arranged a huge dinner in Washington on Feb. 25 to plug for foreign assistance. Messrs. Johnston and Cocke were asked to stage the affair by President Eisenhower, who is seeking bipartisan support for the foreign aid program.

Harold Davis is The Atlanta Journal's Washington correspondent.

The national committee on which the Georgians serve grew out of the dinner.

SCENE

A scene from Georgia Confederate history is on display at the Library of Congress, and will be exhibited through May 31.

The library is showing 47 prints and drawings that depict American life of past days.

One of the lithographs is an original of the citizens of Savannah raising the first flag of independence in the South. The event occurred Nov. 8, 1860.

And speaking of history, Congressman James C. Davis of Stone Mountain is doing what he can to head off the remodeling of the front of the U.S. Capitol. The renovators want to tear down the present front wall and build an entirely new one 32 feet and six inches out in the plaza.

This, ostensibly, would give valuable new floor space to the Capitol and would, at the same time, make possible needed repairs.

"Tinkering with and endlessly remodeling a national shrine and historic building offends most Americans," Mr. Davis says.

"The last bit of vandalism practiced on the Capitol was when British Adm. Cockburn set fire to the newly completed building during the War of 1812."

GEORGIA EDITORS LOOK OVER THE STATE:

Urban Area Voters Are Getting Mighty Restless

Constitution p. 16
340 Macon News Ga.

ATLANTA MAYOR Bill Hartsfield probably realizes as well as the next person that in the present situation nothing can be done about breaking the grip of the iniquitious county unit system on the state's urban areas. Hartsfield inquired of Secretary of State Fortson as to the procedure for an independent candidate to run for governor in next fall's general election. Then the mayor filed a federal court suit to knock out the unit vote system. This maneuver has failed before.

Atlanta Ga.

The mayor's move may be of some value by causing rural voters to realize that there is a tremendous undercurrent of restlessness among the electorate in the more populous cities. They are tired of having their voting strength diluted by the unfair county unit system and, unless a more equitable primary and representation plan is worked out, they may someday decide to flex their ballot muscles in a general election where their power can really be felt.

Jour. 3-25-58

Augusta Chronicle

WHILE GOV. Marvin Griffin's contention that the county unit system is a chief Georgia weapon against racial integration may be debatable, his bitter blast against Atlanta's Mayor William B. Hartsfield for asking the federal courts to interfere in the September state Democratic primary was, we believe, fully justified. . . .

Hartsfield's decision to ask the federal courts to halt the primary on the score that the unit system "gives a preponderance of political power" to small rural counties is, The Chronicle believes, as regrettable as his charge is true.

Even if admitted that the present system is, as Hartsfield contends, "arbitrary, discriminatory and unconstitutional," it is purely a state problem, and it would seem most inopportune, on top of Little Rock and other episodes stemming from recent federal court decisions, to invite federal interference in another state matter.

Moreover, the U.S. Supreme Court previously refused to rule out Georgia's unique primary election system, in which none of the 159 counties, no matter how small, has less than two unit votes, and none, no matter how large, has more than six. But what the present Supreme Court might decide, should the Hartsfield suit reach it, is highly conjectural in view of its obvious interference urge.

It is ultra-ironic to resent federal interference on one point and to ask for it on another—a matter which, it would certainly seem, Mayor Hartsfield chose to ignore.

The 60-year-old county unit system has been retained in Georgia by politicians who find it an easy way to retain their power, and it has led to serious abuses. Even that is preferable, though, to any further invasion of states' rights.

The system is a hang-over headache that needs doctoring—but not by outside tinkerers.

Macon Telegraph

GARLAND BYRD has come up with a proposal which sounds like a deliberate attempt to sabotage his own campaign for lieutenant governor.

The young attorney suggests that every person who earns a living in Georgia be required to take a loyalty oath.

"Those who refuse to take the oath would be precluded from earning a livelihood," said Mr. Byrd.

Those who take the oath and then violate its terms would be liable for prosecution for false swearing. And, said Mr. Byrd, "I would even recommend that this violation be punishable as a felony."

The announced aim of the proposal is to preserve segregation, a way of life which of course the overwhelming majority of Georgians want to preserve.

But Mr. Byrd's plan is such an outrageously dangerous attempt at thought control through starvation and imprisonment that it is almost unbelievable he would seriously advance it. . . .

Columbus Ledger

THE WIRE services have quoted State Insurance Commissioner Zack Cravey as saying Rep. Frank Twitty's conduct of a legislative committee investigation of recent insurance rate increases "stinks."

We can understand the commissioner's apparent discomfiture over the hearing. Some very searching questions have been asked him. The answers he has been forced to give must have made him uncomfortable, indeed.

We believe, however, Insurance Commissioner Cravey, who also is comptroller general and commissioner of several other things, is slightly mixed up about the source of the unpleasant odors he seems to detect.

From this distance, it appears they must be arising from procedures in the State Insurance Department which allow sharp increases in fire and automobile insurance rates to be granted without adequate checks being made to determine if they are justified.

Sniff again, Mr. Cravey.

Baxley News-Banner

THE MANY FEET of Zack Cravey, commissioner of insurance and commissioner of many other things, have become all tangled up. . . .

Mr. Cravey has always managed to give the impression that he is somewhat of a czar over the insurance companies and that in that capacity he protects all the little and big policyholders. Yet fire insurance rates in Georgia are allegedly higher than in many other Southern states.

Certainly Mr. Cravey can look good when he refuses to license some questionable insurance company to operate in Georgia. He is in position also to call the tune for most any insurance company that might foolishly oppose him on some issue. But what does he do when they all get together and tell him what to do? The answer lies in his granting increased rates and then secretly agreeing to being enjoined after he had publicly rescinded his rate increase order.

Insurance Commissioner Cravey has started a fire that it appears Fire Commissioner Cravey will be unable to put out. . . .

Mayor Hartsfield Expresses The Right Spirit

Atlanta Ga.
Daily World

Speaking at the Hungry Club session Wednesday at the Butler Street YMCA, Mayor William B. Hartsfield took note of the general economic conditions which confront most parts of the nation. He very properly pointed out that the country is in the current trend of a recession. But also, very correctly, our city's chief executive did not express any feelings of an alarmist. He said Atlanta could very wisely expend some of its bond funds to help stem the tide of present economic trends.

Jour. 3-21-58

The mayor dwelt on fiscal and tax problems which naturally would interest his hearers.

P. 4

In his usual vein, he extolled Atlanta as a great and powerful city. He praised those who had helped to make it so, and in detail enumerated the serious problems encountered by such a municipality without aid from the state as Memphis and some other cities were enjoying.

340 Ga.

Declaring that he had not committed himself to any particular area, as to the Urban Re-development plan, he was sure that all the problems would be solved under "mutual goodwill."

He touched on the recession apparently in the offing; he was of the opinion that Atlanta would suffer least under its impact because of diversified business and industry. This was encouraging to the group, many of whom have made heavy investments in homes, businesses and modern utilities.

How the state taxed everything from the cradle to the grave was humorously lamented, but, all seriousness attended when he drew a contrast of our own time with the beginning of the settlement of this country, when the founding fathers envisioned a new world of agrarian enterprise, with some 280,000 people living in cities over against 3,000,000 living in rural areas.

While the mayor did not mention his county unit fight directly, it was obvious that his reference to the cities bearing the rural burdens would suggest that very thing.

The acute shift of people from the rural areas, overloading the city facilities intended for the leisure and business class somewhat forced to live in the cities, would naturally arouse the suspicion that these near empty counties, deriving much of their subsistence from state and national taxation, were exercising too much power in the business of government.

The Unit System Apologists Have Their Wires Crossed

I see by the papers that Mayor Bill Hartsfield of Atlanta has filed suit in the federal courts seeking to have Georgia's controversial county unit system declared illegal. It riles us Southern rebels to have the federal courts called in to settle our local squabbles. We never have liked it and since 1954 we exhibit an acute sensitivity on the subject of federal courts in general.

But we have no right to expect to remain immune from federal court interference as long as we persist in such unjust, undemocratic and inequitable political schemes as the county-unit system as presently constituted.

Something might be said in favor of a scientifically designed county-unit system, based on voter registration or, actual vote records, with a progressively larger number of voters per unit as the voting strength of the counties increased.

But certainly there can be no defense of the present system which permits Burke County, voting a total of 1,500, to have four unit votes, while Gordon County, with a total of 4,000, is allowed only two unit votes.

There can be no defense of a system which gave the people of Fulton and Campbell counties two unit votes for each county, and took them all away when the two counties merged with Atlanta.

There can be no defense of a system whose apologists loudly proclaim their undying loyalty to the "way of life," but who use the heavy Negro populations of their counties to get an unequal two-vote advantage of their white fellow citizens in substantially all-white counties.

There can be no defense of a system which permits a handful of white people in a tier of small counties with heavy Negro populations to outvote a far larger number of white people in a similar tier of small counties with practically no Negro population.

Many of the two-vote counties are losing population every day; no matter how many thousands of their people move away, those who remain can still cast votes of the two-unit county whose population is growing every day.

We hear a great deal about the county unit system as a wonderful plan for "saving" the people of the country counties from domination by the densely populated cities. What should be remembered is that Georgia is the only state in the South with such an inequitable and unjust distribution of political power. And the other states do not seem to be going to the dogs any faster than we are. As a matter of fact, there is only one other state in the Union that has anything resembling our county unit system. If it is such a Utopian scheme, why isn't it in more universal use?

When we insist on perpetrating such indefensible schemes as this politicians' dream, we ought not to holler like a stuck pig when somebody like Bill Hartsfield loses his patience and asks a federal court to look into the matter.

I could support a reasonable county unit system. But not the preposterous monstrosity that now makes a mockery of political equality.

Griffin Kills Bill Altering No. 2 Race

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.
Wed. 3-26-58

Gov. Griffin Tuesday vetoed a bill that would have required nomination of lieutenant governors to be by a majority of county unit votes.

The governor also vetoed a Fulton County special use permit bill but signed into law a voter registration bill backed by Lt. Gov. Vandiver.

Veto of the proposed change in the method of electing a lieutenant governor immediately revived speculation that Griffin might be considering the race himself.

Griffin is not eligible under the state constitution to succeed himself as governor, but there have been reports he may try for the number-two spot.

The bill was introduced by Rep. A. A. Fowler of Douglas County, himself an announced candidate for lieutenant governor. Another challenger for the office, Garland Byrd, welcomed Fowler's proposed change. At present, the nomination goes to the plurality winner.

Griffin spent the afternoon fighting against the deadline for acting on proposed legislation. He has yet to act on some 300 bills and resolutions. If he does not sign them by Friday, they will automatically die.

The voter registration bill was the product of the Election Laws Study Committee. It discourages Negro voting by requiring illiterates to pass a difficult oral examination and to make two trips to their county courthouses to register.

Griffin himself backed a much more drastic voter bill that included a poll tax and complete reregistration. The bill was beaten by Vandiver forces, who on the next day pushed through the committee proposal.

The Fulton County bill was a companion to an Atlanta special use permit bill Griffin vetoed last week. The Atlanta bill was proposed because an old statute had been declared void by the Georgia Supreme Court. Fulton still has an unchallenged special use permit law on the books.

Griffin's veto of the Atlanta bill drew angry criticism from Mayor Hartsfield and other officials.

Hartsfield Files New Motion On The County Unit

Atlanta World

Attorneys for Mayor William B. Hartsfield filed another motion Monday seeking a ruling by U. S. District Judge [illegible] on the question of calling a three-judge court to hear the suit against the county unit system without first having a [illegible]

Rejecting their contention for hearing on the suit for Apr 16 in Gainesville, the attorneys set forth three possible choices before Judge Sloan.

Under federal procedure, questions of a constitutional nature are brought before a three-man panel of federal judges. That is what Mayor Hartsfield is seeking because a ruling of a three-judge court can be appealed directly to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Mayor Hartsfield's attorneys listed the three choices before Judge Sloan as follows:

1. That the suit obviously raises a contitutional question, in which case the three-judge panel should be summoned at the earliest practical date.

2. That there is doubt that the suit raises a substantial constitutional question, in which event the panel should likewise be called.

3. That the suit obviously raised no substantial constitutional question, in which case the request for a three-judge court should be dismissed.

Mayor Hartsfield's attorneys are seeking to get the suit before the Supreme Court this spring, so that a ruling would affect the Democratic primary this fall.

The two motions filed on behalf of Mayor Hartsfield were made in opposition to motions made by Ben W. Fortson, Jr., secretary of State, and John Sammons Bell, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Judge Sloan has not indicated whether he is considering canceling the hearing. But he has said he will "give due consideration to every motion" made in the suit.

VOTER REGISTRATION CLINIC SLATED TODAY

A Voter Registration Clinic will be held today at 4:00 p. m., in the Butler Street YMCA. John W. Brooks of Richmond, Virginia, Director, Southwide Voter Registration Campaign, will conduct the program under sponsoring of the All-Citizens Registration Campaign headed by Dr. C. A. Bacote, Atlanta University.

Members and all persons interested in Voter-Registration are urged to be present to discuss plans and the new Voter-Registration law, especially in regard to how it will be inforced in Fulton County.

Tomorrow at 2:00 p. m., at the Religious Education Building of Ebesezer Baptist Church, Rev. M. L. King, Sr. Pastor, a ministers' clinic will be conducted by Mr. Brooks.

This program is being sponsored by the All-Citizens Registration Committee in cooperation with the church work committee of the Atlanta Branch, NAACP and the Church Department of the National Office headed by E. J. Odum. The local committee is headed by Dr. George A. Sewell of Morris Brown College.

Saturday night Mr. Brooks met with the members of the Executive Committee of the All Citizens Registration Committee at the YMCA for orientation in regard to the Atlanta and Fulton County situation

Getting on Vote Roll Made Hard

ATLANTA (AP)—Gov. Marvin Griffin has signed the tougher voter registration bill passed by the 1958 Georgia Legislature after it had defeated Griffin's even more drastic voter proposals.

At the same time, the governor vetoed a bill which would have required nomination for the office of lieutenant governor to be by a majority of county unit votes.

The voter registration bill was recommended by a joint legislative election laws study committee after nearly a year of study. Frankly intended by sponsors to discourage Negro registration, its principal provisions require two trips to the courthouse to register and a longer and tougher set of questions which illiterates must answer.

It was introduced as an administration measure and Griffin, in his address to the Legislature, urged that it be given careful consideration. But the governor later had his leaders introduce measures requiring biennial reregistration and payment of a $1 poll tax and payment of all taxes before being eligible to register.

Griffin's proposals were killed in the House.

VOTE LAW TIGHTENED

Georgia's New Statute Aims to Curb Negro Registrants

ATLANTA, March 26 (AP)—A bill designed to discourage Negro voting in Georgia was signed yesterday by Gov. Marvin Griffin.

The measure calls for a longer and more difficult set of questions that illiterates must answer to qualify for voting. The law also requires personal examination of all voter applicants by county board of registrars.

A special committee created by the 1957 Legislature drafted the bill after nearly a year of study. Its sponsors stated that it was designed to meet the challenge of the Negro registration campaign by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

County Unit Suit In First Test Monday

A hearing on Mayor Hartsfield's plea for a three-judge court to rule on his suit against the county unit system, is expected to begin in Gainesville at 2 p. m. Monday.

The hearing date was re-set by U. S. District Court Judge Boyd Cloan from April 16 when Martsfield asked that the suit be advanced as quickly as possible.

The mayor, acting in a private capacity, is seeking an injuction to keep the county unit system from being used in the forthcoming Democratic Primary for the nomination of state officers.

Staunch opponents of the mayor are Georgia Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson Jr. and John Sammons Bell, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. Bell is a defendant in the suit.

CLAIMS CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION

The controversial hearing will decide whether the suit raises a constitutional question. Hartsfield contends that the county unit system is a violation of the 14th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution. Obstacles were heaved in the path of the suit when opponents held that previous court ruling have already decided the case.

In pressing for a three-judge tribunal, Hartsfield's attorneys hope to be able to appeal the suit directly to the U. S. Supreme Court this Spring so that a ruling would affect the primary in September.

Meanwhile, Mayor Hartsfield has continued his crusade against the system, declaring it causes a gross misrepresentation of the actual population.

Georgia Voters Learn Of "Grass Roots" County Plan

If Georgia citizens follow suggestions made by John Brooks, of Richmond, Va., director of the Southwide Voter Registration Campaign, the drive to increase the number of registered voters will be greatly intensified. He spent the past week-end in Macon and Atlanta, winding up his visit with an appearance at Ebenezer Baptist Church Monday afternoon.

Saturday at the semi - annual meeting of the Georgia Voters League, Mr. Brooks outlined a "grass roots" plan for use at the county level which has been used effectively in other states.

This plan would involve all leaders and organizations interested in voter-registration, but make use of community leaders to carry out the program.

Saturday night in a meeting with the executive committe of the Atlanta All - Citizens Registration Committee, a number of questions were raised as to the feasibility of Mr. Brooks' recommendations for precinct clubs, the basis of "grass roots" organization in urban communities. There again, the plans for leadership at the community level, and the system is said to be so simple that it raises questions. Discussions of the Atlanta plans were continued at a meeting of committee members and others Sunday afternoon at the Butler Street YMCA.

Monday Mr. Brooks wound up his trip with a Ministers' Workshop, at which time a "Crash Program" was adopted for use in Atlanta churches during the four weeks in which registration will be continued in Fulton County. The program will be submitted to the ministerial alliances for consideration at their meetings next week.

According to Dr. C. A. Bacote, chairman of the All-Citizens Registration Committee, Mr. Brooks is to return to Atlanta if and when it is decided that the precinct organization plan will be put into effect on a permanent basis.

THREE JUDGES SOUGHT

Mayor's Move In Georgia County Unit Suit Sidelined

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — U.S District Judge Boyd Sloan Tuesday refused to order a three-judge court to hear Atlanta Mayor William B. Hartsfield's suit attacking Georgia's county unit system.

The ruling was a rebuff to Hartsfield's effort to get a quick decision from the U.S. Supreme Court, which has thrice previously refused to upset the Georgia law requiring use of the unit system in primaries.

But Morris Abram of Atlanta, leading counsel for Hartsfield, said an attempt will be made to get the issue directly to the Supreme Court by asking the high court for a writ of mandamus to force Sloan to convene a three-judge court.

Sloan, after a hearing here Monday on Hartsfield's plea for a panel court, issued an order Tuesday denying the plea on the ground that the mayor's suit raised no substantial federal question. He said "previous decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States foreclose the subject and leave no inference that the question sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy."

Under the unit system, counties are assigned from two to six units according to size, with two unit leading counsel for Hartsfield, field filed suit seeking to have the unit system invalidated, charging that under it a resident of Fulton County has only 1-155th the voting strength of a resident of the state's smallest county.

He alleged that is a deprivation of his voting rights.

The mayor sought a three-judge court because appeals from such a panel can be appealed directly to the Supreme Court. Otherwise, a final decision probably could not be reached before the Sept. 10 state Democratic primary. Also, only a three-judge court can enjoin a state statute.

Legislature a re-registration measure to rid the voting lists of all voters—white and black—and require them to re-register under a new procedure including a test for illiterates.

Talmadge's proposal, as is Griffin's, was designed to eliminate the Negroes then on the registration books with the idea of making it more difficult for them to get back on.

The proposal backfired all over the state. There was much resentment among white voters at being forced to re-register even when they didn't have to pay a poll tax. They stayed away from the registrar offices in numbers sufficiently in the past few years that the white voters will now accept the tough, new re-registration proposal including reinstatement of the poll tax.

Undoubtedly the climate has changed some. The Supreme Court's 1954 school de-segregation decision, the passage of a federal "right-to-vote" civil rights law, and the integration explosion at Little Rock have contributed to a general tightening of racial feelings.

But whether it has changed enough to create a willingness on the part of the whites to accept Griffin's proposal remains to be seen.

If they do, Griffin will have added to his reputation as a ...listed segregationist who proves his mettle by deeds as well as words.

But if the proposal becomes law and then proves as unpopular as the Talmadge re-registration act, Griffin will likely be blamed for putting another tax on the people and attempting to restrict voting rights.

Mon-2-10-58

The governor is seeking to marshal white public opinion in support of his proposal. He has sent out around 50,000 letters to public officials and others declaring that the "inconvenience" his proposal might cause white voters is preferable "to turning our state over to Negro domination."

Until Griffin's proposals are put down in black and white in the form of proposed legislation, many veteran legislators are taking a cautious approach to the plan.

Most of them, particularly in the rural areas, know that to be labeled "weak" or "soft" on the race and segregation question is political suicide. Therefore, they will be hard put to oppose anything with the segregation tag attached.

Yet many of them remember the experience of a few years ago.

They are in a quandry.

So probably are many of the 1,200,000 voters now on the registration books, including the more than a million who are white.

Griffin seeks law to curb Negro voting

Sun-2-9-58

ATLANTA, Feb. 8—(AP)—Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia, who is considering a poll tax to halt mass registration of Negro voters, said today a vote change "must be enacted into law."

The governor declined to comment directly on the poll tax report, but said in a prepared statement:

"UNRESTRICTED registration and the addition of thousands of ineligible Negroes each year to the voters lists in Georgia will destroy the county unit system just as surely as if the General Assembly voted it out of existence on the floors of the legislative halls."

34e Ga.

He also declared that "this is no time for pussy-footing and fence-straddling. The General Assembly is now in session. Measures to preserve the integrity of the franchise must be enacted into law."

Griffin said "it is common knowledge" that an elaborate headquarters has been set up at the Walehaje apartments in Atlanta "for the purpose of putting 500,000 Negroes on the voters lists in Georgia."

He said this movement is headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Baptist Minister from Montgomery, Ala.

"SUCH ACTION, if successful," Griffin charged, "would place the state of Georgia under the complete domination of the NAACP, starry-eyed left-wingers, misguided one-worlders and those fuzzy-headed liberals who are out to completely destroy the Georgia way of life."

Sources close to the administration have said that the governor has been cosidering introduction of a $1 poll tax and for voter re-registratio nevery two years.

time when America sorely requires their reaffirmation.

"We have heard the cries for 'cooling-off,' for 'slowing down,' and 'taking it easy' and similar slogans," he said. "Our reply is that we are already going slowly, according to law and order; that ninety-three years have passed since emancipation, and that we think the time is long overdue for us and our children to enjoy these rights. We hate no other American and we refuse to fight—after the manner of white Citizens Councils—in the spirit of hatred, but we are determined to have what is rightfully ours and to carry on until victory is ours, a victory that will be won for our country as well."

3 Votes Held Key to Fate Of Rights

N.A.A.C.P. Head Sees Problem

If the three Southern members of the President's Civil Rights Commission use their votes to obstruct action on Civil Rights, the hopes of all citizens for a "fair, firm and peaceful approach" to civil rights problems will be "dashed," Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said yesterday.

Mr. Wilkins spoke at the forty-ninth annual meeting of the N. A. A. C. P. in the Wendell Wilkie Memorial Building, 20 W. 40th St.

He said that the fact that three of the six commission members were from the South "need not be fatal to meaningful accomplishment."

Mr. Wilkins said, however, that "If the South uses this representation to delay action, to gloss over conditions, to ignore known evils, to censor reports, to restrict investigations and to either secure a whitewash of its report or force the presentment of a soft indictment, the ideals of the nation will have been betrayed at a

Griffin Asks New Segregation Laws

ATLANTA — (INS) — Georgia Gov. Martin Griffin asked the legislature last week for broad new powers to put down any threatened disturbance which might arise from a segregation-integration controversy.

The governor, who already has authority to close public schools which a federal court might order integrated, asked that he be permitted to call up wildlife rangers, forestry investigators and other similar state workers to supplement the highway patrol to "preserve the peace."

Atlanta Ga
Mar 2 0 '58

The legislature last year gave Gov. Griffin authority to use the highway patrol to "prevent violence" when, in his judgment, disturbances were likely to occur.

The new measure, supplementing the existing law, does not specifically mention segregation. Proponents described it as an additional weapon forced against integration in Georgia.

Griffin has said repeatedly he would permit "no Little Rock" in his state. Executive planning in Georgia has been with the aim of removing the cause of possible racial disturbances, rather than putting down such disturbances after they are underway.

Georgia legal authorities have described the key to the program the authority conferred on the governor to "preserve" peace, rather than to restore it.

Mar-2-58

The bill supplementing already broad powers granted the Georgia governor last year was introduced by his floor leader, Rep. W. Colbert Hawkins of Screven county.

Chicago, Ill.

It empowers the governor to use highway patrolmen to "prevent, detect and investigate criminal acts." In Georgia, state laws requiring racial segregation generally carry criminal penalties.

Other acts enacted since the U. S. Supreme Court decision of 1954 make it a criminal offense for any law enforcement officer to aid in carrying out integration.

The measure provides the uniformed division of the state patrol, the bureau of investigation, and life rangers, forestry investigators "or any other state law enforcement officers," may be used when the governor determines such action is necessary to control violence or preserve the public peace.

Racial Ban Rapped By Gov. Griffin

ATLANTA, Feb. 7 (AP) — Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia said today that a U. S. Corps of Engineers directive barring segregation may block development by the state of a recreational area in the Murray Hill section of the Clark Hill Reservoir.

Griffin told a news conference that Parks Director J. W. Brinson has been notified that a new condition against discrimination on the grounds of race, creed, color, religion or national origin must be inserted in a lease agreement under which the state would take over the area.

Griffin said that if the engineers insist on this point it means the end of any further development by the state of recreational areas around federal multi - purpose dams.

"We want the improvements," Griffin said, "and no one objects to Negroes paddling on the rivers — or governors either — but we're not going to have any integrated parks."

The state has acquired areas around Allatoona, Jim Woodruff and Lanier and Clark Hill Reservoirs and developed both white and Negro recreational areas.

Griffin said the engineers' directive apparently will block any such future development around the proposed Ft. Gaines dam and any additional development in any of the existing reservoir areas.

Law To Restrict Voting Is Passed

By ROBERT SCHOENHOLTZ
International News Service

A voter registration law aimed at curtailing Negro ballot strength over the state was passed by the Georgia Senate Friday in the final meeting of the 40-day General Assembly.

The Senate approved 37-to-2 the House-passed bill to allow qualifying of those who can either read or write, with 30 questions on government. Failure to answer to the examiner's satisfaction would disqualify the registration applicant.

Last minute House action was topped off by passage of a modified bill designed to halt Georgia's so-called "quickie marriages."

The Senate, meanwhile voted down a House-passed resolution favoring the purchase of Georgia railroad property at Savannah by the Georgia Ports Authority. Purchase price was listed at $3,750,000.

Also killed this session by the Senate was a proposed constitutional amendment extending terms of legislators to four years and fixing their salaries at $3,000 per annum. The measure was tabled 27-4.

The sudden move to prevent the Georgia Ports Authority from making its multi-million dollar purchase was fostered by an unfavorable Senate Committee report, which said, in part:

"The system of handling purchases by the Georgia Ports Authority is inadequate and has not been handled in a business-like manner."

Adding more stringent requirements to present voter registration laws is expected to prevent some Negro voting, but Sen. Peyton Hawes, speaking in behalf of the bill said, "It's sole purpose is to elevate the voters of Georgia."

Georgia Bill Aimed At Negro Vote Killed By Legislature

ATLANTA, Feb. 18 (AP)—Gov. Marvin Griffin's Voter Registration Bill, designed to prevent registration of large numbers of Negroes, was killed by the Georgia House of Representatives today.

The governor immediately declared his disappointment that the legislature had "failed to meet the challenge of campaigns designed by the NAACP and others to destroy the county unit system of elections in this state."

The 87-68 vote by which the House indefinitely postponed action on the measure — automatically killing it for this session which ends Friday — was another stunning defeat for Griffin's administration.

The Senate, meanwhile, passed an administration-sponsored bill to purchase Stone Mountain and set up an association to build a Confederate memorial there. The approved measure, however, is a combination of two bills already passed by the House and includes several features not in the original.

Also approved by the Senate 38-11 was the controversial Municipal Home Rule bill which failed to pass by two votes [illegible]

The House members, by resolution, voted themselves a $10 per day pay raise for this session of the Legislature. The proposal, offered by Rep. John Odom of Camden County, was approved 112-24 by show of hands. It was immediately transmitted to the Senate where the appropriations committee gave it a favorable recommendation. House members now make $30 a day.

The voter registration measure killed by the House was a much weaker version than originally proposed by the governor. That proposal called for all voters to re-register every two years and pay a $1 registration fee.

While administration floor leader Colbert Hawkins conceded that the bill had been considerably watered-down, he said it still would be a deterrent to the mass registration of Negroes.

As finally approved, the Stone Mountain measure puts a $1½ million ceiling on the purchase price, provides for an association to develop the mountain composed of four constitutional officers and three appointees of the governor, and that all except bond matters should be handled by the state Law Department.

Hartsfield Urges Atlantans To Work For End Of Unit Rule

Mayor Hartsfield Monday urged Atlantans to "work for the abolition of this county unit system or at least for its amendment", and charged that no state does less for its citizens than Georgia.

He said legislative appropriations, taxation and authorities are designed to take a large share from the city people. He urged Atlantans to fight for their rights as city residents.

In one attack on the county unit system, the mayor said, "We are ruled by 159 pieces of geography, not by people. We are ruled by mendicants, not by proud, independent Georgians, but by people seeking to live off the taxpayers in the cities."

He

reported that the state pays only 27 per cent of the school bill in Atlanta while it pays 80 per cent in Gwinnett County.

But one prominent member of the committee, Colquitt attorney Peter Zack Geer, made no secret in open committee meetings of his desire to bar "illiterate Negro bloc voters" from the ballot.

Several top legislative leaders voiced their support for new voter requirements. This makes the outlook favorable for some legislation along this line.

Rep. Frank S. Twitty of Mitchell County said a "lot of thought and consideration" should be given to the voting question.

"The way the people of Georgia feel, they will go along with a sensible plan for tightening qualifications," he said.

House Speaker Marvin E. Moate of Hancock County said he "looks for some legislation on the subject." But he said it could not be "discriminatory and must be equally applicable to Negroes and whites."

I generally favor strengthening the registration law so as to provide for basic education requirements and good character as a prerequisite for voting," said House Administration Leader W. Colbert Hawkins of Screven County.

But the legislative leaders and members of the Election Law Committee were emphatic on one point: they do not favor a general voter re-registration. This was attempted with rather disastrous results a few years ago.

The suggested new qualifications would apply to persons who seek to register in the future as new voters.

However, Geer has stated that most of the persons seeking to register for the first time in rural counties are youngsters just reaching the legal voting age of 18 and Negroes.

At the present time, about 160,000 Negroes are included in the state total of 1,200,000 registered voters.

NAACP GOAL

The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People has launched a registration drive aimed at boosting Negro registration to 300,000 by 1960.

Obviously, the NAACP hopes to add many of the new voters to the rolls in rural counties where Negro registration is now extremely spotty.

At the present time, a person in order to register must be able to read or write a section of the U.S. or state Constitutions. If he cannot do this, he may still meet the educational requirement by answering 10 of 30 rather simple standard questions on government.

The Election Law Committee has recommended a new law requiring a prospective new voter to be personally examined by the three-man board of registrars of each county.

SCRAP QUESTIONS

It also recommended scrapping of the present question-and-answer test for illiterate voters in favor of a tough new 30-question examination. Instead of 10 right answers, the applicant would have to answer 20 of the questions to qualify.

But the committee's proposals do not end there. It has voted tentatively to recommend a controversial constitutional amendment which would make ability to read and write a section of the constitution a mandatory voting requirement.

It also would spell out a long list of crimes and moral offenses that would disqualify a person from voting. The offenses include adultery, fornication, moonshine liquor law violations, abandonment, false swearing, failure to register or report for military service, being the parent of an illegitimate child and living in a common-law marriage.

The proposed constitutional amendment, which would have to be approved by two-thirds vote of both houses and ratified by the people next November, has stirred opposition even within the committee that approved it.

Rep. Howard Overby of Hall County, chairman of the House State of the Republic Committee, said he will move for revision of the proposal when the election group meets again next week.

Overby said the amendment in its present form "is much too far reaching." He objects to the mandatory literacy requirement of the proposal. Fortson also indicated his opposition.

They'll probably find some support in the Legislature. The amendment would apply to whites as well as to Negroes.

Negroes Plan Vote Education Study At 8 O'Clock Tonight

A workshop on voter registration education for Negroes will be conducted at Wesley Methodist Church at 8 p.m. today.

The meeting is sponsored by the South Carolina Political Action Committee. It will be directed by the Rev. T. DeQuincey Newman who represents the First Congressional District on the state committee.

James T. McCain of Sumter, will conduct the workshop with the assistance of J. Arthur Brown, co-chairman of the state committee. Brown heads the NAACP at Charleston.

Ward and precinct - level leaders of Charleston and Charleston County are expected to attend as well as leaders from the other counties comprising the First Congressional District.

Griffin, Vandiver Close To Agreement On Voting, Taxes

By International News Service

Proposals to reduce state income taxes by an estimated $20-million, and to ... a poll tax as a means of restraining Negro voting found Governor Marvin Griffin and Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver close to agreement Monday.

Gov. Griffin's floor-leader, Rep. W. Colbert Hawkins of Screven, proposed the tax reduction in the house, and it was immediately endorsed by the Lieutenant Governor.

FOR THE HOPPER

Hawkins also had ready for the hopper - - for formal introduction today, the Governor's proposal that all Georgia voters be registered every two years. The measure entails a $1 registration fee. It was plainly marked as a measure to head off an expected big effort in Negro registration under the Federal Civil Rights Law.

Governor Griffin first claimed he knew nothing of the tax reduction proposal. The measure would allow Federal income tax as a deductible item on state returns. But later, when told Hawkins said he discussed the matter with the Governor. Griffin said they might have talked it over.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The Governor did not specifically endorse the tax cut, but said it was a matter addressing itself to the General Assembly. The reduction in income would be effected after Griffin leaves office.

Vandiver likely endorsed the reduction when it would be afforded to the people of the state. Then, he urged "careful study" of voter registration changes by a legislative election laws committee, and the Hawkins proposal which comes as a substitute.

"Segregation of the races must be preserved in Georgia no matter what the cost and no matter what sacrifices it may entail," Vandiver said.

Four Organizations Will Back Registration Drive

Four organizations will be concentrating on Negro voter registration in Georgia next month when a drive is launched to double the number of registered Negro voters in the South.

They are the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Georgia State Voters League, and the Atlanta Negro Voters League.

The Leadership Conference, the NAACP will crusade throughout the South. The Rev. M. L. King, Jr., Conference president, announced Thursday that his 110-member organization had just completed final plans for public mass meetings to be held simultaneously in 21 cities in 10 Southern states on February 12.

He said this "Crusade for Citizenship" would be a year-round affair and would be aimed at doubling the number of registered Negro voters in the South by 1960.

Concerted efforts at registration are also being made by the NAACP in the South.

The Atlanta Negro Voters League also met Thursday to consider the possibility of working with the Leadership Conference in its "Crusade for Citizenship." League co-chairman A. T. Walden said no date was set for the League's campaign.

John Wesley Dobbs, president of the Georgia State Voters League which has been campaigning "a long, long time," said "the main trouble is with the potential voter himself." He added: "We are fighting apathy more than we are restrictions."

The Leadership Conference, which has invited members of the new Civil Rights Commission to participate in the February 12, activities, has planned to refer registration restrictions and infringements either to the Commission or some other agency.

Rev. T. J. Jemison To Address Vote Rally Wednesday Night

The Rev. T. J. Jemison, of Baton Rouge, La., secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference is scheduled to speak at seven o'clock this Wednesday night, February 12 at a "Double the Vote" mass meeting at the Sixteenth St. Baptist Church. The Rev. Luke Beard is minister of the church.

The up-the-vote rally is sponsored by the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights, of which the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth is the president.

Born in Selma, Ala., Rev. Jemison is pastor of Mount Zion Baptist Church in Baton Rouge. He is secretary of the National Baptist Convention, USA, Inc. He is president of the Baton Rouge Christian Movement and in Who's Who in America.

He is a graduate of Alabama State College and holds the B. D. degree from Virginia Union University. He has done advanced study in Physchology at New York University, Selma University and Natchez College conferred him with the Doctor of Divinity degree.

The Rev. C. H. Parker will introduce the Rev. Jemison. The Rev. N. H. Smith, Jr., ACMHR secretary and pastor of New Pilgrim Baptist Church, will relate the occasion. W. C. Patton, president of the Alabama Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting, is slated to make the voter-registration appeal. John J. Drew, vice-president of the Citizens Federal Savings and Loan Association will preside over the offering. Remarks, by the Rev. Edward Gardner, vice-president of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights and the benediction by the Rev. Abraham Woods Jr., pastor of First Metropolitan Baptist Church, will round out the program. Roy Woods will serve as master of ceremonies.

The free-the-franchise rally is one of 22 simultaneous meetings being conducted by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in 11 Southern states. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., of Montgomery, Ala., SCLC president. The organization has headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

It is dubbed the "Crusade for Citizenship."

In the meantime, the Rev. Shuttlesworth issued a strong appeal to the church and civic leaders to support the build-the ballot-list program. He urged the community voter-registration leaders to make a door-to-door drive for fresh voters.

He predicted that an overflow gathering would be on hand to hear the Rev. Jemison.

Measure Would Hit Those Not Able To Read-Write

Attempts to curb Negro voting in the state were renewed on a different front Wednesday when the House Rules Committee placed on the calendar a bill which would require future voters to answer tough questions on the state and federal governments or prove they can read and write.

Action was taken on this bill, which was recommended some time ago by an election laws study committee to curtail voter registration among Negroes, in the wake of a radical anti-Negro voting measure sponsored by Gov. Griffin. The House knocked off Griffin's registration and poll tax measure Tuesday.

Under the new bill, persons who cannot pass the reading and writing requirements must get 20 out of 30 questions correct on an examination. Ten out of 30 simple questions must be answered under the present law.

The House-passed bill will also tighten the present voter-registration machinery and procedure. However, it does not apply to the persons already qualified to vote, and it does not call for re-registration or poll tax.

The measure, which resulted from a 10-month study program, was passed 134 to 40 and sent to the Senate for a first reading.

Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver's backers who are supporting the new bill are hoping the measure will be passed by the Senate before adjournment Friday.

The County Unit . . . With Us Yet

Georgia's antique and also unique county unit suit for the third time has fallen back into the laps of those who contested it. Many Georgia citizens became aroused a few years ago and began efforts to have the federal court to rule out the system.

The United States Supreme Court recently refused to hear a case coming up from certain citizens of Georgia, holding that it was a state election machinery to be settled by the voters in the state.

The last time the case went up, it took another route; it sought through a Federal Judge to gain a three judge hearing; the Federal Judge Boyd Sloan refused to grant a three judge hearing, whereupon, the appeal was made to the Supreme Court, which decided Monday in a 5-4 decision that it would not remand the case to the three judge hearing.

So, the county uniters are jubilant over the fact that their golden bull is still hanging high and wide in the minority temple for public worship. Apparently it will hang there for some time inasmuch as Mayor Hartsfield and his counsel, Morris Abram, seem to be willing to rest the case.

Georgia's county unit enjoys a special distinction; why its designers, in the face of all its irregularities and inconsistencies would contend that it is modeled after the national electoral college is beyond comprehension.

At any rate, it is with us still; it will be there until the voters of this state address themselves to righting this wrong; it is one of the troubles that cannot be sent away; it can be remedied at the state level; and it is up to those who feel and believe that it is inherently wrong, to go about cleaning their own houses and not expect the courts to do for them what their own courage could remedy.

As was said following the first and second hassles over the county unit system, a two-party system is the answer. This would be an effective weapon. It would pose a situation of choices between issues; it would bring into a campaign that reviving transformation which would inquire into the wishes of the majorities as to the best official material, and in the long run would be the sword upon which the county unit would fall of its own weight.

The axe is lying at the root of the tree; let justice seize the handle and fell the unit system.

Yes, two parties would be the answer. Then the real election would come in November when the popular vote controls rather than the primary which is governed by the unit system.

UNITED STATES MAYORS SUPPORTED HARTSFIELD

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—The United States Supreme Court Monday allowed the United States Conference of Mayors to file a brief as a friend of the court in support of the motion of Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta to compel Federal District Judge Boyd Sloan at Atlanta to convene a three-judge court to hear his challenge to the county-unit voting system in Georgia.

But, in the same order, the court denied Mayor Hartsfield's petition by a 5 to 4 vote, rejecting for a fifth time that it rule on the constitutionality of the unit system, which permits a candidate for the Democratic nomination for public office to receive less than a majority of the popular vote, yet win the election.

Four justices—Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices Hugo Black, William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan thought that Judge Sloan should be ordered to show cause why he should not be ordered to convene the three - judge court.

Georgia law provides for a county unit system of primary elections under which the person receiving the greatest number of votes in the county obtains the "unit vote" of the county, and the candidate with the greatest number of unit votes becomes the nominee.

In Georgia, nomination in a Democratic primary is equivalent to election.

Since colored voters are concentrated in the cities in Georgia, the effect of the county unit system is to weaken their relative voting strength by giving . . . .

For example, the Georgia Black belt county of Terrell, where violence and death have trerrorized colored people, is an important cog in state politics because of the county unit system.

Terrell County, with its 12,500 persons, has two unit votes in selecting the Democratic nominees the only nominees that count in Georgia.

Fulton County (Atlanta) with 600,000 persons has six unit votes.

So Atlanta, with 48 times the population of Terrell County, has only three times the voting power.

Also, as in all rural counties in Georgia, colored people in Terrell County just aren't allowed to vote.

BEFORE U.S. TRIBUNAL

Georgia Unit Vote Wins Third Test

WASHINGTON, June 16 (UPI)—Georgia's controversial county unit system of voting in Democratic primaries withstood another test in the U.S. Supreme Court today and will stay in effect at least through the election of the next governor.

By a 5 - 4 decision, the court refused to order U. S. District Judge Boyd Sloan in Atlanta to convene a three - judge court to examine the system. It was the third time since 1950 that the Supreme Court had refused to concern itself with the county unit system, which opponents say waters down an urban dweller's vote to a hundredth of one cast by a farmer.

The latest ruling was on a suit brought by Atlanta Mayor William B. Hartsfield as a Fulton County voter against the state Democratic Executive Committee, two of its officers and Georgia Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson Jr.

Hartsfield said his vote in this fall's Democratic primary would be unconstitutionally devaluated by the procedure of counting ballots by the county unit system.

"Served to Educate"

Hartsfield said the decision means only that "the majority of the United States Supreme Court does not wish at this time to become involved in any state election systems.

"It does not mean that they have validated or approved the Georgia county unit system," the mayor said. "This fight has at least served to educate all Georgia as to the grievous injustices of the county unit system. Someday it will most certainly fall."

But Hartsfield's attorney, Morris Abram, himself a unsuccessful candidate for Congress under the unit system in recent years, said there was no way left to invalidate it for the Sept. 10 primary.

Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associates Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan Jr. thought the court should have asked Sloan to show cause why he should not convene a three - judge tribunal.

In his own opinion, Sloan said that previous decision of the high court "... forecloses the subject and leaves no room for inference that the question sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy."

Georgia Unit System Vote Suit Dropped

ATLANTA (AP)—Mayor William B. Hartsfield's suit seeking to knock out Georgia's controversial county unit system of elections is dead.

The Atlanta official announced he is dropping the suit after the U.S. Supreme Court declined Monday to order the convening of a special three-judge court to hear the case, as the mayor asked.

Hartsfield and his attorney, Morris Abram, said there would not be time now to proceed with the suit before the September Democratic primary.

"It would be impossible to go through regular court channels in time to affect the September primary," Hartsfield said.

The high court's ruling—on a 5-4 vote—drew statements of gratification from state officials including Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook, who represented Secretary of State Ben Fortson in the suit, and Charles Bloch of Macon, attorney for Democratic Party Chairman John Sammons Bell and party secretary George D. Stewart.

Bell said the Sept. 10 primary would be conducted, as planned, under the county unit system.

Justices Say Issue Isn't Federal One

By ALBERT RILEY
Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court, in a 5 to 4 ruling, Monday refused to interfere with Georgia's county unit system of voting in primary elections.

The high court denied a motion by Mayor Hartsfield of Atlanta aimed at getting a three-judge federal panel to review the constitutionality of the unit system.

Technically, the Supreme Court refused to grant Hartsfield leave to file a petition for writ of mandamus against U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan requiring him to convene the special court.

Court rules State Department can't deny passports to suspected Communist. Page Two.

Today's brief ruling marked the fifth time in 12 years that the Supreme Court has refused to rule on the constitutionality of Georgia's unique system of counting primary ballots.

The order noted, however, that Chief Justice Warren and Justices Black, Douglas and Brennan thought that "a rule to show cause should issue."

In other words, those four members of the court apparently thought the constitutionality of the system should be reviewed. The other five justices, who thought otherwise, are Clark, Frankfurter, Burton, Harlan and Whittaker.

The Supreme Court allowed the U.S. Conference of Mayors to file an amicus curiae (friend of the court) brief on behalf of Hartsfield's petition. But this did not affect the outcome.

Acting as a citizen of Atlanta, rather than as mayor, Hartsfield attacked the constitutionality of the county unit system in federal district court last March.

However, Judge Sloan refused to order a three-judge federal court to review the constitutionality of the system as Hartsfield had requested. The mayor then appealed Judge Sloan's decision to the Supreme Court.

Hartsfield's ultimate objective was to have the county unit system ruled unconstitutional and an injunction issued to prevent it from being applicable to this year's state primary elections.

In briefs filed for him by Atlanta attorneys Morris Abram, Charles L. Weltner, Osgood Williams and Maurice N. Maloof, the mayor charged the county unit system discriminates against urban residents by reducing the value of their votes.

The petitions contended that this devaluation of a citizen's ballot solely on the basis of his domicile is unconstitutional.

They made the point of such disparity in the value of votes in Georgia as shown by Echols County, with 2,200 population having two units votes as compared with only six unit votes for Fulton County and its population of 561,000.

The plaintiffs, who argued that the Supreme Court should review previous decisions on the county unit system in the light of the Civil Rights Act of 1957, which permits federal court action against the unit system, named as defendants John Sammons Bell, chairmen, and George D. Stewart, secretary of the State Democratic Executive Committee, and Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson Jr.

Making a successful defense before the Supreme Court with briefs upholding the unit system were Charles J. Bloch, Macon attorney, and a battery of other lawyers including Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook, Asst. Attys. Gen. Freeman Leverett and Robert H. Hall, and special counsel B. D. Murphy.

They argued that no substantial question was presented and that Judge Sloan was correct in his ruling that previous decisions had foreclosed the subject.

'Delighted,' Say Vandiver And Griffin

Mayor Hartsfield of Atlanta and his chief attorney, Morris Abram, made it clear Monday they would drop further prosecution of the county unit case as a result of the U.S. Supreme Court's 5 to 4 ruling against them.

The court's ruling did not go into the merits of the controversial unit system. The court action turned on the legal point of whether Hartsfield's suit raised a federal question to be heard by a three-judge federal tribunal.

Both Hartsfield and Abram predicted the unit system would one day be knocked out. They cited the closeness of the decision in the current action—the fourth legal attempt to have the unit system declared invalid.

GRIFFIN GRATIFIED

Gov. Griffin and other champions of the system expressed gratification over the decision. State Democratic Chairman John Sammons Bell, a defendant in the Hartsfield's suit, declared the Sept. 10 primary would be conducted under the unit system.

The unit system packs the balance of political power in Georgia in the many small rural counties. Foes of the system contend it discriminates against the urban counties.

Gov. Griffin said he was not "surprised" by the court's decision.

"I am delighted that they followed the law," he said.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said: "I am not surprised and I am gratified."

VANDIVER DELIGHTED

Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver, a candidate for governor in the September primary, said he was "delighted that the time-honored county unit system has withstood another test in the courts."

"The county unit system has served the people of the state well for many years," Vandiver said. "It enjoys wider public support than ever before. My position on the county unit system is firm and unyielding."

Declaring he was "tired" of fighting, Hartsfield said the court's action in his suit "means we'll probably drop it." But he expressed a belief the system would eventually be struck down.

"This decision means that the Supreme Court does not wish at this time to become involved in any state election system," Hartsfield declared.

"It does not mean that they have validated or approved the merits of the Georgia county unit system," he added. "This fight has at least served to educate all Georgia as to the injustices of the unit system.

"Someday most certainly it will fall."

Abram said the backers of the suit were "disappointed" by the court's ruling but noted that the decision "was by a very narrowly divided court.

"The inequities of the county unit system grow each year," he said. "There is no possibility of relief except from the courts."

"I am absolutely confident that a court will someday strike down the Georgia county unit system as the Tennessee Supreme Court invalidated the Tennessee county unit system in 1938," Abram said.

"Because of the time factor," Abram added, "this case is at an end, but it is obvious that there is substantial disagreement in the Supreme Court on this question."

Attorneys defending the unit system have pending before Judge Boyd Sloan, who first ruled against the three-judge court, a motion to dismiss Hartsfield's suit. The next step in the suit will probably be a ruling by Sloan on the motion.

If Hartsfield's attorneys drop their fight, Sloan is expected to dismiss the suit formally ending the litigation.

Georgia's Voter List Slightly Off

The number of Georgians registered to vote in the Sept. 10 primary has dipped slightly but apparently not significantly from the 1956 total, records in the secretary of state's office showed Tuesday.

Nearly complete reports from county registration officials puts this year's eligible voter list at 1,280,452. The figure two years ago was 1,310,586.

However, the 1958 total does not include Early, Long, Spalding, Towns or Treutlen counties. Figures from these counties would probably push the total to near the 1956 mark.

A slight increase in Negro registration also appears to have taken place within the past two years. Records show that 158,346 Negroes are registered to vote this year compared with 156,880 two years ago.

However, some counties used a different method of reporting registration figures two years ago and a precise comparison cannot be made.

Voter Registration In Valdosta Shows Decrease of 437

The Times-Union Bureau

VALDOSTA, Ga., Sept. 3—The board of registrars reported today that there are 437 fewer voters qualified this year for the state primary than there were in 1956.

The registration list for the primary next week contains the names of 14,564 residents. In 1956 there were 15,001 persons qualified to vote. Of the total, 11,86[illegible] are white and 2,704 Negro voters.

The greatest loss in voters was noted in the rural precincts where many persons have moved away from farms. Each of the nine precincts reported a loss in the number of registered voters with Valdosta having the smallest number. Here there are only three less registered voters than in 1956.

The Westside Voters League Holds Interesting Session

The Westside Voters League's meeting Tuesday night, was highly impressive, in that those in attendance were deeply concerned over the vital issues of the time. Especially was there interest along the line of the new voter registration law.

Q. V. Williamson, one of the featured speakers, on the occasion reemphasized the highlights in the Urban Re-development plan. He stressed the importance in interest shown on the part of our people to the end of getting the best obtainable out of such a situation. He said he was more optimistic about the program since there are prospects for getting some new land area for erection of new homes.

C. A. Scott, who recently attended the Washington meeting of a cross-section of leaders from over the country, gave a resume of the proceedings of that gathering. His comments on the excellent health conditions of the President of the United States were received with wide acclaim.

It was revealed that the leaders who discussed the topic of government and politics were in complete agreement that our race should work for more voting power as a means to advance our status. Moreover, voters were advised to become more independent rather than partisan. The theme was to support men and measures rather than a party label. This is sound.

Those who took advantage of the occasion to enroll their names as new members, bespoke the attraction the signs of the times are making in the field of active citizenship.

It is hoped that these meetings to be staged in the future will bear more fruit from the contribution they are making.

Westside Voters Hear Two Talks During Meeting

Due to the extensive discussion of urban redevelopment and a talk on the recent conference in Washington, D. C., the Westside Voters League Tuesday night decided to defer the annual election of officers until the next meeting.

The election was scheduled for the meeting which was held at West Hunter Baptist Church along with the two talks.

Q. V. Williamson, a member of the mayor's advisory committee told the group he was more optimistic about the urban renewal program in view of developing of new housing to replace relocated people.

He said as a result of displacement for the highway, redevelopment and additional people moving into the city, plus deterioration of housing units, about 3000 units a year are lost to Negroes.

In a year's period, Williamson added only about 900 units for them are replaced. Negroes form one third of the city's population, but have only one ninth of the land.

ON SUMMIT TRIP

C. A. Scott, Editor of the Atlanta Daily World, gave a brief report of the recent meeting in Washington. He said it was the concensus of opinion among the national leaders during a workshop on government, voting and citizenship, that Negroes should use their vote to improve their status and never become captive voters.

Mr. Scott said further the opinion of the leaders that the Negro should place men and issues above a party label. He pointed out the need for greater unity and organization of Negro voting strength, beginning at the precinct level, was felt by all the leaders.

Editor Scott told of a labor representative who revealed there are 61 congressional districts in the United States where the Negro vote could be effective. He reported that Congressman Adam Powell and Charles Diggs, of Detroit, and several other political leaders were consultants.

Attorney Cassandra Maxwell presided over the meeting. A number of new members joined the organization.

ATLANTA BLOCKED IN BALLOT DISPUTE

Court Refuses to Order Test of Georgia Unit System Benefiting Rural Areas

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16—By a vote of 5 to 4 the Supreme Court rejected today a new assault on the Georgia County unit system. This is a method of counting votes that gives rural areas an advantage over urban.

The Mayor of Atlanta, William B. Hartsfield, had brought suit to have the system declared unconstitutional. Because of the unit system, Atlanta voters swing much less weight in Georgia politics than their numbers would indicate. Under the unit system a statewide primary candidate gets the 'unit vote" of each county in which he has a plurality. The smaller counties have two units each, some four units and the largest six units—much less than their relative population advantage. Atlanta, which casts more than 100 times as many votes as some small counties, has only three times as many units.

Four times previously suits under the county unit system reached the Supreme Court. The court rejected them on the theory that the allotment of voting strength inside a state involved questions too "political" to be decided by the Federal judiciary.

Because of those previous cases, the lower court refused Mayor Hartsfield's request this time for a threejudge court—the proper setting for a Constitutional challenge to a state statute. The court held that the earlier Supreme Court ruling had "foreclosed" the constitutional question.

Mayor Hartsfield's attorney, Morris B. Abram of Atlanta, asked the Supreme Court, in effect, to order the convening of a three-judge court. A brief order rejected this plea today.

The four judges noting dissent from the result were Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan Jr.

In the majority were Justices Felix Frankfurter, Harold H. Burton, Tom C. Clark and Charles Evans Whittaker.

In the background of the case was the whole question of rural dominance in state political systems. The Supreme Court has also turned back, as too "political," attacks on the constitutionality of Congressional and state legislative districts differing widely in population.

The United States Conference of Mayors was allowed by the court to file a brief in support of Mayor Hartsfield's position. It said:

"State governments controlled by self-perpetuating rural minorities systematically discriminate against the interests of municipalities and their citizens. State action to correct this imbalance is impossible of achievement because reform legislation threatens the political power of the very officials who must pass upon it."

Briefs opposing Mayor Hartsfield were filed by Attorney General Eugene Cook of Georgia, and for the Democratic party by Charles J. Bloch of Macon, Ga.

1,100 With Vote Power of 93,500

County Unit Controversy Brings Question On Rights

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—One of the questions in the legal controversy over Georgia's county unit voting system in primaries is whether the Civil Rights Act has so changed with respect to disfranchisement as to require the convening of a special three-judge Federal court to determine the constitutionality of the system.

Georgia law provides for a county unit system of primary elections under which the persons receiving the greatest number of votes in the county obtains the "unit vote" of the county, and the candidate with the greatest number of unit votes becomes the nominee.

DEMOCRATIC SETUP

In Georgia, nomination in a Democratic primary is tantamount to election.

Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta is seeking to have the United States Supreme Court to oder Federal District Judge Boyd Sloan at Atlanta to convene a three-judge court to hear his challenge to the county unit system.

In a brief in opposition, the Georgia Democratic Party asserts that the Civil Rights Act of 1957 does not enlarge the jurisdiction of Federal courts so as to permit actions to recover damages or to secure equitable or other relief for the protection of the right to vote in a party primary to nominate candidates for state offices.

WOULD RESTRICT RIGHTS

The Georgia Democratic Party, in other words, would restrict the application of the Civil Rights Act to denial of the right to vote in general, but not primary, elections.

Mayor Hartsfield, in a reply brief, states that "Since there are no prior decisions of this (Supreme) Court interpreting this (Civil Rights) Act, the very fact that petitioner (Hartsfield) invoked this new act in his complaint and contended that it had a material effect on any adverse authority in this field, was sufficient of itself to require the judge (Sloan) to initiate the steps to convene the panel court.

The Civil Rights Act of 1957 was enacted primarily to prevent colored people from being deprived of the right to vote.

MANY COLORED VOTERS

Since colored voters are concentrated in the cities in Georgia, the effect of the county unit system is to weaken their relative voting strength by giving greater weight to votes from rural areas than to city votes.

In another development in the case, the United States Conference of Mayors asked the Supreme Court for leave to file a brief as a friend of the court.

The conference is an organization of mayors of about 300 cities with a population of 50,000 or more.

Since each member of the conference is a duly elected incumbent mayor and financial support of the conference comes from public funds appropriated by member cities, consent or leave for the filing of a brief as a friend of the court appears unnecessary.

But, in the absence of a ruling on this point and in the absence of consent from Judge Sloan, the conference decided to ask the court for leave to file its brief.

In its motion for leave, the conference says it has a direct and vital interest in the case.

"State action to correct this imbalance is impossible of achievement because reform legislation threatens the political power of the very officials who must pass upon it."

The Georgia county unit system, the conference points out, gives one rural voter a vote worth more than the votes of 100 urban voters.

The eight largest Georgia counties are allotted six unit votes each, the next largest four unit votes each, and the remaining 121 counties have two unit votes each.

ECHOLS COUNTY

Eleven hundred residents of Echols County enjoy one unit vote, as compared with 93,500 residents in Fulton County (Atlanta). The disparity between the residents of these two counties is 85 to 1 in favor of residents of Echols County.

The conference points out, however, that the disparity is even greater on the basis of actual votes cast.

In the 1954 gubernatorial election, each vote cast in Chattahoochee County was equivalent to 136 votes cast in Fulton County.

A single street, Moreland Avenue, divides Fulton from DeKalb County. If a Georgia voter resides on the east side of Moreland Avenue, he has 2.9 times the voting power of his neighbor across the street.

Clayton County adjoins Fulton on the South. A Clayton voter has 11.5 times the influence of a Fulton County voter.

The conference suggests that the Civil Rights Act presents new issues with respect to the Georgia unit system that should not be hastily resolved. With direct disfranchisement now subject to more effective prevention, the conference asserts, indirect disfranchisement through the county unit system and other means becomes more likely.

The conference asks the court not to foreclose questions raised by Mayor Hartsfield at this stage of the electoral development of the country.

The Voters League Should Rethink Its Policy

The Atlanta Negro Voters League came into being out of a necessity to make most effective our political and racial enterprise. This organization, a spearhead for those interests and benefits due a racial group whose identity became conspicuous shortly after the restoration of the ballot to our people, has always had an excellent opportunity.

It is a creation of the voters at the grass roots and it should at all times keep in touch with the thinking of its rank and file members. It should know their wishes and reactions at first hand and should gain from them their choice as to measures and policies.

In order to do this the league must reactivate its policy of direct contacts with its members at the membership level.

The League cannot achieve its objective by failing to occasionally inquire into the wishes of the masses; taking occasionally an inventory of opinions and complaints of the membership personnel. No membership meetings or elections have been held in the past two years.

Holding only executive sessions for some two years would not bring up the latest desires and reactions of the membership; the membership level is an all important factor in this arena.

Executive sessions by no means take the place of membership meetings; these should be had periodically and as often as situations demand.

In its clarion duty to the members, the League should rethink its policy in extending its franchise.

The Atlanta League has in the past issued a list of candidates and asked the voters to support them as a race. The question arises whether this policy will be to the best interest of our racial group in the approaching election, considering the candidates and the issues or lack of them. And looking from another point of view, maybe there is such a similarity of issues there may be no need for a so-called endorsement this time. Our leadership must take care that we don't inject the racial issue by taking one candidate over another when both are equally good and qualified.

Then there is the all-important question of finance which should have the approval of the membership in general before any policy is decided upon in this approaching primary.

There appears comparatively little interest so far. To encourage a greater interest, it might be wise to have a membership meeting and tell the voters that they should attend any meetings planned to hear the candidates so they, themselves, can make their own choices. We think there should be a program to encourage the greatest possible enlightenment and independence on the part of the voters.

Considering the fact that the membership has not met in some time, we hope the leadership of the League will see fit to have one at the earliest time possible to give answer to some of the questions that have been raised. The membership must be given an opportunity to help decide policy and participate from time to time and not be left in the dark until election time and then given a list of candidates.

We have received many requests for a general meeting of the League and we hope the top leadership will call one as soon as possible.

Patterson Agents Studying Georgia Registrar Suit

MONTGOMERY, Sept. 9 (UPI)—Atty. Gen. John Patterson today he has sent two members of his staff to Columbus in connection with the government's attempt to place Negroes on the voters' list.

Patterson, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, said the Federal Government has filed a suit in Columbus, Ga., against the board of registrars of Terrell County, Ga., seeking an injunction against the board and trying to force the board to put certain Negroes on the voting list of that county.

"This action amounts to a political attack by the Republican Administration against state and local governments and I have assigned two of my men to go to Georgia to look into the case and observe the actions of the Federal Government first hand," the attorney general said.

Patterson has been a critic of the Republican Administration in Washington in trying to force integration of the races down the throats of the people of the South might well wreck the public school system."

Speaking in Centreville last night, Patterson repeated his campaign pledge that he has "made no commitments" that would prevent him from having a clean, honest and aboveboard administration during the coming four years."

He said he has been meeting with incoming members of the legislature in recent weeks "in addition to carrying on the duties of the attorney general's office."

Patterson said there are several important cases now pending in his office, one of which is the tidelands oil case which will be argued before the U. S. Supreme Court in Washington [illegible]

DAWSON, Ga., Sept. 12.—(UPI)—The Terrell County Board of Education has refused to renew the contract of a Negro teacher involved in a civil rights suit here last week. Supt. [illegible] Christie confirmed Friday that Edna Mae Lowe, 32-year-old [illegible] who talked freely with reporters following the filing of the suit, is no longer a teacher [illegible]

Terrell Board Retains Bloch As Attorney

DAWSON, Ga. (UPI) — Macon attorney Charles Bloch has been retained by the Terrell County Board of Registrars to represent it in the U. S. Justice Department's civil rights suit [illegible] county.

Board of Registrars Chairman James C. Raines said the matter is now in his (Bloch's) hands."

The Justice Department's new Civil Rights Division has charged that the Terrell County registrars violated the voting rights of five Negroes, in the first such suit brought in the South since establishment of the Civil Rights Division last year.

Defendant is county in Georgia

WASHINGTON

The Justice Department's suit to end voting discrimination in Terrell County, Ga., filed last week in Middle District Court, is the result of five months' investigation and preparation, spokesmen indicated last week.

Dawson, [illegible] scene of the alleged discrimination, has received considerable publicity during the past several months as the result of vote denial based on race; the death of two colored Dawson residents without justification at the hands of police and the beating of several citizens.

The probe of registration irregularities upon which the current suit is based, however, had been undertaken before the deaths had been made public and continued while the government sought indictments in the deaths which were refused by a Federal grand jury sitting at Macon.

THE JUSTICE Department's suit is brought in behalf of five Terrell County residents who were turned down by registrars on grounds that they either could not read or write correctly passages from the state or Federal constitutions.

Four of the registrants are school teachers with college degrees and the fifth attended college and is now employed at a Marine Corps supply depot at Albany, Ga.

Discussing the five - month probe of the case, Justice Department officials said that the State of Georgia had been selected for the first court test of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 because it is one of the few states whose registration practices are under fire where voting records are open to the public.

This is an important factor, it was pointed out, since the Department has no powers of subpoena to compel submission of records for examination.

They denied also that there had been any attempt to delay filing of the suit until the Senate had confirmed W. Wilson White as chief of the department's Civil Rights division.

THE COMPLAINT charged the defendants with "the arbitrary refusal to register colored applicants who demonstrate themselves to be fully qualified to register."

The citizens involved live in Dawson, Ga., and in Terrell County, Ga.

According to the complaint, on April 7, 1958, a number of applicants appeared to register, but none was registered by the defendants. Among the rejected applicants were the following four schoolteachers:

Edna Mae Lowe, a teacher of mathematics at Carver High School, Dawson, Terrell County, who holds a bachelor of science degree from Fort Valley State College, Fort Valley, and a master of arts degree in education from New York University;

Janie Breedlove, an elementary school teacher in Terrell County, who has a bachelor of science degree from Albany State College, Albany, Ga.;

Davey Louis Gibson, a school teacher in Terrell County, who holds a bachelor of science degree from Albany State College, and is now working for a master of arts degree in elementary school administration at New York University; and Grace Boyd Gibson, an elementary school teacher in Calhoun County, Ga., who has a bachelor of science degree from Albany State College.

In addition, the complaint stated that Eddie George Lowe, who attended Tuskegee Institute and is employed at the U.S. Marine Corps Supply Center, Albany, was also rejected.

The four teachers were rejected because of alleged inability to read correctly and intelligibly. Eddie G. Lowe was rejected because of alleged inability to write correctly and legibly.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY General W. Wilson White, in charge of the Civil Rights Division, under whose supervision the case was investigated and prepared, stated that the investigation began in April, 1958. It covered registration activity in Terrell County for the past two years.

The complaint revealed that in 1956 only 48 colored voters out of 5,036 of voting age were registered. This was in contrast to 2,679 white voters registered out of 3,233 white citizens of voting age. Registration records of the two races are kept on cards of different colors.

Referring to the practices employed by defendant registrars, the complaint alleged that their acts and practices were and are designed and intended to perpetuate the existing disparity between the registration of white citizens and colored citizens in the State of Georgia and in Terrell County.

* * *

ACCORDING TO the complaint, colored citizens who applied as early as October, 1956, for registration were not permitted to appear for hearings on their applications until April 7, 1958.

White applicants who applied in March, 1958, were all given hearings and registered by March 24, some on the same day of their application.

The complaint stated that on March 25, 1958, the day after acceptance of the white applicants, a new Georgia law became effective.

It prescribed a more difficult and stringent test than the previous law for applicants who did not elect to qualify on the basis of literacy.

When the literacy test provided by Georgia law was administered to colored applicants different and more stringent standards were applied to them than were applied to white applicants, the complaint asserted.

The complaint further alleged that the acts and practices of the defenants are designed to deny the right to vote to colored citizens of the United States and of the State of Georgia solely because of their race and color.

In outlining the rights of the citizens involved, the complaint specified, "Under the provisions of the Constitution of the State of Georgia, and not laboring under any of the disabilities named in said constitution all citizens of the state qualified as to age and residence are entitled to register as electors and to vote in all elections in said state who come within either of the two classes therein provided for, namely:

(1) All persons who are of good character and understand the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government; or

(2) All persons who can pass a literacy test."

* * *

THE SPECIFIC relief sought by the government was that the court issue a preliminary and permanent injunction to enjoin the defendants "and all persons in active concert and participation with them" from discriminating against any applicant for registration, for reasons of race or color.

Included in the actions enjoined were (1) the following of different procedures in the processing of applications of colored citizens;

(2) The refusal to certify the named applicants as having passed the literacy test; and

(3) The applying of more stringent standards in administering the literacy test to colored applicants.

Names as defendants in the suit were the following:

James Griggs Raines, Dixon Oxford and Roscoe Radford, registrars of Terrell County, and F. Lawson Cook Sr., and Mrs. F. Lawson Cook, deputy registrars of Terrell County.

Negro Group Will Back No Candidate

By CLAUDE GEORGE SR.

The Georgia Negro Voters League has decided not to endorse a gubernatorial candidate, urging its members to support candidates who include the welfare of Negroes in their platforms.

Delegates representing approximately 100 counties in Georgia, meeting in Macon Saturday, were told that emphasis should be placed on voting power.

"Get-out-the-vote" groups were organized, one for adults and one for youths.

Issues involved in the Sept. 10 primary were discussed. Negro taxpayers have to pay their share of taxes, yet have no voice in the state government policies, one spokesman said.

The most important issue is financing the state departments, another speaker said.

"The day will come in Georgia when the race issue will be set aside and those who are running for state offices will need the Negro votes," John Wesley Dobbs said.

Dobbs is president of the group. John H. Calhoun is secretary.

Registration Tally Here Refutes the Demagogues

Fulton County Registrar Young Howell reports that a total of 133,291 citizens in Atlanta and Fulton County are eligible to vote having registered as required by law. There are 104,877 white voters and the combined county-city Negro registration is only 28,414.

We regret that only 133,291 residents were interested enough to register. We trust they will, when election days come around, be sure to study the issues and vote.

One thing should be rather plain. We think, as a matter of fact, it has been plain all along to most citizens. But the worst of our demagogues, state and local, are frequently braying that the Negro vote controls in Atlanta and Fulton County.

In the first place, save when some rabid anti-Negro candidate is running, the Negro vote splits up along the same percentage line as those of white voters. The Negro voter also shows about the same relative apathy as the white. And in the second place, with the white voters almost four to one, it is ridiculous to talk about Negro control. Such statements are willfully made by willfully deceitful persons in an effort to create tensions and fears when there is no need for either.

Let us all now make up our minds to vote on the campaign issues. But before we vote, let us be sure we know the issues and something about the candidates, their record and backgrounds. And above all, let us not be fooled by the extremists who would destroy the city and county if they could thereby elevate themselves.

New Factors Evident In Fulton County Vote

Fulton County's primary contests, which saw Commissioner Jim Aldredge lead all candidates with a tremendous show of vote-getting power, also provided significant victories for incumbents Sen. Charlie Brown and Rep. Wilson Brooks.

Sen. Brown and Rep. Brooks had been slight favorites but the races were expected to be close with Everett Millican and Hamilton Lokey having a chance to win. As it turned out both were swamped.

Looking at it in the perspective of the day after, certain influencing factors are discernible.

City taxes have gone up and those of the county soon will. Voters today are more tax conscious than ever before. Both Millican and Lokey were regarded as city administration men and suffered thereby. The facts are, of course, that taxes in all cities in Georgia have gone up. Our cities are in a precarious tax position. The property tax is all that is left to them. The State Legislature has refused any relief.

In other, and neighboring, states the cities have sources of income denied them in Georgia. But the voter traditionally looks at the present. Candidates Brown and Brooks made shrewd and effective use of this issue. It gave them strength in the Northside where normally Millican and Lokey would have run strongly.

Secondly, for the first time in county politics, the labor and Negro vote largely combined behind those two winners. Labor's chief target was Millican, viewed as a "big business man." The Negro vote was divided by some leaders who are opposed to urban renewal because they feel it will disturb their business interests in the Auburn avenue area. Some of the church leaders were in opposition to Millican and Lokey because they believed urban renewal would cause their members to move away and greatly decrease their congregations.

In the end, of course, the Negro voters cannot go on defending a slum situation. They have, in the long run, the most to gain by urban renewal.

Thirdly, both Millican and Lokey had retired from politics two years ago. Their absence was a psychological handicap to them.

There were other factors in county areas, but the above were the major ones.

M. M. (Muggsy) Smith once again proved the exception. He seemingly has support everywhere. Muggsy now has defeated 17 opponents and has done so with such insouciant ease as to set him apart as politically unique.

What it adds up to, temporarily at least, is a shift of political vote-getting power from the city to the county. Commissioner Jim Aldredge, who polled more than 60,000 votes, and Sen. Charlie Brown, who received more than 40,000, emerge as the two dominant county political figures. There was nothing negative about their victory. It was positive all the way.

We can only hope that there is a realization of two things. One is that something must be done to relieve the property owner on whom, because of Georgia's laws, the major tax burden falls. The second is that Atlanta, Fulton and DeKalb County are irrevocably bound to work together for common interest.

All in all, it was a great day for incumbents. They all won, with one exception. Judge Charles A. Wofford defeated Judge J. Everett Thrift for a place on the county criminal court bench.

The vote total was gratifying. The primary was fairly run. We sincerely congratulate all winners and look to the future.

Voters League Plans Several Public Meetings

With voter interest rising for the September 10th Primary, the Atlanta Negro Voters League, headed by Attorney A. T. Walden and Rev. Wm. M. Jackson, has scheduled a number of meetings.

The next public meeting will be held Monday, September 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Thomas H. Slater School, 1620 South Pryor Road. All candidates are invited to attend these meetings which are open to the public. Fulton County candidates include: for Judge of Superior Court: Wesley Asinof and Virlyn B. Moore; for Fulton County Senator: Charlie Brown and G. Everett Millican; for Fulton County Representative, Bracket 1: Wilson Brooks and Hamilton Lokey; Bracket 2. Ralph McClelland and J. Harold Vaughan; Bracket 3: F. W. (Buddy) Griffin, Franklin Rogers and M. M. (Muggsy) Smith; for Judge of Criminal Court: J Everett Thrift and Charles A. Wofford; for Fulton County Commissioner: J. H. (Jim) Aldredge and H. H. (Hoover) Mabry; for Ward 4 members of the County Democratic Committee to be voted on only in Ward 3. Bracket 1: John Cloud, J. C. Daugherty and Hattie Holmes; Bracket 2: C. A. Bacote, Ruby Blackburn and George T. Johnson.

Other meetings to follow are: Tuesday, September 2, Second Mt. Olive Baptist Church, 154 Maple St., N.W.; Wednesday, September 3, Mt. Calvary Baptist Church, Avenue A, Rockdale Park; Thursday, September 4, St. Mark A.M.E. Church, corner Chestnut and Kennedy Streets, N.W.; Friday, September 5, Bethlehem Baptist Church 438 Fraser St., S.E.; Monday, September 8, West Hunter Baptist Church, corner Hunter and Chestnut Streets, N.W., and the final meeting Tuesday, September 9, Wheat Street Baptist Church. All meetings begin at 7:30 p.m.

In the meantime, workers meetings have been held in most of the precincts, calling for voluntary workers to canvass voters, make telephone calls and help to get out the vote. Tonight at 7:00 o'clock, in Union Baptist Church, workers in Precinct 7-E, under the leadership of Rev. A. Franklin Fisher, will meet at Union Baptist Church, 1767 Mozley Drive, S.W. Workers in Precinct 3-L, under Mrs. Irene Hendrix at 8 p.m., at the Haugabrooks Estate, 567 Hightower Road, N.W., and Precincts 3-J, M and N led by Emmanuel Hill at the same hour in St. Luke A.M.E. Church, Avenue A, Rockdale Park. Friday, August 29, at 7:30 p.m., Precinct 7-A workers, under Booker Johnson, will meet at Warren Methodist Church, corner of Ashby Street and Ashby Grove. Meetings for Precincts 3-B, 3-H, and 3-K have been scheduled for next week.

Voter Registration Law Draws Deserved Fire

The Baldwin County Grand Jury in its recent presentments leveled deserved criticism at Georgia's voter registration law.

A blundering piece of legislation passed during the last session of the General Assembly, the measure has been under steady fire ever since its adoption.

It calls for a cumbersome and unwieldy registration setup, snarled with red tape, which has the effect of deterring citizens of both races from going through an unrealistic procedure in order to qualify. It also has placed an unnecessary financial burden upon the counties.

The Baldwin grand jury recommends that the law be revised during the next session of the General Assembly.

The Constitution concurs. Better yet, let's junk the monstrosity produced at the last session and draft a new measure designed to encourage capable citizens to vote instead of being based on the premise that the more difficult it is to register, the better.

COUNTY UNIT SYSTEM'S END IS PREDICTED BY MAYOR OF ATLANTA

SUPREME COURT FAILS TO ENTER CONTROVERSY

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Georgia's controversial county unit system of voting in Democratic primaries withstood another test in the U. S. Supreme Court Monday and will stay in effect through the selection of the next governor.

In a 5-4 decision, the court refused to order U. S. District Judge William Sloan in Atlanta to convene a three-judge court to examine the constitutionality of the system. Someday it will almost certainly fall."

But Hartsfield's attorney, Morris Abram, himself a unsuccessful candidate for Congress under the unit system in recent years, said there was no way left to invalidate it for the Sept. 10 primary.

"You can't possibly get back to the Supreme Court by fall by any other route than mandamus," Abram said. "We are naturally disappointed with the decision but note that it was a decision of a closely divided court."

SUPPORTERS JUBILANT

Supporters of the unit system were jubilant but said they were not surprised.

Lt. Gov. Vandiver, now a candidate for governor, said "the county unit system has served the people of the state well for many years. My position on the county unit system is firm and unyielding. The full resources of the state should be utilized to defend it against attack from any quarter."

Gov. Marvin Griffin and Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook both said they were not surprised. Griffin said, "I am delighted" and Cook was "gratified."

Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associates Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan, Jr., thought the court should have asked Sloan to show cause why he should not convene a three-judge tribunal.

In his own opinion, Sloan said that previous decision of the high court "... disposes the subject and leaves no room for inference that the question sought to be raised can be the subject of controversy."

Negro Registration

Negro Voting Is Here To Stay; Foes Hope to Hold It Down Only

Both those who oppose and those who advocate increased Negro voting in Georgia maintain that they are after good government.

Opposition often stems from an honest conviction that Negroes

The Justice department has made its first case under the 1957 Civil Rights Act against a Georgia county. The case involves Negro voting. The Atlanta Constitution launched a survey of Negro voting procedures in the entire state, not just Terrell County, where it presents the facts in a series of reports.

should not be allowed to vote at all, and from a reluctance to upset the status quo.

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Many whites fear a veritable tidal wave of bloc Negro voting which would sweep away anything in its path and wrest control of dozens of county governments.

"If Negroes vote in large numbers, the county unit system is gone," declared one well-known politician who will have a strong voice in the Maddox administration.

And that, to him, would be the ultimate disaster.

The whole structure of Georgia politics is built around the county unit system.

There is merit to his argument, because Negroes outnumber whites in 38 counties with 88 unit votes, and nearly equal whites in 11 others for a total of 112 potentially Negro-controlled unit votes.

The desire for an all-white primary, despite the beatings it has taken in federal courts, is not entirely dead.

"If I had my way," one prominent political leader stated, "Negroes wouldn't be allowed to vote."

He said that one final effort to restore the white primary might be made if Negro registration drives prove very successful. That is the "declaration of principles" advocated by Macon attorney Charles Bloch.

Under such a plan, a citizen wishing to register as a Democrat would have to swear his loyalty to a given code, such as belief in segregation and the county unit system.

This plan, however, bears philosophical kinship to South Carolina's attempt to make a "private club" of the Democratic Party, and the courts have ruled against that.

Furthermore, it would have widespread opposition among white voters and might result in two strong Democratic parties in Georgia.

Most of Georgia's political leadership—even men personally opposed to any Negro participation—apparently have reached the conclusion that Negro voting is here to stay. Their efforts now are concentrated on maintaining the status quo.

The best way to do that, the earlier-mentioned Vandiver partisan said, is to raise the educational level of the entire electorate. By toughening voter qualifications for whites and Negroes alike, the General Assembly could avoid having courts invalidate their legislation as "discriminatory."

"TOO MANY VOTERS"

A man high in party ranks—who for obvious reasons declined to be quoted—said he believes too many unqualified persons already are allowed to vote. He voted with evident shock the fact that more than 200,000 people voted in the recent primary for a candidate who had the same name as a famous but deceased politician, but otherwise had no active campaign.

Tampering with the right to vote is political dynamite, however.

A law calling for reregistration of all voters passed in the early days of the Herman Talmadge administration, later had to be junked because it was so unpopular—with white voters.

Similarly, a constitutional amendment proposing to disqualify all illiterates was submitted for consideration to the 1958 General Assembly by the Election Laws Study Committee.

It was never even introduced.

The $1 poll tax, abolished in 1945, has little appeal even to ardent opponents of Negro suffrage.

Gov. Griffin urged the 1958 Legislature to restore the poll tax and to require biennial re-registration. He sent out thousands of letters to make his motives clear:

"This proposal," the governor asserted, "might cause some slight inconvenience . . . however, I know that you would much prefer this slight inconvenience to turning our state over to Negro domination."

Instead, the Legislature adopted a milder law drafted by the Election Laws Study Committee. The outstanding feature of this law is an exceptionally difficult test which would be submitted to persons unable to qualify under literacy provisions.

(Significantly, the new law does not disturb any voters on the lists at the time of its passage.)

SLOWED UP NEGROES

The Rev. Amos Holmes, NAACP field secretary for Georgia, conceded that this new law "slowed us up this year. But," he added, "I don't think it will be a deterrent in future years."

Answers to the questions will be circulated and memorized, Holmes said. And, pointing to the basic weakness of any standard-question test, he asserted that a man who simply memorizes the answers will be no better voter for it.

Besides, according to a University of Georgia Bureau of Public Administration study, . . . "there are now relatively few applicants for registration who cannot pass the simple literacy test."

Some persons have charged that the new voting law is aimed at barring Negroes.

WOULD BAR BLOCS

Secretary of State Ben Fortson Jr., a member of the committee which drew the law, repeatedly asserted that it would apply equally to both races. Another member, Peter Zack Geer of Colquitt, however, made no secret of his wish to bar "illiterate Negro bloc voters."

The consensus among most observers, Negro and white, though, is that the fairness of the new law, as with the old one, will depend on its application by local officials.

Will white voters be scrutinized as closely as Negroes? That question is in contention now in the Terrell County case.

Will Negroes and whites be challenged in the same manner? So far there have been no instances of wholesale purges under the new law, so that remains to be seen.

1946-48 PURGES

The old law contained "challenge" provisions similar to those in the 1958 act. Purges of Negro voters conducted in 1946 and 1948 were held on several occasions to be discriminatory.

In 1946 Federal Judge Frank Scarlett ordered Appling County registrars to restore some 600 purged names, and he admonished registrars in Coffee, Atkinson and Pierce.

Two years later he issued cease-and-desist orders to registration officials in Marion, Lowndes, Schley, Spalding, Laurens, Jeff Davis and Pierce for similar activities.

How were the purges conducted?

In one noted case, several hundred Negroes were notified to appear on a given day to show cause why they should not be stricken from the lists. Those not appearing automatically were dropped.

MAJORITY STRICKEN

Only a few of those appearing were heard the first day; the rest were told to come back. Those challenged were not called in alphabetical order and had no way of being sure when they would be heard. Eventually, the great majority were defeated by such delay and stricken.

Others were struck on questionable grounds.

Registration officials likewise can make it difficult for a Negro to register in the first place.

In one southwest Georgia county, a legally divorced Negro was told he was "living in adultery" and barred on "moral turpitude" grounds. Another was rejected because he did not have clear title to his land.

An instance has even been reported in which a registrar closed his office when Negroes approached.

EASY ON NEGROES

But local officials sometimes have gone to the other extreme.

In a middle Georgia county, a political leader justified Negroes being allowed to register by signing an "X" by asserting: "If they make an 'X' mark to get money out of the bank and if they give in their taxes by making a mark, then they should be permitted to register by making a mark."

Thus, working under the same law, different registrars behaved in completely different ways. The same might be expected under the new law, though the watchful eye of the Civil Rights Division may prove to be a new factor.

A University of Georgia's study reported in 1955 that many registrars were still unfamiliar with provisions of the Voters' Act which had been in effect since 1949. Secretary of State Fortson said recently he fears many registrars do not know the new 1958 act well.

Apparently registration in many counties is still a matter of individual interpretation and inclination.

INCREASE WHITES?

A positive method for meeting the challenge of increased Negro voting has been given little publicity. But it is simple: Increase white registration.

In 1946, with the demise of the white primary and a surge of Negro registration, white registration nearly doubled in Georgia. Since then, white interest generally has been listless.

Shifting population, too, may ease the fear of Negro domination. The migration of Negroes to cities and out of the state already has reduced the number of "black belt" counties, and this trend is expected to continue.

There is even some talk of "gerrymandering" counties to realign Negro-white population proportions, though the inertia of tradition makes this highly unlikely.

Wednesday's article will discuss Negroes' arguments for increased registration and their plans and means for achieving it.

GEORGIA JURIST SCORES FBI

Judge Vows Jail For Civil Rights Probers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Georgia judge threatened to jail federal civil rights investigators Friday in a labyrinth of Southern racial developments.

A government suit filed at Columbus, Ga., the first under the 1957 Civil Rights Act, aroused the ire of Superior Court Judge Walter Geer of Colquitt, Ga.

The jurist, in keeping with Georgia law, had appointed five Terrell County election registrars whom the suit charged with discriminating against prospective Negro voters.

In a statement, Geer called the suit an "arrogant, unwarranted, high-handed" attempt of "radical Republican leaders to intimidate the people of Terrell County."

If the FBI, in prosecuting the suit, makes any "high-handed, menacing" investigation of his court, he declared, "I will not hesitate to put them in the common jail of the county."

In the meantime, there were pointed, if relatively minor, school integration developments in Virginia, Arkansas and Tennessee.

At Harrisonburg, Va., U. S. Judge John Paul advised the Warren County School Board it could not bar Negroes from the county's white high school. He did not order immediate admission but said that since the county lacks a Negro high school it must admit Negroes to the white school. School board officials countered by showing him blueprints for a half-million-dollar Negro high school.

At Van Buren, Ark., about 50 segregationist white students apparently succeeded in keeping Negroes out of the high school for the day but their boast that others would join them in a boycott fell flat. None of the 13 Negro students was seen to enter the school. But only a few recruits joined the striking students who demonstrated across the street with a placard reading, "Only chicken whites go to school with jigs."

Stairstep integration, inaugurated last year, continued without incident at Nashville, Tenn. Nine or more second-grade Negro children registered routinely for another year of integrated classes. Earlier 15 first graders had registered for mixed classes under a court-directed plan of integrating one grade a year.

Racial agitator John Kasper, recently released from a federal prison, was turned down Friday when he tried to register as a voter at Knoxville, Tenn.

A spokesman for the Knox County Election Commission said Kasper, a New Jersey native, failed to meet the residence requirements. Tennessee law requires that a voter live in the state for 12 months and in the county for three months.

The predominantly Negro precincts and their schools are as follows:

Walker Street School;
A. R. Carter School;
English Avenue School;
School Building, Greensferry Street;
Davis Street School;
Thomas H. Slater School;
David T. Howard School;
Turner High School;
Washington High School.

These precincts are the nine in the city of Atlanta where the Negro vote is heaviest. They showed a heavy voting participation in the primary.

Five incumbents were returned to office on endorsement term. The one ex-Criminal Court Judge G. Everett Dobbs was appointed to the post slightly earlier by Gov. Marvin Griffin.

Official county-wide results on the principal Fulton County offices are as follows:

The election of candidates to state offices had relatively little interest appeal to Fulton Countians, who became accustomed to the heated battles and sideshow antics of the animated candidates for county offices during the long campaign, but a governor and his lieutenant were elected.

Lt. Governor Ernest Vandiver is Georgia's new Democratic party Governor-nominee while Garland Byrd captures the coveted Lt. Governor-elect spot on the party ticket.

First Voting Suit

Mar 24 1958

P. A.

Wash Post

Mar 25 58

The Department of Justice has picked a sensitive spot for its first voting suit under the 1957 Civil Rights Act. This test is being made in Terrell County, Georgia, where potential Negro voters outnumber the whites.

According to the suit, there are 5,036 Negroes of voting age in the county. Only 48 are registered to vote. The whites of voting age total 3,233 and 2,679 of these are registered. To say that this is suggestive of discrimination would be the understatement of the year.

The foundation for the suit was laid when five Negroes, four of them school teachers with college degrees, took the literary test prescribed in Terrell County. All were rejected on the ground that they could not read, or, in one case, write satisfactorily. Under the Civil Rights Act, the case will be tried in Federal Court without a jury. If the judge finds for the Government the Terrell County election officials will be enjoined against further discrimination against the five applicants. Should the injunction be violated the officials could be tried for criminal contempt of court—again without a jury unless the penalty upon conviction should exceed 45 days in jail and a $300 fine.

The comment of a South Georgia State judge illustrates why Congress thought it necessary to provide for the trial of such cases as this by Federal judges. The election officials named as defendants were appointed by Judge Walter I. Greer. He has stated publicly that he has the utmost confidence in the integrity and competence of the officials he appointed, and he has denounced the suit as an "arrogant, unwarranted and high-handed attempt on the part of radical Republican leaders to intimidate the people of Terrell County." Registration for voting generally is a matter of State concern. It seems obvious, however, that State Judge Greer would not be qualified to preside impartially over this trial.

JUDGE ACTS TO BAR U.S. VOTER INQUIRY

Georgian Orders Registrars to Defend Lists by Force

34e Ga

New York Times

By United Press International.

COLQUITT, Ga., Sept. 6—A Georgia judge has ordered officials in Terrell County, scene of the first action under the 1957 Civil Rights Act, to withhold voter records from Federal agents even if it takes a special police force.

Superior Court Judge Walter A. Geer, whose jurisdiction includes Terrell County in southwest Georgia, issued his order yesterday to the Board of Registrars in the county. He disclosed his action today.

"It is my attitude that no Board of Registrars appointed by me has to operate at the point of a bayonet," Judge Geer said. "If they need protection they can get the protection they need to perform their duties according to the laws of the Constitution of the State of Georgia."

It was Judge Geer's second head-on challenge to Federal authority. Shortly after the Justice Department charged the Terrell registrars with discrimination against Negroes attempting to register to vote, he said he would jail any Federal Bureau of Investigation man who tried to investigate his own court "in any high-handed or menacing manner."

In his order, Judge Geer told the registrars to surrender no further records to Federal men unless his court ordered them to do so. He also directed that they bar Federal agents from preparing or assisting in the preparation of any voter lists.

Furthermore, he declare, "for the purpose of carying out this order the Sheriff of Terrell County, Ga., is authorized and directed to employ as many deputies as in his discretion will be necessary to enforce this er and to protect you to the extent that you may perform your duties as registrar."

In Washington, the Justice Department declined to comment on Judge Geer's order. The department filed its suit on Thursday.

Judge Geer said no Federal officials had talked to him about his stand. Any further action by him "depends on what steps they might want to take," he said, referring to the Justice Department.

Calls Area Calm

Judge Geer said that citizens of this farming section were "very calm" about the civil rights action, which was filed under the 1957 law designed to protect the voting rights of citizens.

One of the Terrell defendants, Mrs. F. Lawson Cook, said that F. B. I. agents had made a photostatic copy of every voter registration card in the country before the charges were filed.

J. G. Raines, chairman of the Terrell board, said that the five Negroes named as discriminated against had been denied registration because they could not read the United States Constitution intelligently. He said he had always attempted to enforce the voting requirements fairly without regard to race.

Terrell is a small county about 150 miles south of Atlanta. Judge Geer's seat here is about fifty miles farther south near the Florida line. It is near Bainbridge, home of Gov. Marvin Griffin and a stronghold of pro-segregation sentiment.

DAWSON, Ga.—This little South Georgia county seat of Terrell County, with its population made up of 65 per cent Negroes, has not always been a hotbed of tension and fear such as it is now. Older residents are quick to point out that fact.

They go back to the friendly cooperation of whites with Negroes in setting up an American Legion post here—segregated, of course. They cite the erection of a neat, modern housing project for Negroes on the west side of town, and friendly relations between individual whites and Negroes.

But the recent upsetting events of a policeman killing two Negroes and beating another, along with the removal of new furnishings from Negro schools into white schools have set off a reaction which has killed all those old warm feelings. There is definite tension here.

One thing stands out: the reluctance of the Negroes to talk with any strangers about things here in Dawson. This can only be because they fear what may happen to them if any information gets out and they can be pointed to as the source.

Firing of 10 Negro teachers was distributed among the four Negro elementary schools in Terrell County. Fired at Lillie Cooper in Dawson were four; three at Helen Curr in Parrott; two at Martin in Bronwood; and one at Dunbar in Sasser.

Dawson is the h[illegible] town of Earle Cocke, former national commander of the American Legion.

There's a new pastor at Atoc AME Church, the Rev. G. R. Butler, who has succeeded the Rev. Hollis H. Hooks, who packed up and left town. The reassuring thing for Negroes here is the continued visits by FBI agents.

FORMER Columbus World publisher, P. L. Taylor is now managing the Baird Theatre, a large interracial movie house in Los Angeles, according to Prof. S. P. Charleston of Columbus, who saw and talked with Mr. Taylor on a recent visit to the West Coast.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. made one pithy comment in his July speech in Columbus which is still being repeated by the townsfolk. With some dozen or so Columbus ministers in his audience, the dynamic Dr. King fired this blast:

"And let me tell you something else: you preachers have got to do more than get up in your pulpits and holler!" Townsfolk are still echoing fervent "Amens."

THE DEPTHS to which politicians stoop to twist the truth to help their campaigns was never better shown than by the charge made by Georgia gubernatorial candidate W. P. Bodenhammer, a Baptist preacher from Ty Ty, population 482.

Said Mr. Bodenhammer: "The NAACP met in Macon July 26 and voted secretly to endorse Lieut. Gov. Ernest Vandiver for Governor." This charge was expected to deal the kiss of death to Vandiver.

Trouble with it was, the NAACP has held no such meeting. It was the Georgia Voters League and that body voted not to support any of the three candidates for Governor. Mr. Bodenhammer said he had documentary proof. That's a good one.

The Department of Justice Is Smug Over the Terrell County Vote Case

By HAROLD DAVIS

Washington.

THE DEPARTMENT of Justice is feeling mighty self-satisfied about its lawsuit against the voting registrars of Terrell County, Ga.

Although they are lawyers over at the Department of Justice and don't do much bragging about what they hope to do, a smack of anticipated victory hangs over the place.

On a visit there this week this writer was told by a responsible official that Terrell County was selected with ease as the first place where the voting provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 will be tested.

OTHER PLACES

Justice says it had several other places it could have filed its first suit — like Webster Parish, Louisiana, for example. But after only a modicum of consideration, the powers that be in the civil rights division decided Terrell was the spot.

Terrell County, of which this writer is a native and where his family and friends still live, has taken an all-out drubbing this spring and summer.

On Sunday, June 8, this writer picked up The Washington Post and Times-Herald and there in big, black letters on the front page was an "expose" of what the newspaper said were terrible conditions down in Dawson, the county seat.

The newspaper had dispatched an eager young reporter named Robert E. Baker to Terrell to look into charges of alleged police brutality and discrimination against Negroes in voting. Mr. Baker is The Post's racial expert.

He is the scion of an old Virginia family, and when he writes from the South as he did from Dawson, he signs himself Robert E. Lee Baker, in hopes, no doubt, that the spirit of Marse Robert will lend his imprimatur to what is said.

Anyway, Robert E. Lee Baker reported the uncontested fact that two Negroes had been killed by police and another had been hurt. It wasn't these facts alone that made his story sensational. It was the filler material he larded in between them.

Baker told his readers that an atmosphere of fear pervades the county and cited interviews with Negroes about how they were denied the right to vote. He really hammed it up.

Baker's story made a splash here and gave the Georgia congressional delegation quite a shock. It was read by members of Mr. Eisenhower's commission on civil rights, by the Justice Department people, and by all the hoards of others who buy the 390,000 copies of The Washington Post and Times-Herald.

It put Terrell County indelibly on the Washington map.

As many a Georgia politician has discovered to his sorrow, a big newspaper carries a respectable wallop.

A month or so later, Terrell County was mixed up in another little ruckus. The County Board of Education moved some equipment out of Negro schoolhouses and put it in white ones and wouldn't move it back.

ONCE MORE

To nobody's surprise, that made the front pages here, too. It put the name of Terrell County once more before Mr. Eisenhower's commission on civil rights, the Justice Department people, and the public at large.

With a reputation for being so notorious, it was inevitable that poor Terrell would get it first from the Justice Department. The county almost selected itself.

The department didn't have any trouble digging up more sensational facts down there. They discovered that on April 7, several Negroes tried to register to vote and were turned down as being illiterate.

Four of them were college graduates with good degrees, one had a master's degree and another was studying for one.

A key man at the Justice Department laughed and told this writer: "Nobody, not even a football player, can go through college and not learn how to read and write."

His attitude shows the Justice Department is figuring on having some fun out of this case. And poor Terrell County, its troubles are just beginning.

HERE IS BACKGROUND

County Unit Issue Coming to Boil

By BRUCE GALPHIN

There's a good case for those who contend that the county unit system is Georgia's top political issue.

But rarely do you hear anyone get down to the real issues involved.

You hear, over and over, that the county unit system prevents Negro bloc voting in Atlanta from taking over the state" or "the county unit system keeps the corrupt politician in office."

Both of these rhetorical "reasons," however emotional or obscuring they may be, are built around grains of truth.

MAKE NO MISTAKE about it. The county unit system is an extremely powerful force in Georgia and its removal would substantially alter politics and government operations.

The county unit system is a conservative, status quo influence. Its removal, either by judicial or legislative action, would inevitably liberalize the state's politics and give urban areas a larger share of the state tax dollar.

But how did the system come about? What are its effects? Has it been attacked?

ELEMENTARY county unit system, providing for the method of electing a governor, was embodied in the constitution of 1777, in which eight counties were created. Liberty county had 14 representatives, Glynn, Camden two each and Richmond 10 each; Savannah, Ogeechee and Sunbury two. The legislators selected two persons in each county to choose a governor.

The 1789 constitution, which provided for governor elected by the House of Representatives, which consisted of 175 members from districts elected by the people, one member

HERE ARE PROS AND CONS OF UNIT SYSTEM

1 Removal of the unit system would give much greater weight to city votes, including "bloc" or "controlled" votes.

2 By adding weight to city votes, direct popular voting would have a tendency toward electing a "liberal" governor. As long as the present legislative apportionment remains, the General Assembly will continue to be predominantly rural and "conservative." A running battle between the two branches of government probably would develop.

3 If the legislature in time were liberalized, laxer voter registration laws might be enacted. If this happened, Negroes might take control of county governments in many middle- and south-Georgia counties, where they outnumber whites.

4 To be elected without a unit system, a governor would have to promise such things as tax relief and more road-building to cities. The rural areas, which are generally poor anyway, would suffer as a result.

5 The county unit system reduces the influence of labor unions because labor is concentrated in urban areas. Northern industrialists are more inclined to move South because of this conservative influence.

1 Putting elections on a popular vote basis would give each citizen no more than his fair voice in elections. A vote would count a vote. A few controlled votes in a rural county under the present system have undue power.

2 In time the end of the unit system probably would bring about reapportionment. It is healthy if the legislative and executive branches are not too close anyway.

3 Government should be representative of the citizens within a unit. This pressure might result in consolidation of counties.

4 More and more, the cities are having to supply services and pave roads under outmoded tax structures. They need state aid but have no wedge for getting it at present.

5 End of the system would give the individual union member no more voice than the individual farmer. Industrialists move South for a variety of reasons, chief among them being a favorable climate and availability of water power.

After 1795, both houses participated in selecting a governor. Representation was periodically reapportioned on a rough population basis. After 1825, Georgia's governor was elected by popular vote.

STATE DEMOCRATS in the past chose their candidates for governor and other statewide offices in conventions.

Originally delegates to these conventions were picked at mass meetings in the several counties. In 1872, the party began having county primaries in which all registered Democrats could participate.

In 1898, at the height of the Democratic-Populist struggle, a statewide primary to select convention delegates was inaugurated.

Even after the statewide primary went into effect, the convention system itself was wide open to charges of "rigging." Buying and trading of convention votes reached flagrant proportions.

THUS THE 1917 Neill Primary Act, which is presently being challenged in Mayor Hartsfield's federal court suit, was actually a piece of reform legislation.

It in no way changed the existing county unit formulas. It merely froze them into law and took the selection of a governor out of the hands of the convention.

Here is how the unit system works:

The state's eight largest counties, as determined by the latest decenniel census, are alloted six unit votes. The 30 counties ranking next in population receive four units. The remaining 121 have two units.

In the Democratic primary, the candidate receiving a plurality of votes in a county receives that county's entire unit vote. He need not have a clear majority to carry the county.

HOWEVER, a winning candidate for governor must receive a clear majority of the unit votes.

For years the unit system remained unchallenged. Only once, in 1946, did a candidate for governor win the majority of popular votes and fail to receive a majority of the unit votes. Often, however, a candidate has received a majority of county unit votes without having a majority of popular votes.

In 1954, for instance, Marvin Griffin won 302 out of 410 unit votes, although he carried only 234,690 popular votes out of 646,235.

In 1946 two efforts were made to dislodge the county unit system. One sought to overturn the election of Eugene Talmadge over James V. Carmichael as governor. The other sought to undo the election of James C. Davis as Fifth District Congressman over Mrs. Helen Mankin. Both failed.

TWO MORE suits were filed in 1951 and failed.

From a legal point of view, the system must be challenged under the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution on the ground that it does one of three things to a citizen's vote:

1. Devaluates it—makes the voter receive less weight than that of an average citizen in an average county.

2. Destroys it — causes the vote of a citizen who was a part of the plurality in one county to be cancelled by an opposite plurality vote in another, smaller county.

3. Reverses it—cancels a citizen's vote entirely because he voted against the plurality in his own county.

Although the legal grounds for an attack on the system have not changed in recent years, the psychological pressure has built up tremendously because of the great increases in population in urban areas.

ALTHOUGH Fulton, Chatham and some other counties have suffered at the short end of the unit plan for a long time, their situations have been aggravated since World War II. Other counties, such as fast-growing Dougherty, also are feeling the pinch now. And thousands of citizens who formerly lived in rural counties now find their own votes diluted by moving.

Efforts have been made in the legislature to modify the unit system to meet the grievances of the urban counties, but the reigning powers always have chosen flat opposition,

GEORGIA EDITORS SPEAK:

County Registrars Have A Tremendous Task Ahead

Columbus Ledger

IF A DRY RUN staged in Fulton County to test procedures fixed for qualifying voters by Georgia's newly enacted registration law can be taken as an indicator, county registrars have a tediously slow task ahead of them.

The test, conducted with the aid of officials charged with the duty of registering voters in Fulton, showed that the process of qualification under the new law was slowed to a snail's pace compared to the previous system.

Those conducting the dry run under the 1958 law said it showed only 40 voters could be processed daily compared to 800 applicants under the old law. They interpreted results as showing that qualification of voters will henceforth be a tedious process, particularly in the more heavily populated counties. . . .

The law was enacted by the General Assembly with the expectation that it would hold down the number of Negro voters in the state. It provides for, if the regulation is followed, a citizen applying to register to make two trips to the county courthouse and then to pass a stiff examination to qualify.

Opponents of the measure warned when it was being considered by the Assembly that the rigid test provided likely would disqualify many white voters also. There was no indication then that the new process would require so much of the registrars' time.

Waycross Journal-Herald

WHETHER GEORGIA'S new voter registration rigmarole will discourage prospective voters is a matter to be determined.

It seems doubtful, however, if the law passed by the recent General Assembly will result in a rush on the office of county registrars.

Georgians who are not registered and who want to vote in the important elections this fall must do so by May 3.

Persons who were registered as of March 25, the day the governor signed the bill setting up the new procedure, will not be required to reregister.

But those who weren't on the books then must register under the new law which sets up tests for qualifying.

In our opinion much will depend on the character and ability of the registrars if the new law is to work fairly and honestly. Whether a person is qualified or not will still depend in a great measure on the common sense judgment of members of the board.

The big effort in this country for a long time has been the campaign to get people to register and to vote. While no reasonable person would want to throw the registration rolls open to all comers, no true believer in our democratic system would want to put unreasonable hurdles in the path of prospective voters.

We hope that Georgia's new registration procedure, which appears to be loaded with red tape, will be administered with wisdom and justice.

The right to vote is one of the most precious possessions of free people.

GEORGIA UNIT VOTE PUT TO HIGH COURT

Constitutionality of Primary Tally System Challenged by Atlanta's Mayor

By ANTHONY LEWIS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20—The Supreme Court is about to renew acquaintance with an old problem—the Georgia County unit system of counting primary election votes.

The county unit system is a method of tabulation weighted heavily against the populous urban areas of Georgia. It allows state-wide candidates—for Governor or Senator, for example—to lose the popular vote but win the Democratic primary by carrying rural areas. Victory in the Democratic primary means election.

Four times before, the county unit system has been challenged in suits that have reached the Supreme Court. They got nowhere.

Now the Mayor of Atlanta, William B. Hartsfield, has brought suit in Federal court there to have the system declared unconstitutional. A petition to reverse an adverse lower court decision in the case was filed in the Supreme Court Friday.

'Political' Issue Shunned

At issue is a doctrine that the allotment of voting strength in a state involves questions too "political" to be decided by the Federal judiciary. This doctrine has so far prevailed in the Supreme Court.

The leading case, Colegrove v. Green, was a 1946 challenge to Congressional Districts in Illinois. The districts had not been changed since 1901, and they ranged in population from 112,000 to 914,000.

The suit contended that this imbalance was an unconstitutional discrimination against the voters in the more populous districts. But the Supreme Court never passed on the discrimination.

By a vote of 4 to 3 the court refused to deal with the question at all because of its "peculiarly political nature." It affirmed dismissal of the suit. Justice Felix Frankfurter wrote:

"Courts ought not to enter this political thicket."

'Unit Vote' Varies

Under the county unit system the candidate who wins the popular vote in a Georgia county gets the county's "unit vote"—two units in each of the smallest counties, four in medium-sized counties and six units in each of the eight largest counties.

These units nowhere reflect the relative population.

Fulton County, which involves Atlanta, has six units for 561,000 persons. Echols County has two unit votes for 2,200 persons. A vote in Echols County thus is worth about eighty-five times as much as a vote in Atlanta.

Mayor Hartsfield, in filing his new suit, asked for a three-judge Federal Court. Such a panel is required in suits seeking to enjoin a statute as unconstitutional.

Federal District Judge Boyd Sloan refused to call the three-judge court on the ground that the constitutional question raised was "unsubstantial." He reached this conclusion because the Supreme Court has previously dismissed challenges to the county unit system.

Reversals Sought

Mayor Hartsfield's lawyer, Morris B. Abram, is asking the Supreme Court to reverse Judge Sloan's action and require convening of a three-judge court. Such a reversal would, in effect, signify that the case did present a substantial constitutional question.

Mr. Abram notes that the previous Supreme Court orders dismissing suits against the county unit system never reached the constitutional issue. Two cases were held moot because the election had been held.

He argues that the court has heretofore held merely that, as a matter of discretion, the Federal Courts should withhold their hand from such "political" matters. Changed circumstances, he says, may justify a change toward exercise of the judicial power.

Urbanization Is Cited

To this Mr. Abram says that the discrimination inherent in the county unit system is growing worse as Georgia becomes increasingly urbanized. And unless the Federal Courts do grant relief, he argues, there can be no hope of changing this trend.

His point is that one house of the state legislature is elected on the same basis as the county unit system and thus will probably never approve any change in it.

Twice in recent years Georgia voters have overwhelmingly rejected proposals to write the system into the state constitution. Mr. Abram argues that there is no way to translate this apparent popular majority against the system into its actual abolition except through a judicial decision that it is unconstitutional.

Frontiers Told About League Of Women Voters

Mrs. Philip G. Hammer, one of the leaders of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, told the members of the Atlanta Frontiers Club Tuesday afternoon that one of the important activities of her organization was to study and make recommendations on issues affecting the public interest but not endorse candidates.

Appearing as guest speaker before the Frontiers, a service group, the civic leader cited some of the activities by the League and pointed to the organization's opposition to the private school plan, the county unit system and support for home rule as some of the important issues which had been studied and acted upon.

FOR VOTERS SERVICE,

Mrs. Hammer said the League was primarily a voters' service organization which is interested in more citizens becoming registered to vote in the interest of better government. She mentioned Facts, the League's principal publication, and its recent issue which contained a political directory, carrying the names and positions of local officials.

She also showed several pamphlets her group had released. The speaker declared that the writing of letters to public officials by members of her organization relative to public issues was another important part of the League.

The speaker is the wife of Philip G. Hammer, who was previously executive director of the City Planning Commission and is also a teacher of Philosophy at Spelman College. She was introduced by Rev. M. L. Upton. Rev. P. F. Ransom responded to the speaker and expressed thanks in behalf of the Frontiers for her appearance.

OTHER FEATURE

Another important feature of the meeting which was held in Joe's Holiday Room was a report by William Bennett, chairman of the Frontiers' committee to get reading material for the inmates of the Milledgeville State Hospital for mental patients. He reported on a recent trip to the institution by himself and two other committee conducted in the city schools. He said the progressing splendidly although no exhibit was sufficient to be entered in national competition. The Frontiers had agreed to pay the transportation cost of any student who had been selected to go to the national exhibits which are being held this year at Dearborn, Michigan.

Mrs. Annie McPheeters, his co-worker, and Miss Margaret Walker. He said supply the patients at Milledgeville, a fine response had come from the The project was started by the Frontiers last year when it was revealed that practically no library facilities were available at the institution.

TO PURCHASE BOXES

The club also authorized the purchase of boxes in which to ship the reading matter in the future.

Register now, says J. W. Dobbs

MACON, Ga. — "My friends, that is the most important message you can take home to your people today. Urge every man, and woman, above 18 years of age, to go to the county court house and become a registered voter."

This is what John Wesley Dobbs, president of the Georgia Voters League, urged to Macon citizens at their spring meeting Saturday. He went on:

"If your name is already on the books you will not be required to register again. However, if you have not voted during the past two years, your name will be stricken and you will be required to register again. If in doubt, check your name at the court house.

"WE WOULD like to see a voters league or some kind of a civic league in every county in Georgia. We are not concerned whether or not your vote a Republican or Democrat ticket, but we are vitally concerned that you will become a registered voter.

"Our Georgia Voters League is a non - partisan organization. We have no desire to control your vote or tell you how to vote. We believe you will have sense enough to do that for yourself. Colored people live and work in most of the Georgia counties right along with their white friends and neighbors.

"We have no desire to disrupt or interfere with that peaceful relationship. We do know that your white neighbors and friends will have higher regard and respect for you when you accumulate money, property, and the ballot. All people respect the dollar and the ballot.

"These are two highly important powers of usefulness within the grasp of every American Citizen. They are both priceless possessions when rightfully obtained and correctly used in a Democratic society. First, you must know your rights — next, you must learn how to come in possession of them.

"I AM glad to stand here today and tell you that I believe our future is safe and secure. The colored people will become first - class citizens. America is the world's leading and greatest exponent of Christian Democracy.

"The nations of the world are looking to America for leadership and guidance. We cannot afford to betray or disappoint them. The American Constitution will, eventually, be respected and obeyed.

"America must get her own house in order first. This she will most certainly do. Don't judge America by the racial disorders at Brooklyn, N.Y., or Little Rock, Ark. These are but symptoms of a political and economic disease that affect the present American way of life.

"The right kind of medicine will be prescribed, and the American patients will get well and walk again at Brooklyn, Little Rock, and in all other parts and sections of this great American Commonwealth. If you believe in these ideals then trust God and work hard for the future fulfilment of them. Right ideals will prevail in America.

WE HAVE a million colored persons in Georgia. At least 600,000 of them are over 18 years of age are eligible to become registered voters. Our job is to see to it that, at least 300,000 colored persons become registered voters.

"That, my friend, is your job and mine today. It is a thankless job; it is a job for which there will be no financial reward, and but little thanks; however, on the other hand, in doing your best to bring it about, you will receive a personal satisfaction, a great joy in your heart, and a sweet peace of mind that will stay with you to your dying day; and then, go with you into the great beyond — where right and God mean but one and the same thing."

NEW VOTE LAW SEEN SLOWING REGISTRATION

ATLANTA, Ga. — (SNS) — Fulton County residents who can qualify under the easier "literacy portion" of the new Georgia voter reregistration bill can qualify in not more than 10 minutes, according to Fulton County Tax Commissioner Standish Thompson.

Despite the new soup-line qualities of the new bill, not more than 1,000 new voters will be able to register before the fall elections. The average will be about 50 persons.

The voter registration law requires that would be voters, first apply and then be told when he may meet with the board. However Fulton authorities are trying to eliminate making two trips to the courthouse to register.

Registration for the September primary and the general election will close May 3. This will give four weeks in which to register if the books are reopened Monday.

There appears to be loop holes in the present qualifying tests. Mrs. Alfred Greene gave the test to one of the deputy registrars who used one of the easier portions, requiring ten minutes.

'Exercise voting rights,' NAACP

CHICAGO — The Chicago Branch NAACP recently urged all persons to "exercise their duties and responsibilities as citizens by voting in the April 8 primary elections here."

In a joint statement issued by Theodore A. Jones, president of the Chicago NAACP and Gerald Bullock, chairman of the legislative committee of the branch, the NAACP pointed out:

"ONLY BY full participation of all citizens in the political life of our city, state and nation can we achieve the objectives of the NAACP."

"These are crucial times for all who support the fight for civil rights and equality of opportunity for all citizens. While the NAACP is non-partisan, it is not non-political."

Teacher who quit in racial row reinstated

LAKELAND, Ga., April 9—(AP)—Mrs. A. B. Baskin, veteran Lanier County teacher who said she was forced to resign over a segregation incident, has been reinstated.

The reinstatement was voted by the county board yesterday at a meeting attended by state school officials. It was effective Feb. 1, the date of her resignation, and means she will lose no salary because of absence from the classroom.

Mrs. Baskin allowed a white school boy, whose own bus had left, to ride home in a Negro school bus. She claimed she was pressured into resigning. County board members, however, maintained that she quit voluntarily when the incident was discussed with her.

Wallace Thigpen, county school board chairman, said state school authorities recommended that she be taken back as a teacher. She had appealed to the state board an earlier refusal of the county board to reinstate her.

LOW INTEREST LOAN UNIT SOUGHT

MIA To Repeat Credit Union Attempt

Even though their first attempt fell through, Negro leaders in Montgomery are still trying to form a credit union to keep their people away from small loan companies.

[illegible] application for a credit union charter to obtain low interest loans available to the Negro community was turned down by the Bureau of Federal Credit Unions in Atlanta.

But R. B. Binion, chairman of the MIA's credit committee, said Wednesday his organization hasn't given up. He said the organizers have taken steps to comply with the requirements outlined by the federal agency and expect to file a second application shortly.

Meanwhile, said Binion, who is president of an insurance company, the MIA also is encouraging Negro churches, lodges, civic groups and labor organizations to set up independent credit unions for their members.

James T. Coats, regional representative of the federal agency, said the group's original application was rejected because it was too loosely organized to qualify for a credit union charter.

Binion said the by-laws have been rewritten in hope of making the MIA eligible to sponsor a credit union, but that no formal request has been filed since the original rejection. However, he said one will be soon.

DOUBLE PURPOSE

The MIA president, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., said at the time the first application was submitted that the purpose of a credit union for Negroes was twofold:

1. To encourage Negroes to save money by investing it in the credit union at $5 a share.

2. To make low-interest money available to Negroes who in the past have paid as high as 700 per cent a year on loans from privately operated companies.

Alabama law fixes the maximum legal interest rate at 8 per cent a year but provides no penalty for overcharging. A court suit against a Montgomery loan company produced evidence that the charges ran as much as 700 per cent a year, most of them collected from Negroes.

Righting A Wrong

The recent restoration of Mrs. A. B. Baskin, a white Lanier County school teacher, to her post of duty is indeed gratifying to those who lament the spurious atmosphere whose pressure caused her leaving her job as teacher.

The episode arose over her allowing one of her pupils, a white lad, to ride to his home on a bus with Negro school children after the bus which carries white children had left.

The restoration of the teacher to her job, on which she had just a few weeks to go before retirement, does not remove one of the stains across the ledger of humanity which will for a long time cause genuine regret, burning chagrin and sorrow.

The point at issue, since the 1954 decision outlawing segregation in the public schools, politicians who desired office for reasons other than their merit, will be accused of having their portion in stirring up such a sentiment that would suggest such unfavorable actions. The teacher, realizing her predicament, is alleged to have resigned her post after community gossip was spread to the effect that she was supporting integration. All this despite the official knowledge that this teacher believed in segregation. The two races here in the South have found that good relations are the all powerful essentials to our civic, cultural and educational development.

The condition surrounding the whole affair is directly traceable to those whose elected status make it expedient to support segregation.

There is another grave point at issue, the great harm done to the white child, who knows that the peaceful ride he took with the Negro children which carried him home without any mishap or inconvenience occasioned the getting of his innocent teacher in trouble.

In time his resentment of the folly may rise up in the indignation which might go down to the discredit of such a sentiment whipped up in defiance of the courts of the land, to the extent that a teacher felt it best to resign a post within a few weeks of her eligibility for retirement for allowing a white child to ride home with colored children.

All in all, this might not be a contribution to those who are profiting by such a route to office, and it will in time be resented by the seed of thos ewhom they exploited.

But by the Lanier County school board reversing its position in this case, it at least deserves credit for attempting to right a wrong.

BY GEORGIA BOARD

Negro School Bus Use For Vote Qualifying Hit

ATLANTA, May 12 (UP)—The State Board of Education today directed Chatham County school officials to show cause why funds should not be withheld from a Negro high school which transported students in school buses to register as voters.

The board issued the directive after member William T. Bodenhamer of Ty Ty displayed a letter from the Tax Payers Assn. of Chatham County, pointing out that Alfred E. Beach High School had transported students to the county courthouse on May 7-8 to register. It asked the Chatham school board chairman and school superintendent to answer at the next state board meeting.

The board adopted and then rescinded a motion by James Peters of Manchester which called for the withdrawal of funds for the two days the buses were used.

Member Henry Stewart opposed a move by Peters and Chairman George Stewart that an ultimatum be issued to all school systems, pointing out that school buses could not be used in such manner.

Stewart argued that it would be an "indictment of the 199 school systems" in the state. Such action, he said, would "assume" the systems are planning to misuse the buses.

Stewart said each case should be dealt with individually.

"It should be determined if this is a proper use of school buses," Bodenhamer said. "If this use of school buses is illegal, steps should be taken immediately to stop the practice."

Peters said he knew of "hundreds of abuses" of school bus use and other infractions of board regulations. He did not elaborate on the charge.

The board issued the order at its meeting in Atlanta. It came in the form of a resolution offered by James S. Peters of Manchester.

William T. Bodenhamer of Tift County brought the matter before the board. He said he had received a complaint from H. O. Durham, treasurer of the Taxpayers Assn. of Chatham County.

Durham's letter enclosed clippings from The Savannah Evening Press and photographs which showed some of 180 Negro pupils, were from Alfred E. Beach High School and the letter said they were transported in school buses to the courthouse last week to register to vote.

Durham said that the incident occurred during school hours. "It simply does not make sense that the taxpayers should be called upon to support such crazy ideas," Durham said.

Withholding of state funds would be for May 7 and 8, the days the incident occurred.

School charged in transporting pupils to register

ATLANTA, May 13—(AP)—The State Board of Education ordered county school officials at Savannah yesterday to show why state funds should not be withheld from a Negro school which used its buses for transporting pupils to register to vote.

The chairman of the Chatham County Board of Education and the county school superintendent were instructed to appear before the state board. No date was set, but the board has called a special meeting for May 23.

Despite Crusade Negroes Apathetic About Voting

Atlanta, Ga. (ANP) — Apathy among Negroes is hampering a concerted drive to up the Negro voter registration strength in the South, it was disclosed last week.

The drive was launched last month by the Southern Christian Leadership committee, headed by the Rev. Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala. Its campaign of mass meetings in 11 southern states, is aimed at doubling the present Negro voting strength by 1960. To do this, it must persuade more than a million Negroes to qualify as voters.

It is estimated that Negro voter registration in the 11 states totaled 1,200,000 in 1956, less than 20 percent of the total re-

However, in the first month of the drive, only a handful reported to the call. The campaign launched by a series of Reports from the various cities were discouraging. In Montgomery, the county board of registrars reported a drop in Negro voter applications. Birmingham recorded "less since the trial before."

NEW RIGHTS ISSUE RAISED IN GEORGIA

Suit Asks U.S. Aid for Urban Democrats in Party Split Over Primary System

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, March 22—The South's voting practices came in for new attention this week. Debate was set off by a suit in Federal court seeking to invalidate one phase of the Deep South voting system on the ground that it discriminates against urban voters.

The suit, filed a week ago by Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta, asks a three-judge bench to declare unconstitutional the Georgia county unit system for determining the outcome of Democratic primary elections.

In sequel to the filing of the suit Mayor Hartsfield has been under heavy fire from top state officials. Gov. Marvin Griffin charged that the Mayor was "a traitor to our Georgia way of life" and that the suit constituted "groveling to the Negro bloc of voters."

In a measure the suit stems from the Federal Civil Rights Act adopted last summer. That law is aimed fundamentally at Negro voting restrictions in the southern states.

New Regional Moves

Much recent discussion in the region has dealt with proposals for tightening state and community regulations to hold back Negro registration increases, particularly in the rural areas, where Negro population ratios are usually higher.

Ironically, however, it was the white mayor of the Deep South's largest city who turned to the new law to underscore a charge of disfranchisement. The substance of the charge is that rural political leaders systematically practice a form of mass discrimination against urban residents regardless of race.

The suit touched off debate over such matters as apportionment imbalances that create rural domination in state legislatures, the distribution of state revenues and the greater urban opportunity for Negro political representation.

Mayor Hartsfield's suit asked a declaratory judgment to enjoin party and state officials from using the unit system in the state primary next September. In this one-party Southern state the Democratic primary winner is assured of victory in the election.

Charge by the Mayor

Mayor Hartsfield charged that the unit system gives a preponderance of political power to small rural counties. Under its discriminatory provisions, he said, one vote in sparsely settled Cherokee County is worth 155 votes in Fulton County (Atlanta).

Under the unit system Georgia's primary elections are decided by votes assigned to the 159 counties on the basis of six votes to each of the eight most populous counties, four votes to each of the thirty next most populous counties and two votes to each of the remaining 121 counties.

In practical terms, this means that three two-vote rural counties can offset the popular returns in a six-vote county. A candidate polling a plurality of popular votes in a county gets all the county's unit votes.

In 1946, 1950 and 1952 lawsuits attacking the county unit system were appealed to the United States Supreme Court without success. In the 1950 case, an action in equity, the Supreme Court, 7 to 2, declared that "Federal courts consistently refuse to exercise their equity powers in cases posing political issues arising from a state's geographical distribution of electoral strength among its political subdivisions."

Linked to Federal Law

Mayor Hartsfield's suit suggests, in effect, that the new Civil Rights Act gives jurisdiction over discriminatory voting cases to the Federal district courts.

Attorneys for the Mayor also argue that the Federal courts "have no bar in equity" if they wish to uphold the petition. The lawyers are Morris B. Abram, Charles L. Weltner, Osgood Williams and Maurice N. Maloof, all of Atlanta.

Mayor Hartsfield, a political moderate elected to his sixth successive term in December, has long been in conflict with state officials over rural-urban differences. His supporters charge that rural-backed politicians spread a false fear of Negro voting as a device to bolster the unit system and retain it as a means of state government control.

Georgia's County Unit Continues To Come To Book

The county unit, that muchly talked will-o-the-wisp sparring partner of the state politics, has just had its third inning. That controversial customer was again given what amounts to the green light by Federal Judge Sloan in a hearing at Gainesville in the case of Hartsfield vs. Bell and others.

The county unit has yet to find that comfort from any quarter saying that it is right. The first two tilts in which the Supreme Court held that its rectification was within the province of the state, thereupon refusing to hear it, had the absence of the Civil Rights Bill passed last year. In that there is an inference that the rights of citizens and their votes places the measure within the scope of the courts.

Judge Sloan himself made a reference during the first day of the hearing that passage of the Civil Rights Bill may prevent a single judge from deciding the substantiality of federal interest in such cases. According to press reports, during the same first day's hearing,—and we quote: "Judge Sloan interrupted arguments several times to point out that a single judge could not enter the merits of controversy."

However, the county unit won the first round of a case that would, beyond doubt, have been appealed regardless of which side won.

So, as is the Georgia county unit lingers between two fates; one, the Hartsfield counsel would mandamus it directly to the Supreme Court while the counsel for John Sammon Bell et al would move for dismissal.

For the sake of the record and the information of our readers, it is obvious that the main point now at issue is the efforts of the Bell contenders are for a one judge hearing; in that there is seen a prayer for time; time to make the long route to the Supreme Court moot by the time it reaches there insofar as relates to the coming September primary. A three-judge hearing would speed it up in time to affect the September primary.

The Hartsfield counsel, however contends that through mandamus proceedings, there is still a short cut to the Supreme Court for a three-judge hearing.

Through the thin guise may be seen here a suspicion that those who are praying for a one judge hearing, feel the slim chances of the merits of their claim; that the surest plan would be to forestall a show-down as long as possible, or at least until the September primary is over.

If such is true, the disservice rendered the county unit by its worshippers, who obviously betray that the keeping of a showdown away is the only sure safety of the measure. They would therefore leave the impression in many quarters that they are really afraid of the truth stepping in at the improper time.

All this only adds up to one of the favorite sayings of Abraham Lincoln,—"you may fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time."

The suspicion is drawn from its maneuvers, that the county unit cannot stand the open air of an out and out legal test in the light of the civil rights bill, when on the other hand there are possibly three justices still on the bench who, if memory is not at fault, favored taking jurisdiction in the case at its last tilt before that tribunal. This was before passage of the Civil Rights measure.

Nothing Is Settled Until It Is Settled Right

Arguments on the county unit suit filed by Atlanta's Mayor William B. Hartsfield and heard in Gainesville, Georgia, raises a Constitutional question, heard on two occasions. The question of vote valuation and the inequity contingent in a system where voting is devalued all the way up to a ratio of 140 to 1.

Obviously the measure was instituted as a fortification for minority government; somewhat of a privileged practice, willfully designed to offset the weight of heavy urban votes, and bolstered all along under the pretense of an aid to nullification of the Negro vote.

It is well that the case keeps coming back; there is admitted merit on the side of those who think as Mayor Hartsfield thinks and as such, it will, like Banquo's ghost, continue to come back until it is settled right.

Members of the United States Senate, Congressmen and state house officers are nominated through this same county unit system; the primary in turn, is the actual election in these one-party parts, and by and large a federal interest is apparently involved.

Previous declines of the Supreme Court to assume jurisdiction, could not consistently claim that it endorsed the county unit, or even said it was right. It was dropped back into the laps of those who sent it up because of certain failures to give the motions proper channel in which the Supreme Court could within the confines of constitutional law take jurisdiction.

The Hartsfield motion, coming as it does after the passage of the Civil Rights bill, poses a decidedly new phase on the question, which, as stated here before, if the courts do not get it sooner or later, the top heavy "waterhead" of its own gravity eventually will.

Dismissal Of County Unit Suit Is Sought Second Time

A suit to have Atlanta Mayor William B. Hartsfield's County Unit suit dismissed was filed in U. S. District Court in Atlanta Thursday. It was the second in as many days.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook and his special deputy B. D. (Buck) Murphy filed Thursday's motion, contending the mayor's arguments do "not raise a substantial federal question."

John Sammons Bell, State Democratic Chairman, and George D. Stewart, party secretary, filed an almost identical motion Wednesday.

Federal Circuit Court Judge Boyd Sloan, to whom the motions were directed, had expressed his opinion Tuesday. He said, "The federal question sought to be raised is unsubstantial" because of previous high court decisions involving the County Unit System.

The Judge, however, stopped short of dismissing the suit entirely, while at the same time refusing to convene a three-judge panel to hear the case.

This was considered a means of slowing down the process by which the suit might eventually reach the Supreme Court. Hartsfield's attorneys, meanwhile, are preparing a motion direct to the Supreme Court which they hope will force Judge Sloan to convene a three-judge panel.

Hartsfield is seeking to stop Democratic party officials from using the County Unit System to determine the winners of the Sept. 10 primary.

Should a single judge hear the case, it would then have to go to another court before reaching the Supreme Court. But following a three-judge decision its next stop would be the high court.

Registration Slow, Women Voters Find

—By ALLAN HEAD

Several Atlanta Voters Guild women went to the Fulton Courthouse Thursday to help officials test new voter registration procedures.

Their conclusion: The registrar's office can't handle more than six applications an hour, or 48 per day.

"Ridiculous," Mrs. Alfred Green Jr., of 71 Blackland Road, NW, declared. "That's too slow for a city the size of Atlanta."

Tax Commissioner and Registrar Standish Thompson, who helped arrange the demonstration, pointed out the 1958 registration law makes the same provisions for Fulton as for small, sparsely populated counties.

"It may be fast enough for some Georgia counties," he added. "But it isn't flexible enough to handle our problem here."

Under the old registration law, the registrar's office has processed up to 800 applications a day. The new law requires potential voters to qualify individually before the board of registrars.

Standish says he hopes to open voter registration Monday. Registration for the September primary and the general election will close May 3.

Under the new law, less than 1,000 voters will be able to qualify during this four-week period.

Mrs. Green, aided by Mrs. J. W. Glass of 1555 Moores Mill Road, NW, acted the part of the board of registrars. She tested two "applicants" — deputy tax clerk L. R. Hughes and a reporter.

The dry run showed it will take at least 10 minutes to test a literate applicant. About 20 minutes will be needed to give the citizenship test required for illiterates.

Hughes, acting the part of literate applicant, promptly flunked out. He tripped twice on attempts to read, understand and explain sections of the Georgia Constitution.

"I'd advise you to get a copy of the Constitution and study it." Mrs. Green said with mock severity. Hughes already is a qualified voter.

The reporter struggled through a test on knowledge and duties of citizenship—required of illiterates—in approximately 20 minutes, mainly by saying "I don't know" at frequent intervals.

As Hughes pointed out, however, "Most folks will hesitate before admitting they don't know. They'll scratch their heads, look at the ceiling, take all kinds of time. . ."

NO FEDERAL ISSUE SEEN

Georgia Vote Unit Suit Denied Panel

Gainesville, Ga., April 1 (UP)—Federal Judge Boyd Sloan today threw out a motion by Atlanta Mayor William B. Hartsfield to have his suit to declare the county unit system unconstitutional brought before a three-judge court.

Sloan said no substantial federal question was involved. Attorneys for Hartsfield said they would ask the U.S. Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus to force a three-judge court to hear the case.

Hartsfield, working against time, is trying to get Georgia's county unit system declared unconstitutional before the September Democratic primary. The mayor, acting as a private citizen, alleges his right to vote is infringed by the system which has been in effect 60 years.

Gov. Marvin Griffin has called Hartsfield a "renegade and traitor" for filing the suit. Hartsfield says a vote in Chattahoochee County is worth 115 times a vote in Fulton County.

Morris B. Abram of Atlanta, attorney for Hartsfield, said the Supreme Court would be petitioned to review Sloan's decision immediately.

The effect of the mandamus, if granted by the Supreme Court, would be to require the district federal court to assemble a three-judge court to hear the suit.

In upholding a defense motion, Sloan quoted from three prior decisions handed down by the Supreme Court holding in effect that the county unit system did not violate the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment and questions concerning the system were better settled by state courts.

In the Colgrove vs. Green decision, Justice Frankfurter said the court had no business entering a "political thicket."

Judge Sloan's decision was a victory for defendants John Bell Sammons, chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, George D. Stewart, committee secretary, and Secretary of State Ben Fortson Jr.

Judge Hurls Jail Threat At Civil Rights Probers

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Georgia judge threatened to jail federal civil rights investigators yesterday in a labyrinth of Southern racial developments.

A government suit filed at Columbus, Ga., the first under the 1957 Civil Rights Act, aroused the ire of Superior Court Judge Walter I. Geer of Colquitt, Ga.

The jurist, in keeping with Georgia law, had appointed five Terrell County election registrars whom the suit charged with discriminating against prospective Negro voters.

In a statement, Geer called the suit an "arrogant, unwarranted, high-handed" attempt of "radical Republican leaders to intimidate the people of Terrell County."

If the FBI, in prosecuting the suit, makes any "high-handed, menacing" investigation of his court, he declared, "I will not hesitate to put them in the common jail of the county."

President Eisenhower, returning to Washington tomorrow from his Newport, R. I., vacation, will discuss with Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers "various matters before the courts on the subject of segregation."

The meeting obviously will deal principally with the impending Supreme Court ruling on whether integration at Little Rock, Ark., Central High School should be started at once or delayed 2½ years.

In the meantime there were pointed if relatively minor school integration developments in Virginia, Arkansas and Tennessee.

At Harrisonburg, Va., U.S. Judge John Paul advised the Warren County School Board it cannot bar Negroes from the county's white high school. He did not order immediate admission but said that since the county lacks a Negro high school it must admit Negroes to the white school. School board officials countered by showing him blueprints for a half-million-dollar Negro high school.

At Van Buren, Ark., about 50 segregationist white students succeeded in keeping Negroes out of the high school for the day but their boast that others would join them in a boycott fell flat. None of the 13 Negro students was seen to enter the school. But only a few recruits joined the striking students, who demonstrated across the street.

Stairstep integration, inaugurated last year, continued without incident at Nashville, Tenn. Nine or more second grade Negro children registered for another year of integrated classes. Earlier, 15 first graders had registered for mixed classes under a court-directed plan of integrating one grade a year.

In a racial development at Montgomery, Ala., the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro integration leader of long standing, chose a 14-day jail term rather than pay a $14 fine for what he declared was an offense he did not commit.

Unsolicited payment of the fine spoiled King's plan to go to jail as a protest. Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers, a staunch segregationist, disclosed it was he who paid the fine to foil what he called the Negro's "publicity stunt for his forthcoming book" and to discredit him in "his self-assumed role of a martyr." King protested against payment of the fine.

King, who led Montgomery's successful bus boycott two years ago, had been arrested on a charge of refusing to obey a police order to move from a stairway outside a courtroom where a hearing was being held on attempted murder charges involving two other Negroes.

Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus declares that opposition to enforced integration at Little Rock High School is greater today than ever before. The story is on page 2.

Patterson Agents Studying Georgia Registrar Suit

MONTGOMERY, Sept. 9 (UPI)—Atty. Gen. John Patterson said today he has sent two members of his staff to Columbus, Ga., in connection with the government's attempt "to place certain Negroes on the voters' list."

Patterson, the Democratic gubernatorial candiadte, said, "The Federal Government has filed a suit in Columbus, Ga., against the board of registrars of Terrell County, Ga., seeking an injunction against the board and trying to force the board to place certain Negroes on the voters' list of that county."

"This action amounts to a frontal attack by the Republican Administration against state and local governments . . . and I have assigned two of my men to go to Georgia and look into the case and observe the actions of the Federal Government first hand."

The attorney general said "the action of the Republican Administration in Washington in trying to ram integration of the races down the throats of the people of the South might well wreck our public school system."

Speaking in Centreville last night, Patterson repeated his campaign pledge that he has "made no commitments" that would prevent him from having "a clean honest and above board administration during the coming four years."

He said he has been meeting with incoming members of the Legislature in recent weeks "in addition to carrying on the duties of the attorney general's office."

Patterson said there are several important cases now pending in his office, one of which is the tidelands oil case which will be argued before the U. S. Supreme Court in Washington Oct. 13.

First Rights Prosecution Set in Georgia

By HOWARD L. DUTKIN
Star Staff Writer

The first Justice Department prosecution under the 1957 Civil Rights Act most likely will be injunctive proceedings against voting registration officials in Terrell County, Ga.

The Star has learned that consideration also has been given a similar case in Webster Parish, La., but strong indications are that Terrell County will be selected as the site of the first battle to be waged by the newly-created Civil Rights Division in the voting field.

Six Turned Away

According to complaints, six college graduates including five school teachers were among a group of Negroes turned away last year when they sought to register for a primary election.

The college graduates, it was said, were turned down on the ground that they failed to pass literacy tests involving reading parts of the Constitution and copying down parts of it. For applicants who choose not to take the literacy tests there is an alternative test requiring answers to a series of questions. The tests apply to whites as well as Negroes, but the registrar has wide discretion in determining who has passed.

Seeks Injunction

The proposed injunction complaint probably will assert that the tests were unconstitutional in the manner in which they were applied. A Federal court will be asked to order the registrars cease such practices.

The statute prescribing the tests was passed in March, 1957. For a year preceding passage, it was said, no Negro had been registered.

Complaints were made to the Justice Department by a number of individuals and the Federal Bureau of Investigation began operations in the county last Spring.

Refused to Indict Police

Last August a Federal grand jury at Macon, Ga., refused to indict three policemen of Dawson, in Terrell County, on charges of civil rights violation in the death of two Negroes and the beating or wounding of two others.

If the Federal Government obtains an injunction against the voting registrars they will be liable for civil contempt of court for any violation of the order. Civil contempt is punishable by imprisonment until the order is obeyed.

The Civil Rights Act authorized the Attorney General to initiate injunction proceedings to protect the voting rights of individuals. Thus the Government becomes party to the case rather than the individuals involved who might not have the money to maintain court action.

For 'Rights' Probe:

Jail for FBI, Ga. Judge Angrily Cries

COLUMBUS, Ga.—A Georgia judge has threatened to jail members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and other United States Government officials probing the denial of voting rights to Negroes in the South.

The U. S. Justice Department brought the suit against the county registrars for having refused voting privileges to four college graduates, all teachers, and a fifth person, a former college student, on the grounds that they could not read and write correctly.

The Government is seeking a permanent injunction to forbid the registrars and all other persons concerned from discriminating against vote applications solely because of race and color.

One of the five persons involved, Eddie G. Lowe, former Tuskegee Institute student, now an employee of Albany's (Ga.) U. S. Marine Corps Supply depot, was rejected because he "could read intelligently, but could not write legibly, could not read or write intelligently."

The four educators are Edna Mae Lowe, who holds not only a bachelor's degree, but also a Master of Arts in education degree; Jane Breedlove, David Louis Gibson and Grace Boyd Gibson.

Aroused by a suit under the 1957 Civil Rights Acts filed against five Terrell County election officials whom he had appointed, Superior Court Judge Walter I. Geer of Colquitt, Ga., let go with an emotional outburst.

In his opinion, Geer said, the suit was "an arrogant, unwarranted, high-handed attempt of radical Republican leaders to intimidate Terrell County people."

Geer added that "if the FBI, in prosecuting the suit, makes any high-handed menacing investigation of his court, I will not hesitate to put them in the common jail of the county."

FBI Agents Warned By Georgia Jurist

COLUMBUS, Ga., Sept. 6 (AP).—A South Georgia Superior Court judge warned yesterday that if FBI agents investigate his court and its actions in "any high-handed and menacing manner I will not hesitate to put them in the common jail of the county."

Judge Walter I. Geer issued the statement at his home in Colquitt after learning that Federal officials filed a civil rights suit against three Terrell County voter registrars and two deputy registrars whom he appointed.

The suit was filed Thursday in United States District Court at Columbus. It is the first test of the 1957 Civil Rights Act. It charged the registrars with discriminating against prospective Negro voters.

Judge Geer declared he has "the utmost confidence in the integrity and competence" of the Terrell County registrars he appointed under State law.

He said that "the suit is an arrogant, unwarranted and high-handed attempt on the part of radical Republican leaders to intimidate the people of Terrell County."

Probe Started in April

The suit resulted from an FBI investigation which started in April and covered the events of the last two years. In that time two different State voter registration laws have been in effect. The newer law went into operation last March.

J. G. Raines of Dawson, chairman of the Terrell County Board of Registrars, said the Negroes named in the suit as allegedly discriminated against attempted to register under the newer law.

"We followed the law to the best of our ability and have applied the same test to both white and colored," he said.

The Negroes involved could not read a selection from the Georgia constitution dealing with the functions of the Supreme Court "so I could understand," he said.

One of the registrars, who declined to be quoted by name, said he knew that "at least one and probably more" of the Negroes was a college gradute. But he quickly pointed out that they would still have to pass a test.

"They Didn't Pass"

Asked if they could pass the exam, he replied, "They didn't, did they?"

The civil action alleged that last April 7 a number of Negro applicants, including four schoolteachers with college degrees, were denied voter registration certificates on grounds of alleged inability to read correctly and intelligibly.

Mr. Rains said the registrars expected to have "some of the leading lawyers in Georgia" handling their case. But, he said, he thought it would be wise for them to include "no rabid racist." The lawyers were not identified.

Attorney General Eugene Cook said he would not comment on the matter "without direction from the Governor."

Gov. Marvin Griffin has not commented on the case.

Bill Asks Aldermanic Vote Limit To Wards

Among the local bills requested for submission to the 1959 General Assembly by Fulton County legislators is a proposal to revert to the old method of electing Atlanta aldermen on the vote of the ward they represent, rather than a city-wide vote.

This proposal, which has long been mentioned by opponents of Negro voting on the candidates for city posts, is expected to have wide support. Political leaders have expressed opposition to this change-back to old days, when the "voice of the people" went no further than ward boundary lines.

Deadline for local bills ran out Monday, except in cases of pressing emergency. There was no indication that legislators would submit all the proposals handed them. Among the other local bills requested of the delegation are:

1. A proposal to abolish the Fulton County coroner's position and replace him with a qualified professional medical examiner.

2. A suggestion that Fulton County commissioners' terms be staggered.

3. A proposal to have a Superior Court judge for every 50,000 people in Fulton County.

4. A bill which would give Fulton Criminal Court judges jurisdiction over persons sentenced by that court, in order to allow first offenders to be sentenced to a proposed county work camp.

5. A plan to establish a special domestic relations court in Fulton County.

According to legislators, home rule for Atlanta has been ruled out for this session.

Rep. M. M. "Muggsy" Smith has proposed a local option school bill, among the state-wide measures which could prove highly controversial. Mr. Smith's bill would prevent the state's closing of public schools under the threat of integration.

A bill from Atlanta to be reintroduced in the legislature is the special use permit bill, passed last year and vetoed by Gov. Griffin. Another Griffin-vetoed bill, granting Atlanta the right to charge property owners for paving non-arterial streets, even though a majority of the property owners do not favor the paving bill, will be among those considered at a special meeting of the Fulton County delegation.

South's Negro Voters Set at 2-Year Pattern

The number of Negro voters in the South remains constant in the two-year view, despite increased racial controversy, the Southern Regional Council reported Saturday.

Currently, there are an estimated 1,250,000 Negroes on voting rolls in the Southern states, compared to 1,240,000 reported by the SRC in 1956. The latest figures, representing 25 per cent of Negroes of voting age, are contained in a preliminary report of a Council survey following up its study of 1956.

THE NEW TOTAL, which indicates that Negro voters showed a slight increase, came in the wake of registration surveys which show that in the country as a whole the number of white voters has dropped in the past two years.

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first federal civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, a long list of federal court decisions to speed the Negro toward full legal equality and new state laws to delay change in racial patterns," the SRC said.

In Arkansas, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, where official figures show a decline in Negro registration, the number of qualified white voters also dropped. The lower registration of both races in South Carolina was attributable mainly to the total re-registration this year, as is required every 10 years in the state.

REGISTRATION increased among both white and Negro citizens in North Carolina and Virginia.

In Louisiana, the white registration increased while Negro registration fell from 161,410 to 130,000 in the past two years, due in large measure to widespread purges in several parishes. Pro-segregation groups in that state have made a concerted effort to strike Negro voters from the rolls.

The Southern Regional Council is an interracial organization in 12 Southern states.

State-by-state totals:

	Negro Registrat'n 1958	Negro Pct. Total Registrat'n
Alabama	60,000	6.9
Arkansas	64,023	11.4
Florida	144,810	9.1
Georgia	158,051	12.4
Louisiana	130,000	13.7
Mississippi	35,000	6.8
North Carolina	150,000	7.5
South Carolina	57,978	10.8
Tennessee	185,000	13.2
Texas	150,000	6.8
Virginia	131,626	14.1
Totals:	1,266,488	10.9

(The totals are official for Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina and Virginia, although in Louisiana, where reports were missing from three parishes, these were interpolated, on the basis of 1956 figures. Reports from the other states are estimates.)

Griffin Would Back Terrell With All State's Resources

Atlanta Constitution

U.S. Suit About Negroes Encroachment, He Says

Sun 9-7-58 Atlanta Ga.

By PAT WATTERS

Gov. Marvin Griffin said Saturday the "entire resources of this state" would be used to fight the federal government's civil rights voting case in Terrell County, "if necessary."

He issued a brief statement on the suit, which is the first in the nation under the voting section of 1957 civil rights legislation. It charges discrimination against Negroes by the Terrell Board of Registrars, and asks that this be stopped.

File

Meanwhile:

1. A Washington, D.C., spokesman for the U.S. Justice Department, which filed the suit, declined comment on an order by Superior Court Judge Walter I. Geer barring release of further registration records to the federal government.

• • •

W. WILSON WHITE, assistant attorney general in charge of civil rights, would not indicate what the department plans to do as a result of the order. It directs the board of registrars not to release any records to the federal government except under court order or subpoena duces tecum (requiring appearance in court with pertinent official papers).

2. J. C. Raines, Dawson lawyer and chairman of the Terrell Board of Registrars, said the three-man board and two deputies named as defendants in the suit still have not been served with court papers. The suit was filed Thursday in Columbus, and transferred Friday to the Americus Division of Federal Court.

GOV. GRIFFIN'S comment was terse on the major segregation development in Georgia. It said:

"I will repeat what I have said many times. The entire resources of this state will be utilized if necessary to fight encroachments of the federal government on the rights of the people of Georgia.

"In the case of Terrell County, the people of Georgia shall be the judge as to the qualifications of the electorate."

In a single elaboration, he said, "The law must be applied to everybody alike, but certainly the people of Georgia shall decide what will be the qualifications of the voters of this state."

THE FEDERAL suit charges that stricter methods of determining voter qualifications were used by the Terrell board on Negroes than on white prospective voters. It asked an injunction against this.

Judge Geer, who had earlier said he would jail any FBI agents acting high-handed around his court, issued his court order at the request of the registrars. It also calls for the sheriff to hire additional deputies if necessary to carry out the order and "protect" registrars.

Justice Department Brings First Discrimination Suit

Atlanta Journal

WASHINGTON. — (UPI) — The Justice Department Thursday sued for an injunction against Terrell County, Ga., voting registrars to bar them from allegedly keeping qualified Negroes from voting.

It was the first suit brought by the department under the 1957 Civil Rights Act which provided protection for the voting rights of Negroes in the South and others.

Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers announced that the suit was filed in federal court at Columbus, Ga., to end what he described as "discriminatory practices" of three election registrars and two deputy registrars in Terrell County.

The suit accused the registrars of arbitrarily refusing "to register Negroes who demonstrated themselves to be qualified to register."

It said the Negro citizens involved, four teachers and a Marine Corps employe, live in Dawson, Ga., Terrell County seat.

The defendants named in the suit were James Griggs Raine, Dixon Oxford, and Roscoe Radford registrars of Terrell County, and F. Lawson Cook, Sr., and his wife Mrs. F. Lawson Cook Sr., deputy registrars of the county.

The Justice Department asked the Columbus court to issue a preliminary and a permanent injunction to forbid the registrars "and all persons in active concert and participation with them" from discriminating against any applicant for registration for reasons of race or color.

Aug 25-58

According to the complaint, on last April 7, a number of Negro applicants appeared at the registrars' office to register. It said some were permitted to register.

The four school teachers who were not allowed to register were:

Edna Mae Lowe, a mathematics teacher at Carver High School, Dawson, who holds a Bachelor of Science and a Master of Arts degree in Education from New York University.

Janie Breedlove, an elementary school teacher in Terrell County who holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Albany State College, Albany, Ga.

Davey Louis Gibson, a Terrell County school teacher who holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Albany State and is now working on a Master's degree at New York University.

Grace Boyd Gibson, an elementary school teacher in Calhoun County, Ga., who holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Albany State.

The complaint said Eddie George Lowe, who attended Tuskegee Institute and now works at the U. S. Marine Corps Supply Center at Albany, Ga., also was rejected.

The Government's suit said the four teachers were turned down because of alleged inability to read correctly and intelligibly. Lowe was rejected because of alleged inability to write correctly and legibly.

Registrars' Chairman Denies Bias

J. G. Raines, chairman of the Terrell County board of registrars, denied Thursday night there has been any discrimination against Negroes applying for registration.

Raines said that until he and the present board took office in January, he did not believe Terrell County had registered any voters, white or Negro, since 1954.

"NOT RABID"

Raines, a director of the Bank of Dawson and a Harvard Law School graduate, said, "I am not rabid on the race question. I try to apply the law as I think it should be applied."

Meanwhile, Mrs. F. Lawson Cook [illegible] registrar and [illegible] defendant along with her husband, said FBI agents made photostatic copies of every voter registration card in Terrell County.

Raines said he could not remember any of those listed in the suit individually except Eddie George Lowe.

"He (Lowe) was the only one who read intelligibly, but he did not write correctly or legibly," said Raines. "I remember I was rather disappointed when he didn't write correctly. I couldn't read it and I don't think anyone else could. I believe the paper is still in the files. The board discussed whether we should call him back again.

"NO DOUBT"

"The others, ther ewas no doubt about it."

Raines said the five Negroes named in the suit were denied registration because they failed to read the U.S. Constitution intelligently.

Raines said: "I interpret the law to mean they must read it so I can understand it. Everyone of them pronounced 'equity' as 'eequity.'

"One of them said they had a master's degree, but they slurred it so badly I couldn't understand it.

"HAD TROUBLE"

"They all had trouble with the word 'original,' and one of them left out the word so that the passage read 'The Supreme Court shall have no jurisdiction' rather than 'no original jurisdiction.'

"I informed them of their right of appeal. I think the law was carried out to the letter. The law is difficult to interpret and the test is difficult to judge. You know how it gets tricky.

Atlanta Constitution

"None of them was allowed to register on that basis, since that's what the law says."

Aug 25 58

Mrs. Cook said her husband, the county tax collector, gathered the records as part of his duties and turned them over to the board of registrars.

Mrs. Cook said her husband has been ill recently and she has been taking care of many of his duties.

She said she had no idea of the Federal agents' purpose in photographing the voter records. Cook had no comment on the action.

Rep. E. L. (Tic) Forrester, of the Third District, said he had not seen the suit and hence did not feel he was in a position to comment on it.

Sen. Herman Talmadge was on a vacation trip and unavailable for comment. Sen. Richard B. Russell was in Bethesda Naval Hospital for a chegkup and also not available. An aide said he was not ill, but could not be reached by phone.

Terrell Given 9 Days to Reply To U.S. Bias Suit

Terrell County registrars have 20 days in which to file an answer to a federal suit charging them with discriminating against Negro voter applicants.

State Sen. Dixon Oxford, one of the registrars, said Tuesday the group has not yet selected counsel but will do so and plan defense strategy within the next few days.

Clifford Pantone, federal court clerk in Americus, said the case probably will be heard in Americus in January.

Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department's new Civil Rights Division Thursday filed suit accusing officials of Terrell County, Ga., with discriminating against Negroes seeking to vote.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court at Columbus, Ga.

The suit was directed against Terrell County's five election registrars and deputy registrars. It marks the first court use of the Civil Rights Act of 1957, adopted by Congress as a measure to protect voting rights.

The Columbus court was asked to issue an injunction prohibiting Terrell County (1) from following different procedures in the processing of voting applications by Negro and white citizens, (2) from applying more stringent standards in giving a literacy test to Negro applicants, and (3) from refusing to certify a group of Negroes named in the suit as having passed the literacy test.

All of the Negroes named in the action live at Dawson, Ga., the Terrell County seat, where the Justice Department in August unsuccessfully sought to prosecute three local Dawson policemen on charges they had engaged in brutal treatment of prisoners in their custody.

Registration Topic Of Voters' Meet

The annual meeting of the Georgia Voters League, to be held Saturday, Oct. 26 in Steward Chapel AME Church, Macon, will have as its principal topic of discussion the registration and voting in Georgia.

At the meeting an analysis of registration figures will be presented, explaining how Negro registration increased to 161,412 from 4,232 in 1956; while the white registration showed a drop of 17,000.

Certificates of merit and gold certificates for 100 percent registration will be presented by officials of the Statewide Registration committee, a 67-member group organized in 1956, to organizations which have reported significant achievements in voter-registration during the past year. The committee has conducted two voter-registration campaigns and the statewide registration clinic this year.

Head of the league is John Wesley Dobbs, Atlanta.

Terrell County Again

Apparently the Dawson, Terrell County episode did after all kick up a civil rights infraction. That section of Georgia upon which the spotlight was thrown so brilliantly a few months ago on account of the killings of Negroes, comes into the news again.

So, what started out to secure indictments for killings, is winding up in the relay of one of the most rediculous stories coming out of the South in years.

The case will be heard before the United States Court and it would be of little use to discuss the case, but for the record the disclosures being released are so astounding in their claims, so fragile in their framework as to impugn the whole of those engaged in the scheme.

Prominently mentioned in the suit are some school teachers, holding diplomas from state colleges and as high as Masters of Arts degree from New York University, unable to qualify as voters down in Terrell County.

One of the most absurd and ridiculous alibis against the Negro applicants to register was that they pronounced "equity" "eequity." In that the board allegedly would reject an applicant for giving an "e" the hard sound instead of giving it the unaccented short 'e'.

It is significant that some of the defendants are seeking comments from certain representatives at Washington, because Rep. E. L. Forrester of the Third, the District involved, has already made it known to someone he had not seen the government's suit and did not feel that he was in position to comment; Senator Talmadge was on a vacation trip and also unavailable and Sen. Russell was in a hospital for a checkup and unavailable.

Naturally those who would disregard federal authority or fall into the nets of violation of its mandates would seek their "manifestos," or those to whom they look for comfort when they are challenged.

The case differs a little from the Randolph County case in which the complainants challenged, were awarded punitive damages and ordered back to the voting list, in that these people were not permitted to be registered at all.

So what was begun to ferret out evidence in the killings of prisoners, might raise another important question in addition to violation of civil rights around voting. It will probably settle whether "e" in equity, if given the hard sound instead of short vowel thrift, would decide whether a person is qualified to cast a ballot down in Terrell or any other Georgia county.

Race Registration Remains Constant Despite Pressure

The number of Negro voters in the South remained virtually static in the past two years despite increased racial controversy, the Southern Regional Council reported Saturday.

Currently, there are an estimated 1,226,488 Negroes on voting rolls in eleven Southern states, compared to 1,238,000 reported by the SRC in 1956. The latest figures, representing 25 per cent of Negroes of voting age, are contained in a preliminary report of a Council survey following up its study of 1956.

Figures from six states came from official sources; in the others, the totals are estimates of veteran capitol news correspondents, who consulted with state officials and political workers.

The new total, which indicates that Negro voters held their own, an deven shown a slight increase, came in the wake of newspaper surveys which show that in the country as a whole the number of eligible voters has dropped in the past two years.

This figure represents "something of an achievement" in the face of the disinterest prevalent nationwide at the time of off-year elections and in view of recent trends in the region, the SRC said.

TENSION INCREASE

"The intervening two years since the earlier SRC survey was made have brought increased racial tensions in the South, passage of the first federal civil rights legislation since Reconstruction, a long list of federal court decisions pressed the Negro toward full legal equality and new state laws to delay change in racial patterns."

In some states the number of Negro registrants rose appreciably between 1956 and 1959 but these gains were largely offset by sharp drops in other states due to purges and statewide re-registration.

In Arkansas, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, where official figures show a decline in Negro registration, the number of qualified white voters also dropped. The lower registration of both races in South Carolina was attributable mainly to the total re-registration this year, as is required every 10 years in the state.

Registration increased among both white and Negro citizens in North Carolina and Virginia.

In Louisiana, the white registration increased while Negro registra-

U.S. Accuses Georgia County Of Voting Discriminations

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department's new Civil Rights Division Thursday filed suit accusing officials of Terrell County, Ga., with discriminating against Negroes seeking to vote.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court at Columbus, Ga.

The suit was directed against Terrell County's five election registrars and deputy registrars. It marks the first court use of the Civil Rights Act of 1957, adopted by Congress as a measure to protect voting rights.

The Columbus court was asked to issue an injunction prohibiting Terrell County (1) from following different procedures in the processing of voting applications by Negro and white citizens, (2) from applying more stringent standards in giving a literacy test to Negro applicants, and (3) from refusing to certify a group of Negroes named in the suit as having passed the literacy test.

All of the Negroes named in the action live at Dawson, Ga., the Terrell County seat, where the Justice Department in August unsuccessfully sought to prosecute three local Dawson policemen on charges they had engaged in brutal treatment of prisoners in their custody.

That action was taken under long-standing criminal civil rights statutes. A federal grand jury at Macon, Ga., which examined evidence developed in an FBI investigation, refused on Aug. 9 to indict the three policemen, who were accused by the federal investigators of killing two Negroes, shooting another and beating two more in arrest incidents last spring.

The new civil action at Columbus alleged that on April 7 of this year, a number of Negro applicants appeared to register as voters, without success. It said the rejected applicants included four school teachers with college degrees.

The complaint asserted the teachers were rejected on grounds of alleged inability to read correctly and intelligibly. This group, the suit said, included:

Edna Mae Lowe, a high school mathematics teacher at Dawson who holds a bachelor's degree from Fort Valley (Ga.) State College and a master's degree from New York University;

Janie Breedlove, elementary school teacher with a bachelor's degree from Albany (Ga.) State College;

Davey Louis Gibson, a graduate of Albany State now working on a master's degree at New York University;

Grace Boyd Gibson, a graduate of Albany State.

James Grigg Raines, chief registrar of Terrell County, said the five Negroes named in the federal suit were denied registration because they failed to read the U. S. Constitution intelligently.

"I interpret the law to mean they must read it so I can understand it. Everyone of them pronounced 'equity,' 'eequity.'

"One of them said he had a master's degree, but slurred it so badly I couldn't understand it.

"They all had trouble with the word, 'original,' and one left out the word so that the passage read 'the supreme court shall have no jurisdiction,' rather than 'no original jurisdiction.'

"I informed them of their right of appeal. I think the law was carried out to the letter. The law is difficult to interpret and the test is difficult to judge. You know how a Negro talks.

"None of them was allowed to register on that basis, since that's what the law says."

The suit alleged that registration was also refused on April 7 to Eddie George Lowe, who attended Tuskegee Institute and is employed at the U.S. Marine Corps supply center at Albany, Ga.

His rejection, the government asserted, was based on alleged inability to write correctly and legibly.

Asst. Atty. Gen. W. Wilson White, head of the new Civil Rights Division, said the Terrell County investigation was begun last April. He said it covered registration practices in that county for the past two years.

The suit asserted this investigation showed that in 1956 only 48 Negroes out of 5,036 of voting age in the county were registered, while 2,679 white voters of 3,233 white citizens of voting age received registration certificates.

The complaint charged that Negroes who applied as early as October 1956 for voting registration were not permitted to appear for hearings on their applications until April 7, 1958. But it said white persons who applied in March 1958 were all given hearings that month, some on the same day applied.

The suit said that on March 25, 1958, the day after acceptance of the white applicants, a new Georgia law prescribing more stringent tests for voting applicants became effective, and this new law was used in processing the applications of Negroes.

The suit charged that "the acts and practices of the defendants are designed to deny the right to vote to Negro citizens of the United States and of the State of Georgia solely because of their race and color."

The suit named as defendants Terrell County Registrars James Griggs Raines, Dixon Oxford, and Roscoe Radford, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Lawson Cook Sr., deputy registrars.

U.S. Sues Terrell, Charging Bias in Negro Vote Test

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department's new Civil Rights Division Thursday filed suit accusing officials of Terrell County, Ga., with discriminating against Negroes seeking to vote.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court at Columbus, Ga.

The suit was directed against Terrell County's five election registrars and deputy registrars. It marks the first court use of the Civil Rights Act of 1957, adopted by Congress as a measure to protect voting rights.

LITERACY TEST

The Columbus court was asked to issue an injunction prohibiting Terrell County (1) from following different procedures in the processing of voting applications by Negro and white citizens, (2) from applying more stringent standards in giving a literacy test to Negro applicants, and (3) from refusing to certify a group of Negroes named in the suit as having passed the literacy test.

All of the Negroes named in the action live at Dawson, Ga., the Terrell County seat, where the Justice Department in August unsuccessfully sought to prosecute three local Dawson policemen on charges they had engaged in brutal treatment of prisoners in their custody.

In August, a federal grand jury at Macon said in effect it found no civil rights violations on the part of the three Dawson policemen it was asked to indict.

RIGHTS VIOLATION

The grand jury returned no bills on separate proposed indictments alleging violation of civil rights in instances where one Negro was shot to death, another Negro was fatally beaten, a third Negro was shot and wounded and two others allegedly beaten.

The new civil action at Columbus alleged that on April 7 of this year, a number of Negro applicants appeared to register as voters, without success. It said the rejected applicants included four school teachers with college degrees.

The complaint asserted the teachers were rejected on grounds of alleged inability to read correctly and intelligibly. This group, the suit said, included:

Edna Mae Lowe, a high school mathematics teacher at Dawson who holds a bachelor's degree from Fort Valley (Ga.) State College and a master's degree from New York University;

Janie Breedlove, elementary school teacher with a bachelor's degree from Albany (Ga.) State College;

Davey Louis Gibson, a graduate of Albany State now working on a master's degree at New York University;

Grace Boyd Gibson, a graduate of Albany State.

ANOTHER REFUSAL

The suit alleged that registration was also refused on April 7 to Eddie George Lowe, who attended Tuskegee Institute and is employed at the U.S. Marine Corps supply center at Albany, Ga.

His rejection, the government asserted, was based on alleged inability to write correctly and legibly.

Asst. Atty. Gen. W. Wilson White, head of the new Civil Rights Division, said the Terrell County investigation was begun last April. He said it covered registration practices in that county for the past two years.

SUIT ASSERTED

The suit asserted this investigation showed that in 1956 only 48 Negroes out of 5,036 of voting age in the county were registered, while 2,679 white voters of 3,233 white citizens of voting age received registration certificates.

The complaint charged that Negroes who applied as early as October 1956 for voting registration were not permitted to appear for hearings on their applications until April 7, 1958. But it said white persons who applied in March 1958 were all given hearings that month, some on the same day applied.

The suit said that on March 25, 1958, the day after acceptance of the white applicants, a new Georgia law prescribing more stringent tests for voting applicants became effective, and this new law was used in processing the applications of Negroes.

The suit charged that "the acts and practices of the defendants are designed to deny the right to vote to Negro citizens of the United States and of the State of Georgia solely because of their race and color."

The suit named as defendants Terrell County Registrars James Griggs Raines, Dixon Oxford, and Roscoe Radford, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Lawson Cook Sr., deputy registrars.

If the government succeeds in obtaining an injunction against the registrars, they would be liable for contempt of court for any violation of the order.

Prior to the 1956 national elections, the Justice Department investigated a large number of complaints of racial discrimination in the handling of voting registrations in various parts of the South.

The department said it had developed evidence of such discrimination in many areas, but that under the laws then existing, it could take no action before the election.

These investigations were used as one argument in obtaining passage of the 1957 civil rights act over Southern opposition. That act empowers the attorney general to bring injunction actions "when there are reasonable grounds to believe that persons will be or are being deprived" of voting rights secured by the act.

The specific relief sought by the government in Terrell County was that the court issue a preliminary and permanent injunction to enjoin the defendants "and all persons in active concert and participation with them" from discriminating against any applicant for registration for reasons of race or color.

Judge Warns FBI On Terrell Probe

The south Georgia judge who appointed the Terrell County Board of Registrars assailed a Justice Department suit against the board Friday and threatened to jail federal agents if they start "any high-handed" investigation of his court.

Superior Court Judge Walter I. Geer of Colquitt, whose Pataula Circuit includes Terrell County, blasted the suit filed by the Justice Department's new Civil Rights Division as "arrogant and unwarranted."

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

Elsewhere on the integration front, a U.S. judge at Harrisonburg, Va., told the Warren County School Board it could not bar Negroes from the county's white high school; stairstep integration proceeded without incident at Nashville, Tenn., and 50 segregationist white students at Van Buren, Ark., apparently succeeded in keeping Negroes out of the high school.

Ike to fly to Washington for integration, Far East conferences. Page 2.

At Montgomery, Ala., the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., a Negro integration leader, attempted to serve a 14-day jail term rather than pay a $14 fine for what he said was a trumped-up police charge.

POLICE ORDER

Late Friday, Police Commissioner Clyde Sellers said it was he who paid the $14 to keep King from going to jail. He accused the Negro minister of a "publicity stunt," and said he paid the fine to stop it.

King had been convicted of refusing to obey a police order to move from the steps leading into the city hall courtroom two days ago.

In a statement, the police commissioner, who is a member of the prosegregation Citizens Council, accused King of trying to "further his self-assumed role as a martyr, and also to boost the sale of his forthcoming book."

MONTGOMERY ACCOUNT

The Negro minister has written a book about the fight for racial equality in Montgomery.

Georgia's racial dispute was ignited Thursday when the Civil Rights Division, in the first test of the 1957 Civil Rights Act, filed a suit charging Terrell County Board of Registrars with discriminating against Negroes seeking to vote.

Judge Geer, who under state law appointed the Terrell registrars, warned that if the FBI tries to investigate his court "in any high-handed and menacing manner, I will not hesitate to put them in the common jail of the county."

Declaring he has the "utmost confidence in the integrity and competence of the board," Judge Geer assailed the suit as an "attempt on the part of radical Republican leaders to intimidate the people of Terrell County."

Gov. Griffin was unavailable for comment on the suit Friday and Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said, "I wouldn't go into it without direction from the governor."

J. G. Raines of Dawson, chairman of the Terrell Board of Registrars, said he believes it "would be proper" for Cook to serve as one of the defense attorneys in the suit.

"Our leading counsel should be outstanding attorneys who are not political," Raines said, adding he did not believe it would be wise for the defendants' legal battery to include "any rabid racist."

SUIT TRANSFERRED

The suit, which was filed in U.S. District Court in Columbus, was transferred Friday to the Americus division of the Middle Georgia District. Terrell is included in the Americus territory.

In addition to Judge Geer, the Terrell registrars Friday received the vigorous support of Lt. Gov. Ernest Vandiver, a candidate for governor in next Wednesday's state primary election.

Vandiver said he stands "four square" behind the Terrell board. He called the Justice Department action "an arrogant and unprecedented attempt to intimidate our people and to destroy our right to govern ourselves."

If he is elected governor, Vandiver asserted, he will "stand in the breach against any and all tyranny that may come to Georgia."

STRICTLY TO LAW

State Sen. Dixon Oxford of Dawson, a member of the Terrell board and a vigorous Vandiver supporter, declared the registrars had "adhered strictly to the law" in performing their duties.

Oxford predicted that "some good lawyers" will volunteer their services to the Terrell board in fighting the federal suit.

The suit alleges that on last April 7 a number of Negro applicants, including four school teachers with college degrees, were denied voter registration certificates on grounds of inability to read correctly and intelligibly.

"The acts and practices of the defendants," the suit charges, "are designed to deny the right to vote to Negro citizens of the United States and of the State of Georgia solely because of their race and color."

In the Harrisburg, Va., case, U.S. Judge John Paul advised the Warren County school board it could not bar Negroes from the county's white high school.

Judge Paul did not order immediate admission of the Negroes but said that since Warren County lacks a Negro high school it must admit Negroes to the white school.

Warren County school board officials countered by showing Judge Paul blueprints for a half-million-dollar Negro high school.

The half-a-hundred segregationist students at Van Buren, Ark., saw their boast that other students would join them in a boycott fall flat.

They apparently succeeded in accomplishing their main objective, however, since none of the 13 Negro students enrolled was seen to enter the school.

The striking students, who were joined by only a few recruits, staged a demonstration across the street from the school with placards proclaiming: "Only Chicken Whites Go to School With Jigs."

At Nashville, Tenn., nine or more second-grade Negro children registered routinely for another year of integrated classes. Fifteen first-grade Negro pupils registered earlier under a court-directed plan of integrating one grade a year.

State To Observe U.S. Fight On Georgia Vote Practices

CENTREVILLE, Ala. (AP) —Two Alabama representatives are being sent to Georgia to observe a U.S. Justice Department attack on voter registration practices there.

In making the announcement Monday, Atty. Gen. John Patterson promised that his administration will offer "strong opposition" to any such federal interference in Alabama.

The Democratic nominee for governor promised firm resistance against any federal attempt to "snoop around, harass or intimidate" any public official in the state.

"We will battle them every step of the way," he declared.

The new civil rights division of the department of justice has filed suit against five Georgia election registrars and deputy registrars accusing them of discriminating against prospective Negro voters. They are officers of Terrell County, Ga.

This is the first suit of the 1957 Civil Rights Act, hotly opposed by Southerners in Congress.

The attorney general said the suit was an obvious attempt of Republicans [illegible] to pick up votes for their party in the 1960 presidential race. He described it as a frontal attack by the federal government against the local and state governments, and as "illegal and unwarranted."

Patterson charged that the federal government is sending "its secret police into the South to harass, intimidate and meddle into the afairs of our state, city and county officials."

Patterson said his main concern during the next four years will be education in Alabama.

The remarks were made at a Kiwanis club meeting.

NAACP Slates Registration Conference

Plans for a series of extensive voter registration campaigns in northeast Illinois communities will be mapped out at a conference of representatives of the NAACP on Sunday, June 29.

The conference will be held at the Emerson St. YMCA, 1014 Emerson st., Evanston.

Gerald D. Bullock, regional director of the NAACP, said the meeting will be attended by representatives of branches, youth councils, college chapters and woman's auxiliaries.

Bullock said the meeting will also consider plans for community action, education and legislation to combat racial discrimination in housing, employment and education in Chicago area communities.

Representatives of NAACP units in the following communities will attend the conference: Waukegan, North Chicago, Lake Forest, Glencoe, Evanston, Chicago, Harvey, Chicago Heights, Kankakee, Hopkins Park, Joliet, Streator, Maywood Aurora, Ottawa, Argo and Robbins.

DRIVE PLANNED TO RE-REGISTER CITY'S VOTERS

BY GEORGE TAGGE

The Better Government association will spearhead a drive for legislation authorizing the re-registration of nearly 2,000,000 voters here, it was learned Monday.

This plan lies in with proposed substitution of punch card system for the present error-studded handwritten mountain of records.

If the 1959 General Assembly approves, all Chicago voters will have to re-register in 1961. County Judge Otto Kerner, in charge of the Chicago election board, said the punch card system will save $125,000 a year for taxpayers.

Bill Beaten in 1957

In 1957 the General Assembly rejected a bill to authorize re-registration after the 1959 mayoral election here. The principal objection was that there would have to be re-registration of a voter every time he moved. About 500,000 voters move each year.

Now there is word that the International Business Machines corporation has almost perfected a method which would permit voters to record changes of address by mail, as they do now. Sidney T. Holzman, chairman of the election board, said he understands the IBM engineers have found a way to "close up holes" on the punch cards.

Mayor Daley favors the punch car system if it can be worked out without upsetting the ways which political organizations use in keeping citizens qualified to vote.

Pollack Backs Move

State Rep. William E. Pollack [R., Chicago], chairman of a special legislative commission on election laws, supported the move for re-registration and punch card system.

Besides economy, the plan would achieve an increase in efficiency and "reduce opportunities for errors and frauds," according to George E. Mahin, executive director of the B. G. A.

Under the present system, in a canvass of registered voters two canvassers in each precinct must copy by hand, on separate strips of paper, the name and address of each voter from the registration binder.

All Copied by Hand

These strips are sorted into street and number categories, then alphabetically according to the voter's name. All of this copied by hand into a verification book, before the house-to-house canvass takes place.

In the punch card system, cards will be sorted by machine at the rate of 1,200 per minute. Poll lists will be printed by machines for each precinct, an operation requiring only four minutes for a precinct.

Other steps in the record keeping would afford comparable opportunities for eliminating tedius and costly methods.

NEW ANTI-VOTE FRAUD LAW IS READY FOR USE

BY ROBERT HOWARD

(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 29—A new anti-vote fraud law making it easier and cheaper for a losing candidate, or a voter to challenge election results will be in effect for the first time at next Tuesday's balloting.

It was called "one of the greatest steps ever taken for clean and honest elections" by Rep. William E. Pollack [R., Chicago] in an interview. Pollack, as chairman of a special election laws commission, sponsored the change at the 1957 legislative session.

How to Get Recheck

Pollack recommended that candidates in closely contested districts become familiar with procedures under which they can take steps to discover whether they were "counted out" by precinct officials.

In voting machine precincts, which include most of those in Chicago and all in the Cook county suburbs, the contest procedure was described by Pollack as follows:

Any voter can pay $2 per precinct and have officials look at the voting machine counters. If the figures on the machine differ from those on the tally sheet turned in by precinct officials, the machine figures are to be substituted and used in the official canvass.

Must Precede Canvass

Quick action is necessary, since the machines must be inspected before the official canvass. The inspection is to be done by the board of election commissioners or the county clerk, whichever has jurisdiction in the precinct. Pollack said it is a simple matter to look at a machine.

Substitution of machine figures is expected to correct frequent cases where a big "overcast" is shown on tallly sheets. The reporting of more votes than there were voters is not uncommon, especially for members of the state House of Representatives under the cumulative voting system unique in Illinois. In many cases errors are made by precinct judges who are inexperienced, careless, or fatigued.

For precincts where paper ballots are used, a different procedure applying only to candidates is provided under the Pollack law.

Paper Ballot Method

Candidates who on the official returns were within 5 per cent of winning are permitted to pay $5 a precinct for the right to have the ballot boxes opened and counted by the election officials.

If fraud or other error is discovered, the candidate then is permitted to go into court or before a legislative house and ask for a recount. The judge now has power to appoint the board of election commissioners to do the actual recounting of the ballots in contested precincts.

In its original recommendation, the Pollack commission proposed that administrative agencies be empowered to handle recounts. A compromise was worked out because some legislators felt that ballot boxes should not be taken from the custody of a board or clerk except after action by a court or legislative house.

Former Method Costly

The former law made it much more difficult and expensive to contest an election. Ballot boxes could be opened only in a courtroom and counted only by specially appointed agents, a slow procedure. Some attempted contests in recent Cook county history were abandoned by Republicans after large sums were spent.

"The new law permits a candidate of average means to file a contest and it provides that the accurate result can be obtained promptly," Pollack said. "It also should be much easier to detect and punish vote thieves."

LOCAL FIGHTS STIR INDIANA VOTE INTEREST

34e

Expect 900,000 to Go to Polls Tomorrow

Indianapolis

Indianapolis, May 4 (AP)—Candidates for Indiana's 11 congressional seats and state convention delegates who will choose nominees for the United States Senate will be named Tuesday in a primary election enlivened chiefly by local fights.

Daily Tribune

Scattered hot contests for nominations for the state legislature or county and township offices were expected to bring a total state-wide vote approaching the 900,000 mark.

Ind. P. Elected Nine

In 1956 Republicans elected 9 of the 11 congressmen and a senator and won all contests for state office.

Voters must declare their party affiliation to vote in an Indiana primary, and receive only their own party's ballot. Many independent voters switch back and forth between elections.

Primary voting usually is heavier in Indiana in the "off" years when no President or governor is to be elected, chiefly because thousands of township officials are chosen.

The 1954 primary brought a turnout of 810,067 compared with 728,634 in 1956.

15 House Contests

Of the 22 nominations for congressional seats—11 in each party—only 15 are contested. All 11 incumbents are seeking renomination and all are expected to win, altho two face strong opposition.

The primary will help settle some of the hottest political fights at the state conventions of the two parties late in June, when nominees for the United States senate seat being vacated by Sen. William E. Jenner [R., Ind.] will be chosen.

Primary voters will elect 2,694 delegates to the Republican state convention June 27 and 2,148 delegates to the Democratic convention June 24.

GOOD GOVERNMENT PRIMER NO. 19

Vote Brake on Amendments

Only Really Bad Ones Pass in 20 Years

Only between one-fourth and one-third of the voters who, January 1956, elected a governor [illegible] and local officials turned out in the recent general election to pass on 30 proposed amendments to the Louisiana constitution.

The relatively small turnouts in such elections have been deplored by persons interested in good government, but it is a fact that no really bad amendments have been voted into the constitution in twenty years, and few good ones have failed to pass.

While voter participation in elections on constitutional amendments generally ranges from only 20 to 40 per cent of the registration, there is a pattern of voter thinking in operation that places the balance of power in the hands of the more intelligent among the electorate.

'ANTI' VOTE DECISIVE

Putting a brake on the indiscriminate adoption of amendments to the constitution, regardless of their merit or importance, is a substantial group of electors who consistently vote against four, five or three proposed amendments individually or en masse, on the theory that amendments to the constitution are unnecessary and any of them could be harmful.

Working and voting for potentially bad amendments are various groups—including political organizations—which had them produced to serve their own particular selfish interests.

Neither of these groups being in the majority, the final decision rests in the hands of independent-minded voters who [illegible] against individual proposals according to the merits or deficiencies they find in them.

BAD ONCE BEATEN

The net result is that a few definitely bad amendments are resoundingly defeated, a few really meritorious ones are decisively adopted; and the remainder stand or fall according to whether, in the opinion of the "balance of power" voters, the good points outweigh the bad, or vice-versa.

Thus the constitution is kept flexible, and at the same time slowly improved and strengthened.

In the recent general election the voters were asked to approve a reorganization of the appellate courts of the state, whereby a substantial part of the "work load" of the supreme court would be transferred to the Courts of Appeal, and the latter expanded to carry the new burden.

Although the plan had the practically unanimous backing of the judges and attorneys of the state, and would expedite the handling of appeals at an estimated additional cost of only $175,000 annually, one-fourth of the electors who went to the polls voted against the proposal.

AGAINST 'ON PRINCIPLE'

This was mainly the segment of voters who, except for a scattering of proposals in which they are personally interested, vote against all proposed amendments to the constitution "on principle."

Two years ago, on the other hand, the new state administration submitted half a dozen amendments which the people generally considered to be bad proposals. Although flush with power from an unprecedented first primary victory, the administration was able to muster for its amendments only from one-third to one-fifth of the total vote cast.

The recently adopted court reorganization is an example of one type of amendment in which extensive provisions are set forth, with the result that it has the effect of a law written into the constitution by the voters themselves, rather than a law promulgated by their representatives in the Legislature.

The amendment was prepared by the judicial council of the supreme court after a year of investigation and study, and of consultation with court of appeal judges, and state and district bar committees.

COURT MEASURE

Although the population of the state increased 70 per cent in the 37 years suceeding adoption of the present constitution its wealth increased even more and thousands of new laws had been enacted during the period the membership of the supreme court remained stationary, with the result that the court had fallen a yeah and a half behind its docket.

Rather than make the court unwieldly through adding to its membership the legal fraternity decided it would be more practical to create a new court of appeal, add to the number of judges in the three existing courts, and transfer a large part of the appeal load to these courts.

Under the plan approved by the voters the supreme court retains jurisdiction of all criminal cases where the penalty is death or imprisonment exceeding six months; cases involving the constitutionality of a tax or other levy; election suits involving two or more court of appeal districts, and cases in which laws of the state, or ordinances of its subdivisions, have been declared by thel ower court to be unconstitutional.

All other matters now appealable to the supreme court are transferred to the courts of appeal; the supreme court, however, under its supervisory powers, retaining the right to require the courts of appeal to certify to it any case which it wishes to take under its own jurisdiction.

Negro Vote Factor In Judgeship Race

Saturday's Democratic primary election for associate justice of the [illegible] State Supreme Court looms as the political puzzle of the decade for some 38,000 Negro voters of Orleans, Jefferson and St. Bernard Parishes.

Rival candidates for the position are two judges of the Civil District Court, Walter B. Hamlin and Rene A. Viosca.

The former has the political backing of the Crescent City Democratic Association, known as "Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison's organization," while the latter is being actively supported by the Regular Democratic Organization, known as "Governor Earl K. Long's faction."

Sat. 11-15-58

Voting of political organizations, naturally, are following the same pattern. The traditionally "pro-Long" Peoples Defense League, the New Orleans Voters' League and the New Orleans Voters' Association are staging a get-out campaign to elect Judge Viosca.

Other groups regarded as "pro-Morrison" are rallying support behind Judge Hamlin's candidacy for the supreme court. Included are the United Voters League; the Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., and other individuals of the Orleans Parish Progressive Voters League.

The independent organization, the Crescent City Independent Voters League, is backing Judge Hamlin.

Meanwhile, Negro voters are watching with justifiable bewilderment the fast-breaking interplay of a number of puzzling factors.

Judge Viosca's Negro supporters have raised the hue and cry that his opponent is the choice of the White Citizens Council and base their allegations on the fact that Judge Hamlin appeared as the principal speaker at a WCC rally in the Municipal Auditorium several weeks ago.

On the other hand, Negro supporters of Judge Hamlin charge that his opponent is backed by Governor Earl K. Long, a self-expressed "one-million per cent segregationist," who would like to have a hand in placing Judge Viosca on the supreme court bench.

They explain Judge Hamlin's appearance before a WCC audience in this manner: "Judge Hamlin, a widely-recognized authority on the 'Bill of Rights' is constantly in demand as a speaker and it was on this subject -- not 'States Rights' -- on which he addressed the WCC."

Several other factors have added to the confused political picture.

First, State Senator John O'Connor, special representative for Gov. Long was extremely active during Monday's visit and platform appearance of Arkansas Governor Orval Faubus. Sen. O'Connor presented Gov. Faubus with a certificate commissioning him an "admiral" on Gov. Long's staff, spoke at the WCC meeting in the Municipal Auditorium that night, and read the telegram in which Gov. Long expressed himself as being "one-million per cent for segregation."

Secondly, Mayor deLesseps S. Morrison greeted Governor and Mrs. Faubus in the City Hall and sipped coffee with them during their visit.

Third, the White Citizens Council on Wednesday morning, urged its members to vote for Judge Hamlin.

Confidential sources say the WCC sent excerpts from the Louisiana Weekly urging its members to read this challenging and insulting editorial which appeared in a New Orleans Negro newspaper."

"They are attacking Judge Hamlin," the WCC letter stated, "because he was the first elected public official in New Orleans to attend a Citizens' Council meeting. Unless we get out and vote for Judge Hamlin on November 15, the Negroes will be taking credit for electing an associate justice to the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana."

The outcome of Saturday's election, therefore, depends upon which of the above facts has made the most lasting impression on the individual voters. An analysis of the predominantly Negro precincts' voting returns will, without doubt, reveal that therein lay the balance of power and the margin of victory.

Ballot Is Key In Citizenship Fight

By Marcus Neustadter, Jr.

The ballot is most important to the Negro's struggle for full citizenship and equal rights an audience attending a voter-registration meeting here Friday night at Hayes Restaurant was told by an official of the NAACP.

Clarence A. Laws, field secretary for the NAACP, was the keynote speaker at the meeting sponsored by the New Orleans Voters Association headed by assistant district attorney Earl J. Amedee. He informed his audience that "in this struggle for full citizenship, the most important thing is the ballot. And until we, as Negroes, get it, our protests and pleas will fall on deaf ears."

Speaking on the general topic "The History of Vote-Registration in the South," Laws pointed out how Negroes have fought and actually died in seeking the use of the ballot. "Chief among those was Alvin Jones, former Urban League official who died from a brutal beating received in St. Landry parish while investigating voter-registration of Negroes in the area.

"The right to vote ... is inherent right of free ... ple in a democracy, so c... ly was this understood that ... Founding Fathers made no ... ference to this right in the Constitution or the amendments to the Constitution," he pointed out.

According to Laws, "It was only when the new citizenship status of the newly emancipated Negro was to be clarified do we find a reference to voting rights in the 15th Amendment." He then stated that "In 88 years the Congress has not set up the machinery to enforce this provision as stated in that important amendment."

Reviewing registration records of Negroes, Laws announced that in 1956 registration among Negroes reached its peak in Louisiana with 161,410 in March 1956, but by "June 1958 there was 125,589 Negroes registered, representing a drop of some 36,000 from the rolls." He accounted for the decrease in two years to the "purge-action of White Citizens Councils in North Central Louisiana, where the largest potential of Negro voters existed, 50 percent were purged and dropped from the rolls."

"In communities where registration among Negroes is high the entire atmosphere is changed." He cited that in Crowley there were two Negroes elected to the City Council, all accountable to proper voter-registration and use of the ballot."

Laws was high in his praise for the work accomplished by NOVA since its organization about a year ago, particularly in the area of registration of Negroes in Orleans parish.

Among others programmed were Atty. Ernest N. Morial, Rev. A. Paul Clay, Rev. Dave A. Dennis, and Misses Dianne and Carolyn Johnson. Earl J. Amedee, president, presided over the program.

Other NOVA officers are Percy Murphy Griffin, executive secretary and treasurer; Miss Bertha Ray Parr, Radio-Secretary; and Miss Florence Davis, recording secretary.

Mitchell To Speak For Vote Crusade

Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau of the NAACP, will be the principal speaker in a mass meeting to be sponsored by the Crusade for Voters according to Jackson W. Acox, director of the Crusade. The mass meeting will be held on "Citizenship Day" Sunday, November 9, 3 p.m. at the Mount Zion Baptist Church, Dumaine and North Galvez Streets, Rev. Morris J. Burrell, pastor.

The Crusade is continuing to expand to the precinct level stated Acox. He said that ward nine held its meeting last Sunday evening at the Church of God, located on Calliope Ave. Wilfred Daliet, Chairman of the Ninth Ward Crusade announced that the following persons had been selected as precinct leaders: Precinct 3, Frank Lastie; Precinct 5, Oliver Bush; Precinct 6, Mrs. Leontine G. Luke; Precinct 6A, Rev. J. D. Brown and Precinct 8, J. Robert Nicholas. Mrs. Mary Bush and Herbert Permillion are vice-chairmen of the Ninth Ward group.

Acox also announced that the 12th ward Crusade Organization elected the following persons as permanent officers in a meeting held last week at Pottia's on Louisiana Avenue. Mrs. Ethel F. Turner, chairman; Rev. Avery C. Alexander, co-chairman; Miss Willie L. Murray, secretary; Wilfred Garard, assistant secretary; Rev. Lawler P. Daniels, treasurer; Everett Granderson, Public Relations Director.

WINN REGISTRAR BLASTS PROBERS

Mrs. Flournoy Ends Absence from Office

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

WINNFIELD, La. — Mrs. Mary C. Flournoy, who claims she doesn't know Sen. W. F. Rainach from Adam's house cat," returned to her Winn parish registrar of voters office Friday night.

She said she feels she was "perfectly within my rights" in pulling off a sudden disappearance after leaving the office reportedly to go to lunch Thursday afternoon.

She was the object of a parishwide search Thursday and Friday after she suddenly closed her office at noon Thursday while a legislative committee was checking voter registration records.

In an interview with a reporter, Mrs. Flournoy termed Sen. Rainach's probe "a political mess to get Rainach's name in front of the public."

Mrs. Flournoy, in a purported explanation of her sudden disappearance from the registrar's office, said, "We have laws governing the registrar's office and I have always been told that when someone comes in to look at the records who is not a registered voter in the parish, he can not look at the files."

"I did not know these people (the committee officials) from Adam's house cat and I think I was perfectly within my rights," she added.

The registrar said she did not seek legal advice before she locked up the office. She told the reporter that reports that she was in Mississippi were not true, but she declined to say where she had been between the time she closed her office at noon Thursday and returned to Winnfield Friday night.

CHARGE OF VOTE FRAUD IS FILED

SLIDELL — Irregularities in a run-off election for St. Tammany parish school board were charged in a suit filed Tuesday in district court at Covington. The election in question was held Saturday in the Sixth Ward.

The suit was filed by Percy Herrin of Talisheek Running against the incumbent, Ezra Reviere, for the Sixth Ward post on the school board, Herrin appeared to be the loser on the basis of unofficial returns which gave Reviere 374 votes to 340 for Herrin.

Herrin's suit alleges that a number of votes were incorrectly recorded and seeks to nullify the election returns.

Two principal contentions of the Herrin faction are that voters from other wards took part in the election and that absentee ballots were mishandled.

Calling attention to the large turnout equaling 87 per cent of the qualified voters in the ward, Herrin stated that more than 90 of the votes were by absentee ballot, indicating that he considered this an unusual proportion of the total vote.

The total number of votes cast was 15% more than were recorded in the primary election last august. In that race Herrin received 204 votes to Reviere's 142. Three other candidates split the remaining 206 votes cast in the primary.

VOTING CHANGES BILL APPROVED

Governor, Congressman Elections Involved

By ROBERT WAGNER
(Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

BATON ROUGE, La.—Gov. Earl K. Long's administration worked furiously Monday to [illegible] its proposed election [illegible] with amendments, then [illegible] rejected it to a House [illegible], and won 73 to 19.

The bill was vigorously opposed by Caddo parish legislators, who charged it has not been carefully prepared, and was designed to accommodate the congressional ambitions of one of two legislators who were friends of the governor.

The proposed law forwarded on to the Senate for action, would move the date for the first congressional primary from the last Tuesday in July to the second to last Saturday of August.

BETWEEN PRIMARIES

It would also extend the period between first and second primaries in gubernatorial elections from the present three weeks to five weeks, as was the law prior to 1956, when the Long administration changed it to three weeks.

Passage of the bill—strongly endorsed by the governor—was the high light of the day in the House, which recessed until 11 a. m. Tuesday. The Senate was scheduled, meanwhile, to reconvene at 7 p. m. Monday, after being in recess since last Thursday.

NEW YEAR'S EVE

One of the amendments was to provide that the gubernatorial second primary election would not fall upon New Year's Eve, a possibility that New Orleans legislators foresaw if the bill were passed without further adjustment.

"I thought we'd gotten all the amendments we needed in committee," said New Orleans Rep. Edward F. LeBreton. "But then we found out that the election, as the bill read, could fall on New Year's Eve in some years.

"We can't have any elections on New Year's eve in New Orleans, with our Sugar Bowl classic and everything." Not mentioned by LeBreton was the possibility the city might find itself unable to sell alcoholic beverages some New Year's eve.

'HOT AND STIRRED UP'

The committee to which the bill was referred for hasty tacking on of the necessary amendments was comprised of Holt, administration leader, Samuel C. Cashio, and Lt. Gov. Lether Frazar.

The three clustered under a nearby doorway, a few yards from the rostrum, to dress up the bill, and make it more presentable. "Get it in there, Holt," ordered Frazar. "We want to get it passed while we've got them hot and stirred up."

When the bill was reintroduced, Rep. Algie D. Brown, Caddo parish, tried to amend it so that it wouldn't take effect until after 1958, but was turned down 62 to 22.

'UP IN THE AIR'

"This bill has had so many amendments," said Rep. Wellborn Jack, also of Caddo parish, "that it reminds me of children at a party trying to pin the tail on the donkey—I don't know what we're going to wind up with."

Jack also commented that the provision to change the congressional primary might accommodate "one or two legislators," but "it's going to leave all the other candidates up in the air."

Both he and Brown protested that Shreveport had scheduled a city election for July 29, and they would be seriously inconvenienced by the legislation. "It seems to me this is a selfish bill," said Jack.

'READY TO PITCH'

"There are around 40 or 50 candidates in our city who will be running for election," he said. "There must be hundreds of others who will be running for offices other than congressman in the primary.

"Up in Shreveport it's kind of like they've been getting ready to pitch a ball game, and they get out there, and get wound up, and then find that the whole thing's been postponed."

Gov. Long had said earlier that the proposed bill would accommodate legislators interested in running for congressman in the Eighth Congressional District, to fill the vacancy left by the late Dr. George S. Long.

Solid Negro Vote To Support Tureaud In Bid For Congress

With the congressional race entering into its last few days, the campaign to get Attorney A. P. Tureaud elected to congress from the First Congressional District is gaining momentum.

An indication as to what extent grass root support is growing can be seen in the fact that Atty. Tureaud is being swamped with speaking engagements, requests by civic, religious and political organizations.

F. Edward Hebert, incumbent and Attorney Tureaud's main opponent, apparently believing Atty. Tureaud does not present too much opposition, has not launched an extensive campaign as yet. However, if the support continues for Attorney Tureaud at the pace it is now going, Hebert could be really surprised.

The type of support now being shown is the kind of support that has been espoused many years by Negro leaders, but until recently hasn't been forthcoming. Fortunately, Negroes have learned that with the intelligent use of the ballot there hinges first class citizenship.

For the first time in local history, a united front by Negroes was recently shown when Atty. Earl J. Amedee was running for Councilman at Large. With Amedee's fine showing a new trend was begun. The solid Negro vote from early indications, is expected to continue for Tureaud in the race for congressman.

To the ever increasing number of individuals and organizations that have endorsed Atty. Tureaud in his bid for congressman, there was recently added another group. The United Voters League has announced their endorsement for Attorney Tureaud.

A statement from UVL said in part:

"With the pledge of Attorney A. P. Tureaud to fight against any movement that may seek to destroy labor unions, and especially his stand in opposition to all right-to-work legislature, all of which is designed to destroy the very foundation of labor, we have no other choice than to endorse the candidacy of A. P. Tureaud for the First Congressional District. We urge all labor leaders and working citizens to work for themselves by working and supporting A. P. Tureaud for Congress."

Rallies have been conducted in various section of the city for Attorney Tureaud's candidacy, as well as radio broadcasts and a testimoniel dinner. (See individual story in this issue).

Attorney Tureaud declared that if he is elected he would be a Congressman for all the people of the district, and not just for a favored few. He came out strong for labor, increased federal aid to education and promised that he would work full time for the people and not be a "playboy" in office.

His full platform follows:

(1) Will support Civil Rights legislation to insure justice and equality for all citizens.

(2) Will support legislation favorable to organized labor.

(3) Will support program to assist small farmers.

(4) Will seek U. S. Public Health funds for use in St. Bernard and Plaquemines Parishes.

(5) Will seek increased federal aid to education, especially for St. Bernard and Plaquemines Parishes.

(6) Will urge nationwide support of the Fair Employment Practices program.

(8) Will seek Federal Housing assistance to improve conditions in Lower Orleans, St. Bernard and Plaquemines Parishes.

(9) Will support strong Foreign Policy with the ultimate aim of preserving world peace and keeping the United States out of war.

Financial contributions and voluntary service are still being accepted at Tureaud headquarters, 1108 North Claiborne Avenue.

86,033 REGISTER TO CAST VOTES

Surge Reported in District, Eight Parishes

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

ALEXANDRIA, La.—The total number of registered Democratic voters in the eighth congressional district soared above the 86,000 mark with a surge of new registrations.

Registrars of voters in the eight parishes reported Thursday that 86,033 persons are eligible to vote in the Sept. 27 congressional runoff between Harold B. McSween and Lloyd Teekell.

The new figure represents an increase of 4953 voters during a three-day period in which registrars threw open their books last week.

Rapides parish led the climb with 1181 new registrants.

Other parishes showed the following number of new voters:

Natchitoches, 683; Sabine, 102; Vernon, 685, LaSalle, 281; Grant, 163; Winn, 354; and Avoyelles, 204.

Rapides registration now stands at 28,151, while Avoyelles has climbed to 16,196 to hold its position as the second largest parish in the ditrict.

Sabine now counts 9117 Democrats, Vernon 8043, Natchitoches 7460, and Winn 5759.

The Grant and LaSalle parish gains brought total registration in those two parishes to 5266 and 5041 respectively.

The low turnout in Avoyelles parish during the three-day period was attributed to the fact that registration there was already at a peak before the first primary.

Church Body Backs Southern Vote Drive

In the conviction that "the campaign to encourage Southern Negroes to register and vote is a crucially important cause", CHRISTIAN ACTION, a national body of lay and professional church leaders concerned with social problems, has given both its endorsement and financial support to the "Crusade for Citizenship", the southwide register and vote drive sponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which the Reverend Martin Luther King of Montgomery, Ala., is president.

A check in the amount of $2,004.50 was recently presented to Dr. King at a special meeting of Christian Action in his honor, held at the Judson Memorial Church, Washington Square, New York City. Dr. John A. Hutchison, Professor of Religion at Columbia University and chairman of the New York Chapter of Christian Action made the presentation. The check represents many individual contributions received in response to an appeal to members and friends of the organization after the executive board had adopted the vote crusade as its project for 1958, following an explanation of its purposes by Miss Ella J. Baker, now associate director of the Leadership Conference.

The appeal letter read in part:

"Each year CHRISTIAN ACTION undertakes the support of some significant project. This year it is agreed that the campaign to encourage Southern Negroes to register and vote is a crucially important cause.

"This campaign gives us a unique opportunity for direct aid to our friends who are struggling to improve conditions in the South. We approach this task realizing as we must that many difficult problems exist in our own communities; but it is felt that here is a truly national issue, with the 'front lines' presently in the South.

"Significantly, Southern leaders of the program are predominantly Christian clergymen, and they have appealed to us for help through our prayers and our financial support. We believe you will agree that here is an issue worthy of our sacrifical support".

Prominent in the national leadership of Christian Action are such outstanding churchmen as Dr. Rheinhold Niebur, Vice President of the Union Theological Seminary, New York City, Dr. John C. Bennett, Dean of Union Theological Seminary

All Out 'Crusade For Voters' Underway

A determined and enthusiastic crowd of freedom loving Negroes gathered at the Coliseum Arena here Sunday for what was the largest single effort promoted in the New Orleans area to increase voter registration.

The meeting was sponsored by the "CRUSADE FOR VOTERS" committee headed by Clarence "Chink" Henry, dynamic progressive-minded president of Local 1419, ILA. He gave as the purpose of the non-partisan, non-political organization, that of "increasing registration through a continuous city-wide effort which will be well-planned and directed by a full time staff."

Henry announced that Jackson V. Acox, well-known civic, religious and political figure, had been retained by the organization to direct the program. He will have with him a staff of clerks and workers needed to execute and implement the program.

A. P. Tureaud, NAACP Legal Counsel, who was a recent candidate for Congressman from the First Congressional District, urged those present to register and see that their friends, relatives, associates and families exercise this responsibility of citizenship.

A fearless champion of civil rights, Tureaud emphatically said, "This is one thing I am certain of YOU CANNOT COUNT UNLESS YOU CAN BE COUNTED." Tureaud informed the gathering that since 1950, segregation laws in this state have increased from 4 to approximately 30. "The only way to stop bad bills in the legislature is to stop sending bad legislators to congress both state and federal," he asserted.

Mrs. Katie Whickham, president of the National Beauty Cultrist League, called upon the women to do their part in "this struggle for our rightful place under the sun." She dramatically added: "This is every woman's struggle, those in the back alleys and spaceous landscaped homes, those on So. Rampart and Sugar Hill, the learned and the un-learned, school teacher and scrubwoman regardless, we are all Negroes."

The position of Mrs. Whickam was supported and re-emphasized by Mrs. Annie Ramie, who is widely known for her civic work in the area below the Industrial Canal.

A note of warning was given by Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., president of the New Orleans Inter-Denominational Ministerial Alliance. The dynamic religious leader cautioned his audience that "there is nothing worse than a hungry so-called political leader." He pointed out that probably now is the time for all so-called political organizations, the many scattered about New Orleans, to come together as one.

After additional speech-making by George Longe, Committee Treasurer; Attorney Ernest N. Morial, Committee Secretary; Rev. A. L. Ricks, minister of Petty Memorial African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and A. J. Chapital, Sr., president, Branch NAACP, the group was subdivided into Wards for organizational matters and planning.

Mr. Henry said that headquarters for the Crusade has been established at 503 South Rampart.

Negro Vote Deciding Factor In Election

The Negro vote in Orleans Parish appears to be the deciding factor in Judge Walter B. Hamlin's close victory over Judge Rene A. Viosca in last Saturday's Democratic primary for associate justice of the Louisiana Supreme Court.

Returns from the four parishes comprising the First Supreme Court District--Jefferson, Orleans, Plaquemines and St. Bernard--gave Judge Hamlin 60,365 votes to 59,106 votes for Judge Viosca for a majority of 1,259.

Judge Hamlin was backed by the Crescent City Independent Voters League, the United Voters League, Local 1419 of the International Longshoremen's Association, the Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., and individuals of the Orleans Parish Progressive Voters League.

Judge Viosca was supported by the Peoples Defense League, the New Orleans Voters League and the New Orleans Voters Association.

Following the election, Clarence "Chink" Henry, president of the CCIVL and ILA Local 1419, sent congratulatory telegrams to Judge Hamlin.

In a victory statement, Judge Hamlin said, "I wish to thank Mayor Chep Morrison and the Crescent City Democratic Association, the Crescent City Independent Voters League, the Orleans Parish Progressive Voters League, the United Voters League, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, International Longshoremen's Assn. Locals 1418 and 1419, Women's Alliance for Political Action of Jefferson Parish, Ninth Ward Civic League and Democratic Association of Jefferson Parish, Second Congressional District Civic Association, Seventh Ward Voters and Civic Association, St. Bernard and Plaquemines parishes administrations, Federation for Better Government in St. Bernard Parish and other organizations in the four parishes."

Mr. Henry pointed out that the election proved that Negro voters can determine the outcome of any political contest and urged better support for the Crusade of Voters which is seeking to increase Negro registration in Orleans Parish.

He stressed the fact that the organizations which he heads, the CCIVL and ILA Local 1419, are politically independent.

"I am not on any political payroll," declared Mr. Henry, "and whenever our organizations support a candidate in any election it is solely because we believe him to be the best man for the position."

A check of the predominantly Negro voting precincts in eleven neighborhoods showed that Judge Hamlin was favored in Saturday's election. He carried eight of the eleven selected areas.

Ballot Official Accused of Interfering with Vote

Failure to Write in Date in 50 Cases Charged

Mrs. Essie Williams, Negro, 1811 Hamilton, testified Wednesday at the vote fraud hearing that when she attempted to register at the 15th Precinct of the 17th Ward in the Feb. 25 second primary, an election commissioner went into the polling booth with her, flipped a voting machine lever, told her she had "voted" her vote and denied her permission to vote.

Before that, her husband, William M. Williams, Negro, 1811 Hamilton, testified that his wife, standing in front of him, a commissioner accompanied her into the booth, pulled the curtain back," the commissioner told her, "you spoiled your ballot" and then the commissioner refused to let him vote. He said a third poll official told him he could vote."

Although Mrs. Williams testified that she could not identify the commissioner, her husband pointed to Walter B. Hesse, 6813 Palmetto, as the man.

Hesse followed Mrs. Williams on the stand and positively denied the allegations of both husband and wife. He testified that he had been "polite" to all voters and that the incidents which they related had not taken place.

"I didn't do it," Hesse told Asst. Dist. Atty. Leonard Dreyfus, who is assisting Executive Asst. Dist. Atty. J. Davil McNeill in conducting the hearing which Wednesday moved through its third day before Judge J. Bernard Cocke of criminal district court.

OMITTED 50 DATES

Nine witnesses testified with regard to occurrences in the 13th and 15th Precincts of the 17th Ward, with commissioners who took the stand describing as "oversights" and unintentional mistakes their failure to enter the voting date in precinct registers opposite the signatures of 50 voters in the 15th Precinct and 60 voters in the 13th Precinct.

The hearing, which recessed at noon Wednesday, will be resumed at 10:30 a. m. Thursday and 33 witnesses have been subpenaed to testify regarding occurrences in the 17th Precinct of the Seventh Ward in the Feb. 25 Democratic second primary, McNeill said.

Subpenaes have been issued for 77 witnesses to testify with regard to matters in the 13th and 27th Precincts of the Ninth Ward on Friday, but service of the supenaes has not been completed, McNeill said.

RECESS FORESEEN

It is expected that the hearing will be recessed at the conclusion of Friday's proceedings because Judge Cocke will sit in St. Bernard parish next week, but a date for its resumption will be announced by Friday, McNeill explained.

Eugene Marsh, 6813 Arthur pl., Airline hwy., who testified that as a commissioner in the 15th Precinct of the 17th Ward he had been in charge of the precinct register in the Feb. 25 second primary, when asked by McNeill whether he could explain why the date of the Feb. 25 primary was not entered in the register opposite the signatures of 50 voters, replied:

"The only explanation that I can give was that it was an unintentional oversight on my part."

Asked if any persons were permitted to vote who should not have been permitted to vote, Marsh replied:

"Not to my knowledge."

When William and Essie Williams, who had not yet taken the stand, rose in the courtroom at the request of Dreyfus, Marsh said that he did not recognize them. The two Williamses had been recorded at the polling place as having voted.

HESSE DOESN'T REMEMBER

Hesse was then called to the stand and Mrs. Williams was again asked to stand up in the courtroom. Hesse testified that he did not remember her and that he could recall no incident connected with her on the day of the second primary.

After Marsh took the stand again briefly, Williams took the stand and testified that he and his wife had gone to the polling place at about 5:15 p. m. on Feb. 25 and had signed the register. He then proceeded to testify regarding the alleged incidents pertaining to his wife and himself and pointed to Hesse as the commissioner involved. His wife followed him on the stand.

Earl S. Guimont, 9603 Stroelitz, whose name appeared on the 15th Precinct poll list for the Feb. 25 primary as having voted, took the stand and denied that he had voted in that primary. He had voted in the Feb. 4 first primary and that was the last time that he had signed the register, he said. The signature for Feb. 25 was not his, he said.

Thelma C. Jones, Negro, 3117 Palmetto, who also had been recorded as having voted in the 15th Precinct in the second primary, testified that she had voted in that primary as well as in the first primary.

IN CHARGE OF LIST

Joseph O. Lagman, 8610 Forshey, who served as a commissioner in the 13th Precinct of the 17th Ward in the Feb. 25 second primary, testified that he was in charge of the poll list and that Mrs. Audrey Draughon and Mrs. G. Fisse had handled the precinct register.

Asked if he could explain why no entry of the second primary date had been made opposite the names of 60 persons who had signed the register in the 13th Precinct, Lagman, who identified himself as a Sewerage and Water Board employe and said that he had served regularly as a commissioner for the past 25 or 30 years, replied:

"At times if they were in a hurry they might forget the date."

Mrs. Draughon, 8702 Forshey, then took the stand and testified that with the exception of the Feb. 4 first primary, the second primary election was the first in which she had served as a commissioner.

"I didn't leave the dates off intentionally," Mrs. Draughon told McNeill.

Mrs. Odile Bourgeois, 3017 Gen. Ogden, another commissioner who served in the 13th Precinct of the 17th Ward, testified that she knew of no instances of any persons voting in the second primary who were not entitled legally to vote.

Solid Vote Against Amendment 2 Urged

A young New Orleans civil rights attorney in a radio interview here in New Orleans advised Negro citizens to vote solidly against proposed amendment No. 2, when 30 constitutional amendments will be voted on November 4, 1958.

Attorney Ernest N. Morial on being interviewed by O. C. W. Taylor, moderator of the Forum of the Air, originating over Station WNOE, stated that "Of primary importance to Negro voters is the proposed amendment number 2 on the ballot."

Morial in discussing the proposed amendment pointed out that "this proposed amendment provides for Educational expense grants, and the legislature could appropriate funds now dedicated to public education to parents of children attending non-secretarian private schools at the elementary or secondary level."

According to Morial the enabling act, Act 258 of 1958, spells out the details for making such grants, "This act provides for the expense grants from educational funds to children for whom no public school is available or whose parents object to their assignment to an integrated school."

He further advised that "although the private non-secretarian schools would have to be on a list approved by the state board of education to get public funds through the students, the state board would have no supervision or control over these schools and would not be responsible for their operation."

Morial stated that "This is a part of a package of acts passed at the last regular session of the State Legislature which are designed to set up private schools, to replace schools that have been integrated or are under threat of integration through a court order."

Act 256 authorizes the governor to close schools racially mixed or subject to court order to integrate, and to close them indefinitely. Act 257 provides for the organization of educational co-operatives with broad powers to issue bonds and lease or purchase school facilities and equipment. Act 258 authorizes expense grants from educational funds to children for whom no public school is available or whose parents object to their assignment to an integrated school.

Heavy Vote Against Amendment 2 Slated

When citizens throughout the area flock to the polls November 4, to vote on eight constitutional amendments, they are expected to follow the advice of virtually all the Negro civic organizations and fair minded leaders and vote against amendment 2.

Act 557 (number 2 on the ballot) would authorize the legislature to provide financial assistance for students attending nonsecretarian private schools, through an amendment to section one of article 12 of the constitution.

Negro voters are asking the question too, as to what should be done in regard to voting for an increase in tax in order that the schools may stay open until their regular time. It is being discussed that if the taxes are voted so the schools can remain open, voters in effect will be voting for more segregation.

Of the five candidates for school board posts, there is no official endorsement of any, but it is certainty that from past performances Emile Wagner and Theodore Shepard, arch-segregationist incumbents would not get the nod from many, if any, organizations.

Apparently one of the other three candidates will be backed in his bid for school board.

The United Voters League, Ellis Hull, president, has formally announced the amendments the group is for and the ones it is against. Here is a breakdown of their listing:

FOR: 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 10, 11 12, 14, 20,

AGAINST: 2, 5, 8, 9, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 23, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29.

The voters league reaffirmed their endorsement of Hale T. Boggs for congressman from the second congressional district.

Perhaps the best explanation of amendment 2 and what it would mean to the Negro was made by civil rights lawyer Ernest Morial during a recent radio broadcast. Morial stated, "of primary importance to the Negro voter is the proposed amendment number two on the ballot."

Morial continued, "This proposed amendment provides for educational expense grants, and the legislature could appropriate funds now dedicated to public education to parents of children now attending non-secretarian private schools at the elementary or secondary level. It is really a segregation amendment."

The New Orleans Council of National Council of Negro women announced endorsement of the two and one half mill tax increase, for the election.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Ethel Turner shortly after the group met Monday in Portia's Grill..

In other action Ernest J. Wright, Director of the Peoples Defense League and chairman of the Political Action Committee in executive session voted to endorse the Candidacy of Judge Rene A. Viosca for the Supreme Court of Louisiana and to support the 2 1/2 mill temporary school tax.

In regard to the school tax, the organization said, "we would not want to see our school term shortened because of a shortage of funds. We, therefore call upon the taxpayers of this city to support the small tax in the coming November 4th election."

Finally, the PAC of the League voted to vigorously work for the defeat of Amendment No. 2.

In view of the many amendments to be voted on in the coming election on Tuesday and the inconsequential nature of many of them, insofar as the citizens of this community are concerned, the League left it to the discretion of its members to vote for or against proposed constitutional amendments.

Richard L. Perry, president announced that a political rally will be held Sunday, November 2 to acquaint the membership and the public on the stand of the League in the coming elections. Attorney Earl Amedee will be one of the main speakers along with Director Ernest J. Wright.

The annual Halloween party of the League will be held in the Reception Hall on Friday night.

FOUR ACQUITTED OF VOTE FRAUD

Mistrial Declared in Case of Fifth Accused

Four election commissioners were acquitted early Saturday the vote fraud case. A mistrial was declared in the case a fifth commissioner.

Acquitted were Sam Lipsick, 732 Frenchmen; Paul L. Puig, 719 Kerlerec, and Mr. and Mrs. Andre Burthe, 706 Kerlerec.

A mistrial was declared in the case of Louis Jacob, 1422 Chartres, by criminal district court Judge Shirley G. Wimberly.

This action was taken when the jury announced it was unable to agree on a verdict.

The 12-man jury deliberated three hours before returning its not guilty verdicts.

TO TRY JACOB LATER

District attorney Richard A. Dowling said Saturday he probably would try Jacob at a later date.

The commissioners were charged with irregularities in voting in Precinct One of Ward Seven in the second Democratic primary on Feb. 25. This is the primary in which Malcolm V. O'Hara, former assistant district attorney, and Dowling waged a close race.

Dowling was declared the winner by the state supreme court after he charged fraud was committed at the polls.

Four of the five commissioners had qualified to serve in the primary Saturday to nominate an associate justice to the state supreme court, but none showed up to work at the polling places.

FALSE SIGNING CHARGED

The case went to the jury Friday at 11:22 p. m. after the defendants had been accused of signing a false poll list and certifying the list to be correct.

Gilbert Fortier, a handwriting expert, was the final state witness to be called. He identified the signatures of the commissioners on various election documents.

Fortier said names of 26 of 29 persons who contended they did not vote in the election were written on the poll list by one of the defendants. He said he could not identify positively the other three.

The defense rested without putting anyone on the stand after the state announced that it had ended its case.

Citizens Form 'Tureaud To Congress' Committee

A committee of Negro citizens, from many political organizations within the city, was formed Friday night at a meeting held in the Knights of Claver Building, 1821 Orleans Avenue, for the purpose of assisting A. P. Tureaud in his attempt to be elected to the U. S. Congress on August 23, from the First Congressional District of Louisiana which extends from Julia Street in New Orleans all the way down to the mouth of the Mississippi River.

Selected as co-chairmen of the "Tureaud for Congress" committee were Benjamin J. Johnson, prominent attorney and insurance executive, and O. C. W. Taylor, retired school principal and for a number of years a journalist. Taylor was also assigned the publicity task.

Others selected by the committee included Rev. P. W. Raphael, vice-chairman; Attorney Ernest Morial, secretary; Dr. George B. Talbert, treasurer; Jackson V. Acoc, campaign manager; Attorney Robert Collins, assistant campaign manager; Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr. chariman of the finance committee; Dr. Ernest Cherrie, chairman of the speaker's bureau; Mrs. Ophelia J. Edwards, chairman of the ladies division; Attorney James Smith, chairman of the auditing committee; Attorney Lawrence Wheeler and Attorney A. M. Trudeau, Jr., co-chairmen of the legal redress committee.

Tureaud is a native of New Orleans and a product of the New Orleans public schools. He received his legal education in Howard University of Washington, D. C. He is secretary of the Pyramid Life Insurance Company of New Orleans and is legal counsel for the Knights of Peter Claver, a national Catholic organization. He is legal counsel for the NAACP in Louisiana and has won many civil rights victories in that field.

15 TO FACE VOTE FRAUD CHARGES

Public Hearing Is Completed, Says Dowling

The public vote fraud hearing has been completed, District Attorney Richard K. Dowling said Friday.

He said approximately 15 persons, mostly commissioners will probably be charged in criminal district court next week in connection with fraud.

The hearings, scheduled to resume Monday, is over and will only be conducted at a later date if more information comes into possession of the district attorney's office, Dowling said.

EVALUATING DATA

The district attorney said he and members of his staff are presently studying and evaluating the information gained from theh hearings which lasted from June 2 to June 6.

"I will only prosecute those persons who intentionally violated the law," Dowling said, adding that persons who made honest mistakes without any criminal intent would be given the benefit of the doubt and not be prosecuted.

Dowling said he thinks the one-week hearing before Judge J. Bernard Cocke was good because it gave the public an insight "into the way elections have been handled in recent years."

BEGAN AFTER PRIMARY

The investigation into allegations of vote fraud began after Malcolm V. O'Hara beat Dowling by a mere handful of votes in the Feb. 25 second Democratic primary election.

Dowling contested the election and charged that fraud had been committed. The state supreme court upheld Dowling and he was named the Democratic nominee as district attorney.

HEARING IN VOTE PROBE RECESSED

Matter Continued Until June 16 by Court

The vote fraud hearing was recessed until 10:30 a. m. June 16 Friday after evidence had been introduced pertaining to the voting of seven registered Republicans in the 27th Precinct of the Ninth Ward during the [illegible] Democratic second primary.

Six of the seven voters, all Negroes, testified that they had voted in the second primary and the seventh denied that he had voted, although a photostatic copy of his registration certificate bore the date of the second primary and the name of the commissioner who had certified a signature purporting to be his.

The six who testified that they had voted in the second primary were Mrs. Hytel Matthews, 2632 Piety; Edwin Rousseau, 2620 Piety; Mrs. Kittoria Frank, 2640 Piety; Herbert C. Doyle, 2311 Montegut; Mrs. Ellen Ford, 2629½ Louisa; and Thelma Celestine, 2534 Congress.

DENIES RUNOFF VOTE

Leon Bolds, 2501 Piety, denied that he had voted in the second primary, but Bolds and the other six all testified that they had voted in the Feb. 4 first primary in which the mayor and most other municipal and parochial officers were nominated. The Feb. 25 second primary was for runoffs in the district attorney and criminal district judgeship races.

George S. Haas, 2504 Gallier, who served as a commissioner in the 27th Precinct of the Ninth Ward in both primaries and who testified that he had been in charge of the precinct register most of the time was confronted by Executive Assistant District Attorney J. David McNeill with photostatic copies of the registration certificates of all seven registered Republicans and testified that he had signed signatures of Mrs. Matthews, Rousseau, Mrs. Frank, Doyle and Mrs. Ford and the purported signature of Bolds in the second primary.

Mrs. Miriam A. Maynard, 2234 Gallier, another commissioner who said that she handled the register when Haas "stepped out to eat" identified her own signature next to the second primary signature of Thelma Celestine.

'HONEST MISTAKE'

"It was an honest mistake," testified Haas, an employe of the city's traffic engineering division, when confronted with the photostat of Mrs. Frank's registration certificate bearing Mrs Frank's signature and his own.

"I signed it," he said. "It's Republican. It must have been an honest mistake."

Shown the photostat of Mrs. Matthews' certificate bearing his signature, Haas pleaded:

"It's an honest mistake. I don't know why I left them go that way. I know they're not supposed to vote in a Democratic primary."

Haas testified that he did not know any of the Republican voters involved and that they may have been permitted to vote by mistake during a rush "when we had a big line of voters."

Mrs. Matthews, when asked, admitted that when she had voted in the two primaries she had known that they were Democratic primaries, but added that "I thought that they would let you vote."

SAYS HE CHANGED

Despite the notation of Republican party affiliation on the photostat of his certificate, Rousseau insisted when called to the stand that although he had been registered as a Republican, he had visited the registration office at City Hall two or three months before the first primary and had his party affiliation changed to Democratic.

Mrs. Frank, Mrs. Matthew's sister, testified that she had not voted in a Democratic primary prior to the Feb. 4 first primary.

"What prompted you to vote as a Republican in a Democratic primary?" inquired Judge Bernard Cocke of criminal district court who presided over the hearing.

Mrs. Frank replied that she had wanted to vote in the "mayor's election," adding that "I liked Mayor (deLesseps S.) Morrison." Judge Cocke told her that he was not interested in "personalities."

DISAVOWS SIGNATURE

Bolds testified that the signature on his certificate for the second primary was not his since he had not voted because "I had to go out of town," but that he had voted in the first primary.

"Didn't you know it was illegal for you to vote in a Democratic primary?" McNeill inquired of Bolds.

"No sir, I did not," he replied.

Doyle, who was next on the stand, was asked: "Did anybody tell you it was illegal to vote as a Republican in a Democratic primary?"

"No sir," Doyle told McNeill. "I didn't know about it until I heard you talking about it."

'VOTED LIKE ALWAYS'

Mrs. Ford testified that she had been voting since 1951. When asked why she had voted in a Democratic primary, replied: "I just voted like I always had been voting. I just go on and vote."

"Are you sure that nobody ordered you up back there?" inquired Judge Cocke.

"No sir."

Thelma Celestine, the next witness, testified: "I just voted. I didn't know it was unlawful."

Mrs. Maynard, the next witness, was shown a photostat of Thelma Celestine's certificate and was asked:

'DIDN'T NOTICE'

"Who was the commissioner who certified her?"

"I was," she replied. "I didn't notice that she was registered as a Republican. I knew that they were not supposed to vote."

Haas was recalled to the stand and shown the photostat of Bolds' registration certificate and asked to look at the Feb. 25 entry.

"His signature is there the same as on 2-4-58," Haas said. "If you look at that handwriting it certainly looks the same to me."

"I don't do no crooked work around the polls," Haas volunteered, adding that he had never been presented with the problem of Republicans having voted in a Democratic primary while he had been serving as a commissioner at the polls, although he had been serving as a commissioner in elections since he was 21 years old. City records show that he is 53 now. Republicans should know that they can't vote in Democratic primaries, he added.

"And so should you," observed Judge Cocke.

"I'm not in politics," said Haas, "I just serve as a commissioner."

McNeill explained that the hearing is being recessed until June 16 because Judge Cocke will be sitting in St. Bernard parish next week.

"We plan to evaluate and consolidate the evidence we have and have another session on June 16," McNeill said.

Fourteen witnesses from the 13th Precinct of the Ninth Ward who were subpoenaed to appear Friday, but were excused at the beginning of the hearing, were excused because they had been interviewed before they appeared in court "and we were satisfied with the answers they gave," McNeill reported.

Lawyer Quits Louisiana Vote Registrar Case

Monroe, La.—James Sharp, Jr. Monroe attorney, filed a motion with the U. S. District Court here last Tuesday withdrawing as counsel for Oscar I. Reddix, in a case that challenges the whole process by which 7,000 or more Negroes were stricken from the rolls of voters of Ouachita Parish, La.

The motion states that Attorney Sharp desires to withdraw from the case because the plaintiff (Dr. Reddix) "is presently absent from the state of Louisiana making preparations to withdraw himself as a resident of this state permanently." The petition goes on to tell that the counsel feels "that this move o nthe part of plaintiff is untimely and inconsistent with his moral obligation to his attorney," and that counsel feels that the move is also inconsistent with plaintiff's moral obligation and duty to the class he represents.

Vote Buying 'Erroneous,' Editor of Weekly Declares

Action Brings Wrath of Louisiana Legislature

BATON ROUGE La. (AP) — Editors of a Baton Rouge weekly newspaper for Negroes said Friday a story last week that aroused the wrath of the Louisiana Legislature was "erroneous."

The News Leader editors reported last week that the "First Ward Voters League Inc." would pay $15 to ever Negro registering before the books closed for the congressional primaries.

The Legislature reacted with a bill by Rep. William Percy of East Feliciana extending a state law banning buying of votes to include vote registration.

The proposal, drafted by the joint legislative committee on segregation, will be up for committee action next week.

"We arn't sponsoring it," said managing editor Leslie Barnum. "We merely carried the announcement. Of course we're sympathetic with their desire for more voters.

"We lend our support to it. When we found our information was erroneous, we apprised our readers of it."

On its latest front page, the paper said:

"Unregistered voters were stirred up to increased action last week when the First Ward Voters League Inc., announced in The News Leader it would give $15 to every new voter as of June 18, but the announcement was erroneous.

"What The News Leader learned later was that every new voter would be eligible to participate in a drawing for $15 sponsored by the organization."

The original front page announcement said the voters league appealed to Negroes to help break its bank with the $15 offer.

Segregation Bills Whiz To Passage

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Three segregation bills whizzed to easy Senate final passage, but a storm was brewing today for a bill designed to provide means to remove registrars of voters for lax enforcement of registration requirements.

Orleans registrar Louis Kroop Jr., president of the State Registrars of Voters Assn., said the state's registrars will be out in force tomorrow when the bill is heard before Senate Judiciary A Committee.

The measure drafted by the Joint Legislative Committee on segregation, brands as malfeasance the intentional lack of strict enforcement of voter registration laws by the parish registrar of voters.

The Senate last night sent to the governor bills to:

1. Repeal Louisiana's bus segregation laws. Passer 34-0.

2. Repeal Louisiana's street car segregation laws. Passed 34-0.

3. Ban operations in Louisiana of any organization affiliated with a "foreign" group with a record of Communist or subversive activity.

The bus and street car segregation bills are designed to bypass a federal court order that ended bus segregation in New Orleans.

By repealing the laws named in the federal injunction, the segregation committee hopes to clear the way for operation of buses under a private seating policy.

A third bus segregation bill, passed by the House, permits the first person on a double seat to select who shall sit beside them.

At present, registrars of voters can be removed only by the State Board of Registration, made up of the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker. The board can remove any registrar at any time without explaining why.

The segregation bill, in effect, provides for a court removal of a registrar, adding a new method.

The proposal received exactly the required 51 votes when it passed the House. It was the first measure drafted by the Joint Legislative Committee on Segregation to have a close call.

Two other segregation committee bills dealing with registrars are not opposed.

One provides if a registrar is called away from his duties by a federal action, his salary will continue. The second directs the attorney general to provide legal aid to registrars facing federal court action.

La. Supreme Court

On Saturday, November 15th the registered voters of the community return to the polls to vote for a La. State Supreme Court Justice, the vacancy having been created by Judge Harold Moise's untimely end. There are two candidates running for the coveted jurists' spot; namely, Rene Viosca and Walter Hamlin, both Civil Court Judges. The choice has been made relatively simple by a turn of recent events.

One of the candidates, Judge Hamlin, several weeks ago used extremely bad judgement in appearing as a featured speaker for a White Citizens Council Rally, and the voting public is unable to forget this poor judgement on the part of the Candidate Hamlin.

It is quite vividly remembered in the wake of the recent bombings and violence in the South, the ringing indictment of white citizen councils and white supremacy politicians made by Atlanta Mayor William Hartsfield when he said: "Whether they like it or not, every rabble rousing politician is the godfather of the crossburners and the dynamiters who are giving the South a bad name."

The feeling is that if a man who aspires to such a high and responsible office has no better judgement than to appear and consort with extremist and controversial white citizen council figures that he would not make a good La. Supreme Court Justice, further that his judgement might be just as bad if elected to that high and august body.

Further, Judge Hamlin is being loudly supported by Leander Perez, white supremacy extremist, and anybody supported by Perez amounts to the 'kiss of death' insofar as Negro voters are concerned.

Even if there had been some Negroes who wanted to support Judge Hamlin. it is extremely unlikely that they can in good conscience do so now.

The election presents the Negro voter with the opportunity to vote against the white citizen council as well as against Leander Perez.

Negro voters have no other choice but to vote against the candidacy of Judge Hamlin because it is the only way to teach those who consort with forces who are dedicated to denying the Negro full citizenship in this widely heralded democracy of ours, a practical lesson.

We are supporting the candidacy of Rene Viosca for the La. Supreme Court bench because we believe he is the best of the two candidates and has not indulged in the extra curricular activity of speaking before such controversial extremist groups as the white citizen council.

(The F.B.I., at Governor Chandler's request, investigated the primary election in Logan County, but never announced its findings.)

Refers to 26 Ballots

The words "obvious forgeries" were used by Judge Osborne in referring to 26 ballots in Logan's Russellville No. 6 Precinct, after the ballots were singled out by Gregory's attorneys.

Gregory's counsel claimed that the signature of W. M. Reed, an election officer, on the 26 ballots did not compare with the W. M. Reed signature on the ballot-stub book. The Gregory attorneys charged that "three different sets of W. M. Reed signatures appeared on the 26 ballots."

Pointing to the 26 ballots, Judge Osborne said in open court, "These are obvious forgeries."

Object to Study of Names

Stubblefield's attorneys objected to the court's examination of names on the back of ballots, contending that ballot signatures cannot legally be considered in a vote recount.

Gregory's attorneys also questioned the signature of an election officer in another Logan precinct, Auburn No. 25. They charged that the signature of E. B. Perkins, which appeared on the backs of ballots, did not correspond to the Perkins signature on the back of the ballot-book cover.

Stubblefield's attorneys countered with a claim that the Court of Appeals had held that signatures could not be compared in vote recounts.

The appellate court, the Stubblefield counsel argued, has said that in a vote recount it is necessary only to establish that the name of an election officer appears on the back of each ballot.

In another Auburn precinct, No. 26, Gregory's counsel objected to the counting of 147 Stubblefield ballots, because B. G. Hall, who was not an election officer, "had access to all of the ballots."

On Ballot as Officer

Hall's signature also appeared on the back of one No. 26 ballot as an election officer, "when in fact he was an unauthorized person."

Other irregularities that Gregory's attorneys claim were found in the Logan County vote recount were:

1. In Russellville No. 5 Precinct, Mrs. James C. Lyne, an election officer, also served as a precinct officer and signed all the ballots used in that precinct.

2. Four of nine unused ballots in Russellville No. 5 Precinct were not marked unused.

3. Five Russellville No. 5 ballots bore Mrs. James C. Lyne's signature, but had not been used.

4. Only three of the four Russellville No. 2 Precinct election officers signed the election book in that precinct.

Ballot Probe in Kentucky County Begun

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP—Gov. A.B. Chandler said Thursday the FBI is investigating primary election results in Logan County where voters helped unseat U.S. Rep. Noble Gregory.

Chandler's announcement, made at a press conference, was confirmed by the FBI in Louisville.

Gregory, who has represented the 1st District 22 years, lost the Democratic nomination to Frank Stubblefield by 432 votes in Tuesday's election. Stubblefield, a Murray druggist, outpolled Gregory 2,279 to 443 in Logan County but carried only two of the district's other 16 counties.

Chandler also announced that Gregory will seek a recount.

"Everyone in Kentucky knows they have been stealing Logan County for years," he said. He did not identify "they."

The governor also said he believed the FBI hs impounded the Logan County ballots. But special agent C.E. Weeks declined to comment.

"I can say, however," Weeks continued, "that we are investigating the Logan County results to see if there was any violation."

In Russellville, Logan County Clerk Bailey Gunn said "I haven't heard a thing in the world about the probe."

"If anyone has confiscated the ballots, I don't know anything about it."

Gregory, who ran with the announced support of Gov. Chandler, could not be reached for comment at his Mayfield home.

Stubblefield was unavailable for comment.

Gregory's defeat marked the first time in history a 1st District congressman failed to win renomination.

Judge To Rule Monday On Ending Gregory Suit

His Counsel Drops Charges on Calloway, Stakes Vote-Fraud Case on Logan County

By HARRY BOLSER
The Courier-Journal West Kentucky Bureau

Murray, Ky., July 2.—A ruling on a motion to dismiss Representative Noble J. Gregory's primary-election contest suit will be given Monday in Calloway Circuit Court, Special Judge Alex P. Humprey, Louisville, said Wednesday.

Attorneys for Gregory joined counsel for Frank A. Stubblefield, Murray, defendant in the election contest, in requesting the court to rule on the motion.

At the same time Gregory's counsel moved that allegations of election irregularities in Calloway County made in the suit be dismissed. That means that the Gregory suit has been reduced to charges of fraud in Logan County.

Attorney Explains

In agreeing with Stubblefield's attorneys on an early ruling on the dismissal motion, Gregory's attorneys explained that they wanted to avoid introducing proof in the case before the court decided whether there is sufficient grounds on which to proceed, thus saving time and expense.

At the invitation of the court, L. R. Reed, one of Gregory's attorneys, made a lengthy statement explaining the Gregory case and basis for charges.

Wells Overbey, member of the Stubblefield counsel, said his side didn't care to make a statement, because "if we argued 3 hours we couldn't add anything to our brief."

Says It States No Cause

The Stubblefield brief set forth reasons why the contest suit should be dismissed. The chief contention was that Gregory's complaint did not state a cause for action.

After hearing both sides, Judge Humphrey said, "Gentlemen. I think I can give you something to shoot at by Monday. I think I owe everyone something definite."

The judge then set the session for 10 a.m. Monday and said he hoped to be able to read his

He said he planned to remain here, study the contest petition and dismissal motion, and prepare his decision.

Margin Cut to 341

Stubblefield, a Murray druggist store operator, defeated Gregory, of Mayfield by 432 votes for the Democratic First Congressional District nomination.

Gregory filed suit for a recount of votes in Calloway, Logan, and Marshall counties and contested the election claiming fraud and irregularities. In a counter contest, Stubblefield accused Gregory of conspiring with W. F. Foster, Mayfield clothing manufacturer, to obtain illegal votes.

In the three-county ballot recount, Gregory picked up 91 votes reducing Stubblefield's margin to 341.

Calls 20% Illegal

Calloway Circuit Judge Earl Osborne, Benton, presided at the recount, but disqualified himself from hearing the contest because of a court session at Benton. The Court of Appeals then appointed Jefferson Circuit Judge Humphrey to hear the contest and counter contest.

In explaining the Gregory case to Judge Humphrey, Reed stated that the "essence of the whole lawsuit is that more than 20 per cent of the votes cast in Logan County (in the May 27 primary) were illegal. Someone cast votes for someone else."

Reed sought to impress on the special judge that "we have never charged that Frank Stubblefield had anything to do with these irregularities."

Reed told the court:

"This has been no mutual admiration party, but we haven't been personal in this matter.

"However, we're convinced now after examining the election signature books in Logan County that there were many, many irregularities in the primary election."

Question 47 Signatures

After the election, Reed charged, representatives of Gregory were denied access to the Logan County election comparative-signature books.

Tuesday they were brought here by order of Judge Humphrey and examined by Gregory's attorneys.

Reed and Joe Grace, another Gregory attorney, said signature and registration books of one precinct and half of those in a second precinct were examined.

In the first precinct examined, Gregory attorney claimed that 11 more votes were cast than the total number of voters (127) listed on the registration book. The attorneys said they also questioned the authenticity of 47 signatures.

In the second precinct checked the Gregory counsel questioned the signatures of 59 of the 187 voters who cast ballots.

The paragraph in Gregory's petition which Reed referred to as the "essence" of the suit reads:

"In every Logan County precinct, the names of more than 20 per cent of persons whose names appear on the signature books of each precinct did not cast a ballot in those precincts, but that a ballot was cast for each of those persons by fraud. Had these votes not been illegally cast Noble J. Gregory would have been the successful candidate."

Reed explained that in an election contest the vote count in a precinct can be thrown out if more than 20 per cent of the votes, are found to be invalid.

'Just Gone Fishing'

Stubblefield's attorneys have contended that there is nothing in the Gregory's suit tending to prove that illegal votes were cast in the Logan County primary.

"They have just gone fishing for something," William Scent, one of Stubblefield's attorneys told Judge Humphrey in referring to the "essence" of the Gregory suit.

Conspiracy Charged in Ky. Voting

MURRAY, Ky. —(AP)— Frank A. Stubblefield, Murray druggist who unseated U.S. Rep. Noble Gregory in the May 27 primary election, filed a petition Saturday charging Gregory, Gov. A. B. Chandler and others with conspiracy.

The most serious charge made by Stubblefield was that a Gregory supporter offered to pay $5,000 for 200 votes in Todd County.

The petition said the names of other "high state officials," it charged were also involved would be brought out in testimony.

Stubblefield also asked for a recount of ballots in seven first district counties.

The petition was filed in Calloway Circuit Court a few hours after a recount of primary election votes in Logan, Calloway and Marshall counties asked by Gregory was completed.

Gregory picked up a total of 91 votes on the recount. He had lost the First District Democratic nomination to Stubblefield by 432 votes.

Gregory was supported by Chandler in his race for nomination to a 12th term as First District congressman.

Judge Charges Voting Fraud In Kentucky

MURRAY, Ky. (AP) — Circuit Judge Earl Osborne said Friday "some obvious forgeries" were found on primary election ballots from several Logan County precincts.

The discovery [illegible] ing a recount [illegible] May 27 primary [illegible] seated [illegible] by [illegible] of election officers on the back of ballots "were not the signatures of the person who signed the front cover or the person who signed the ballot books."

The recount was requested by Gregory in Marshall, Logan and Calloway counties, the only three in the 17-county First Congressional District carried by Frank Stubblefield, a Murray druggist, who defeated Gregory.

With the tally complete for Marshall, Logan and five Calloway precincts, Gregory has picked up a total of 118 votes, cutting Stubblefield's margin from 432 to 314.

Absentee-Voting Plan Held Threat to Many

Martin Says Limiting Right to Servicemen And Families Would Disfranchise Students

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 6 (AP)—A House committee was urged Thursday to consider that proposals to change Kentucky's election laws pose a threat to the voting privileges of thousands of Kentuckians.

Dr. Robert R. Martin, State superintendent of public instruction, told a public hearing of the Committee on Suffrage, Elections, and Constitutional Amendments that he was particularly concerned about limitations proposed for absentee voting.

A bill under consideration by the committee would limit absentee voting to servicemen and their wives. Its adoption was recommended by the Legislative Research Commission in the wake of charges that many counties experienced abuses in the absentee-voting law.

Used by 'Most'

"I oppose the repeal of the absentee-voter law," Martin said, "primarily because it would, in effect, disfranchise the 32,000 young Kentucky citizens who are now attending our colleges and universities and many more who are attending institutions of higher learning outside the state.

"Most of them now make use of the absent-voter machinery provided by law in their exercise of the suffrage. . . .

Queenan Gives Views

"We need, I believe, more participation of these young people in our electoral process — not less. But we will have less, much less, if the Legislature looks with favor upon proposals to limit the absentee ballot to servicemen."

James F. Queenan, Jefferson County Court clerk, said he thought the absentee-vote law could be fixed to avoid abuses without disfranchising large numbers of voters.

He said Jefferson County has a system of appointing a nonpartisan committee to handle absentee ballots. He said 4,800 absentee ballots were handled in 1956 without any trouble or complaints.

"You members of this committee might very well lose your votes on occasion if this proposal is adopted," he said.

Bill Reported To Revise Voters' Law

Courier-Journal

Would Replace Regulations For Absentees

Louisville Ky.

The Courier-Journal Frankfort Bureau

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 26—A new bill to overhaul Kentucky's absent-voting machinery was reported favorably Wednesday by the House Committee on Suffrage and Elections.

It was given its first reading and could be up for passage Friday.

Committee members said the new bill would, in effect, replace all of the absent-voter bills now pending before the group.

The committee bill leaves intact the State's present law permitting persons to vote by absentee ballot if they are out of their precinct on election day.

The Legislative Research Commission last winter recommended repeal of most of the State's absent-voting law and limiting such voting to members of the armed services and their spouses.

Constitutionality of that plan has been widely challenged among members of the Legislature, however.

The new bill would require that applications for absentee ballots and the ballots themselves be sent through the United States mail.

It requires that applications for an absentee ballot be received by the County clerk at least 15 days before the election.

It provides that at 2 p.m. on the 14th day preceding the election, the County Board of Election Commissioners, the County clerk, candidates or their representatives, and "representatives of news media" shall meet and examine all applications.

The clerk would be required to read the name of each applicant aloud, and anyone present would be authorized to challenge the applicant or his application.

The Board of Election Commissioners would then determine whether the application should be accepted or rejected. If it is rejected, the application would be so marked and the voter notified of the action.

This examination would not apply to applications made by members of the armed forces or their dependents stationed abroad.

The bill requires that applications for an absentee ballot be notarized by a civil officer who is authorized to administer oaths. But it provides that neither the authorizing officer "or his deputy" can be a candidate in the election.

That section would prevent County clerks or their deputies from notarizing the applications of persons seeking an absent ballot, if the clerk is a candidate in the election for which the ballot is desired.

The bill also changes the absentee-ballot-application form to reduce the age of the applicant to a minimum of 18 years to conform to the 1954 constitutional amendment permitting 18-year-olds to vote.

A section of the bill would permit members of the armed forces to register in absentia if they are stationed away from their legal residence in Kentucky.

Chief sponsor of the committee substitute bill is Representative Felix Anderson, Louisville Democrat, who is chairman of the Suffrage and Elections Committee.

Other sponsoring members:

Representatives Roger Qualls, Olive Hill Republican, vice chairman; R. Douglas Ford, Owensboro Democrat; Albert Dempsey, Inez Republican; Jack Raybourn, Jr., Springfield Democrat; John B. Breckinridge, Lexington Democrat; Carl F. Reynolds, Booneville Republican; W. J. Smith, Belfry Democrat; Leonard Hislope, Somerset Republican; James W. Lyon, Greenup Democrat; Richard Hopkins, Calhoun Democrat; Charles H. Hart, Sharpsburg Democrat, and Banjo Bill Cornett, Hindman Democrat.

The clamor for revision of the present absent-voting laws has been widespread in Kentucky for several years.

It has been especially in evidence since several lawsuits were filed last year, challenging the validity of hundreds of ballots cast by absent voters.

First Voters Are 20 Pct. Of Registrants

Citizens Are Eligible If 18 by November 4

First voters account for at least 20 per cent of persons registering to vote in the May 27 primary election here, Delbert R. Black, assistant City registrar, noted yesterday.

Black said he had been told that registration to vote had been encouraged in some of the schools.

If a person will be 18 by the November 4 general election he will be eligible to vote in either the Democratic or Republican primary if he registers before the Saturday deadline.

This is an off-year election, with only two contests to be decided here in November, and registration has not been heavy. The offices to be filled here are those of Third District congressman and Fourth District judge of the Court of Appeals.

Office Hours Given

Both the City and the County registration offices are in the Jefferson County Armory. The City office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. except Saturday when it will close at 1 p.m. The County office is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. except Saturday when it closes at noon.

A person has to register as a Democrat to vote in the Democratic primary or as a Republican to vote in the Republican primary. Organization candidates here so far have no primary opposition and no primary will be necessary unless opposition develops.

For registration information persons may call the City office, JUniper 4-8277 or JUniper 4-8278, or the County office, JUniper 4-6679.

Kentucky Vote Suit Dismissed

Courier-Journal
Louisville Ky

MURRAY, Ky., July 8 (AP).—Special Judge Alex Humphrey yesterday dismissed Representative Noble Gregory's suit charging fraud in the primary election which cost him the Democratic renomination.

Mr. Gregory, who has represented the 1st district in Congress for 22 years, filed suit after his defeat by Frank Stubblefield, a Murray druggist.

The judge ruled Mr. Gregory did not have enough evidence to support his charge of fraud in Logan and Calloway, two of the 17 counties making up the 1st district.

Asked if he planned to appeal, Mr. Gregory said, "I will go as far as I can go." Mr. Gregory, now in Washington, said, "I will have no further comment until I confer with my attorneys."

Mr. Stubblefield said the decision made him a "happy man. All I want to do now is make everyone a good Congressman."

He will run in November against James G. Bandy, who was unopposed for the Republican nomination in the May 27 primary.

Parolees, by Rights, Can Vote, Hold Office

By KYLE VANCE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Frankfort, Ky., May 15.—Former prisoners whose civil rights are restored by executive order gain nothing except the right to vote and to hold office, according to an assistant attorney general's opinion.

Probation and Parole Director Elmore Ryle, commenting on the opinion, said prisoners and parolees would be "shocked" to learn they have no greater reward to work for on their good behavior.

"Restoration of civil rights has from time immemorial been considered a technical pardon," he said. "Parolees were encouraged to do their very best on parole in the hope that eventully their civil rights would be restored, thus relieving them of the sentence that had been imposed.

"That incentive is now gone."

Some Less Concerned

Walter Ferguson, chairman of the Parole Board, and Harold E. Black, director of corrections, were less concerned.

Ferguson said the opinion would make little difference in administration of the parole program.

He acknowledged, however, that the board will consider reimposition of remainder of sentences on those who violate parole after they have regained their civil rights.

Black said an incentive will remain for those who really desire to have their rights restored.

It was Black who asked the attorney general's opinion. He said he was concerned about one particular case, but wanted to know the true legal status, for future guidance, of those who stray after regaining their civil rights.

His query said:

"We desire to know if restoration of civil rights granted to a parolee on a life sentence will prevent his being held or declared a parole violator in the future on the same life sentence."

Assistant Attorney General Earle V. Powell replied that Section 145 of the Constitution denies the right of suffrage to those convicted of a felony or a high misdemeanor.

Governor Given Power

The same section, he said, grants the governor the power to remove the disability.

"The executive clemency provided for in this section goes no farther than to permit the chief executive to restore lost rights of citizenship to the one convicted . . ." he wrote.

"The right so lost pertains exclusively to the privilege of voting. It does not constitute a pardon as contemplated under Section 77 of our Constitution and does not in any way affect the sentence, or constitute a forgiveness, or waiver of the issue of guilt."

Upon receipt of the opinion, Black sent a memorandum to wardens and identification officers setting out:

"While this opinion is directed primarily in answer to the above question where a life term was involved, it will affect not only those who have been granted a restoration of civil rights on a life sentence but on all sentences less than life.

Reprieve Would Be Necessary

"Therefore, we may no longer disregard any additional time owed on a sentence on which the inmate has previously been paroled, even though he may have been granted a restoration of civil rights prior to the inmate's commitment on a new sentence."

Black said the only way a parolee may avoid arrest as a parole violator in the future would be to secure a reprieve from the Governor.

The restroation of civil rights is a routine matter for governors after proper recommendations have been received.

Governor Chandler has signed resoration orders for 998 persons since he took office December 13, 1955, according to files in his office.

Ryle pointed out that life termers wanting their civil rights have ben required to serve at least a year under active parole supervision and then complete three years of clear conduct.

In a letter to his parole officers, Ryle said:

"The director has not had the opportunity of discussing this matter with the Governor's office, but it would seem that since the only thing that is being restored . . . is the right to vote and hold office, there would be little reason for the continuance of the present policy."

Later, Powell said it is true that a man also regains his right to hold office.

"He lost his right to vote and he lost his right to hold office," Powell said.

"Those (rights) are what the governor can return to him. He lost nothing else by being sent to prison, so there is nothing else the governor can return to him by restoring his civil rights."

Ryle and Black said they anticipated a court test to get a final decision on the question. Such a suit would necessarily be filed by a former prisoner faced with a return to prison as a parole violator after regaining his rights.

Black said he became interested in the question when asked about the status of a McCracken County man whose civil rights had been returned. He said the man had been given a new two-year term for housebreaking and prison officials wondered if he should be considered a parole violator.

Full Forgiveness An Incentive

Ryle said parole officers have been able to preach for years to parolees that they could gain through good behavior, a full forgiveness for the crime that sent them to prison.

He said experience had taught them that a man "proud enough to want his civil rights" usually was a man who wanted to go straight.

While that was true in most cases, he said, others had selfish reasons for wanting their civil rights.

"One such case comes to mind," he said. "A parolee cased a bank for considerable time. But he waited until three weeks after he regained his civil rights before he robbed it. He wanted the old sentence removed before he did the job."

Gregory's Election Suit Thrown Out of Court

Special Judge Rules Congressman Failed To Present A Valid Cause of Action

By HARRY BOLSER
The Courier-Journal West Kentucky Bureau

Murray, Ky., July 7.—Representative Noble J. Gregory's suit contesting the nomination of Frank A. Stubblefield, Murray, as Democratic candidate for First District congressman was thrown out in Calloway Circuit Court Monday.

Special Judge Alex P. Humphrey, Louisville, named by the Court of Appeals to hear the contest, sustained a Stubblefield motion to dismiss the suit.

The court, following the strict interpretation of the statute covering election contests, held that Gregory failed to set forth in his pleading within the time allowed by law the names of alleged illegal voters. Judge Humphrey said for that reason it was his opinion that Gregory had "failed to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted."

Charged Vote Fraud

Gregory charged vote fraud and irregularities in Logan County and asked that the Logan vote be thrown out and that he be declared the Democratic nominee.

Stubblefield, Murray drugstore operator, beat Gregory by 341 votes in the 17-county district. Stubblefield swamped Gregory 2,272 to 443 in Logan County.

Within 15 minutes after the court's written opinion was received by Gregory's attorneys they contacted him in Washington and he instructed them to take the case to the Court of Appeals.

Under the law, the Gregory appeal must be made by Tuesday, attorneys for both sides agreed. The statute covering appeals in election-contest suits says that an appeal shall be made the day after a judgment is entered. The judgment in the Gregory case was entered within an hour after Judge Humphrey handed down his decision.

Books To Be Retained

The court sustained a motion by L. M. Reed, Mayfield, and Joe Grace, Paducah, Gregory attorneys, requesting that the election comparative-signature books from Logan County be retained here so they could continue to examine the signatures.

Judge Humphrey said he would give the Gregory attorneys two weeks to complete their examination.

In seeking dismissal of the contest suit, Stubblefield's attorneys stated in their motion that Gregory failed to set forth definite proof of fraud and irregularities as required by the law.

Says Access Was Denied

Gregory's attorneys countered that because the primary election was shifted to May 27 and the law provides that a contest suit must be filed within 15 days after an election, they were unable to get such proof as the law demands.

In addition, they claimed they were denied access to the comparative-signature books of the one source with which they hoped to prove fraud until after it was too late to amend Gregory's petition.

In his opinion, Judge Humphrey noted:

"Counsel for contestant urges that under the instant circumstances the courts should relax the strict interpretation of the statutory limitation of time for amendment. He states that to identify and tabulate illegal voters in this Congressional district containing 17 counties with a multitude of precincts in each county within the alloted 15 days, is an impossibility. He argues that in effect his client is denied a right to assert his proprietary interest in the candidacy."

Court Gives Reply

Replying, the court said:

"I don't deny it is a monumental task. Primary-election contests, however, must of necessity be disposed of expeditiously. . . .

"Considering the function of a primary, the Legislature has provided reasonable safeguards for the voter and for the candidate in the mechanics of the election proper, if they want to make them effective. . . .

"No additional time can be given for an announcement to the petition containing the names of the alleged illegal voters.

"It is my opinion, therefore, that contestant (Gregory) has failed to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted for the reason that the names of the alleged illegal voters have not been included within the time allowed for pleading nor have circumstances been pleaded constituting such fraud that the elective effect of the vote in Logan County cannot be determined."

Stubblefield gave this brief statement to newspaper reporters:

"I'm very happy. I want you to know that I'm not mad at anyone. All I want to do now is make a good congressman."

Confers With Lawyers

Stubblefield conferred briefly with his attorneys in the courtroom. They indicated that no move will be made to press Stubblefield's countercontest suit against Gregory, in which the Mayfield congressman was accused of conspiring with W. F. Foster, Mayfield Clothing Manufacturing Company president, to gain illegal votes.

Stubblefield carried only three of the 17 First District counties, but beat Gregory by 432 votes. Gregory then filed suit for a recount of votes in Marshall, Calloway, and Logan counties. On the recount, Gregory picked up 91 votes, reducing Stubblefield's lead to 341.

Disqualifies Himself

The regular Calloway circuit judge, Earl Osborne, presided at the recount, but disqualified himself from hearing the contest because he had a court session at Benton. Before bowing out of the case, Osborne ruled that Stubblefield's official vote margin over Gregory was 341.

Gregory has held the First District post for 22 years. The Democratic nomination for congressman in this district is tantamount to election.

LEADS WOMEN VOTERS—Mrs. Robert J. Phillips, above, of St. Charles, Ill., is the choice of the nominating committee to succeed Mrs. John G. Lee as president of the League of Women Voters of the United States, at their 23rd convention in Atlantic City, April 21-25. Nomination is tantamount to election. Mrs. Phillips, mother of two and grandmother of three, joined the league as a college senior in 1926.

EIGHT ON POLL LIST DENY CASTING VOTE

Ninth Witness Testifies to Two Forgeries

Nine witnesses appearing before Judge Alexander E. Rainold in civil district court Tuesday testified directly on allegations of fraud in the Third Precinct of the Second Ward in the 25 Democratic second primary contest between Malcolm V. O'Hara and Richard A. Dowling for the district attorneyship.

O'Hara was certified as the Democratic candidate by the Orleans parish executive committee last week, on a tabulation of returns from the election commissioners showing O'Hara with a lead of 13 votes in more than 91,000 cast.

Dowling then filed an election contest suit, alleging fraud and irregularities which if eliminated he claimed would make him the winner, and also attacking the absentee ballots as having been cast in violation of the constitution.

Seven of the witnesses said they had not gone to the polls that day, although their names were on the poll list of voters who presumably appeared at the precinct voting place.

An eighth witness, Edgar J. Purdy Jr., not only testified he had not gone to the polls on election day, but when shown his purported signature on the precinct register as having voted, branded it as a forgery.

The ninth witness, Fred Bechtel, 811 Baronne, who under questioning described himself as a "Morrison watcher" wearing an O'Hara badge, testified to two forgeries.

His own purported signature in the precinct register, he asserted, was not written by him; while the purported signature of his wife, Mrs. Rosa Bechtel of the same address, had been written by him at about 2 o'clock on election afternoon, his wife not having gone to the polls that day to cast her vote.

PRECINCT REGISTER

Following this direct testimony, Clarence Dowling, trial attorney for his brother Richard, then introduced into the record the precinct register certificates of a number of additional voters, whose names appeared on the poll list, but who had not signed the register.

Bentley G. Byrnes, attorney for O'Hara, objected to this line of testimony on the ground there was no one present to prove the original signature on the registration certificate but he was overruled by Rainold.

Dowling had rejoined that the law required that before a person is permitted to vote the commissioner must verify his signature, place the date and sign his own name.

ADMITTED TO RECORD

The court commented that Dowling's presumption was correct and that the evidence would be admitted to the record on the basis of the official documents provided by law.

Near the close of the day's hearing, however, Judge Rainold stopped this line of evidence, upholding an objection by Byrnes.

O'Hara's attorney had contended that the plaintiff having in his petition claimed 17 illegal votes cast for persons whose names were on the poll list but who did not sign the precinct register, was limited to the proof of only that number of irregularities and could not enlarge the pleadings by the introduction of evidence of additional fraud.

When Dowling brought up the name of H. L. Rushing and sought to introduce the poll list to show that Rushing's name appeared on it twice—after the numbers 153 and 183—Judge Rainold ruled:

"As to this the court excludes the evidence. You are limited to the first 17 you have charged and named, whether or not you have proven irregularity or fraud."

Judge Rainold emphasized that the supreme court has ruled many times in election cases that "a candidate cannot make a fishing expedition out of an election contest."

Dowling then asked that William C. "Kelly" Baumann, 822 St. Charles, be called back to the stand, but Baumann could not be found. After a five-minute recess, with Baumann still missing, Dowling asked for an adjournment until 10 a. m. Wednesday, "as we wish to proceed next with the questioning of the witness Baumann."

ATTACHMENT ASKED

Judge Rainold suggested that an attachment be issued for Baumann, an election commissioner in the Third Precinct of the Second Ward, which was done to assure his presence Wednesday morning.

When Baumann was first called to the stand earlier in the afternoon, Dowling said he wanted to cross-examine him as a defense witness, to which Byrnes objected.

"He is an election commissioner," Dowling argued, "and therefore an official of the Orleans parish executive committee, which is a defendant in this suit and which commissioned him." Dowling contended that since Baumann was charged along with the other commissioners with supervision of the election, he came under the provisions of title 13, section 3663 of the revised statutes.

"That permits cross-examination of an adverse witness in a civil suit," Judge Rainold commented, "and we use it every day, and so do you. But the matter in question is the conduct of an election in the precinct."

Byrnes quoted from a court decision in the case of Landry vs. Ozan in which the high court held that the officials charged with the conduct of an election are merely the agents of the public and of the candidates.

"You can put him on the stand as a hostile witness," said Judge Rainold, "but you must first establish that fact."

"Well," said Dowling, "we are not ready to call him as a hostile witness at this time, so he can step aside."

'FORGERIES' ALLEGED

The name of another election commissioner in the precinct was brought into the case Tuesday by the witness Bechtel, who testified to two forgeries of voters' names—one by himself.

On direct examination Bechtel identified his permanent registration card and that of his wife in the precinct register. On the poll list they were carried as Nos. 18 and 21 in the order of voting.

Shown his purported signature on his permanent registration card as having voted that day, Bechtel said he did not sign the book. As to his wife's purported signature, he testified, "I signed my wife's name." His wife did not come to the polls he said. Both the bogus figures were attested by "Krause" one of the commissioners.

On cross-examination by Byrnes, the witness said he was an official watcher at the polls.

"Whose watcher were you?" Byrnes asked.

"Morrison's" said the witness.

"Did you have a badke?"

"Yes."

"Whose name was on the badge?"

"O'Hara's," the witness replied.

JURY IS CHARGED IN VOTER PROBE

Judge Urges Witness Ca Regardless of Office

MINDEN, La. (AP)—A district judge Tuesday told a grand jury investigating possible intimidation of a vote registrar, it should not hesitate to call any witness whether it be a high government officer or "mere federal employe."

Judge James E. Bolin in his charge to the special session of the Webster parish grand jury said it "should not investigate or harrass any official for mere publicity."

The jury was called to study the FBI's role in investigating Mrs. Winnice P. Clements, registrar of voters. The FBI investigation was ordered by the justice department's civil rights division.

Not Refuse Call

"On the other hand," Judge Bolin told the jurors, "it should not refuse to call any witness whether he be a high government officer or a mere federal employe because of any fear of reprisal by any such person."

Because of this investigation by a branch of the federal government, a serious and sinister shadow has been cast upon our local public officials, Judge Bolin said.

"There may not be any basis for this insinuation. In any event this court feels that the state of Louisiana through its own agencies, is fully capable of taking care of its own problems."

Judge Bolin told the jury that since it last adjourned March 6, "there have been various press reports to the effect that there have been violations of the vote and registration laws of Louisiana."

He said the newspapers also have had articles to the effect that certain citizens of Webster parish have said they have been denied the right to register with the registrar of voters.

Press Reports

"According to these press reports," Judge Bolin said, "certain enforcement agents of the FBI have been dispatched to our parish for the purpose of making an investigation of these alleged violations."

The judge pointed out that Louisiana law provides a maximum penalty of five years in jail and $10,000 fine on conviction of intimidating any public official or witnesses to be called before any court, board or authorized voter or election officials.

"If the press reports are correct that certain enforcement officers of the FBI have made investigations in our parish, you should summon these officers before your body in order to ascertain if they have discovered any violations of our state laws," Judge Bolin said.

The jury has summoned eight FBI agents from the Shreveport office to appear before the current hearing.

CCIVL Reports Good Reponse

Clarence "Buck" Henry, president of the Crescent City Independent Voters League, states that the public has responded to the drive in its first week of activity. He also stated "that it looks like the people are beginning to think that the time has come for them to join with an organization that operates independently. Many have admired the stand the C. C. I. V. L. takes and also the work that make the C. C. I. V. L. a powerful organization."

Wilfred Dallier, executive secretary announced that the next meeting will be held on Thursday night, May 22. You can apply for membership at the C. C. I. V. L. office, 518 S. Rampart Street, or call MA. 4819. Be on the look-out for a C. C. I. V. L. worker who will call on you.

Probe 'Intimidation' By FBI Agents In La.

Shreveport, La. - Seven subpeas were issued here Monday to FBI agents, who investigated a civil rights probe in Webster Parish, to appear before the Webster Parish Grand Jury Tuesday morning.

The subpoeas were issued after District Attorney Louis H. Tadgett, of both Bossier and Webster Parishes, ordered a grand jury session to investigate the possibilities of "intimidation" of the Webster registrar of voters, Mrs. Winnie P. Clements.

Tadgett said intimidation of a public official is a crime in Louisiana and that it was his duty to find out if any official has been intimidated during the federal investigation.

The federal investigation was launched several weeks ago on protest by (Mr.) M. M. Coleman, funeral home director, who claimed his civil rights had been denied him and other members of his race by the registrar of voters.

Reports state that the FBI agents made inquires of the registrar's activities to citizens and sat in the registrar's office taking notes, nothing radical or outstanding to cause the action of Tadgett. However, it was reported that the DA's action was prompted by pressure from the White Citizens Council whose aims are to curtail the number of Negro voters.

As one local citizen stated, 'It's another move by Rainach and his bunch to prolong segregation.'

State officials of the FBI, as of date, have made no comments in regards to this turnabout situation.

Jury In Louisiana Accuses White Of Hampering Probe

MINDEN, La. (AP)—A grand jury Thursday accused W. Wilson White, U.S. assistant attorney general in charge of civil rights, of interfering with its work.

The Webster Parish (County) grand jury also indicted M. M. Coleman, Minden Negro funeral director, for attempted intimidation of a public official and found Mrs. Winnie P. Clements, parish voter registrar, has been conducting her office in accord with state laws.

The grand jury reported to Dist. Judge James E. Bolin on its probe of FBI agents' conduct in a federal investigation of Mrs. Clements' office.

The report said Coleman attempted to "commit the crime of public intimidation . . . by attempting to use a threat upon Louisiana State Sen. Herman Jones. . . ."

Jones told the jury earlier that Coleman threatened recently to "go to the federal government" after being told that only qualified Negroes would be permitted to register to vote.

Six FBI agents connected with the federal probe of Mrs. Clements' office testified before the grand jury. The federal probe had been ordered by White.

"In connection with our inquirires," the jury report said, "we caused the appearance of several agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation before our body, and it appears that but for the interference of White, these agents would have cooperated with this investigation.

"But because of the interference of . . . W. Wilson White," it continued, "several of the agents did not give important information which would have aided this investigation."

Indifferent Democrats

M. M. Coleman of Minden, La., who makes his living operating a burial society, but who devotes most of his time to the Better Citizenship League, was indicted last week.

The charge: attempting to intimidate a public official.

It seems Mr. Coleman while talking to a state senator on the street, suggested that Webster County, La., in which Minden is located, would be a good place for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission to begin its long delayed work.

The all-white grand jury construed this as "attempted intimidation" and so indicted him. Actually the grand jury was attempting to frighten disfranchised voters against taking their just complaints to the Federal Government.

We think Webster County is a good starting place for Dr. Hannah's commission.

There were 1,700 colored registered voters in that community in 1956. Today, thanks to the activities of segregationists, there are only 73.

This can be duplicated in every state where the White Citizens Councils are conspiring with state officials to rob citizens of their inalienable rights.

And nothing is being done about it because the Democratic leadership of the Senate is indifferent to the failure of Sen. Eastland to act on the nominations of W. Wilson White as assistant attorney general in charge of the Civil Rights Division and Gordon MacLean Tiffany as staff director of the Civil Rights Commission.

Complaint Against White Denied by Justice Officer

Interference in Vote Probe Charged by Jury

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Louisiana grand jury complaint that W. Wilson White, assistant U.S. attorney general, had forbidden FBI agents to testify fully was denied Tuesday by the justice department.

The grand jury for Webster parish was set up to investigate the work of the parish's voting registrar and "reported public intimidation of state officials."

Six FBI agents connected with a federal probe of the registrar's office — involving complaints that qualified Negroes were not being allowed to register — testified before the grand jury. The federal probe had been ordered by White.

White Invited

"It appears that but for the interference of White, these agents would have co-operated," the grand jury reported. Its foreman, Marcus D. Wren, complained in a letter to White that the latter had instructed the FBI men to limit their testimony. He invited White to appear before the grand jury with an explanation.

The justice department reply was not written by White but by George Stephen Leonard, first assistant in the civil litigation division. It said:

"Under the circumstances there is no basis for Mr. White's participation in this correspondence, or his appearance before the grand jury."

'HAD NO PART'

The letter said White had no part in the instructions given to the agents for their appearance last month. It said they were there on a voluntary basis under an understanding with state authorities that they would not have to disclose confidential information gathered in the course of the federal inquiry.

Leonard said authority for this procedure lies in a standing order last revised in 1953 by the then attorney general, James G. McGranery.

The grand jury, in addition to censuring White, indicted M. M. Coleman, a Negro, on charges of attempted intimidation of a public official, State Sen. Herman Jones.

Jones said Coleman had threatened to "go to the federal government" after being told that only qualified Negroes would be permitted to register to vote.

TRIAL DATE SET IN VOTING CASE

Judge Rejects Motion to Quash Charges

The trial of four poll commissioners charged with vote fraud was set for July 7 after criminal district court Judge J. Bernard Cocke denied a defense motion Monday to quash the charges.

The commissioners, from the First Precinct of the Seventh Ward, are Sam Labnick, Paul L. Puig, Andre L. Burthe and Mrs. Eleanor Burthe.

They were four of the 10 persons charged by former district attorney Leon D. Hubert Jr. in connection with alleged fraud committed at the Feb. 25 second democratic primary election.

They were charged after Richard A. Dowling said his opponent, Malcolm V. O'Hara, won the runoff election by a few votes because fraud was committed at the polls. The state supreme court upheld Dowling and declared him the winner, which enabled him to become district attorney.

No charges have been accepted in connection with vote fraud since Dowling took office but charges are expected to be filed by Dowling within several days.

Defense Attorney Frank J. D'Amico Monday argued that the state failed to set forth a violation but executive assistant district attorney J. David McNeill replied that the bill of information filed by his office was "sound and valid."

A fifth commissioner, Louis Jacob, did not join in the motion to quash but petitioned for a bill of particulars.

Two Million Negro Voters Are Sought

Pastor Announces Drive for Registration

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 15 (AP) — Rev. T. J. Jemison Wednesday announced a Lincoln's birthday kickoff for a drive to add two million Negro voters to South-wide registration rolls.

The goal for Louisiana, he said, is 250,000, roughly 90,000 above the previous peak.

Jemison, pastor of the Mt. Zion Baptist church here, is secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, headed by Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, and co-chairman of its Louisiana branch.

"We're going to have banquets in every major city of the South Feb. 12," he said, "with Rev. King speaking at the headquarters banquet in Atlanta. The goal is two million more Negro voters throughout the South."

Banquets Planned

Louisiana banquets will be held in New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Alexandria and Shreveport.

The peak Negro registration in Louisiana was 161,410 in March, 1956, before purges by white Citizens Councils stripped thousands from the rolls.

An investigation by the FBI and a federal grand jury brought no indictments.

Jan. 1, 1957, almost half the parishes in Louisiana wiped out their registration rolls, as they do every four years in parishes not under permanent registration.

116,000 Voters

At present, the state board of registration estimates there are about 116,000 Negro voters. White registration also is down since there has been no statewide election to spur registration.

With 18 per cent Negro registration, Louisiana had the highest percentage of Negroes registered in the South in 1956.

"We're going to get all that back and another 100,000 too," predicted Jemison, who also is a long time leader of the Louisiana branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

If the goal is reached, Negro registration in Louisiana will approach 25 per cent of the total.

Speakers Listed

Jemison said the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth of Birmingham, Ala., integration leader, tentatively is scheduled to address the Shreveport banquet.

The Rev. A. L. Scott of Shreveport, head of the United Improvement League which recently attacked bus segregation in Shreveport, will speak at the Baton Rouge dinner to be held at Jemison's church.

Rev. A. L. Davis, co-chairman with Jemison of the Louisiana Christian Leadership Conference, will speak at the New Zion Baptist church in New Orleans, and Rev. W. T. Handy will speak at the Newman Methodist church in Alexandria. Both are conducting meetings in their own churches.

Vote Registrar Post Accepted

Miss Mary Ester Fox said Tuesday she has accepted the appointment as registrar of voters in Plaquemines parish.

She said she will open office in the courthouse at Pointe a la Hache Monday. Office hours will be 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., she said.

The registrar of voters post has been vacant since Sept. 12, 1956.

Gov. Earl K. Long appointed Miss Fox, formerly secretary of the parish police jury, earlier this month.

Miss Fox pointed out that no one may register for the Aug. 23 congressional election during the 30 days prior to that election.

She said she has resigned from her police jury post and that no one has been named yet to succeed her.

DA Says Whites Hit Hardest In Louisiana's Voter Purge

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 7 (AP)—Albin P. Lassiter, district attorney at Monroe, today said the voter purge in Ouachita Parish affected more whites than Negroes.

The 1956-57 purge of voter registration rolls attracted national attention after thousands of Negroes lost their privilege to vote.

Lassiter told state district attorneys at a conference sponsored by the state attorney general's office the purge was not directed against the Negro.

The Ouachita district attorney was one of four panel members in a discussion on civil rights.

Lassiter said 6,778 white voters were challenged by the White Citizens Council and the registrar of voters.

During the identical period, he said 5,940 Negro voters were challenged.

Lassiter said 4,318 Negro voters have never taken the trouble to answer the challenge, while 2,434 white voters did not bother to answer.

"Of the 1,632 Negroes who answered the challenges," he said "961 were reinstated.

Negro Group Boasts Drive Urging Voting

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 21 (AP)—A Negro religious group representing some 300,000 members, today called for an accelerated drive to register Negro voters in every state.

The Brotherhood of the African Methodist Episcopal Church adopted a resolution calling upon every member "within the next 12 months to register and vote regularly."

"The brotherhood urges every AME minister to assist in his community leadership in this drive, workin; toward a first class citizenship and dynamic race relations," the resolution said.

The resolution was presented by the Rev. Fred C. James of Sumpter, S. C.

The meeting, attended by some 1,000 delegates, condemned the use of Negro spirituals by secular artists and agencies.

"One of the unnecessary and most shameful acts which has ever been perpetrated by the music world is the misuse of the Negro spiritual for commercial jazz purposes," the denouncement said.

"The commercialization of such songs as 'Over My Head,' and 'When the Saints go Marching In' for purely secular entertainment is both blasphemous and sacreligious. . . ."

Yesterday, the meeting heard reports from chairmen of 33 study commissions on church reform and redevelopment and an address by the Rt. Rev. R. R. Wright Jr., presiding bishop of the 5th Episcopal District.

Louisiana Vote Plan Backfires

More Whites Lose Right To Ballot Than Negroes

NEGRO GROUP URGES VOTER REGISTRATION

MASS VIOLATION OF VOTE HELD

La. Senators Charge Force by Probe

SHREVEPORT, La., March 8—Two state senators said Saturday that the probe of Webster parish voter registration methods is the result of an attempt by a Negro leader to force "mass violation" of Louisiana voter registration laws.

Sen. W. M. Rainach of Claiborne parish, a leader in the defense of segregation, and Sen. Herman Jones of Webster parish said they believe the FBI probe followed the filing of a complaint by a Minden Negro funeral home director named Coleman.

Coleman came to me several weeks ago," Sen. Jones said, "and asked me when they were going to open the voter polls to Negroes. I told him that whenever the rolls were open they would be open to whites and Negroes alike but that everybody was going to have to qualify under the Louisiana law. Coleman then said that he supposed that he would have to go to the federal government."

Sen. Rainach said he understood Coleman, who is the former head of a Negro voters league in Mniden, wanted "wholesale registration of Negroes regardless of whether they could qualify under Louisiana law.

"When he found out that Mrs. Winnice Clements (Webster parish registrar of voters) was going to obey the Louisiana law to the letter," Rainach added, "then he went to the federal government and apparently that is why the FBI is making its investigation in Webster parish."

Both senators said that what Coleman was seeking was a "mass violation" of Louisiana registration law by allowing unqualified Negroes to register "wholesale."

Mrs. Clements said that two FBI agents questioned her at length recently as to how she operated her office and then they sat in her office for several hours and observed as she registered voters. She said that both whites and Negroes came in to register during the time the FBI agents were present.

"They just sat there and kept taking notes," Mrs. Clements said.

Meanwhile in New Orleans, Ray Abbaticchio Jr., special agent in charge of the FBI for Louisiana, confirmed the fact that FBI agents were making a probe in Webster parish.

"At the request of W. Wilson White, Asst. Atty. Gen. in charge of the civil rights division in the department of justice, an investigation is being conducted," Abbaticchio said. He would not give further details.

Court Calls Negro Voter Purge Void

By O. C. W. TAYLOR FOR ANP

NEW ORLEANS. — The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals here, which within the past two years has declared unconstitutional segregation on New Orleans' buses, segregation in New Orleans' city park, segregation in New Orleans public schools this week reversed the decision of the Federal District court involving the purge of more than 2,500 Negros from voting rolls in Ouachita parish in which the city of Monroe is located.

In a suit brought by Dr. John L. Reddix against the registrar of voters of the parish the court ruled that the purge was unjust. The doctor had claimed that he had been purged from the rolls along with 2,500 other Negroes solely because of their color.

The court stated that "whatever area of doubt remains as to identification of civil rights, there can be no doubt that the right to vote in any state election is guaranteed to every qualified citizen without regard to his race or color."

In a second case brought about by a Negro attorney James Sharp Jr., it was claimed that he had represented a client who had been purged and that he was not permitted to see the registrar of voters nor given sufficient time. He was told, according to his claims, that Negroes had a special place to go to and be received by an as-

Voting May Be Probed by Jury

But Decision Is Regarded as Premature

The Orleans parish grand jury may investigate alleged voting irregularities, it was learned Wednesday.

Acting district attorney James C. Garrison said the grand jurors may be the best judges of evidence presented in the vote fraud matter.

Jury foreman P. A. Bodet Jr., appointed last week by Judge Niels F. Hertz, said it was too early to discuss what the jury plans to do.

He said one might discuss the matter with the other jurors before a formal jury meeting next Tuesday. He indicated he would prefer to wait and see what action the civil district court takes in the O'Hara-Dowling case.

Attorney Richard A. Dowling is alleging that vote fraud caused him to trail slightly behind assistant district attorney Malcolm V. O'Hara in the second Democratic primary race for the office of district attorney.

Garrison is acting as district attorney while District Attorney Leon D. Hubert Jr. is away on a short vacation and first assistant district attorney O'Hara is on a leave of absence.

Garrison said the district attorney's office is watching the vote fraud rital in civil district court and the civil court will record will be reviewed by the district attorney's office after the trial is over. Newspaper accounts of the election and allegations made by various persons are being checked and the facts compiled, he added.

Garrison said assistant district Edward M. Baldwin is the district attorney's office represenative at the rial.

"If the evidence we gather forms a basis for criminal charges, we intend to take prosecutive action," Garrison said.

"We may get leads from evidence not admitted into the record of the civil court case and we intend to contact both representatives of both sides for any additional leads.

"I feel it is premature to discuss what action the district attorney's office will take but we promise a completely objective tive investigation and we're not going to leave any stone unturned nor ignore any evidence developed by anyone.

"If the evidence gathered is of sufficient gravity, it might be more feasible to give it to the grand jury, because an impartial grand jury might be the best judge of the evidence."

Hubert is expected back to work Monday, Garrison said, and any action on the matter will probably be taken by Hubert. After the grand jury's first business meeting, the jurors went into Judge Hertz' court about noon Wednesday.

The grand jury indicted three persons for murder.

Indicted for the Feb. 24 murder of Ben P. Holmes, Negro, were three Negroes, David Commodore, 16, 2125 Choctaw; Alton Jackson, 20, 3061 Law; and Clifford McDowell, 17, 5615 N. Galvez. Police said he was apparently shot to death after an altercation over his former girl friend, 14-year old Negro girl.

The jury plans a 10 a. m. meeting Tuesday.

TWO LIVINGSTON TOWNS TO VOTE

Registration Books to Close Noon Saturday

(Special to The Times-Picayune)

LIVINGSTON, La., March 6—Noon Saturday will mark closing of voter registration in Livingston parish's precincts one and two, ward two, and precinct two, ward four, prior to Democratic municipal elections in Denham Springs and Albany, Mrs. B. C. Sibley, parish registrar of voters, said this week.

Elections are scheduled to be held in the two municipalities April 8.

Mrs. Sibley reminded citizens of residence qualifications for registration for the elections. Citizens, she said, must be residents of the ward and precinct for three months, of the municipality for four months, and of the state and parish for one year.

As of noon Tuesday, she reported, 827 potential voters are registered in precinct one of ward two, 617 in the ward's precinct two, and 519 in precinct two of ward four. Ward two is the Denham Springs ward, and ward four, that for Albany.

Announced this week by Secretary of State Wade O. Martin were voting machine numbers of candidates in the two municipalities.

Shelly O'Neal, unopposed as candidate for mayor of Denham Springs, will not have a number. Numbers for aldermen, of which five will be elected, are as follows: C. Earle Benton, 1; Jack A. Blair, 2; Dudley J. Boyer, 3; V. W. Brignac, 4; Maurice K. Cockerhma, 5; Tommy Ceeeee ham, 6; Robin Hood, 7; Glenn D. Kelly, 8; T. Waldo Morgan, 9; Matt S. Scivicque, 10; Jim J. Shiflet, 11; W. B. Spring, 12; Navy I. Stafford, 13; John B. Tucker, 14, and Rex. V. Wilkinson, 15.

A sixteenth candidate, Roy Walker, has been disqualified, it was revealed.

Numbers of candidates for the city's Democratic executive committee, of which three will be elected, are as follows: Jerrold L. Carpenter, 16; Harry E. Jackson, 17; E. J. Nagin, 18; John W. Spring, 19; J. Norris Vincent, 20; and Walter B. Vincent, 21.

Numbers of candidates for mayor of the village of Albany are Wilford Cowart, 1, and Paul Max Jenkins, 2. For candidates for marshal of the village, numbers are B. K. Gill, 3; Henry Hoyt, 4; J. F. Middleton, 5; and George Robar, 6.

Albany citizens will elect three aldermen from four running. Candidates and their numbers are W. E. Bankston, 7; Louis C. Bartis, B. G. Hess, 9; and Sam Wild, 10.

U.S. Denies Vote Charge In Louisiana

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Louisiana grand jury complaint that W. Wilson White, Assistant United States Attorney General, had forbidden agents to testify fully was denied Monday by the Justice Department.

The grand jury, for Webster Parish (county), was set up to investigate the work of the parish's voting registrar and "reported public intimidation of state officials."

Six FBI agents connected with a federal probe of the registrar's office—involving complaints that qualified Negroes were not being allowed to register—testified before the grand jury. The federal probe had been ordered by White.

INTERFERENCE CHARGED

"It appears that but for the interferences of White, these people would have cooperated," the grand jury reported. Its foreman, Marcus B. Wren, complained in a letter to White that the latter had instructed the FBI men to limit their testimony. He invited White to appear before the grand jury with an explanation.

The Justice Department reply was not written by White but by George Stephen Leonard, first assistant in the Civil Litigation Division. It said:

"Under the circumstances, there is no basis for Mr. White's participation in this correspondence, or his appearance before the grand jury."

VOLUNTARY BASIS

The letter said White had no part in the instructions given to the agent for their appearance last month. It said they were there on a voluntary basis under an understanding with state authorities that they would not have to disclose confidential information gathered in the course of the federal inquiry.

The grand jury, in addition to censuring White, indicted M. M. Coleman, a Negro, on charges of attempted intimidation of a public official, State Sen. Herman Jones.

Jones said Coleman had threatened to "go to the federal government" after being told that only qualified Negroes would be permitted to register to vote.

La. jury charges refuted by U. S.

WASHINGTON

Charges that Assistant U.S. Attorney General W. Wilson White prevented six FBI agents from fully testifying in a Louisiana vote purge investigation, have been refuted by the Justice Department.

The Webster Parish (county) jury in Louisiana registered the complaint during its probe of the parish's vote registrar, in a case where M. M. Coleman, president of the Better Citizenship League, was indicted on charges of attempting to intimidate a public official.

The Federal investigation, involving the six agents, was ordered after complaints were filed that qualified colored persons were not being permitted to register in the parish. Mr. White ordered the Federal probe.

THE GRAND JURY charged that the six agents were not allowed to fully testify and that Mr. White "interfered" with its investigation in the case.

In a letter of reply to grand jury charges, the Justice Department scoffed at the complaint, saying Mr. White had no part in instructions to the agents for their appearance.

At the same time it levied charges against Mr. White, the jury indicted Mr. Coleman on charges of attempting to intimidate State Sen. Herman Jones.

The jury ruled that Mr. Coleman sought to intimidate Jones by "threatening to go to the Federal Government" after being told only qualified colored persons would be allowed to register and vote.

Mr. Coleman told the AFRO at that time, that of 1,700 colored persons on the books last year, only 73 have been permitted to register in the parish.

The Federal investigation in the matter was directed into the actions of Mrs. Winnie P. Clements, Webster Parish voter registrar.

Mr. Coleman, a funeral association executive and former educator, denied attempting to intimidate Jones, saying he merely asked what Jones thought would be done about the registration of colored persons.

He said Jones told him that "with respect to Communistic influences in the matter, he doubted anything would be done." Mr. Coleman said he would fight the indictment "down to the wire."

Launch Vote Drive With Rally Sunday

The OPPVL will launch its Registration and Membership drive with a mammoth rally Sunday, April 27, 3:30 p.m., at the Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Dumaine and N. Galvez Sts. Rev. Morris Burrell, pastor. James A. Smith, Jr., campaign manager, announced that Dr. Ernest Clerkie, forceful and dynamic champion for human rights, will be the principal speaker. Special music will be rendered for the occasion.

In regards to the need for increased registration, Jackson V. Acox, OPPVL Executive Secretary, stated, "we cannot afford to letup in our effort to increase registration for we don't count unless we can be counted. Too many persons who ordinarily think and act along aggressive lines fail to grasp the dire need to fully participate in the affairs of government. This is a government of the people and it should be a government by the people. But unless the people register and vote, it will be a government by some of the people."

Acox added that politics affect our very lives and we should have enough interest in our own welfare to register and vote. The OPPVL office, located at 2232 Dryades St., is open daily to instruct those who want assistance in learning to register.

Att'y Israel Augustine, membership chairman, said that he had no doubt that the public would be glad to take out membership in OPPVL because OPPVL has gone forward in securing jobs, advancing Negroes politically, and has participated in every progressive movement in the community since its organization. Rev. A. L. Davis is president of OPPVL.

La. Vote Purge To Be Aired At Confab

Washington--An honest courageous white newspaper editor who published the facts on how Negroes were being purged from the voting roles in his Louisiana parish, through the efforts of the White Citizen Council leadership, is scheduled to tell of his experiences and what happened, at the "Conference on Voting Restrictions in The South," to be held at the Asbury Methodist Church here Sunday, April 27.

He is Kenneth Walker, editor of the Colfax Chronicle, a weekly newspaper published for the past twelve years at Colfax, Louisiana. Mr. Walker is one of several persons slated to report at the conference on the campaign against voting restrictions in their respective states.

Mr. Walker gained public attention in 1956, when a purge of Negro voters was initiated in Grant Parish. Colfax is in Grant Parish. Mr. Walker's newspaper simply reported the plan, and what was going on. The publicity alerted many Negroes; a majority of those eligible to vote were enabled to meet the requirements and had their names reinstated on the rolls in time to vote that year.

By way of contrast, in other Louisiana parishes where this undemocratic plan was put into effect, other newspapers did nothing to publicize the program and in consequence many Negro voters were quietly purged from the rolls.

Others scheduled to report at the April 27 conference in Washington include Aaron Henry, Clarksdale, Miss., executive secretary, Regional Council of Negro Leadership; W. Hale Thompson, a Newport News, Va. attorney; T. Austin Walden, an Atlanta, Ga. attorney; the Rev. Ben F. Wyland, Florida, president of the Fla.

Retired man, 68, doing great job for La. city

SHREVEPORT, La. — More than 1,000 colored people have been registered to vote here since Feb. 12, thanks to a well developed drive sponsored by the United Christian Movement Inc.

The sponsoring organization is an affiliate of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which is directing the southwide "Crusade for Citizenship," launched with 21 Lincoln Day mass meetings.

ELLIS TAYLOR, 68-year-old retired metal worker is due much of the credit for the success in the local drive. He has devoted full-time to the campaign to get registered voters since Feb. 12—having personally contacted more than 1,000 persons with blanks and instructions.

To accomplish this, he spends three days a week in front of a busy supermarket, several evenings visiting prospects and heads a registration committee at Avenue Baptist Church where he is a deacon.

MR. TAYLOR, himself, has only been a voter for eight years, but it was not until the Crusade for Citizenship meeting that he took voting seriously.

The local voter-registration drive is being headed by Dr. C. O. Simpkins, local dentist. Among the officers and executive members of the movement are 21 ministers. The drive is non-partisan and is designed to double or triple voters.

VOTING FRAUD HEARING IS SET

Judge Cocke OKs Transfer of Case

The vote fraud open hearing is expected to begin June 2 before criminal district court Judge J. Bernard Cocke.

Judge Cocke accepted the transfer of the hearing from Judge George P. Platt, to whom it was allotted, when it was learned that Judge Platt's vacation might interrupt the hearing.

Executive Assistant District Attorney J. David McNeill said Wednesday that tentative date set for the hearing is June 2. McNeill conferred with Judges Cocke and Platt on behalf of Dowling.

He said the transfer is being made to avoid any interruption in the hearing. Dowling said about 100 witnesses from ap- be called to testify.

The fraud was allegedly committed at the Feb. 25 second Democratic primary election when Dowling and Malcolm V. O'Hara ran for nomination to the office of district attorney. O'Hara received a slight lead but Dowling was named the winner after the state supreme court found fraud had been committed.

Shreveport Sets Pattern For Registration Drive

SHREVEPORT. — More than 1,000 Negroes have been registered in Shreveport, La., since February 12, thanks to the well developed drive sponsored by the United Christian Movement, Inc., an affiliate of the Southern Christian Leadership conference under whose direction the southwide "Crusade for Citizenship" was launched with 21 Lincoln Day mass meetings.

At least 25 churches in the city and vicinity of Shreveport are actively engaged in efforts to enroll all potential Negro voters. This unusual demonstration of church leadership in civil affairs started in February when more than 20 ministers exchanged Sunday pulpits to give added emphasis to the registration campaign.

Since then, weekly voting clinics and special registration committees have become a normal part of local church activities. The special committees are available in most churches each Sunday to instruct would-be registrants after morning services. Scores of church laymen are devoting their spare time to pushing registration.

Stimulated by the example set by churches, social and civic clubs are forming committees to work towards one hundred per cent registration of their members. Beauty parlors, barber shops and even street corners have become action centers for contacting and instructing all who are eligible to vote.

The United Christian Movement, Inc. is headed by Dr. C. O. Simpkins, a young dentist who is a native son of Shreveport, whose family roots there go back several generations. Included among the officers and executive members of the movement are 21 ministers who form the most effective leadership force in the community. The registration drive is strictly non partisan and is designed to double and even triple the number of qualified voters in the area.

The Douglass State bank, Kansas City, Kansas; Industrial bank, Washington, D.C.; Mechanics and Farmers Bank, Durham, N.C.; Tri-State bank of Memphis, Memphis Tenn.; and Victory Saving bank, Columbia, S. C. Each bank will secure a $5,000 deposit. Earlier identical sums will have been deposited in Citizens Trust Co., Atlanta, Georgia, and First State bank, Danville, Virginia.

Absentee Voting Measure Is Limited to Servicemen

Sen. Petre's Bill Is Returned to Calendar

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Senate Monday converted Sen John Petre's bill to extend absentee voting into a bill limiting the privilege to service men.

The New Orleans senator then returned the bill to the calendar.

Petre brought the bill from the calendar for a floor vote, explaining it permitted absentee balloting by mail by any civilian out of the state on election day and reformed the present absentee voting laws to protect secrecy of the ballot.

LIMIT VOTING

Sen. J. D. DeBlieux of Baton Rouge offered an amendment to limit absentee voting to servicemen. It carried 17-15.

DeBlieux protested absentee voting "permits an unscrupulous politician to take unfair advantage of his opponent. It is not conducive to honest elections."

Petre protested his bill, backed by the League of Women Voters, made reforms recommended by the state Supreme Court to prevent fraud.

WARNING ISSUED

He said the high court, in its ruling on the recent New Orleans district attorney election dispute, warned unless reforms were made it might declare unconstitutional present laws which provide for absentee voting by service men and absentee voting in person before the election.

The Senate last week sent to the House Sen. Sylvan Friedman's bill extending absentee voting to civilian employes overseas for the State and Defense departments and welfare and religious workers assigned to the armed forces.

Petre said the bill by the Natchez senator "does not provide secrecy of the ballot. It does not reform present laws."

FBI CHECKS ON VOTING

Registration Policy In Webster Parish Studied

MINDEN, La., March 8.—(UP)—A registrar of voters, Mrs. Winnie P. Clement, Saturday confirmed that the FBI has been investigating Negro vote registration policies in Webster Parish.

State Senator William Rainach of Homer, Citizens Council leader, said the agents' check apparently followed a complaint made [illegible] funeral home. The director several weeks ago asked State Senator Herman Jones of Minden when the register rolls would be opened to Negroes.

Jones told him there should be no discrimination against Negroes.

Mrs. Clement said FBI agents spent parts of two days talking with her about registration policy and observing procedures. She said she told them she treats Negroes and whites alike and follows the law to the letter.

She said she understood the investigation was made at the request of the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department.

From 1700 to 73

MINDEN, La. —"We had 1,700 persons on the registration books last year as voters in good standing. Today we have only 73 registered."

The charge that I intimidated a public official when I asked his position on colored voter registration is false."

M. M. Coleman, president of the Better Citizenship League here, had that to say Saturday following his indictment by a Webster Parish (County) grand jury on charges that he attempted to intimidate a public official.

THE grand jury charged Mr. Coleman attempted to intimidate Sen. Herman Jones by "threatening to go to the Federal Government after being told only qualified colored persons would be allowed to register and vote.

In indicting Mr. Jones, the grand jury also accused W. Wilson White, U.S. Assistant Attorney General in charge of civil rights, of interfering with its work.

How citizens are robbed of right to vote

Observers here implied that the jury's accusation against Mr. White is a move to dampen prospects of his Senate confirmation.

Although he has appeared before the Senate finding Committee twice Mr. White's nomination is yet to be acted upon by the Senate Judiciary Committee headed by Sen. James O. Eastland of Miss.

Of the jury's action against him, Mr. Coleman stated:

"I'll fight it down to the wire. I have attempted to intimidate no one. I spoke with Sen. Jones and asked him what did he think would be done about the registration of colored persons.

"He told me that with respect to Communistic influences in the matter, he doubted anything would be done."

• • •

SUBSEQUENTLY there was an investigation of the Webster Parish (County) vote registrar, Mrs. Winnie P. Clements, recently by the Justice Department in the case.

The probe ended two or three weeks ago.

Mr. Coleman was later charged, indicted by the grand jury and arrested by parish officials.

He was released, Thursday on $1,000 bail raised by friends.

"My statements to Sen. Jones were distorted and then the grand jury was called," Mr. Coleman explained.

"It is my hope that better thinking people of both races will sit down together and reach an agreement in this problem," I told him.

The jury held that Mrs. Clements had been conducting her office in accordance with state laws in the registration matter.

It reported to District Judge James E. Bolin on its investigation of the conduct of six FBI agents connected with the vote probe.

IN attacking Mr. White, the jury said, "Because of the interference of W. Wilson White, several of the FBI agents did not give important information which would have aided in the investigation."

Mr. Coleman is the son of Dr. O. L. Coleman, founder of Coleman College in Gibsland, Beinville Parish, in 1887.

He is general manager of the Colored Funeral Service Association here and a former school principal in Homer, La.

For 10 years, he was president of Coleman College.

Mortician Indicted in La.

MINDEN, La.—A Webster Parish grand jury, empaneled last week to investigate activities of the U.S. Justice Department and the FBI probe of voter registration practices, has indicted M. M. Coleman, Negro funeral home director, for "attempted public intimidation." Several FBI agents were subpoenaed.

Coleman, the grand jury said, was indicted for "attempting to use a threat upon State Senator Herman Jones with intent to influence the legislator's conduct." He was jailed and his bond was set at $1,000.

VOTERS LEAGUE SEEKS CHANGES

Suggestions Offered for Improving Elections

The League of Women Voters of New Orleans Saturday Saturday announced a number of suggestions for improving elections held in Orleans parish, based on alleged discrepancies in the Feb. 25 Democratic second primary election. They are:

Service by commissioners: Maintain a list of qualified persons from which some, if not all, poll commissioners must be taken for each poll. These persons, in addition to being qualified voters, should be able to read, write, add, subtract, and withstand the long election day hours. The civil service commission could certify this list after suitable examination of applicants.

Encourage better performance by providing tests in the schools for commissioners to enable them to help themselves to understand and administer election instructions.

Registration Office

Registration office procedures: Date with rubber stamp voters' signatures where commissioners have failed to carry out the law requiring them to date each signature in ink. This date is needed in determining names to be removed for not voting.

Indicate calendar years on the voting record of each voter with rubber stamp to encourage voting in the proper space and facilitate checking names in the office.

Carry out the law requiring the registration office to be open on election days, with adequate staff, to offer full service, including telephone-answering. This would mean that registration deputies should serve in the office and not as poll commissioners.

File registrants in the precinct registers according to party affiliation as is done in other Louisiana parishes in order to carry out the primary law provision that the registrar must submit only the names of party registrants for primary elections and relieve commissioners of having to watch every card for party affiliation and prevent voting of non-party members by error.

Absentee Voting

Absentee voting law: Give greater protection toward securing ballot secrecy; allow absent civilian voters to vote by mail with adequate safeguards, in addition to military voting now provided for. Consolidate into the absentee voting law th scattered provisions now in the statutes.

Simplify voting machine laws: Eliminate confusing references to ballot boxes.

Ease election burden: In cases of vacancy of office, have the election at the time of the next general elections as recommended by the Louisiana Law Institute instead of special elections.

Proper location of polling places and voting machines: Observe the law prohibiting voting machines being placed in polling places owned by persons politically connected or employed; also the requirement that they be placed in public view since violations of this law have been recently reported.

NEGROES OUTLINE NEW VOTE DRIVE

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The pro-integration Southern Christian Leadership Conference is planning a series of Lincoln's birthday banquets to kick off a drive for two million more Negro voter registrations in the South.

Rev. T. J. Jemison, pastor of the Mt. Zion Baptist Church here and secretary of the conference, said the banquets would be held in every major Southern city February 12.

Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. of Montgomery, Ala., president of the conference, will speak at the headquarters banquet in Atlanta.

NEW ORLEANS — An Ouachita Parish district attorney told a civil rights panel audience that 4,315 of 5,940 colored voters challenged in last year's voter registration purge didn't take trouble to answer the challenge. Of 1,632 who answered, 961 were reinstated. Of 6,778 whites challenged, 2,334 failed to answer.

Lawyer Attempts To Explain Voter Registration Purge

NEW ORLEANS — (UNS) — The District Attorney of a North Louisiana Parish, where thousands of Negro voters were purged from registration rolls, said Friday the action resulted from an impartial examination of voting qualifications.

Albin O. Lassiter, of Monroe, told a meeting of Louisiana District Attorneys that more white than Negro voters were challenged in the so-called 1956-57 voting purge in Ouachita Parish.

The purge, in which the names of 4,989 Negroes names were stricken from the parish's registration rolls, led to a Justice Department investigation. A Grand Jury investigated the possibility of Civil Rights violations, but no indictments were returned.

Lassiter maintained that the purge, instigated by the white citizens council, had ben "misunderstood" throughout the nation.

He said:

"In the years 1956-57, a total of 6,778 white voters were challanged. Of the Negroes, he added, only a total of 1,632 "bothered to answer the challenge" and about 961 of them were reinstated.

He asserted that critics of the purge failed to point out that more whites - - 838 of them - - than Negroes were challanged.

Final Absentee Voting at Hand

The offices of civil sheriff L. J. Scanlon in the civil courts building, Royal and Conti, will be open from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Friday and from 9 a. m. to noon Saturday for the final absentee voting for the Tuesday, Feb. 25 Democratic run-off primary.

In the election New Orleans voters will decide upon Democratic nominees for the offices of judge of the criminal district court, in which Thomas M. Brahney Jr., and Leon D. Hubert Jr., are candidates, and for the district attorneyship, with Malcolm V. O'Hara and Richard A. Dowling as candidates.

The total of 81 civilian absentee ballots cast through Thursday and the 23 absentee military ballots received by the sheriff's office brought the grand total so far to 104, Sheriff Scanlon said.

The absentee ballots will be delivered by the civil sheriff's office to the proper voting places on election day.

Louisiana Negro Voter Strikings Called Unfair Act

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 25 (AP) — The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals said today it is clear that the striking of some 2,500 Negroes from the voter rolls in Ouachita Parish in late April and early May, 1956, was the result of a "shockingly unfair act by someone."

The court made the observation in reversing a district court ruling dismissing Dr. John I. Reddix' suit against Mrs. May Lucky, registrar of voters in Ouachita Parish.

Reddix contended he and 2,500 other Negroes were removed from the voters' list solely on account of their race.

NEGRO WINS APPEAL IN VOTE ROLLS CASE

U.S. Court Terms Purge 'Shocking, Unfair Act'

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 25. — (UP)—The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in a decision Tuesday called the purge of 2,500 Negroes from the voting rolls in Ouachita Parish, La., "a shocking, unfair act by someone."

More than 10,000 North Louisiana Negroes were purged two years ago in drives led by the pro-segregation Citizens' Councils.

The councils were not mentioned in the sharply worded 17-page decision which upheld an appeal of a purged Negro voter, Dr. John I. Reddix of Monroe, La.

Dr. Reddix had filed suit in the United States District Court in Louisiana's Western District claiming he was deprived of the right to vote, solely because he was Negro.

Federal Judge Ben C. Dawkins Jr. dismissed his charge which was filed against Mrs. May Lucky, register of voters for Ouachita Parish.

But the Appeal Court said the lower court erred and the judgment was reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Name Amedee Campaign Mgr For Dowling

Richard A. Dowling announced today that he has appointed Attorney Earl J. Amedee co-manager of his campaign for District Attorney in the Second Primary of February 25th.

"I have watched Attorney Amedee's career with interest and admiration," Dowling said. "His ability as a lawyer and his courage and sincerity as a leader have brought great credit to himself, to his race and to this City. When I am elected District Attorney, I shall require a lawyer of his talent and background to complete a staff of assistant district attorneys that will be representative of all of the citizens of New Orleans."

In a speech of acceptance, Attorney Amedee said: "I am proud and privileged to accept this appointment. Mr. Dowling is one of the outstanding lawyers of the State of Louisiana. He is a man of the utmost integrity, and I can assure the Negro citizens of New Orleans that our group will receive greater and more important representation in the District Attorney's office than now prevails. Systematic exclusion of Negroes from trial juries by the State will be eliminated; false imprisonment and police brutality will be prosecuted vigorously. All citizens, regardless of race, will receive fair, courteous and even treatment when Mr. Dowling is elected District Attorney."

"In conclusion, I am supporting Richard A. Dowling for District Attorney. I know this man. I know that he is experienced, able and fair. I urge the Negro voters of New Orleans to help me, to help themselves and to help the City of New Orleans by voting for Richard A. Dowling for District Attorney."

"I invite those who wish to assist me in this important task to contact me at 346 South Rampart Street or TU-3528."

New Voters May Be Registered

Eugene Riviere, registrar of voters for Jefferson parish, announced that he will be at the Harahan City Hall Monday and Tuesday between the hours of 5 p. m. and 8 p. m. to enroll new registrants of the First and Second precincts of the Ninth Ward.

He will also be at the Kenner City Hall on Wednesday and Thursday during the same hours for registrants in the Fourth through the Ninth precincts of the Ninth Ward.

The registrar said that he is visiting the two city halls to enable the voters ineligible to vote a chance to reregister for the Harahan and Kenner municipal primaries in April.

Tax Collections

Riviere said that residents who have resided in the parish one year and who have been registered do not have to reregister again.

State, parish, and municipal property taxes throughout Jefferson parish are being collected by Sheriff William S. Coci, and four municipal tax collectors in the parish.

The deadline for making payments without having to pay a penalty is set for Feb. 20. Office hours at all collection agencies are Monday through Friday from 9

Homestead exemption claims may also be filed with assessor Vernon J. Wilty in the Gretna courthouse and at his branch office, 3300 Metairie rd. during the same office hours.

The Immaculate Conception church sodality at Marrero will sponsor a masquerade party Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the school auditorium, Marrero, according to Mrs. Gail Inguagiato, publicity chairman.

Carnival Ball Plans

Plans for a Carnival ball will be completed at a meting of the St. Joseph School Co-operative Club of Gretna Monday at 8 p. m. in the school auditorium.

The Lafitte Yacht Club will meet Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Barataria tavern, Lafitte. The newly installed officers of the club will preside at the session, according to E. E. Vogel, secretary.

Demonstrations on various phases of work done by members of the Bridge City Elementary school 4-H Club were given at a recent meeting of the club held in the school.

A meeting of the Mothers' Club of the Westwego Junior High school will be held Monday at 7 p. m. in the school auditorium, according to Mrs. Joseph Granier, reporter.

The Adolph Meyer School Cooperative Club will meet Tuesday at 1:15 p. m. in the school basement, lower Algiers, to complete plans for a Carnival ball on Friday, announced Mrs. Farrell J. Smith, reporter.

EVENTS MONDAY

7:30 P. M.—Westwego Catholic Youth Club, Catholic Auditorium, Westwego; Auxiliary to Harvey Marrero Post No. 222, American Legion, Schnell's Sporting Center, Marrero; Club Seidal, American Legion Post Home, Gretna City Park; Advisory Council, Lebanon Chapter, Order of the De Molay, Gretna Masonic temple; Marrero Lions Club, Bertucci's restaurant, Harvey; Mayor and board of Alderman of Westwego City Hall.

Decision Reversed In Voter Purge Cas

NEW ORLEANS—The U. S. 5th District Court of Appeals here this week reversed the decision of a lower court which dismissed a suit filed by one of 2,500 Negroes who were purged from the Louisiana voting rolls.

The suit was filed by Dr. John L. Reddix against Mrs. May Lucky, Ouachita Parish registrar. Dr. Reddix complained he was deprived of the vote solely because he was a Negro. A federal district court dismissed the case.

The appeals court remanded the case to the district court after finding an error. Its sharply worded 17-page decision said, in part:

"It is clear from this abbreviated record that the occurences during late April and early May 1956, in which some 3,000 Negro voters and perhaps some white voters were summarily challenged within 30 days of an election under circumstances which concededly made it impossible for them all to be heard, resulting in striking some 2,500 Negro voters from the rolls, was a shocking, unfair act by someone."

The purge was alleged to be part of a White Citizens Council drive two years ago which resulted in the disfranchisement of more than 10,000 Negroes in north Louisiana.

The U. S. Justice Department issued warnings following the purges. The FBI conducted an investigation, and a federal grand jury went into session. No indictments or arrests were made.

NEGRO VOTE RULING IS CALLED SHOCKING

Rainach Criticizes Court On Registration Decision

LOUISIANA PARISH

By The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, Feb. 27.—State Senator W. M. Rainach Thursday accused two United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals judges of "shockingly unfair" judging without evidence in a suit involving Ouachita Parish Negro vote registration.

The former senator, chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Segregation, said he hoped the court steps was "inadvertent."

The decision at New Orleans was split, he added with two judges agreeing and one dissenting. He did not mention them by name.

The Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday said it was clear that removal of some 2,000 Negroes from Ouachita Parish vote rosters in April and May of 1956 was the result of a "shockingly unfair act by someone."

Ruling Reversed

The court reversed a District Court ruling which had dismissed Dr. John L. Reddiz' lawsuit against Mrs. May Lucky, Ouachita Parish registrar of voters.

Reddix had argued he and the other Negroes were removed from the roster solely because of race. The District Court had entered a summary judgment for Mrs. Lucky, saying that "from the pleading and affidavits on file there are no genuine issues of material fact presented by the record."

Senator Rainach is president of the Association of Citizens Councils of Louisiana. In 1956, some Citizens Council members played an active part in leading a purge of what they termed improperly qualified voters.

Act Is 'Shocking'

Referring to the appeal judges' statement about a "shockingly unfair act," Senator Rainach said:

"The charge by these two judges is completely irresponsible and cannot be allowed to go unchallenged. The people of Louisiana and the rest of the country have a right to know there was absolutely no evidence in the record to support this charge.

"The Reddix case came before them on a summary judgment issued against Reddix without trial. Since there was no trial, there was no occasion to enter any evidence bearing upon the merits of the 2,500 vote challenges."

U.S. Court Reverses Vote Purge Decision

The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals here last week reversed the decision of the Federal District court involving the dismissing suits brought by Negroes against the registrar of voters of Ouachita Parish alleging that their constitutional rights were violated in 1956 when 2500 Negroes were stricken from the registration rolls in the parish.

The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals within the past three weeks has declared unconstitutional segregation in New Orleans public schools, segregation in New Orleans City Park, segregation in the New Orleans public schools.

Both suits were brought against Mrs. May Lucky, Ouchita registrar of voters, and both were dismissed on judgements granted in favor of Mrs. Lucky.

In a suit brought by Dr. John L. Reddix against the registrar of voters, the court ruled that the purge was unjust. The doctor had claimed that he had been purged from the rolls, soley because of his color.

In a second case against the registrar, which was filed by Attorney James Sharp, Jr., it was claimed that he had represented a client who had been purged and that he was told, according to his claims, that Negroes had a special place to go to and be received by an assistant to the registrar.

Sharp also sued for damages in the amount of $25,000 for his client. His case which was decided against him in a lower Federal court was also reversed by the Appeals Court.

The Fifth Circuit court of Appeals made it very clear when it stated in its ruling "whatever area of doubt remains as to the identification of other civil rights, there can be no doubt that the right to vote in any state election is guaranteed to every qualified citizen without regard to his race or color".

In the Sharp suit the opinion pointed out that the trial court construed the complaint simply as a suit for damages and not a civil rights case. The court of appeals held: "The alleged interference here with Sharp's activities was directed to him as a member of the Negro public."

In the Reddix suit, the court of appeal said "Mrs. Lucky, participated in an illegal challenge of the plaintiff's right to vote and by her own illegal failure to comply with the state law respecting the processing of such a challenge, caused his name to be improperly struck from the voters' rolls, all of which acts by her were done solely because he was a member of the Negro race and in violation of specified provisions of the constitution.

Both opinions were written by Judges Wayne G. Borah and Robert Tuttle with Judge Ben C. Cameron dissenting.

No statement has been received as to what will be the procedure in the parish by the Negroes who had been purged. Some leading whites had come forward to assist them at the time and they had been give the cold shoulder by other whites and especially by White Citizens' Councils which motivated the purge.

DOWN IN LOUISIANA:

Vote 'Purge' Wiped Out By U. S. Court

NEW ORLEANS — Reversing a District Court decision, the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals last week wiped out the "purging" of more than 2,500 colored voters from the rolls in Ouachita Parish (County) in which the City of Monroe is located.

In a suit brought by Dr. John L. Reddix against the registrar of voters of the parish the court ruled that the purge was unjust.

The doctor had claimed that he had been purged from the rolls along with 2,500 others solely because o their color.

The court stated: "Whatever area of doubt remains as to identification of civil rights, there can be no doubt that the right to vote in any state election is guaranteed to every qualified citizen without regard to his race or color."

IN A SECOND CASE brought about by James Sharp Jr., an attorney, it was claimed that he had represented a client who had been purged and was not permitted to see the registrar of voters nor given sufficient time.

He was told, according to his claims, that colored people had a special place to go to and be received by an assistant to the registrar. Mr. Sharp also sued for damages in the amount of $25,000 for his client.

* * *

HIS CASE, which was decided against him in a lower Federal court, was also reversed by the Appeals Court.

No statement has been received as to what will be the procedure in the parish by the colored people who had been purged.

Some leading whites had come forward to assist them at the time and they had been given the cold shoulder by other whites and especially by White Citizens' Councils which motivated the purge.

The letter goes on to say: "No investigation will be conducted concerning the information furnished by you unless requested by Mr.

In an affidavit signed by Henry Derouen, Parish of Iberia, March 3, 1958, the charge that Sheriff Wattigny, had threatened him was made. Derouen, in his affidavit, said the threat was made after he and Wattigny became engaged in a conversation over an election for District Attorney. When opinions differed in regard to candidates, Derouen states in his affidavit that Wattigny said: "... you had better get right or we will make it tough for you in this parish."

Derouen's affidavit concludes: "... I then got afraid ... and went home. I can't see why people can't go to a voting poll and exercise their rights without having public officials trying to strong arm them."

An affidavit signed by Dennis David, New Iberia, made note of the fact that Sheriff Wattigny, upon learning that he would not vote for Wattigny, became enraged and said if he campaigned against Wattigny he would lock him in jail 'during the entire Sheriff's campaign and would not let me out of jail until after the election just to keep my mouth shut."

S. E. Duplantier, in his affidavit signed February, 17'58, stated that he was informed by Wattigny that he (Wattigny) was a school board member and "... if anybody fights me, I have to fight them." Duplantier said he received other calls during the election to the effect that he would be given trouble in regard to his school bus, if he didn't vote right.

Signed February 4, 1958, was another affidavit, this one by Emery Lewis, New Iberia, who said he was warned by Sheriff Wattigny that if he was caught campaigning against Wattigny he would "... run me out of town."

Still another affidavit was signed by Paul Washington, New Iberia, February 28, 1958 charging that when Sheriff Wattigny learned that he was voting against Wattigny's candidate, Wattigny examined his license plate, while a deputy stood of a continual series of harrassments by Wattigny, who asked him when he will be leaving town, the affidavit states.

A resident of Jeanerette, Milton Joseph, Sr., in an affidavit signed February 27 1958, said he and his son, Wilfred had been arrested falsely in August of 1956. He then took his son to Houston, Texas, for fear of his life. He, in his affidavit, says his son now resides in Houston. He said that when he told Sheriff Wattigny he was taking his son to Texas and to that the sheriff replied "that's a good idea."

In an affidavit dated February 11, 1958, Belasaire J. Leblanc, Erath, said he was falsely accused of "immorally tampering" with a young girl and was forced to give up his business and leave town. He says he is afraid to return to New Iberia.

Four affidavits signed by Lelia Menard, Mrs. Walter Schexnayder, Noah Boutte and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Trahan, dated during February, 1958, vouched for Leblanc as being a man of good character.

And finally, the last affidavit was signed by Mrs. Nelson Stoutes, February 17, 1958, stating that she had received word that a deputy was going to Leblanc's shop to order him to leave town.

Vote-Registration Parley August 14th

SHREVEPORT, La. -- On Thursday, August 14, The United Christian Movement Conference on Registration and Voting will sponsor a Conference Worshop at the Avenue Baptist Church, located at 1600 Peabody Street in Shreveport, Louisiana.

Many leading personalities throughout the State who are working to the last degree of their abilities in teaching Negroes the power of the ballot in their respective communities are expected to attend the Workshop. Other notables who will act as consultants for the Workshop will be Rev. John Tilley, Exec. Director of the Southern Leadership Conference from Baltimore, Maryland. Rev. Tilley will probably be remembered as instigator of the mass registration movement in the Baltimore area which resulted in the registration of ten thousand Negroes in thirty days; Prof. A. P. Watson, Head, Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology, Wiley College, Marshall, Texas; Miss Ella Baker, Associate Director of the Southern Leadership Conference; and Rev. Martin Luther King developer of the bus strike.

General mistreatment is charged in the affidavit signed February 19, 1958, by Louis Green, New Iberia. Green charged that Deputies Lloyd Landry, Ferd Pourciau and Walter Comeaux keep him in suctody in September 1956, during which they alled him a B.... S.. O. B.... and held a gun in his face.

Joseph Alvin (Al) Reaux, in his affidavit signed March 14, 1958, avers that Sheriff Wattigny called him a B.... S.. O. B.... when he refused a request that Reaux vote for Wattigny. Reaux's affidavit quotes the Sheriff as saying "... if I'm elected sheriff, New Iberia will be too small for you.' Since then he was the victim

MONROE, LA. -- James Sharp, Jr., Monroe attorney, filed a motion with the U. S. District Court here last Tuesday withdrawing as counsel for Dr. John L Reddix, in a case that challenges the whole process by which 3,000 or more Negroes were stricken from the rolls of voters of Ouachita Parish, Louisiana.

The motion states that Attorney Sharp desires to withdraw from the case because the plaintiff (Dr. Reddix) "is presently absent from the state of Louisiana making preparations to withdraw himself as a resident of this state permanently." The petition goes on to tell that the counsel feels "that this move on the part of plaintiff is untimely and inconsistent with his moral obligation to his attorney," and that counsel feels that the move is also inconsistent with plaintiff's moral obligation and duty to the class he represents.

Further, the motion goes on to say that counsel was employed in the case under an agreement with the Guiding Voice, Inc., a domestic corporation of which the plaintiff was president. The organization was to have financed the suit and also a companion suit of Sharp versus Mae Lucky, Registrar of Voters, the petition reads. The petition makes note of the fact that the office of the organization has been closed sometime and that its funds are now exhausted and "satisfactory requirements of the concern to comply with the financial obligations as agreed have not been met."

At the time of the filing of the motion, Attorney Sharp announced that he will continue personnally prosecuting and financing the Sharp versus Lucky case, in a suit against segregation on the basis of race in the office of the registrar. "The case will not die," said Attorney Sharp, who also commented on the latest developments: "It is regrettable, however, that this injustice done to so many has now become the burden of so few."

The Sharp case is scheduled to be heard July 10, and the judge has ordered it to be heard by jury. However, Sharp said: "In a move to avoid the jury and its additional expense, I have filed a motion to dismiss plaintiff's demands for damages and to reiterate the full prayer and demands for all equity relief originally prayed for and to move the court to decide the equity question and to discharge the jury." Sharp then added: "It was not damages that we were interested in in the first place but mainly the issue of segregation in the registrar's office."

It will be remembered that both the cases were at one time dismissed by Judge Perkins but his decisions were reversed by the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and the cases were remanded to him to be heard on their merits.

Bill to Ban Secret Committee Voting Planned by La. Solons

Legislative Session to Open Monday

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Three Louisiana lawmakers said Saturday they will sponsor a bill to banish secret voting of some House and Senate committees.

Reps. A. T. Sanders Jr. and Wayne Gaudin of East Baton Rouge and Elmer Bernard of West Baton Rouge plan the war against legislative secrecy.

The Legislature opens Monday, and in this state it is a 60-day kaleidoscope of scores of committee sessions — the heart of the legislative process.

Many vote openly. The great majority hold open hearings. Some, on touchy issues, prefer closed session voting.

WAIT ONE YEAR

One of the major committees voting in secret is the House Appropriations Committee, which gets first crack at all money bills. The appropriations committee is the kingpin around which all other committees revolve. The administration in power always controls it.

Sanders, Gaudin and Bernard thought of trying their proposal in the 1957 fiscal session, but abandoned it until the regular Legislature in 1958.

Their primary target is secret voting, not the closed meetings which committees sometimes feel are necessary.

Louisiana laws tend toward open public view. The state has a public records act, permitting citizens to examine public documents at will unless exempt by law.

'DON'T BELONG'

A few years ago the Legislature passed a law requiring all public agencies to conduct voting in public and that law is effective.

Public agencies may stay in secret session for hours, but the final voting must be done in public. The Legislature, however, remains exempt from this provision.

"If you don't have the nerve to vote in the open, you don't belong in the Legislature," big, muscular Sanders said. "I don't believe in hiding behind doors to vote."

Bernard agreed, saying "Legislators should have the backbone to let their people know how they vote." Gaudin took a similar view.

TAX EXEMPTIONS

On another front, two leaders of Gov. Earl Long said they are "exploring" the idea of introducing legislation withholding the state's 10-year property exemptions from new industry which makes use of foreign oil in Louisiana.

The two are Sen. B. B. Rayburn of Bogalusa and Rep. Richard Bertrand of Lafayette parish.

Bertrand, from Southwestern Louisiana where most oil production is a major industry, said the new proposal would help promote more Louisiana oil development.

Bertrand also will co-sponsor with Rep. E. J. Grizzaffi of St. Mary parish a formal legislative protest against foreign oil imports.

OIL IMPORTS

Louisiana, still in an industrial boom despite the recession, offers 10-year exemptions from state and local property taxes for new and expanding manufacturing facilities.

Rep. T. T. Fields already has announced plans to remove school and parish road districts from future property tax exemptions.

And Rep. John Lewis of Beauregard parish will push legislation to block state agencies from using any petroleum products based on foreign oil. Louisiana officials

How 1,211 Were Robbed Of Their Right To Vote

BALTIMORE

"I would like the record to show that these letters are returnable to James H. Pollack and not to Mrs. Irma Dixon," Hyman Pressman, attorney, representing the interests of Negro persons challenged by the Pollack forces, called this point to the attention of the Board of Supervisors of Elections, at the hearng Tuesday on the challenges.

Mr. Pressman was referring to several hundred envelopes which Mrs. Dixon and the Pollack forces had at the hearing as a basis for their challenges. They contended the envelopes had been returned undelivered to citizens in the city's Fourth Legislative District in accordance with Election Board rules.

THE HEARING resulted in the disqualification of 1,211 voters.

Of this number, 1,211 of the 4th District losses were colored voters who were challenged by Mrs. Irma G. Dixon, a Fourth District Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates.

A total of 515 others, challenged citizens losing their right to vote in the November 4 election.

The board held they failed to acknowledge notification of challenges to their right to vote at recorded addresses.

Challenged by Coalition candidates, they lost their right to vote.

These latter were among the 1,211 such challenges filed through Jack E. Caplan, grocer residing in the 1500 block Laurens St.

OF THIS number, 487 challenges were in the 35th precinct of the 15th Ward, where Mr. Pollack himself resides. His residence is at 2306 Anoka Ave.

Among those disqualified was a resident whose address was given as 2308 Anoka Ave., next door to Mr. Pollack. She was Mrs. Alma Hellman who signed an affidavit to the effect that she had moved to 3602 Lucille Ave. three years ago. The board advised her it would transfer her vote registration to that address.

Three other residents of the Pollack block who appeared to advise they had moved and the challenge was a proper one identified themselves as Minnie and Louis Wase and Jay J. Wase.

They told the board they had moved from 2325 Anoka Ave. in December 1957 to 6100 Westcliff Drive.

A member of the elections board commented, "Next time, send us your change of address."

ALMOST ALL of the persons challenged expressed their anger at the inconvenience and expense of appearing in person to defend their voting rights was causing them.

Several of the challenged persons were openly hostile toward Mrs. Dixon, who sat with her husband, William B. Dixon, and several women associates on front seats during most of the proceedings.

Mrs. Dixon has the support of the Coalition ticket but has said she did not seek it.

Typical of the enraged residents who had to sit and wait in the hearing room only to discover the Dixon - Pollack forces had erred in challenging them was Mrs. Lillian Marlow, 1061 Argyle Ave.

Mrs. MARLOW

Mrs. Marlow, a laundry worker, told the board she had been living at her present address for 10 years, and the board threw the challenge out.

Later, Mrs. Marlow told the AFRO: "I 've lost a day's work for nothing. I vote all the time, yet they said they sent two letters, and someone's at my house all the time."

As was their procedure when one of their challenges was disputed, The Pollack representatives looked through their envelopes for the envelope allegedly mailed to the person in question.

Previously, the Pollack forces had permitted no inspection of the envelopes by opposing attorneys.

Some were just held at a distance for Board members to note during a challenge.

IN THIS instance, Hyman Pressman, opposing attorney, Board members and newsmen around the hearing bench were given a close view of the envelope.

It bore Mrs. Marlow's name, her Argyle Ave. address —and penciled on the front was the notation, " . . . still there," and the names, "Mildred Lang" and . . . "Geneva Griffin" under this notation.)

Mr. Pressman called this to the Board's attention:

TYPICAL OF the dozens of citizens who spent part of Tuesday at the Supervisors of Elections to defend their right to vote was 71-year-old Elias Caulk, 848 George St. He is a registered Republican who has voted since he was 21 and has lived at his present address for three years. Apprised of these facts, election officials commented, "We shouldn't have sent this one out." In background, Mrs. Irma Dixon, who challenged Mr. Caulk's right to vote, incorrectly listing him on challenge sheet as "Elsa" Caulk. Mr. Caulk is single.

DIXON-POLLACK challenges before the Supervisors of Elections in Baltimore were presented by Mrs. Irma G. Dixon, on front row, supported by workers indentified as Miss Annie W. Lee and Mrs. Mary B. Waters, seated on second row. Second from right, Miss Gladys Barbour, active in Womanpower circles, who was seen conferring with Pollack-Dixon workers. Later, Miss Barbour told the AFRO: "Mrs. Dixon asked me to get some girls to work for her. I thought it was only right that I be there with them." Mrs. Dixon, Democratic candidate for Legislature, has disavowed support of the Womanpower Committee.

219 new voters register; total now 100,430 here

BALTIMORE

There is still time to register to vote in the March 3, 1959 primary elections.

The deadline for registering is January 31, 1959 — that's 49 days away — but if you're not qualified to vote, don't wait until the last minute, do it today.

Already, a total of 351 citizens have registered to vote since Nov. 20th when the Supervisors of Elections office opened its books for new registrants.

Of this number, 219 were colored, which brings the total number of colored registered voters in the city to 100,430.

In the coming spring elections, residents of Baltimore's Fourth Councilmanic District have an opportunity to elect qualified colored candidates to the Council if more colored Democrats register in this district so that colored voters have the controlling vote.

At the present time, there are 54,172 voters registered in the District. Of this number, 30,196 are colored and 23,976 are white.

But colored Democrats are only 47 per cent of the total. Of 37,239 Democrats, only 17,456 are colored. To nominate colored candidates in the Democratic primary, more Democrats must be registered.

The Supervisors of Elections office is open daily to accept and register new voters from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon. The office is locatedin the basement of the People's Court Building, Fayette and Gay Sts.

THE FOLLOWING table shows how many new voters registered, the parties they affiliated with for the eight-day period ending Nov. 29, 1958.

Note the largest number of voters, 99, signed up on Nov. 20, the first day the books were open since the Nov. 4th general election:

See gerrymandering of 4th District if Pollack forces win

BALTIMORE

"If the Coalition Ticket is defeated, Pollack forces will again gerrymander the Fourth District."

This was the prediction made Thursday at Coalition headquarters.

Gerrymander in this sense means removing from the Fourth District precincts in which colored voters are registered in large numbers to a nearby legislature district in which the majority is overwhelmingly white.

THIS TABLE shows that if 4,000 or 5,000 colored voters are taken out of the Fourth District, there would be no threat to continued Pollack domination.

Baltimore City Registered Votes By Districts

D.	Tot.	White	Colored	Pct.
1	43,546	40,416	3,130	7
2	34,261	21,097	13,164	38
3	128,256	115,578	12,678	9.8
4	51,579	23,444	28,135	54.5
5	110,922	81,627	29,295	26
6	25,084	88,275	13,809	27
	420,648	320,437	100,211	24

The last gerrymander affecting colored voters was engineered by the Pollack-Curran political machine in 1936. The measure was passed by the Legislature on April 21, 1933.

It removed the 4th and 6th precincts of the Fourth Ward from the Fourth District and placed them in the First District.

The 4th precinct is bounded by Lexington, Fremont, Greene and Saratoga Sts. The 6th precinct is within the area bounded by Pratt, Baltimore, Eutaw and Liberty Sts. Both are predominantly colored precincts.

* * *

THE POLLACK-CURRAN bill removed from the Fourth District the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th precincts of the Sixteenth Ward and placed them in the Fourth District.

The first, second and third precincts are within an area bounded by the Maryland Railroad, Gilmor St., Lafayette and Fremont Aves.

The old 33rd precinct became the new 24th precinct which is bounded by Lafayette, Edmondson and Fremont Aves.

All of these precincts are populated principally by colored voters.

THE BILL was introduced in the Legislature in 1933 by Delegate Bachman of the Fifth District. It passed the House of Delegates by a vote of 110 to 0 and the State Senate by 28 to 0.

Pollack - backed Fourth District representatives who voted for the bill included E. Milton Altfeld, state senator, and the following members of the House of Delegates: Isadore Aaronson, Leon Abramson, Robert Benjamin, Alex Goodman, Emanuel Goldfine and Louis Binder.

The reason for the Pollack gerrymander was that the Fourth District, largely colored and Republican, had heretofore elected to city council Warner T. McQuinn, Walter Emerson, William Fitzgerald and Harry Cummings, all colored.

* * *

AFTER THE gerrymander, no colored person could be elected to city council and the candidates from the Fourth District who were elected were usually Jewish.

As a result of this gerrymander, Pollack for the first time secured a firm grip on the Fourth District.

For a period of 21 years, he was never successfully challenged until the Coalition Ticket in 1954 won a place on the Democratic ticket over Pollock's son in the primary and was able to elect Emory Cole and Truly Hatchett to the House of Delegates and Harry A. Cole to the Senate in the General Election.

If the Pollack candidates are elected on Nov. 4 to the legislature, the Coalition statement said, a second Pollack effort to gerrymander the Fourth District by tranferring blocs of colored voters out of the district is a certainty.

'Mrs. Dixon ought to be ashamed..'

BALTIMORE

"Mrs. Irma Dixon ought to be ashamed to let herself be used in an attempt to reduce the number of colored voters."

And,

"You can't make me believe Mrs. Dixon voluntarily went down there to challenge 1,700 colored voters."

These were the statements which came on Wednesday as the 4th District political campaign waxed hotter and the right of 1,751 colored voters in the District was challenged by Pollack forces.

Mrs. Irma Dixon, a Democratic candidate for the Legislature who has disavowed the support of the Coalition ticket, was the person who appeared at Election headquarters to present the Pollack challenges.

Mrs. Dixon's answer was, 'I am not so stupid I don't know what I'm doing..."

OF HER action, it was Hyman Pressman, attorney, who said immediately that she 'should be ashamed.'

Mr. Pressman added: 'Mrs. Dixon claimed to be acting on the basis of principle in disavowing the coalition slate, but she has now shown her true colors.

"She appears to be a subject of Jack Pollack, lock, stock and barrel."

State Senator Harry A. Cole, head of the 4th District Coalition ticket and a candidate to succeed himself, was the one who commented that he could not believe Mrs. Dixon voluntarily challenges 1700 colored voters.

Of Mrs. Dixon's action, Senator Cole added: "She is encouraging the resentment of the colored community."

THE CHALLENGE of voters in the District came a few minutes before the 4 p.m. deadline on Tuesday. It marked the first time in modern election history when such a large number of voters had been challenged.

In addition to the 1,751 colored voters whose rights were questioned by the Pollack-Dixon forces, Coalition candidates challenged the right of 637 residents in the area.

A total of 487 of those challenged were in the 35th precinct of the 15th ward where Mr. Pollack himself resides. (He lives in the 2300 block of Anoka Ave.)

These challenges were presented by Jack E. Caplan, a grocer residing in the 1500 block Laurens St.

OF THE Coalition challenges, Senator Cole said: "Exhaustive study of the areas were made before the challenges. There is reason to believe that the people named in these notarized statements no longer live at these addresses."

Of the challenges submitted by the Pollack - Dixon forces, Senator Cole said, it appeared the challenges were "indiscriminately' filed in an effort to 'disfranchise large numbers of colored voters'.

Mr. Pollack countered that 'these challenges were made after lengthy investigation and I will stake everything on their accuracy."

Mrs. Dixon herself told the AFRO of the challenges she presented: "I can stand on the challenges I made. It was not a matter of eliminating colored voters. Some of the people are not colored. I have people who can prove that.

"I am not against colored people. I feel in this respect that I can help colored people. I'm not so stupid I don't know what I'm doing and what I believe."

MEANTIME, as both sides talked back and forth, the Supervisors of Elections office announced that 566 of the 1,751 Pollack - Dixon challenges were invalid, that a preliminary check showed the voters to be living at the addresses named. Ten of the 643 challenged by the Coalition forces were also thrown out.

Notices to all of the challenged persons were put in the mail on Wednesday. They have been ordered to appear at the Supervisor of Elections office on Tuesday, Oct. 21 to show cause why their names should not be removed from the books.

If the challenged persons still live at the addresses given, they must take an oath to that effect.

If they have moved, they will be given an opportunity to change their addresses and thus qualify to vote in the November 4th General Election.

THE BOARD OF Supervisors of Elections met Thursday afternoon to consider procedures in the handling of the more than 2,300 voter-challenges that have been filed by the Pollack forces and on behalf of the Coalition ticket in the city's Fourth District.

Eugene A. Sekulow, chief clerk, announced, however, that 568 of the challenges had not been found on the office's name plate file.

The board promptly suspended its meeting to allow a force of clerks to check these names against those in the binders used at polling places.

This work was still in progress at AFRO presstime.

THESE NAMES will still have to be checked against the office master files, Mr. Sekulow stated.

Meanwhile, Charles A. Dorsey, Republican president of the board, branded as false a rumor that the Supervisors of Elections had thrown out a number of the challenges.

"We have not thrown out any challenges," he stated. "The board will not start considering them in this respect until Tuesday."

Mr. Dorsey refused members of the press a listing of the names of those challenged.

'WHAT I BELIEVE...' — Mrs. Irma G. Dixon, extreme right, a 4th District Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates, is shown at the Supervisor of Elections on Tuesday where she challenged the right of 1,751 registrants to vote on November 4th. With her are Meyer Reamer, left, and Donald S. Hurwitz, center. Mrs. Dixon told the AFRO: "I can stand on the challenges I made. Iam not so stupid I don't know what I'm doing and what I believe."

WORK OF THE Register and Vote Campaign Committee has added 16,063 new colored voters to the list since the November, 1956, elections.

These registrations are in all sections of the city.

For example, in the largely colored 5th precinct of the 5th ward where 1,227 of those registered, voted in 1956, colored registration increased from 168 to 201. Only 40 white voters are registered in this precinct.

In the 7th precinct of the 16th ward, (1200 Ashburton) colored registration increased from 466 to 687. Ninety-three percent of those registered in this precinct voted in the 1956 election.

THE 25 PERCENT of the 14th ward, (Arlington & Harlem), where all registered voters are colored increased from 642 to 760.

* * *

IN SOUTH BALTIMORE'S 2nd Precinct (S. Paca St..) colored registration increased from 444 to 528. 3rd Precinct (Hill St. School) from 259 to 314.

* * *

IN EAST BALTIMORE increases were as follows in the 8th ward:

8th Precinct (North & Broadway) 220 to 302.

10th Precinct (1600 Bond) 354 to 470.

17th Precinct (Oliver & Dallas) 489 to 638.

18th Precinct (Broadway & Gay) 657 to 843.

In Cherry Hill—25th ward, 3 precincts (9, 10, 11) increased from 2471 to 3001.

The largest precinct in the whole city is Cherry Hill's 11th Precinct, which registered 1,094 colored and five white voters.

* * *

TWO YEARS AGO the AFRO listed 110 key precincts in which the registration was 57,188 colored (85%) and 8,974 (15%).

These precincts were keyed for analysis purposes to study registration and voting trends.

This year the AFRO keys 125 precincts in which the registration shows 74,710 colored voters (92%) and 6,754 white voters (8%).

Before the November elections there will be additional registration days in which the Register and Vote Committee says its campaign will continue.

Mrs. Lillie Jackson, president of the Baltimore Branch NAACP and Rev. John Tilley, campaign director, expressed their appreciation to the pastors of churches and the workers who led the movement to put 16,063 new voters on the books.

Their goal was 100,000 registered in 1958.

Mrs. Jackson said there is still time to get the 6,564 additional registrants which will permit the campaign to reach its objective.

Baltimore Reports Large Registration

BALTIMORE — (NNPA) — Nearly every fourth voter registered in Baltimore City is colored.

Official registration figures from the Supervisor of Elections office show that there are 93,436 colored voters registered as compared with 316,952 white voters.

The party breakdown of the colored voters discloses that 55,026 are Democrats, 36,555 are Republicans, and 1,855 declined to state their party affiliation.

Work of the Register and Vote Campaign Committee of the NAACP has added 16,163 new colored voters to the list since the November, 1956, election.

Registration of colored voters in the fourth district shows that a coalition of colored Democrats and Republicans could send a colored Representative to Congress if they could agree upon a candidate. Registration in the fourth district totals 26,664 colored voters as compared with 22,937 white voters.

PARTY BREAKDOWN

Of the registered colored voters in the fourth district, 14,549 are Democrats, and 10,931 are Republicans, as compared with 19,295 white Democrats and 3,119 white Republicans.

A total of 584 colored voters and 523 white voters in the fourth district declined to give their party affiliation.

Before the November elections there will be additional registration days in which the Register and Vote Committee says its campaign will continue.

Mrs. Lillie Jackson, president of the Baltimore Branch NAACP and Rev. John Tilley, campaign director, expressed their appreciation to the pastors of churches and the workers who led the movement to put 16,063 new voters on the books.

Their goal was 100,000 registered in 1958.

Mrs. Jackson said there is still time to get the 6,564 additional registrants which will permit the campaign to reach its objective.

A Bad Bill Passes

Republicans have been at a loss to explain why colored people in Baltimore as new voters are registering four to one as Democrats.

For example, in the last three weeks, a total of 326 persons registered as Democrats and only 76 as Republicans.

One reason, certainly, is last week's collaboration of Republican members of the House of Representatives with the Dixiecrats in an effort to cripple decisions of the Supreme Court.

By a vote of 241 to 155, the House passed a thoroughly low bill designed to make all state laws take precedence over Federal statutes.

If enacted into law, this bill would create legal chaos, not only in the fields of civil liberties and civil rights, but in such widely varied areas as labor, marketing of agricultural products, aliens, aviation, water power, radio and television, banking and trucking.

Northern Republicans lent their support to the bill in an effort to reverse Supreme Court decisions that state laws on subversion must give way to Federal laws on the subject.

The Dixiecrats, who framed the 74-word measure, of course, are counting on the bill to make state segregation laws take precedence over the Supreme Court's decisions that such discrimination is unlawful.

The bill now goes to the Senate where the Dixiecrats and Republicans are certain to make an effort to rush it through before adjournment.

But even if that happens there are two more hurdles for the measure to cross. One is the bill, if passed, must get the approval of President Eisenhower which is doubtful.

But if by some mistaken notion, he does affix his signature, the Supreme Court itself can still declare it unconstitutional.

Baltimore registers 101,771 tan voters

Workers say now the big job is to get out vote in November

101,771 colored citizens are registered to vote in the Nov. 4 general elections.

This official figure came from the Supervisors of Elections Office on Thursday.

No breakdown on the latest registration figures for the Fourth District were available at weekend and, because of the last week registration rush, will not be ready for several days.

The unprecedented registration among colored citizens, both as to total number and time in which the record high was reached, brought jubilant reactions from register - to-vote leaders who waged an enormous campaign to qualify 100,000 voters.

The final five-day surge to registration points saw the figure jump from 98,475 as of Sept. 16 to the new record high as 3,296 new voters qualified.

A new one-day high was set the final day, Sept. 22 when 1,582 registered, more than double the one-day record of 701 just set on Sept. 15.

* * *

THE TOTAL number of voters in Baltimore now is 427,226, of which 325,455 are white and 101,771 are colored.

Thus the colored voter now is 24 percent of the total, as compared with 23 per cent on June 1 of this year.

Last figures available for the 4th District, where crucial election races now underway may have wider implications than merely who wins seats this years, showed on Sept. 1 that there were 26,432 colored voters and 22,842 white voters. Here is a breakdown:

Party	Total	Colored	White
Rep.	14,057	10,964	3,093
Dem.	34,111	14,878	19,233
Dc.	1,106	590	516
Tot.	49,274	26,432	22,842

Following is a breakdown of registration during the last five days:

Date	Total	Dem.	Rep.	Decl.
9/17	343	265	71	7
9/18	467	372	91	4
9/19	456	333	113	4
9/20	448	343	103	2
9/22	1,582	1,223	340	19

THE CITY-WIDE effort to push colored registration to the 100,000 mark was initiated by the NAACP on April 9, 1957.

The city's ministers and other organizations, as well as individual citizens, joined in the effort.

As of December in 1957 the registration stood at 85,556.

This of course means that a total of 16,215 voters were added in slightly less than 10 months. Of this number, 8,335 were signed up since June 1.

One big factor in the final splurge was the Womanpower group which recently was organized and threw its full weight into the campaign.

* * *

THE REV. John L. Tilley, pastor of New Metropolitan Baptist Church, headed the NAACP's register - to vote efforts and Mrs. Victorine Adams, civic worker, was chairman of the Womanpower group.

At the Tilley home here on Thursday, Mrs. Tilley exclaimed:

"I think that's pretty wonderful. I am sure Rev. Tilley will be delighted to know.

"He and the rest of the register and vote workers should be proud. They worked so hard."

The Rev. Mr. Tilley was reached by long distance telephone on Thursday afternoon in Atlanta, Ga., where he is preparing for the Fall Southern Christian Leadership Conference to be held in Norfolk, Va. on Oct. 1 and Oct. 2

He said: "We've gone beyond the goal. That's indeed good news."

* * *

THE REV. Mr. Tilley added: "I feel the accomplishment is the result of the splendid cooperation on the part of ministers, leaders of various community organizations and individuals who canvassed from house to house to acquaint citizens with the importance of becoming qualified to vote..

"I appreciate greatly the excellent cooperation which we had from all persons and agencies.

"I hope we will be as interested in casting our vote for men and women who represent the best interests of the people on November 4."

* * *

HERE ARE comments of other citizens about the success of the campaign:

John L. Berry, insurance executive, "Great news, now, let's get out the vote."

Bowen Jackson, coordinator of the NAACP register to vote drive: "This is wonderfully good news.

"It shows what a united people can do.

"We want to thank the AFRO, the ministers, the NAACP staff and the wonderful women of Womanpower, all of whom helped to go over the top.

"This is a victory we all can share.

"You will hear from us immediately as we begin the educational drive to get out the November vote on election day.

"The NAACP is non-partisan. We want to see the people at the polls in November."

MRS. JUANITA MITCHELL, director of the NAACP register to vote drive: "It's marvelous.

"As director of the NAACP register to vote drive which started on April 9, 1957 with a goal of 100,000, the Baltimore Branch NAACP is grateful to the Revs. John L. Tilley, E. D. Meade, W. E. Paige and all the ministers; to the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers; and to the Womanpower committee and all others who gave marvelous cooperation in the unprecedented drive to get our people on the books.

"But, the battle is not yet won. We urge all the ministers, the AFRO, Womanpower and our other workers to help us intensify our efforts to get these fine new and old voters out to the polls on Election Day.

"Only when 100,000 of us go to the polls will we be able to get up off our knees as beggars and stand up as free men to demand our full rights as citizens."

MRS. LILLIE M. JACKSON, president, Baltimore NAACP: "That's wonderful . . wonderful. This shows you what can happen when a number of people and organizations cooperate. It pays off."

Mrs. Lula Jones Garrett, AFRO woman's editor: "Baltimore women always get what they start out for. I'm happy and gratified, but not surprised!"

Mrs. Margaret Dyer, Faith Baptist Church register to vote campaign leader: "I think the leaders of the campaign deserve congratulations for the many hours of going from door to door and for tireless effort.

"Had it nt been for them there would be many persons still unqualified to vote.

"Thanks to the Rev. John Tilley, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Mitchell, Womanpower, all the ministers and all the many helpers who worked night and day. We are now prepared to go to the polls and vote."

Mrs. Victorine Adams and Mrs. Ethel Rich, executive director and executive secretary of Womanpower:

"We are grateful to all the women who took Womenpower to their hearts and worked to achieve the success that our Register to Vote Day attained, with the women leaving their jobs and their homes to secure the 1,000 new voters that were our goal.

"The success of the Womanpower leadership luncheon was phenomenal, not only for the beautifully gowned ladies but for the earnest and enthusiastic participation in the workshop.

One City Registers 100,000 Tan Voters

Over 1,000 sign book in one day

BALTIMORE

In the 6 days, Sept. 8 to Sept. 13, 1,425 more colored voters registered.

Of these, 1,034 were recorded as Democrats; 366 as Republicans and 25 declined.

These declined voters will not be able to vote in a primary election because they did not affiliate themselves with any party but they will be able to vote in the November General Election.

The total number of colored voters now registered in Baltimore is 97,480; 37,422 Republicans; 57,822 Democrats; 1,435 Declined.

The total number of white voters registered as of Sept. 13 is 320,793.

THE NEW TOTALS to be added to these figures are the five days of registration for Sept. 15 to Sept. 18, now in the Supervisors of Elections office, and the figures for Sept. 19, 20, and 22 when registration ends.

These last three days, Friday, Saturday and Monday should break all records.

New figures for colored registrants in the 4th District were made available by the Supervisors of Elections office.

As of Sept. 1, there were 26,432 colored voters in the 4th District; 22,842 white voters.

Party	Total	Colored	White
Rep.	14,057	10,964	3,093
Dem.	34,111	14,878	19,233
Dec.	1,106	590	516
Tot.	49,274	26,432	22,842

According to the Supervisor of Elections, this final list includes all new registrations to Sept. 1 and all persons removed from the list due, to transfer to other districts.

The colored day-by-day registration last week was as follows:

Total	Rep.	Dem.	Decl.
Mon., 9/8 176	47	124	5
Tues.,9/9 204	47	155	2
Wed.,9/10 294	62	224	8

Fri.,9/12 191	47	143	1
Sat.,9/13 271	67	200	4
Total 1,425	366	1,034	25

In the week of Sept. 8 to Sept. 13 the Supervisor of Elections set up registration offices in the public schools and this accounts for the total of 1,425 colored voters registered this week. In the same period, 1,797 white voters registered.

Monday is usually the best registration day. With the registration offices set up in the schools, however, the best registration days were Wednesday and Thursday. On Wednesday, 294 colored voters registered and on Thursday, 289. Saturday, Sept. 13's registration of 271 is a high for registration for that day.

55,000 registered

BALTIMORE — Of the 55,000 colored voters registered in the 23 counties of the state, Baltimore County leads with 7,824. Anne Arundel is the second with 6,352.

Among the smaller counties are Montgomery, 2,7[illegible]; Dorchester, 3,057, Wicomico, 2,292; Caroline, 1,342; Queen Anne, 1,398; Cecil, 1179; Carroll, 1607; Washington, 644.

Baltimore city's 101,771 brings the state's total colored registrants to 156,777.

127 new voters register

BALTIMORE

A total of 127 colored persons registered to vote from Dec. 1-6, 1958, bringing the total number of colored persons registered to 100,557.

Of the 127 new voters who signed up during this six-day period, 105 registered as Democrats, and 21 as Republican. One person declined to affiliate with either party and thus will not be able to vote in the March 3, 1959 Primary election, only in the General Electionon May 5, 1959.

Only persons affiliated with one of the two parties can vote in a Primary Election. If you are registered but no party, you can change to Democrat or Republican if you do so by January 31, 1959.

The office of the Supervisor of Elections is open daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays. It is located in the People's Court Building at Fayette and Gay Sts.

For the period Nov. 20-29, the first time books were open for registration of new voters since the Nov. 4th General Election, a total of 351 persons, 219 of them colored, signd up.

The following table shows how registration of new voters went fr the period Dec. 1-6, 1958:

Prince Georges Voting Registers Few Upsets

Municipal elections were held in 11 Prince Georges County towns yesterday.

The highlights included re-election of three unopposed mayors in Capitol Heights, District Heights and Morningside; election of a new mayor in Seat Pleasant, and unseating of several other office holders in Edmonston and Fairmont Heights. The turnout of voters, however, was comparatively light.

Following are the results:

CAPITOL HEIGHTS

Mayor Elmer L. Hockman had no opposition in his bid for a third term, but the six incumbent councilmen did. Six other candidates filed against them to make it a 12-man race The incumbents won.

Mr. Hockman received 243 votes.

Winners in the council fight were James E. Clark, 172 votes; William A. Devine, sr., 194; Harvey E. Ennis, 164; Leo P Forami, 175; Earl A. Inzer, 172 and Edward D. Schaus, 162 Mr. Forami also is candidate for county commissioners, subject to the county Democratic primary contest two weeks from today.

Losers were Albert E. Anderson, 82 votes; Earl V. Burdette, sr., 74; William Miles, 68; George E. Nairn, 121; George B. Taylor, 61, and Robert N. Woolwine, 128.

In a three-way fight for treasurer, incumbent James L. Gearhart, with 162 votes, won over Lois E. Allen, with 52, and Aubrey L. Thomas, with 57.

Two amendments to the town charter also carried. One, removing the $5,000 limit on the amount of real, personal or mixed property the town can buy and sell, was approved 144 to 62. Another, changing the town's bonded debt limit from $15,000 to 6 per cent of the total assessed valuation, was passed 144 to 57.

CARROLLTON

The town councilmen were elected in the community's first formal election.

One was an incumbent, Arden Wolfe, with 96 votes. The other was Harry J. Donahue, with 83. Their names were the only ones on the ballots, but Marion Ray polled 39 write-in votes and six others got from one to three votes.

They were elected for four-year terms. The community's Mayor and two other councilmen have two more years to serve. Carrollton is a unique community in that its present officials were elected before the community actually was completed. The Mayor is the president of the firm which is building the development.

CHEVERLY

Three town councilmen were elected, one of them in a four-way race.

The contested seat was that from the 4th ward, where William M. Eley, jr., with 19, won the post being vacated by Joseph J. Scabullo. Theodore C. Ellis received 16; Charles B Watkins, 3, while no votes were recorded for another announced candidate, Mrs. Cora L. Rice, who reportedly withdrew just before balloting time.

Laurence N. Woodworth, a former councilman, was virtually unopposed for the 2nd ward seat now held by John P. McAuley and received 30 votes. Mrs. Anna H. Flynn, incumbent, got 25 to keep the 5th ward seat. Each one had one write-in vote filed against them.

Holdovers for another year are Mayor Lawrence A. Yates and Councilman John W. Augustine, 1st ward; William L. Schmidt, 3d ward, and John K. Dorr, 6th ward.

COTTAGE CITY

Three incumbent commissioners were elected without opposition. They were Samuel L. Tayman, 2d ward, with 49; Melvin Howes, 3d ward, 43, and John P. Bateman, 4th ward, 49. Two holdovers, Vincent A. Simmel and Edward L. Hudgins, have another year to go.

One amendment to the town charter passed, 40 to 11. It provides a $140 annual salary for the board chairman and $120 a year for the other commissioners.

DISTRICT HEIGHTS

Mayor E. Michael Roll, with 155 votes, won re-election for a second one-year term without major opposition as town voters approved a referendum, 139 to 23, to make it a two-year term for mayor starting in 1959. Six single write-in votes were cast for mayoralty candidates.

Paul B. Garbelman, with 22 votes, was unopposed for re-election as commissioner from the 2d ward, as was Ralph Wallmark, with 35, in the 4th ward. The latter succeeds B. Ford Hallam. Two other commissioners, Woodrow Wilson from the 1st ward, and George J. Kane, 3d ward, have another year to serve.

EDMONSTON

Two incumbent councilmen were beaten. In the 1st Ward John W. Callahan won over Incumbent Dudley I. Parrish, 61 to 59. In the 2d ward, Eldridge S. Morris ousted Clarence F Powell, 39 to 29.

Holdovers for another year are Mayor Francis Finch and Councilmen Charles Hammett and Frederick Sheffield.

FAIRMONT HEIGHTS

A five-way fight for three council seats left two veteran incumbents on the outside looking in. The winners were Lawrence L. Brooks, 113 votes; Charles A. Thompson, 103, and Mrs. Emma L. A. Davis, 103. Mrs. Davis was appointed to the council two months ago to fill a vacancy.

Losers were Malkiah Charity, jr., with 56 votes, a member of the council for eight years, and Andrew J. Harrison, with 66, a councilman for two years. Holdovers are Mayor Doswell Brooks and Councilmen Clarence Anthony, William C. Hinds, and James Garfield Harris.

MORNINGSIDE

Mayor William H. Stewart, with 163 votes, was re-elected without opposition.

Elected to the Town Council were Leonard Gardner, 142; William Schaub, 138; Mrs. Dallas Bragunier, 133, and William Gilmartin, 95. The first three were incumbents. Runners-up were Jack Langford, with 94, and Charles Kiker, 69.

Voters rejected a referendum, 97 to 79, which would have provided for a program of street storm drainage and sewerage improvements.

NORTH BRENTWOOD

Frederick W. Johnson received 20 votes in his unopposed bid for re-election to the council from the 3d ward. In the 2d ward, the original candidate, Kenneth Davis, withdrew, requiring a write-in vote. William J. Jennings, with 7, was the only one in it. Holdovers are Mayor William D. Bellows, Councilman George A. Smith, 1st ward, and Mrs. Ora M. Bullock, town treasurer.

RIVERDALE

Three councilmen and a town treasurer were elected, with a total of 278 votes cast.

Walter B. Ford, incumbent, polled 30 votes to retain the 1st Ward seat, with one write-in vote filed. Joseph Koski, with 58, topped a write-in candidate, Edna F. Wade, who received 27, for the 2d ward seat replacing Charles Graefe. Edward B. Dunford, incumbent in the 4th ward with 67, was unopposed. Robert Fuerst, incumbent treasurer, got 251 votes against four write-ins for Hanson D. Powers, a former treasurer.

Holdovers are Mayor Claude Warren and Councilmen Joseph Bartos, Samuel Bell and Harry King.

SEAT PLEASANT

The new mayor is Edward J Goodwin, outgoing 4th ward councilman. He was unopposed with 129 votes to replace Ben H. Watkins, who ran for a councilman-at-large seat, as did Incumbent Willard Roberts. Mr. Watkins, the mayor for six years, received 112, and Mr. Roberts 108.

Five other councilmen also were elected: Frank W. Marquette, 1st ward, 9 votes; William F. Mitchell, 2d ward, 18; William E. Schmidt, 3d ward, 18; Joseph B. Gardella, 4th ward, 27, and Mrs. Gennella M. McGinnis, 5th ward, 41. The first three were incumbents, while Mr. Gardella was an at-large councilman. Mrs. Mary T. Fowler, with 128 votes, was re-elected treasurer.

BALTIMORE

Colored registered voters numbered 94,248 as of July 10, according to the Register and Voters Committee's announcement Wednesday.

The committee set its goal at 100,000 and has only 5,752 more to register before registration books close Sept. 22.

Total colored registration of new voters June 1 to July 9 was 527 Democrats, 159 Republicans and 26 declined (did not affiliate with either party).

In the first 17 days of June new registration figures were:

Democrats	301
Republicans	83
Total	384

In the 17 days, June 18 to July 9, the registration of colored voters was:

Democrats	326
Republicans	76
Declined	26
Total	428

THE TABLE below shows the day by day registration of colored voters in the past 17 days, June 17 to July 9.

Monday is still the best registration day.

Election officials estimate this is due to decisions arrived at by new voters over the weekend in their churches and other organizations.

Monday, July 7	31

In each case the Monday registration was tops for that week.

THE FACT that only 20 per cent of new colored voters registerd as Republicans and nearly 80 per cent as Democrats was not explained by the committee, which is non-partisan and simply urges citizens as a patriotic duty to register with the party of their choice.

From other sources the AFRO learned that the recession, the long lines of persons seen daily at the downtown office claiming unemployment benefits is having its effect.

New voters are expressing resentment with the way President Eisenhower's administration is handling national affairs.

The fact remains that new voters are registering 4 to 1 Democratic.

* * *

THE TABLE also shows that Democrats out-registered Republicans on every registration day.

There were 3 days on which Republicans registered no voters and 4 days on which Republicans registered only 1 or 2 voters.

HOT WEATHER and vacations will not be allowed to interfere with the registration campaign, which will continue throughout the summer.

The Rev. Marcus Wood, pastor of Providence Baptist Church, has taken over the direction of the drive in the absence of the Rev. John Tilley, who is on three months leave to direct similar registration drives in Southern States under Dr. Martin Luther King of Alabama.

The committee has set up a series of luncheons to reach pastors in various sections of the city.

The first is scheduled at the YWCA July 16 for all pastors of the 4th Legislative District.

Mrs. Marian Jackson Downs of the committee is arranging the luncheons.

Judge rules out office petitions

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

ST. LOUIS — Judge Theodore McMillian ruled last Wednesday that a candidate for public office does not have to present petitions signed by registered voters. His decision set a legal precedent.

Mr. McMillian, the state's only colored judge, ruled in the case of Paul W. Preisler who was seeking to file as a candidate for president of the Board of Aldermen but his filing fee had been refused by election officials and the city treasurer.

The judge ruled that "the right to seek nomination and election to a public office is a personal right" under the preview of the state's constitution.

Intimidation Possible

FBI Reported Probing Baltimore's Election

34 Md.

BALTIMORE, Md. — (NNPA) — The FBI reportedly was making a preliminary investigation of a number of irregularities which were said to have occurred in voting in Tuesday's election in the heavily colored populated fourth district.

Colored voters were out to beat Jack Pollack the reputed boss of the district, but were disappointed with the results.

The heads of a coalition ticket, backed by the Afro American Newspapers, won, but one of the favorite candidates of the coalition, State Senator Harry A. Cole, was defeated by J. Alvin Jones, a retired United States Employment Service employee. Cole, a Republican, was beaten by about 2,000 votes.

A number of reasons was given for Cole's defeat. One of them was the national Democratic trend. Another was a reaction to a story published in a vest pocket size magazine that Cole was being groomed for a seat in Congress.

Heavy spending of money also was reported in the fourth District.

The coalition backed J. Millard Tawes, who was elected Governor of Maryland, and J. Glenn Beall, Republican, who was reelected to a second term in the United States Senate.

Tawes, 64-year-old State Comptroller piled up an overwhelming 482,114 votes to defeat Republican James P. Devereux.

Despite Mr. Tawes' sweeping victory, Baltimore Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro, Jr., was unable to upset Senator Beall.

Mrs. Irma Dixon, who was backed by both the coalition and the Pollack forces, was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates in the Sixth District.

When the polls opened in the fourth district, it was reported, machines had been put out of order, match sticks were in the back of some of them to keep them from working, and a number of voters had to leave to go to work with out voting. The charge is that the machines had been deliberately tampered with.

Inasmuch as a United States Senator and a Congressman were being elected, the FBI was brought into the case.

It also was reported that white persons with cameras were around the polling places, taking photographs of colored persons waiting to vote, and that this may have intimidated some colored colored persons, who feared they might lose their jobs.

Mississippi's new voter registration requirement to ...day had won the ...ssed in the NAACP's try to have ...s ruled unconstitutional.

Three U. S. judges yesterday dismissed a claim of Rev. H. D. Darby, Prentiss, Negro minister, that the law was aimed at preventing Negroes from voting.

Darby, in a complaint filed here last March by the NAACP, claimed that he and other Negroes in Jefferson Davis county were denied the right to register solely because of their race. He charged that a state voting requirement amendment passed in 1954 and a law approved in 1957 which make it a crime to accept financial aid in prosecution of such cases are unconstitutional.

State Atty. Gen. Joe Patterson and Jefferson Davis Circuit Clerk James Daniel were co-defendants in the case.

Judge Ben F. Cameron of Meridian, a member of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, Southern Mississippi District Judge Sidney Mize and Northern Mississippi District Judge Claude Clayton heard the case.

Judge Cameron wrote the 47 page decision.

REASONABLE TESTS

The decision said educational tests prescribed in the amendment are reasonable and "a legitimate exercise by the state of its sovereign right to prescribe and enforce the qualification of voters."

Darby had claimed in testimony heard here last July that he was registered prior to 1954 when the Jefferson Davis county Board of Supervisors ordered re-registration throughout the county.

Claimed that he failed to pass re-registration tests administered by Daniel since then.

The decision held that such laws cannot be brought under the 1957 civil rights law without exhausting state remedies. Darby said he has appealed to the county registration commission his failure to pass registration tests, but filed the suit in feleral court before the appeal was heard.

The decision held that Daniel was a "conscientious, patient and fair public official" who treated whites and Negroes alike. It said the NAACP showed no "tangible or credible proof of discrimination" and that the county registrar in Mississippi does not hold "arbitrary and sole" power to decide who shall vote. Mississippi law allows appeal of circuit clerks' decisions in registration applications.

DEFICIENCIES NOTED

The court held that Darby's application for registration showed "several deficiencies" and said he failed to follow through with an appeal from Daniel's ruling.

The decision carried Darby's answer to questions given in one of the tests. It showed his handwriting was barely legible.

Education requirements in the 1954 amendment, the decision held, are only an extension of requirements prescribed in Mississippi's 1890 Constitution.

"The Constitution of 1890 was passed when Negroes had just emerged from complete illiteracy," the decision said.

"After six decades of an increasingly competent educational system it seems moderate indeed for the electorate to lay upon itself the obligation of being able to read and write the basic law of the commonwealth", the decision said.

The court ruled that the NAACP failed to prove its claim that Darby was threatened with enforcement of a 1957 law which makes a criminal violation outside financial aid in prosecution of civil rights cases.

NO THREATS

"In fact," the court held, "that evidence showed without dispute that no such threats had been made and that no action was taken or within contemplation which could in any way affect the welfare or the rights" of Darby or his attorneys.

Rutha Dillon, Jefferson Davis county Negro woman, was included with Darby as a co-plaintiff at the last minutes.

She requested Sept. 17 that she be allowed to intervene in the case. Permission was granted two days before the decision was announced.

The Dillon woman was one of several witnesses Darby's attorneys presented when the complaint was heard here last summer.

NAACP leaders said today they don't know if the decision will be appealed.

Atty. Gen. Patterson and Assist. Atty. Gen. Dugas Shands were in the court room when the decision was announced yeaterday afternoon.

Neither Darby nor his attorneys, R. Jess Brown of Vicksburg and Constance Baker Mobley of Washington, were present.

Darby had more trouble on his hands today.

Members of his China Grove Church in Madison county were trying to oust him as pastor.

"We think if the Methodist conference won't get rid of him, maybe we can, one way or another," Richard Jones, one of two stewards of the church, said.

Darby answered " I am pastor of this church and my appointment is in the hands of the Bishop. I promote love, freedom and justice for all mankind. If they want to continue the works of the devil, I love them until the end."

So Rev. Darby Failed The Voters Examination

Some years prior to 1946, before the historic decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, in the Negro voting case, which was during the days of his greatest ascendancy, Perry W. Howard, Mississippi's National Republican Committeeman, who had mastered the facetious oratorical approach to the most serious matters, in addressing the State Convention, was always sure to get a laugh, while at the same time getting the point home, when in speaking about the then almost total denial of the right, and the methods used to keep Negro citizens of the state from registering and qualifying to vote, he told the story of the Negro who went to the Court House to register to vote and was asked the question. What is the meaning of Habaes Corpus Supersedus Belladendum Duces Tecum? The Negro's answer being, that's just something to keep us from voting.

It was a happy and hopeful period for Negro and white citizens alike in the state, in the years from 1946 to 1954, when there was every visible evidence that the old racial anomosities, born of the Civil War and the Reconstruction Era which gave rise to Perry Howard's story, had burned themselves out, and the great body of public opinion in the state had conceded the Negro citizens right to vote and of political participation.

It was in 1954 that the U.S. Supreme Court rendered another historic decision. The decision calling for integration of the public schools with all deliberate speed. A decision rendered in an obvious attempt to lead public opinion towards making the changes in the pattern of American life needed to meet the demands of a changing world. A decision, except for a great amount of lip service, and some token compliance here and there, has yet to win the unequivocal support of the great body of American public opinion, to say nothing of that of the state of Mississippi.

Moreover, to those who have a clear understanding of American history, the sending of Federal soldiers to Little Rock, Arkansas, to support integration, is only a repetition of the history of the southern reconstrution that lead to the deep racial anomosities which took from 1867 until 1946 before there was any real evidence that they had burned themselves out.

In the face of the integration decision and its eventuation in the sending of Federal troops to Little Rock, the state of Mississippi, along with the rest of the south, in regard to the Negro vote, and political participation, is reacting exactly according to history, again moving towards the disfranchisement of its Negro citizens.

We say again here, as was said here during the period of leadership of the JACKSON ADVOCATE, which played a major role in bringing about the happy and hopeful period of 1946-1954, that Mississippi never will make any great progress, until its Negro citizens having the right to vote, can join with the best of its white citizens, and through intelligent political participation, aid in the development of those things that have proven best for all the citizens of the state.

And now comes the story, as reported in the newspapers, about Rev. Darby, who filed the suit challenging the new state law passed to prevent Negroes from registering and qualifying to vote, in which the Circuit Clerk down in Jefferson Davis County, has reported that Rev. Darby failed to pass the voter examination required by the new state law.

Looking back at the history of the state, and looking forward to its future, it is our hope that contemporary attitudes and conditions will not result in the deep anomosities of the reconstruction that required all the years from 1867 to 1954 to burn themselves out.

In the case of Rev. Darby, and his reported failure to pass the voters examination, it was inevitable that our mind would turn back to Perry Howard and his story.

Court Rejects Demand To Subpoena Governor

JACKSON, Miss., July 24 (AP)—A Federal court considering a Negro preacher's challenge of Mississippi voter registration laws today declined to subpoena Gov. J. P. Coleman.

The Court refused to take such action, ruling it was unconstitutional.

Judge Ben Cameron of the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals said the Governor is not subject to subpoena under the constitutional separation of powers of the legislative, executive and judicial branches of Government.

"Because we sit as a court of another soverign, the Federal Government," Cameron said in denying the subpoena, "we will not tread on this dubious ground that might disturb the delicate relationship between Federal and state courts."

The case before the special three-judge Federal court concerns a charge by the Rev. H. D. Darby of Prentiss, Miss., that he was removed from the voter lists and denied re-registration.

His suit seeks to declare Missisippi's voter registration laws unconstitutional.

Yesterday, Darby's Attorneys submitted as evidence a random selection of 77 of the 3,000 voter registration aplications filed in Jefferson Davis County after a 1956 voter registration purge.

Arson Suspected In Chicago Blaze

CHICAGO, July 24 (AP)—Two persons were injured last night in an apartment building fire which reportedly was started when an arsonist hurled an object through a first-floor window.

Miss Verna Clark, 19, Negro occupant of the apartment in a predominantly white neighborhood, suffered burns on her arms, hands, face and neck. She told hospital nurses that someone hurled an object through her window seconds before start of the fire.

A fireman suffered a wrist cut fighting the blaze.

Vote Purge Anti-Negro, Mississippi Trial Told

JACKSON, Miss., July 24 (AP).—Attorneys for Attorney General Joe Patterson and Jefferson Davis County Circuit Clerk James Daniel today opened their defense of Mississippi's voter registration laws which a Negro is challenging as unconstitutional.

Yesterday, the Negro's attorneys submitted as evidence a purportedly random selection of 77 of the 3,000 voter registration applications filed in Jefferson Davis County after a 1956 voter registration purge.

They also sought to show that the number of voters in the county dropped from an estimated 1,200 in 1954 to fewer than 50 in 1958.

Object of the evidence was to prove the voter registration laws were designed to be administered arbitrarily and that they are used to discriminate against Negroes.

"Purged" from List

The Rev. H. D. Darby of Prentiss, Negro part-time preacher, filed the suit and testified he was purged from the voter list in 1956.

He said he had been registered before a 1954 constitutional amendment required prospective voter registrants to interpret the Constitution and show an understanding of the duties of citizenship to the satisfaction of the registrar.

More than a dozen other Jefferson Davis County Negroes testified they also had been purged in 1956.

Circuit Clerk Daniel testified he required all re-registrants to take the more stringent examination although the amendment excludes those who were registered before it became effective.

Outside-Help Ban Fought

Mr. Darby's suit also seeks to throw out Mississippi's 1956 law forbidding outside help in prosecuting cases against the State. The penalty is one year in prison.

Mr. Patterson testified he was charged with the enforcement of all laws and would enforce the outside-help law if he decided he should.

He made the statement after R. Jess Brown of Vicksburg,

Circuit Clerk Says Rev. Darby Failed Voters Exam

Set July 22nd Hearing Of Case Here By Three Judge Court

Prentiss, Miss. July 7 —The Jefferson Davis County circuit clerk said Monday a Negro minister who challenged the state's voter registration laws was refused registration because he could not explain the duties of a citizenship.

Clerk James Danel made the statement after Federal District Judge Sidney Mize ordered him to tell the Negro how he failed to meet the qualifications.

The answers were filed in the district court clerk's office shortly before the 5 p.m. deadline.

The Rev. H. D. Darby of Prentiss charged his civil rights were violated because he was not permitted to register as a voter.

The civil rights suit also challenges the constitutionality of a 1954 constitutional amendment requiring explanation of the duties and responsibilites of citizenship and other requirements.

Earlier Monday, Judge Mize set July 22 in his Southern District Court in Jackson as the time and place for the special three-judge court to hear Darby's suit.

The judges are District Judges Mize and Claude Clayton of the Northern District and Judge Ben Cameron of the U. S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans.

Daniel's answers to Darby's questions included:

Darby was not able to read the section of the constitution submitted as required by law "nor was (he)able to understand the same when read to him, or give a reasonable interpretation thereof."

He failed to complete the application for registration, leaving blank several questions.

Darby did not take the oath required of him to register.

Darby and his attorney, R. Jess Brown of Vicksburg, did not appear for a hearing on his (Darby's) appeal from the clerk's refusal to register him Oct. 7, 1957.

The 1954 constitutional amendment requires that prospective registrants must not only be able to show an understanding of any section of the constitution. Both interpretations must be made to the satisfaction of the circuit clerk.

Brown said in filing the petition that he was receiving aid from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored Peonle.

Federal Court To Decide On Voting Rights In Miss.

CLARKSDALE, MISS. (ANP) Negroes in Mississippi and the Citizens of the world must wait for 75 days before they will know whether the right to vote will be guaranteed the Negroes of the State of Mississippi.

In a Federal Court case that ended last week, Judge Cammaron the presiding judge of a three-judge court, announced the time element. The suit was brought in the name of the Rev. H. D. Darby against the state in an effort to knock out voter discrimination laws now on the books of state.

Atty. Constance Baker Motley argued the case for Rev. Darby. Packed courtrooms greeted the judge every day, with many unable to get in.

Negroes all over the state are watching the outcome of the case, looking forward to a break through in the log jam of racial bigotry so prevelant in Miss.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court last March by Rev. Darby, is being financed by the NAACP. Darby claims that he was twice prevented from registering in Jefferson county because he is a Negro.

Circuit Clerk James Daniel and Atty. Gen. Joe T. Patterson are co-defendants in the suit. They contend Darby failed to pass examinations required of all voters. They defended constitutionality of the state requirement which says in part "prospective voters must read and write any section of the constitution, give a reasonable interpretation of it and write a short essay on the duties of citizenship in a democracy."

However, another "witness," Gov. J. P. Coleman rejected a federal subpoena to testify at the trial. "I decline on grounds that I am governor of the state and immune to such action," Coleman told U. S. Marshall Hugo Newcomb. The 3 judge Federal court upheld Gov. Coleman in his stand.

Attorneys for Darby, Joss Brown of Vicksburg, and Mrs. Constance Baker Motley, from New York City, sought to prove that application of Mississippi voting laws discriminates against Negroes and that the constitution is designed to limit Negro voting; that very few Negroes are permitted to register and vote. Mrs. Motley also challenged a Mississippi law which allows criminal action to be brought against a person who accepts financial aid in presenting a case in court.

Greenville Negroes Turn Out As City Re-Registers Voters

From The Commercial Appeal, Greenville, Miss., Bureau

GREENVILLE, Miss., Nov. 21.—Negroes in this Delta city are showing a marked interest in future elections and are registering to vote without difficulty.

A survey of registration books here Friday revealed that 29.1 per cent of the citizens registered are Negroes. A total of 1,570 persons have registered under a new registration, which began Oct. 1. Of that number 457 are Negroes.

About 40 per cent of the residents of Greenville are Negro and about 60 per cent in Washington County. The 1950 census gave Greenville a population of 29,986 and the county about 70,000.

Washington County Circuit Clerk C. E. Cocke said that a number of persons, white and Negro, who tried to register were turned down because they failed to pass the state registration requirements.

9,430 Qualified

The re-registration of city voters was called by the City Council in an effort to bring the books up to date. Mayor George Archer said it had been many years since the last registration, and many people on the books were dead or had moved away. About 4,000 were registered in the old city books, but no estimate on percentage of Negroes was available.

There are 9,430 qualified voters in Washington County, Circuit Clerk Cocke said. Of these about 1,200 are Negroes, a percentage of less than 13 per cent. The county, however, is not conducting re-registration at this time, he said.

The last county registration was in 1951. Both city and county called for a re-registration in 1955. It was called off after officials were notified the State Legislature was in the process of changing voter requirements.

High In District

A total of 1,113 whites have registered in the new city books. Negro registration ran as high as 47 per cent in one district in the city.

The Washington County Progressive Voters League and the Democratic Club, both Negro organizations, have been holding meetings to encourage Negroes to register.

James Carter, secretary of the voters league, said, "not many more Negroes are registering than before. But with the re-registration, their names won't be on the new books. We want them to get out and register and pay their poll tax."

Carter, along with Mayor Archer and other city officials, said "there has never been any trouble in Washington County."

NAACP To Appeal Vote Suit To CRC

Will Not Ask Supreme Court To Test Mississippi Statutes

The NAACP announced in New York yesterday it will not appeal a federal court decision upholding Mississippi's voter registration laws but will refer the case instead to the Civil Rights Commission.

A panel of three federal judges here dismissed last Nov. 7 a NAACP-financed lawsuit charging that Negroes are systematically barred from the polls in Mississippi under a 1954 amendment to the state constitution increasing educational requirements for voting.

Plaintiff in the suit was the Rev. H. D. Darby of Prentiss, Miss., who charged that he and other Negroes in Jefferson Davis County were denied registration because of their race. The court said it could find no such evidence and ruled that the new amendment was "a legitimate exercise by the state of its sovereign right to prescribe and enforce the qualification of voters."

After the decision chief NAACP lawyer Thurgood Marshall said it probably would be appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court. But NAACP attorneys said they had decided not to appeal the case and would refer all testimony in the case to the Civil Rights Commission, now investigating alleged denial of Negro voting rights in several places in the South.

When it was on trial in U. S. District Court in Jackson last July Darby and about 14 other Negroes testified that Jefferson Davis County registrar James Daniel refused to register them under the new amendment.

It was brought out that the population of Jefferson Davis County is about half Negro but less than 50 Negroes are now registered as voters. The court said this was no proof that they were illegally barred from registering.
